Then Job stode vp, and rent his clothes, and haued hys heade, fell downe vpon the ground, worshipped, and sayd: * Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The Lord gaue, and the Lord hath taken awaye: * such as it hath pleased the Lord, so is it come to passe: blessed be the name of the Lord. * In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, ner murmured foolishly agaynst God.

The.ij. Chapter.

Job ys plagued with sore byles, and afterward ys comforted of hys wyfe, hys frendes, & hys compassion of hym.

And the children of God came and stode before the Lord, and Satan came also amonge them, and stode before the Lord. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: From whence comest thou? Satan answered the Lord, and sayde: I haue gone about the lād, and walcked thorow it.

And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: hast p not considered my seruaunt Job: for there is none lyke him in the land. For he is a perfect and iust man, soch a one as feareth God, and exchueh euell, & contynueh styll in hys godlynesse. And thou mouedest me agaynst him, & I shulde punysh him for naught. And Satan answered the Lord, & sayde: Shyn for sayne: yee, a man wyll geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne had now vpon him, and touch once his bone and flesh, and he shal curse the to thy face. And p Lord sayde vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare hys lyfe.

So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord, and smote Job with maruelous soze byles, from the sole of hys fote vnto hys crowne: so that he sat vpon the ground in the ashes, and scraped of the scyth of hys sozes with a potsherde.

Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym: * Dost thou contynue yet in thy perfectnesse: curse God & dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Shal we receaue prosperite at the hand of God, and not receaue aduersite? * In all these thynges, dyd not Job synne with his lypyes.

Now when Jobs frendes heard of all the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from hys awne place: namely, Eliphaz the Themanite, Bil- dad the Shuhite, & Zophar the Naamathite.

And they were agreed together to come, to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe him not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: & euery one of them rēte his clothes, and sprynckled dust vpon theyr heades in the ayre. They sat the downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes and seuen nyghtes. Nether was there any of them that spake one worde vnto hym: for they sawe, that hys payne was very greate.

The.iiij. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherein he declareth that hys present lyfe ys miserable, and that the deeth of the cyghewes ys ioyous and to be sumable.

After this opened Job his mouth, and cursed hys daye. And Job answered, and sayde: lost be that daye, wheri I was borne, and the nyght, in the which it was sayde: there is a man chyldre conceiued. The same daye be turned to darkenes, and not regarded of God from aboue, nether lett hym wyne vpon it with lyght, but lett it be stayned with darknesse, and the shadowe of deeth. Let the dynne clout e fall vpon it, and lett it be lapped in with sorowe on the daye tyme. Let the darcke storne ouercome that nyght, and lett it not be ioynd vnto the the dayes of the yere, ner counted in the monethes. Desolate be that night, and without gladnesse, lett them that curse the daye, and that be ready to rayse vp mourning, geue it also their curse. Let the starres of that night be dymme thozow darcknesse of it. Let it loke for lyght, but lett it se none, neither the ryfynge vp of the fayre moynynge: because it shyt not vp the wombe that bare me. For then shulde these sorowes haue bene hpd fro myne eyes.

* Jer. x. d.

Alas, * why dyed I not in þ byrth? Why dyd not I perishe, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why let they me bpo their knees? Why gaue they me suck with theyr byrthes? Then shulde I now haue lyen styll, I shulde haue slepte, and bene at reste, lyke as the kynges and lordes of the earthe, which haue bypdyed them selues special places. Or as the princes that haue had greete substance of golde, and theyr houses full of syluer. Or why was I not hpd, as a chyng bozne out of tyme, ether as ponce chyldren, which neuer sawe the light? There must the wycked ceasse from theyr tyzanne, and ther soch as are ouerlaboured be at reste: ther are those lett out fre, which haue bene in prison, so that they heare nomoze the voyce of the opprelloure. There are small & great, and the seruaunt is fre from hys master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen to hym that is in mysery: and lyfe vnto them, that haue heuy hertes? Whych longe for death (and though it come not) wolde dygg it oute of hys places which also wolde be excedyng glad and reioyce, yf they coulde fynde theyr graue any where. That shuld be tope to that man whose waye is hpd, and God kepeth it backe from him. For my syghes come before I eate, and my roaynges fall out like the water. For the thyng that I feared, is come vpon me: and the thyng that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happy? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in rest? And now cometh soch mysery vpo me.

The. iij. Chapter.

Job is reprehended of impacience and vnlyfpe, and of the presumption of hys awne ryghtewesnes.

And Eliphas the Themanyte answered, and sayde: Yf we begynne to commen with the, wylt thou be discontent? but who can withhold him selfe from speakinge? Behold, thou hast bene a chastener of many, and hast comforted the weery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, þ art greued: now þ it hath touched thy selfe, thou art saynt harted. * Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Cōsydye (I praye the) whoeuer persyshed beyng an innocent? Or, whē were the godly destroyed? For (as I haue proued by experience) they þ plowe iniquyte, & some wretchednesse, reape the same. With the blast of God they perishe, and with the bryth of hys nastrels are they consumed awaye. The roayng of the lyon, and the voyce of the lyon, & the teeth of the lyons whelpes are pulled out. The lyon perissheth for lacke of praye, and the lyons whelpes are scatered abrode.

And vnto me came the worde secretly, & myne eare hath receaued a lytell therof. In the thoughtes and visyōs of the night (whē slepe cometh on men) feare came vpon me, and drede, which made all my bones to shake. The wynde passed by, before my presence, and made the heares of my flesh to stande vp. He stode there, and I knew not hys face, an ymage ther was before myne eyes, and in the stylnesse hearde I a voyce. * Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall a man be purer than hys maker? Beholde, he founde no treuth in hys seruantes, and in hys aungels ther was foly. How moche more in them that dwell in houses of claye, and whose foundacyon is but dust: which shalbe consumed as it were with a moth? They shalbe smitten from the moynynge vnto the euenyng: yee, they shal perishe for euer, whē no man thynketh theron. Is not their royaltie gone awaye with the: they shal dye trulye, and not in wylsome.

The. v. Chapter.

The ende of a tale. The ryghtewesnes of God, the Lord chasteneth hys, and deliuereth them agayne.

Iye (I praye the) yf happye there be any that wylt answer the, and loke thou vpon eny of the holy men. As for the foolyshe man, displeasure kylleth hym, and anger slayeth the ignoraunt.

* I haue sene my selfe, when the folyshe was depe roted, and sobenly. I cursed hys habitacyon. Hys chyldren were without prosperite, and they were slayne in the gate, and there was no man to deliuer the. * Hys harvest was eaten vp of the hungry, & the weapened man spoyled it, and the thurstye drake he vp theyr labour. It is not the earth that byngeth forth iniquyte, neither cometh sorowe out of the ground: but man is bozne vnto labour, lyke as the sparkes flye vp out of the hote coles.

But I wyl aske counsell at the Lorde, & wyl talke with God: which doth thynges, that are vnsearchable, and maruels without nombre. * He geueth rayne vpon þ erth, and poureth water vpon the stretes, to set vp them that be of lowe degree, & that those which which are in heynesse may come to prosperite. He destroyeth the deuyces of the sotyll, so that their handes are not able to perfozme any stedfast thyng. * He compaseth the wyse in their awne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In somoche that they runne into darcknes by fayre daye, and * grope aboute them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyght.

He shal deliuer the poze fro the sword, and from the threatenynge of the vngodly, and from the violence of the myghty. He is the hope of the poore, and the mouth of the wicked shalbe stopped.

Beholde, * happye is the man, whom God punissheth: therfore, refuse not thou the chastenynge of the almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he geueth a playster: though he smyte, hys hande maketh whole agayne.

He shal deliuer the in fyre troubles, and in the seuenth there shal no euell come to the. In hōger he shal saue the from death: and when it is warre, from the power of the sword.

Thou shalt be kept from the euell tonge, and when trouble cometh, thou shalt not ned to feare. In destruction and derth thou shalt be mery, and * shalt not be afrayed of beastes of the earth. For þ stones of the lande shalbe confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shal geue the peace.

And thou shalt knowe that thy dwellyng place shalbe in rest: and thou shalt go and beholde thy habitacyon, and shalt not synne. Thou shalt se also, yf thy seide shal encrease, and that thy posterite shalbe as the grashe vpon the earth. Thou shalt come also to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as when they take vp a cozne these in due season. Lo, thys we oure selues haue proued by experience, and even thus it is. Werken thou to it also, that thou mayest take hede to thy selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

Job answered, that hys payne is more greuous than hys faulte, yet notwithstandinge he deliureth thetyn.

I answered also, & sayde: That the displeasure which I haue were truly weped, and my punishment layed in the balauces together: for now is it heuier then the sande of the see. And thys is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arrowes of the almyghty are roūd about me, whose indygnacyon hath drōncke vp my sprete, and the terrible feares of God are sett agaynst me. * With the wyde alle roare whē he hath grasse? Or cryeth the ore, when he hath foder ynough? What which is vnlaury, shal it be eaten without falte, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge?

The thynges that some tyme I myght not awaye withall, are now my meate for very sorowe. * That I myght haue my desyre: and that God wolde graunte me the thyng that I longe for. * That God wold begynne and smyte me: that he wolde let hys hande go, and take me cleane awaye. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yee, I wolde desyre hym in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wyl not be agaynst the wordes of the holy one.

For what power haue I to endure? And what is myne ende, that my soule myght be pacient? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so þ there is in me no helpe: and that my substance is taken from me. He that is in tribulacyon ought to be comforted of hys neyghbour: but the feare of the Lord is cleane awaye. Myne awne brythreu passe ouer by me as the water brooke, and as the ryure of water, do hastily go awaye. But they that feare the hore frost, the snowe shal fall vpon them.

When they tyme cometh, they shalbe destroyed and perishe: when they be sett on fyre, they shalbe remoued out of theyr place, for þ pathe that they go in, are croked: they haue after vayne thynges, and shal perishe. They turne them to the pathe of Cheman, and to the wayes of Saba, wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they that put eny confydence in them. For whan they come to obtayne the thynges that they loke for, they are brought to confusyon.

Even so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mysery, ye are afrayed. Wyd I desyre you, to byng vnto me, or to geue me eny of poure substance? To deliuer me from the enemyes hande, or to saue me from the hande of tyrauntes? Teache me, and I wyl holde my tonge: and whan I do recce, shewe me wherin. How stedfast are the wordes of treuth? And which of you can rebuke and reprove them? Do ye take deliberacyō to check mens sayynges, and iudge a poze worde spoken in vayne? Ye fall vpon the fatherles and go about to ouerthrowe your awne frende. And therfore be content, and loke now vpon me, and I wyl not lye before your face. Turne (I praye you) be indifferent iudges, turne agayne, and ye shal se myne vngyltynesse: whether there be eny vnryghteousnesse in my tonge, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that thys lyfe is but a bataylle of warre.

Ith man any certayn tyme bpo earthe? * Are not hys dayes also lyke þ dayes of an hyed seruaunt? For lyke as a bonde seruaunt despyeth the shadowe, and as an nerbes longe (but in vayne) and many a ca-refull night haue I tolde. * When I laye me downe to slepe, I saye: ^{Job. xxiij. 8} When shall I rise?

Agayne, I longe soze for the nyght. And in the meane tyme am I full of soꝝwes vntill the twylyght. My flesch is clothed with wormes and dust of the earth: my skynne is withered, and become hoꝝeple, * my dayes passe ouer moze spedely, then a weener can weene out his webbe: and are gone oꝝ I am aware. ^{Job. xxiij. 8} Remembre, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall nomoze se pleasures therof, yee, & that none other mens eye shall se me any moze. ^{Job. xxiij. 8} For yf thou fasten thyne eye vpon me, I come to naught. The cloude is consumed and vanysht awaye, euen so he that goeth downe to the graue, shall come nomoze vp, ner turne agayne into hys house nether shall hys place knowe hym any moze.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Therefore, I will not spare my mouth, but wyl speake in the trouble of my sprete, and make in the bytternesse of my mynde. Am I a see oꝝ a whalpy, that thou kepest me so in pylon? When I saye: my bedd shall comfoꝝte me. I shall haue some refrechynge by talking to my selfe vpon my couche. * Then troublest thou me with dreames, ad makest me so afrayed thozow visions, that my soule wissheth rather to perishe and dye, then my bones to remayne.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} I can se no remedy, I shall lye nomoze: O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne.
What is man, that thou hast hym in soch reputacyon, & settest somoch by hym? Thou visytest hym early, and eury daye, sodenly doest thou * tye hym.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Why goest thou not from me, ner lettest me alone, so longe tyll I maye swallow do-wne my spete? I haue offended, and what shall I do vnto the, O thou preseruer of me?
Why hast thou made me to stande in thy waie, and am so heuy a burden vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgie me my synne? Wherefoze takest thou not awaye my wyckednes?
Beholde, now must I slepe in the dust, ad yf thou sekest me to moꝝow in the moꝝnyng, I shall be gone.

The. viij Chapter.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued hys payne. A description of poyntes.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} When answered Baldad the Shubite, and sayde: how longe wilt thou talke of soch thynges? how longe shall thy mouth speake so proude woꝝdes? Doth God peruerre the thyng that is lauffull? O doth the almygh-tye destroye the thyng that is ryght? For seyng that thy sonnes synned agaynst hym, dyd not he punyssh them for they wyckednesse? If thou woldest now refoꝝt vnto God by tymes, and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghty: yf thou woldest lye a pure and a godly lyfe: shulde he not awake vpon the immediatly, and geue the, the bew-tye of ryghte wylles agayne? In so moche, that where in science thou haddest lytle afore, thou shuldest now haue greate aboun-dauce. Enquere (I praye the) of them that haue bene befoze the, * and search diligently amonge they fathers. For we are but of yesterdaye, and consydre not, * oure dayes vpon earth are but a very shadowe. Shall not they thewe the, and tell the, yee, ad gladly confesse the same?

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Maye a rylthe be grene without moystnesse? O maye the grasle growe without water? No: but (oꝝ euer it be shot forth, & oꝝ euer it be gathered) it withered, befoze any other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all them, that forget God: and euen thus also shall the pocrites hope come to naught. Hys confy-dence shall be destroyed, and hys trust shall be aspiders webbe. He shall leane vpon his house, but it shall not stande: he shall holde hym fast by it, yet shall it not endure. It is eue as a grene tree befoze the sonne, & shotteth forth the bꝛanches in hys garden. It taketh many rotes by a well syde, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} But yf it be taken out of hys place, eury man denyet it, sayenge: I knowe the not.
Lo, thus is it with him, that reioysseth in hys awne doynges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Behold, God will not cast awaye a ver-tuous man, nether wyl he helpe the vngod-ly. Thy mouth shall be fylled with laughing, and thy lippes with gladnesse. They also y hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwel-linge of the vngodly shall come to naught.

The. ix Chapter.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Job declareth the benefytes of God, and that manes ryghte wylles is nothyng.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} When answered, & sayde: I know it is so of a treuthe: For how maye a man (compared vnto God) * be iustified? If he will argue with him, he shall not be able to answer hym vnto one amonge a thousande. Concernynge soch as be wyle of herte, oꝝ myghtye in strength, who euer prospered, that toke part agaynst hym? He translateth the mountaynes, oꝝ euer they be aware. It is he that ouerthro-weth them in hys wyath. He remoueth the earthe out of her place, that the py-lers therof shake with all. He commaundeth the sonne, and it riseth not: he closeth vpon
the

the starres, as it were vnder a sygnett. He him self alone spredeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the waynes of heauen * the Orion * the seuen starres, and the secrete places of the south. He doth greate thynges, soch as are vnsarcheable, yee, and wonders withoute nombe.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Lo, whan he goeth ouer by me, I shall not se hym. And whan he departeth, by me, I shall not loke vpon hym. I shall not per-ceiue hym. If he be hasty to take any thyng awaye, who wyl make him refoꝝt agayne? O who wyl saye vnto hym * what doest thou? He is God, whose wyath no man maye withstande: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder hym. How shulde I then an-swere hym? O what woꝝdes shulde I synde oute agaynst hym? Yee, though I were ryghteous, yet myght I not geue hym one woꝝde agayne, but inckely submytte my selfe to hym as my iudge. Yf I had called vpon hym, and he had answered me: yet wold I not beleue, that he herd my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tempest, and wounderth me out of measure without a cause. He wyl not lett my spete be in rest, but fylleth me w bytternesse.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} If men wyl speake of strength, lo, he is stronger: yf men wyl speake of ryghteousnes, who darre be my recorde. If I wyl instyte my selfe, & my awne mouth shall condempne me: yf I wyl put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare, yet am I weery of my lyfe.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} One thyng it is and therfoze I saye. He destroyeth both the righteous and vngodly.
And though he slaye sodenly with the scourge, yet wyl he laugh at the punysshment of the innocent. As for the woꝝde, it is geuen ouer into the hand of the wicked, and he shal couer the faces of the iudges therof. Is it not so: where is there any, but he is soch one?

^{Job. xxiij. 8} * My dayes are moze wyfte then a runner: they are gone & haue sene no good thing.
They are passed awaye, as the shypes that be good vnder sayle, and as the aegle y flieth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complayning, to leaue of from my wyath, and to comforte my selfe, then am I afrayed of all my soꝝwes, for I knowe, that thou wylt not iudge me innocent. If I be then a wicked doer, why laboure I in vayne? If I washe my selfe with snowe water, and make myne hades neuer so cleane, * at the wel, yet shalt thou dyppe me in the myce: and myne awne clothes shall defyle me. For he that I must geue answer vnto, ad with whom I go to lawe, is not a man. I am.
Nether is there any dayesman to laye hys hande betwene vs. Lett hym take hys rod a waie from me, yee, lett him make me nomoze afrayed of him, and then shall I answer h without any feare. For as loze as it is thus,

I can make no answer.

The. x Chapter.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Job is weery of hys lyfe, and setteth out his traygylte befoze God. He despyeth the tyme to repent. A description of death.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} I greue my soule to lye. I wyl make my complaynte, and wyl speake out of the very heuynesse of my soule. I wyl saye vnto God: Do not condempne me, but shewe me the cause, wherfoze thou contendest so with me?
Thinkest thou it well done, to oppresse me, to cast me of? beynge the woꝝkes of thy hades) and to mainteyne the counsell of the vigodly? Hast thou fleshy eyes: oꝝ doest thou loke as a man loketh? O are thy dayes as y dayes of man, and thy yeares as mans yeres? that thou makest soch inquisicyon for my wickednes, & searchest out my synne? where as (not withstandinge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that * there is no man able to deliuer me out of thyne hande.
* Thy hades haue made me, and fashioned me all together roude aboute, wilt thou then destroye me sodenly? Remembre (I beseeke the) how that thou madest me of the mould of y erth, & shalt brynge me into dust agayne.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Hast thou not turned me, as it were in myck, and turned me to cruddes lyke chese? Thou hast couered me with skynne and fleshe, and ioyned me together with bones and synno-wes. Thou hast graunted my life, and done me good: and the diligent hede that thou to-kest vpon me, hath preserued my spete.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Thou hast hyd these thynges in thyne hert. I am sure, that thou remembrest thys thyng. Yf I dyd synne, thou haddest an eye vnto me, and shalt not declare me innocent because of myne offence. Yf I haue done wickedly, wo is me therfoze. Yf I haue done ryghteously, yet darre I not lift vp my hede:
so full am I of confusyon, and se myne awne misery.

^{Job. xxiij. 8} Thou hunttest me out (being in heuynes) as it were a lyon, & troublest me out of measure. Thou byngest fresh wytnesse agaynst me, and thy wyath increaseth thou vpon me, very many are y plagis y I am in. * Wherefoze hast thou brought me oute of my mothers wombe? O that I had perished, and y no eye had sene me. Yf they had carped me to my graue as lone as I was boꝝne, then shuld I be now, as though I had neuer bene I re not my dayes fewe? Lett hym then leane of from me and let me alone, that I may ease my selfe a lytle afoze I go thither, from whence I shall not turne agayne: euen to the lande

lande of darcknesse and shadowe of death: yet, into that darck cloudy land and deadly shadowe, where as is no ordre, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is humbly repented of Soppa. God is incomprehensible. He is merciful to the repentant sinner.

When answered Sopha the Naamathite, and sayde: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shuld he p habileth moch, be commended therein? Shulde men geue care vnto the onely? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorn, and shal no body mock the againe? Wylt thou saye vnto God. The thyng that I take in hande is perfecte, and I am cleane in thy syght? That God wolde speake, and open his lippes agaynst the, that he myght shewe the (out of his secreete wysdome) why he rewardeth the double as he was appoynted to do: then shuldest thou knowe, y God had forgotten the because of thy synne.

Art thou able to fynde out the secretes of God? Wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghty? He is hyer then heauen, what arte thou able to do? Deper then the hell, how wilt thou then know him? His length exceedeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the bredth of the see. Though he turne all thynges vpon syde downe, close them in, gather them together, who wyl turne hym from his purpose? (Who maye save vnto hym, why dost thou so.)

For it is he that knoweth the vanite of men: he seyth they are vayne also, shulde he not then confide in it? A vayne body exalteth hym selfe, and man new borne is lyke a wylde assescolte. If thou haddest nowe a ryght hert, and lyste vnto thyne handes towarde hym: yf thou woldest put awaye the wickednes which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwell in thy house. Then myghtest thou lyste vnto thy face without shame, and then shuldest thou be sure, and haue no neede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy miserie, & thyneke nomore vpon it then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shuld the residue of thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and spryng forth as the moonyng. Then myghtest thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly, wher thou art buried. Then shuldest thou take thy rest, & no man to make the afrayed, yee, many one shuld let moch by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly, they shalbe consumed, and not escape: they hope shalbe misery and sorow of mynde.

The. xii. Chapter.

Job sheweth his patience declared the myght and power of God.

When answered, and sayd: Then I (no doute) ye are the men alone, & wysdome shall perple with you. But I haue vnderstandyng as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yee, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of his neyghboure: the godly and innocent man is laughed to scorn. Godlynes is a lyght despyled in p hertes of the ryche, and is let for them to stumple vpon. The houses of robbers are in wealth & prosperite: and they that maliciously medle agaynst God, dwell without care, in those thynges that God hath geuen rebely with his hande.

Aske the catell, and they shall informe the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell the. Of the increace of the earth, and it shall shewe the. Of the fytters of the see, ad they shall certifie y. What is he, but he knoweth that the hande of the Lorde made all these? In whose hande is the soule of every liuyng thyng, and the birth of the flesh of all men. He haue not the cares pleasure in hering, and the mouth in tastunge the thyng that it eateth? Amonge olde persones there is wysdome, and in age is vnderstandyng. Yee, with God is wysdome and strenght, it is he that hath counsell and forknowledge. Loke what lyeth hyd in darcknes, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death bynggeth he to lyght. He both increaseth the people, ad destroyeth them. He maketh them to multiplye, and dryneth them awaye. The. xv. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job because he ascribeth wysdome and purenes to hym selfe. He describeth the curse that falleth on the wicked, & sheweth Job to be one of that nombre.

When answered Eliphaz the Themanite, and said: Shal a wyle mans answer be the seynce of the wynde, and fil any mans Wely as it were with the wynde of the east?

Shal he reprene wa word, that is nothynge worth: and speake the thynges, which can do no good? As for shame, thou hast sett it asyde, elles woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftye tonge. Thyne a wne mouth condemneth the, and not I: pee, thynne a wne lyppe shapen an answer agaynst the. Art thou the fyrste man, that euer was bozne? Or, wast thou made before the hylles? hast thou heard the secreete counsell of God, that all wysdome is to lytlic for the? What knowest thou, y we knowe? And what understandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both olde and aged men, yee, soch as haue lpyed longer then thy father.

Thynkest thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God? with the is a lpyenge word. Why doth thynne hert so bewyrtch the? And wherfore wyntest thou wyth thynne eyes, that thy mynde is so puffed up agaynst God, and letteth soch wordes go oute of thy mouth? What is man, y he shulde be cleane? what hath he (which is bozne of a woman) wherby he myght be righteous? Behold, he doth not trust hys sapnetes: yee, the very heauens are not cleane in hys syght: howe much more then an abhominable and vyle man, which dymcketh wickednesse lyke water? I wyll tell the, heare me: and I wyll shewe the that I haue sene: which wyle men haue tolde, and hath not bene hyd from their fathers: vnto whom onely the earthe was geuen, and no straunger went amonge them.

The vngodly soroweth all the dayes of hys lyfe as it were a woman with a childe, and the nombre of a tyrauntes peares is unknowne. A fearfull sounde is euer in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered oute of darckenes, for the swearde is alwaye before hys eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lpying, he seeth plainly, that the daye of darcknesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse wyll make hym afrayed, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with hys hoost ready to the batayll. For he hath stretched out hys hande agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst hym, and with a styff necke fyghteth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth hys face with fatnesse, and maketh hys body well lykynge. Therfore shall hys dwellinge be in desolate cyties, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be riche, neither shall hys substance contynue, ner encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come oute of darcknesse, the flame shall drye vp hys bzaunches: with the blast of the mouth of God shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vanyte, and yet he is out of the waye, and vanyte shalbe hys recompence.

He shall perishe, afore hys tyme be wone out, and hys bzaunche shall not be grene. He shalbe pluckt of as an vntymely grape fro the vyne, & shall lett his floure fall, as the olpue doth. For the congregacyon of ypocrites shalbe desolate and vnfrutefull, and yfpye shall consume y houses of soch as are greedy to receaue giftes. He conceaucth fraude, and beareth vanyte, and theyr bodye byngeth forth disceate.

Job. xviij. Chapter.

Job receyvinge hys myserye, sayeth that he suffereth more then hys wyckednesse hath deserued.

When answered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes hearde soch thynges. Miserable geures of conforste are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shuld I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shuld comforte you with my mouth, and release youre payne with the talkyng of my lippes. For all my wordes, my sorow wyll cease: and though I holde my tonge, yet wyll it not departe from me. But now that God hath sente me aduersytie, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon. And that thou hast fylled me wyth wyntchles, my fleshe is recozde, and my leanesse ryseth vp agaynst me, and beareth wytnesse agaynst me. He is angrey at me, he hateth me and gnasheth vpon me wyth hys teth. Myne enemye shoulde vpon me wyth hys eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpon me, & synpten me vpon y cheke despitefully, they gather them selues together agaynst me. God hath put me in ptease with the vngodly, & deliuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was in wealth, but he hath brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the neck, he hath rent me, and sett me as a march for him selfe. His archers compass me rounde rounde aboute: he wounded my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon the ground. He hath geue me one wound vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a glaunte. I haue sowed a sack cloth vpon my skynne, & lye with my heare in the dust.

My face is swollen with wepyng, and in myne eyes is the shadow of death. Howbeit, there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. Deareth & couer not thou my bloude, and let my cryenge synde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen: & he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygth. My frendes geue me many wordes, to scoone, and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a body might please with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my peares is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

Job. xviij. Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doth patiently abyde yt.

My breth stincketh, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at deathes doze. Forward men are to me, and myne eye must continue in the bitternesse of them. Deceyue me, and loke out one to be my suertie in thy sight, what is he that knoweth who will promys for me? For thou hast with holden their hertes from understandyng, therefore shalt thou not sette them vpon hys. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his a wne children spende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the people: where as afore, I was the yoye. Myne eye is dymme, for very heupnesse, & all my strength is become like a shadow. Eternous me therefore shall well conspyde this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynst the ypocrite.

The righteous also will kepe hys wape, and he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence. I praye you lpyng I cannot fynde one wyle man amonge you: My dayes are past, and my counsell and thoughtes of my hart are vanyshed awaye chaungyng the night into daye, and y light into darcknes. Though I tary neuer so much, yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bed in the darcke. I call corrupcyon my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe taryenge? Or, who hath confided the thyng, that I loke for? All that I haue, shall go downe into the pytt, and lye with me in the dust.

Job rebueth the paynes of the vnsaythfull and wycked.

When answered Baldad the Shubi- te, and sayde: When wyll ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marke well, and then we wyll speake. Wherfore are we counted as bestes, & reputed so vyle in youre sight? He destroyed him selfe with his anger: Shal the earth be for saken, or any stone remoued out of his place because of the? Yee, the light of the vngodly shall be put out: and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darcke in his dwelling, and his candle shalbe put out with him. His presumptuous goynges are kepte in, and his a wne counsell shall cast him downe. For his fete are taken as it were in the nett, and he is at his wittes ende. His fote shalbe holden in the snare, and it shall catch them that be thyrstye of bloude: The snare is layed for him in the grounde, & a pytt fall in the waye.

Feardfulnesse shall make him afrayed on euery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Longer shalbe his strength: my fortune shall hange vpon him. He shall cate the strength of his a wne skynne, eue y fyre borne of death shall cate his strength. His hope shalbe roted out of his dwellinge, very ferfulnesse shall bringe him to the kyng. Other men shal dwell in his house (but shalbe none of his) and byrmstone shalbe scattered vpon his habitacyon. His rotes shalbe dried vp beneth, and aboue shall his bzaunch be cutt downe. His remembraunce shall perishe from y earth, and he shall haue no name in the strete: they shall dryue him from y light into darcknesse, and cast him cleane oute of the worlde. He shall neither haue chyldre nor kynfolkes amonge his people, no, ner eny posterite in his dwellinges. They that come after hym, shalbe astoned at his daye, and they that go before, shall be afrayed. Soch are now the dwellinges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym y knoweth not God.

Job. xix. Chapter.

Job receyvinge hys myserye, and greuous paynes, sheweth the generall relureccyon.

When answered, and sayde: how longe will ye here my soule, and trouble me with wordes? Lo, ten tymes haue ye reprene me: and are not a shamed, for to laugh me so to scoone. yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye will enhaunce your selues agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wycked personne because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God, which hath handled me so violently and hath compassed me aboute with his nette. yf I coplayne of the violence y is done vnto me, I cannot be herde. And yf I crye, there is no sentence sentence geuen with me. He hath hedged vp my waye, that I cannot passe, and he hath set darcknesse in my pathes. * He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and take y^e crowne awaye from my head. He hath destroyed me on euery syde, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken awaye from me, as it were a tre pluckt vp by the roote. His wrath is kyndled agaynst me: he taketh me, as though I were hys enemy.

¶ Hys men of warre came together, which made their waye ouer me, ad beleged my dwellinge rounde aboute. * He hath put my brethren farre awaye from me, and such as were of myne acquaintance, are become strangers vnto me. * Myne awne kynfolkes haue forsake me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembrance. The seruantes and maydens of myne awne house toke me for a stranger: and I am become as an aleaunt in theyr syght.

I called my seruant, and he gaue me no answer, no though I prayed him with my mouth. Myne awne wyfe myght not abyde my birth, I was fayne to speake tapie for the chyldren of myne awne body. Yee, y^e chyldren despyssed me: And whē I was gone fro them, they spake euill vpon me. All sochas were my most familiers, abhored me: and they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to myskynne, and my flesh is awaye, only there is left me y^e sayme aboute my teth. Haue pyte vpon me, haue pyte vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the had of God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God doth, and are not satisfied of my fleshe?

¶ That my wordes were nowe written that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were grauen with an yron penne in leade or in stone to continue. For I am sure, that my redeemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne with this skynne, ad se God in my flesh. Yee, I my selfe shall beholde him, not with other, but with these same eyes. My repnes are consumed within me: dyd not ye saye: why doth he suffer persecucion? Is the y^e founde an occasion in me? But be warre of the swerde, for the swerde wyl be auge of wyckednesse, and be sure, that there is a iudgement.

The xx. Chapter.

¶ Then answered Sopha the Naamathite, and sayde. For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why: my mynde is ready within me. I haue sufficiently herde thy checking and reprove, therfore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the begynnyng (euer sence y^e creation of man vpon earth) y^e gladnes of the vngodly hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of y^e pocrites continued but the twyncklynge of an eye. Though he be magnified vnto the heauē, so that his head reacheth vnto y^e cloudes: yet at a turne he perissheth for euer. In so much that they which haue sene hym, shall saye. Where is he? He shall banyshe as a dreame, so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vision in y^e nyght. So that the eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no more syght of hym, and hys place shall knowe hym no more. ¶ Hys chyldren shall be fayne to agree with the poore, and his handes shall restore them their goodes.

¶ Fro his yowth his bones are full of pleasures, but now shall it lye downe within him in y^e earth. When wyckednesse, was swete in his mouth, he hid it vnder hys tounge. That he fauoured, y^e wolde he not forsake, but kepte it close in his throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the popson of serpentes, within his body. The ryches that he deuoured, shall he perbake agayne, for God shall drawe them out of his belly, he shall sucke the gall of serpentes, and the adders tounge shall slaye hym: so that he shall no more se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter. The thing that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp. ¶ Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, & not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, & not buylded them. His belly coulde neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perishe in hys conuentionnesse. There shall none of hys meates be left behinde, therfore shall no man loke for hys prosperite. Whan he had plenteousnesse of euery thyng, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery syde.

¶ For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fyl his belly, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to raygne ouer him: so that yf he fle the yron weapons, he shall be shott wth the stele bowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quyer, & a glystering swerde thozowe the gall of him, feare shall come vpon hym. There shall no darcknes be able to hyde him. An vnkynedde fyre shall consume him, and loke what remaineth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wyckednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substaunce that he hath in hys house, shall be taken awaye and perishe in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the porcyon that the wycked man shall haue of God, and the heritage that he maye loke for of God. ¶ because of his wordes.

¶ Then answered, and sayde: O heare my wordes, and that shall be my comfort of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, ad then laugh at my wordes to scozne. ¶ (ye like you.) Is it for mans sake that I make this disputacyon? Which yf it were so, shulde not my spete be then in soze trouble? Marke me well, and be abashed, and laye your hand vpon your mouth. For when I consyder my selfe, I am afrayed, and my fleche is smytten with feare. * Wherefore do wycked men lyue in health and prosperite, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches? Their chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, and the rodd of God doth not smyte them. Their bullocke gendzeth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

¶ They sende forth their chyldren by flockes, and their sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musycke at their pleasure. They speke their dayes in welthyngnesse: but sodenly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghty, that we shulde serue hym? And what profyt shuld we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is vterly no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly. How oft shall the candle of the wycked be put out: how oft cometh their destruction vpon the? ¶ What sorowe shall God geue them for their parte in hys wrath? Yee, they shall be cut as haye before the wynde, ad as chaffe that the storme carryeth awaye.

¶ And though God saue their chyldren from such sorowe, yet wyl he sorewarde the selues, yf they shall knowe it. Their awne destruction and misery shall they se with their eyes, ad drinke of the fearfull wrath of the Almyghty. For what careth he what become of his household after hys death, whan y^e nombre of his monetbes is cut short? In as much then as God hath the hyest power of all, who can teach him any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghty and at hys best, ryche, and in prosperite: euen when his bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of maye. Another dyeth in sorowe ad heuynesse, and neuer had good dayes. They shall slepe both a lyke in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Beholde, I knowe what ye thinke, yee, and the sortyke that ye playnyn agaynst me. For ye saye: ¶ where is the princes palace? and where is the dwellinge of the vngodly: haue ye not asked them y^e go by the waye? ¶ Doublesse ye cannot denye their tokens, that * the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruction, and that the vngodly shall be brought forth to the daye of wrath. Who darre reprove him for his waye to hys face? Who wyl rewarde him for the vngodlynesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and dwell among the heape of the deed. Then shall he be fayne to be buried amonge the stones of the playne. All men also must folowe him, and there are innumerable gone before him. How wayne then is the comforte that ye geue me? Doth not falshede remaine in all youre answers?

The xxij. Chapter.

¶ Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answer, and sayde: Waxe a man be profitable vnto God, as he that is wyse maye be profitable to hym selfe: Is it any dauntage to the Almyghty that thou art ryghteous? Or shall it profite hym, that thou makest thy wayes perfect? Is he afrayed to reprove the, ad to stepe forth with the into iudgement? Is not thy wickednesse greute, and thyne vngodly dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for naught, ad robbed the naked of their clothe: To soche as were weery, hast y^e geuen no water to drinke, & hast withdrawen bred from the hungrye: Shulde soch one the as vseth violence, wrong & opprellid, doing all thinge of parcialite, and hauinge respecte of personnes, dwell in the lande? Thou hast sent wyddowes awaye emptie ad oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

¶ Therfore art thou compassed aboute with snares on euery syde, ad sodenly vered with feare. Shuldest thou then se no darcknesse? Shulde not the water floude runne ouer y^e? Now * because that God is hyer then y^e heauens, and because thou seest that the starres are so hye, wilt thou therfore saye: Cuius, how shulde God knowe? Doth his dominyō reache beyonde the cloudes? Cuius, the cloudes couer him that he maye not se, & he dwelleth aboue heauen. Dost not thou kepe the olde waye, that wayne me haue gone? Which were cut downe out of tyme, ad whose foundation was as a runnyng water, which layed vnto God: go from vs, and what dyd the Almyghty with them? He fylled theyr houses with good thinges. But the counsell of the vngodly is farre from me. The ryghteous sawe it and were glad, and the innocent laughed the to scozne. Is oure increase hewe downe? As for the remnant of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

¶ Therfore reconcile the vnto God, and be content, so shall all thinges prospere with the ryght rightwell. Receive the lawe at his mouth, de as plentifull as the dust, and the golde of Ophir as the flyntes of the rivers. Pre, Almighty God thy awne selfe shall be thy defence, and thou shalt haue plentye of place.

 Then shalt thou haue thy delite in the Almighty, & lyft up thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promyses.
 Then, loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prosper with thee, and the lyght

The xxij. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he hath knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayeth th. the daye shall walke in his righteousnesse.

Job answered, and sayde: My sayinge is yet this daye in bytternes, and my hande heuy because of my gronyng. O that I myght see him, and synde hym: O that I myght come before his seate, to pleate my cause before him, and to fyl my mouth with argumentes. That I myght knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: ad that I myght vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaynst me with his great power and strength? No, but he wyl make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall entre disputation with hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for ever. Beholde, though I go before, I fynde him: If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of him: If I go on the left syde where he doth his worke, I cannot attayne vnto hym. A gay-ne, yf I go on the right syde, he hydeh hym his mouth, that haue I shutt vp in my herte.

 He is still at one poynt, and who wyl turne him backe? he doth as him listeth, and bringeth to passe what he will. he perfourmeth the thyng that is appoynted for me, & many such thynges doth he. This is y cause that I thinke at his pcesence, so that when I consyde hym, I am afraied of him. For te soft: and seynge that he is Almighty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I gett

Job sheweth that no man is cleane and without synne before God.

Job answered Baldad the Subite, and sayde. Is there power and feare sytting in his hyghnesse, whose men of war-re are innumerable, and whose light aryleth ouer all. But how maye a mā compared vnto

The xxviij. Chapter.

Job setteth that the wysdome of God is vnsearchable.

* Deu. vii. d.

There is a place where siluer is brought out of, and where golde is tried: where yron is dygged out of the ground, and stones resolued to metal. The darckenes shall once come to an ende, he can seke out the grounde of all thynges: the stones, the darcke, and the shadow of death. With the ryuer of water parteth he a funder the straunge people, & knowe no good neyghbour head: such as are rude, vnnamely and vopustours. He bringeth foode out of the erth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are cleane Saphires, and where the clottes of the earth are golde. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vultures eye hath sene: wherein the lions whelpes walke not, and where no lion cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stony rockes, and onerthroweth the mostaynes. Riueres flowe out of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seyth it. Out of dropes bringeth he greates floudes together, and the thinge that is hyd bringeth he to light. How commeth a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstanding? Merely no man can tell how worthy a thinge he is, nether he is founde in the lande of them that lyue. (Cathol. owne pleasure.) The depe saith: he is not with me. The see saith: he is not not with me. She can not be gotten for: (the most pure) golde, nether maye the pryce of her be bought with eny syluer. No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphires maye be compared vnto her. No, nether golde ner Chystrall, nether swete odours ner golden plate. There is nothinge so worthy, or so excellent, as once to be named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth farre beyonde the all. The Copas that cometh out of Inde, maye in no wyse be likened vnto her: yee, no manner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayre soeuer it be.

From whence then commeth wysdome? and where is the place of vnderstanding? She is hid from the eyes of all men liuinge, yee, and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and death saie: we haue herde tell of her with oure eares. But God seeth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weped the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in ordre, and gaue the myghtye floudes a lawe. Then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her and knew her. The xxix. Chapter.

Job complayneth of the prosperite of the tyme past, buttely rejoycynge his frendes of iniurie, because they sayde that Job suffered accordinge to his deservynge.

Job proceeded and went forth in his communicacyon, sayenge. That I were as I was in y monethes by past, and in the dayes when God preserved me: when his light shyned vpon my head: when I wente after the same lyght and shynynge, euen thozowe the darcknesse. As it stode with me when I was yonge: when God prospered my house: when the Almyghtie was yet with me: when my chyldren stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and when the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thozowe the cytie vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayre in the strete: when the yonge men (as soone as they sawe me) hid them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me, when the Princes left of their talkinge, and layed their hande to their mouth: when the myghtye kepte still their voyce, and when their tonge cleued to the rofe of their mouthe. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered the poore when he cried, and so did I the fatherlesse and him that had none to holde him. He that shulde haue bene lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wyddowes herte prayd me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnes, which couered me as a garment, and equitye was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore: and when I knewe not the cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake the chawes of the vnrightheous man, * and plucked the spoyle out of his teth.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shuld haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shulde haue bene as many as the sondes of see. For my roote was spryde out by y water syde, and the dewe laye vpon my corne. Myne honour encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hand. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with sylence they tarped for my counsell. If I had spokē, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well take amonge them. They wayted for me as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me, as y grounde doth to receaue the latter shower. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and the lyght of my countenance wolde they not put out. When I agreed vnto theyr waye, I was the chefe, and sat as a kynge with mys armye aboute hym. And when

The xxx. Chapter.

The greates dyspyng of men and curse of God that Job suffereth.

Now they that are yonger then I, haue me in derpyon: yee, euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thought scoone to haue set with the dogges of my catell. The power & strength of their handes might do me no good: for the tyme is but lost among them. For very misery and hunger, they fled into the wylderneesse horrible & waite, pluckynge vpon nettels amonge the bushes, and the Juniper rotes for their meate. And when they were dyspyed forth, me cryed after them, as it had bene after a thefe. Their dwelling was besyde foule brokes, yee, in the canes and demmes of the earth. Amonge the bushes wente they aboute crying, and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were the chyldren of fooles and vplaines, which are vexe d out of the worlde. * Now am I their songe, and am become their iestynge stock: they abhorre me, and flye farre fro me, and stayne my face with spetle. For y Lord hath looked the strength of my body, and brought me lowe. The byrde haue they cast out of my syght. Vpon my right hande ryle the yonge men agaynst me, they haue hurte my fete, treadynge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wolde destroye. My pathes haue they clene marred. It was so easy for them to do me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakinge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanished awaye more wyrtly then the wynde, and my prosperite departed hence, lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde powred full of heynnesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearled thozow, in the night season, and my synewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorow is my garment chaunged, and accordyng to the diuersite of heynnes am I gyrded with my coate. He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like ashes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me, & though I stode before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye, and with thy violent hande thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou didest set me vp on hie, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou geuen me a very soze fall. Sure I am, that thou wilt deliuer me vnto death, * and to the lodgyng that is due vnto all me liuinge. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed all ready: but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe. Did not I wepe with him that was in trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euell happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for light, there came darcknesse. My bowles sette within me, & take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely and lowly came I in, yee, and without any displeasure: I stode vpon the congregacion, and communed with them. But now, I am a companion of dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to black, and my bones are bryt with heate: my harpe is turned to sorow, and my pype to wepyng.

Job receyeth the innocency of his synynge, and nombre of his vertues.

Made a couenaunt with myne eyes: * I wolde not loke vpon a damsell. For how great a pozisid shall I haue of God? * what inheritaunce from the almyghtie on hie? As for the vngodly and he that ioynech him selfe to the company of wycked doers, shall not destruction and misery come vpon him? * Doth not he se my wayes, and tell all my goings? If I haue walked in vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceane: let me be weped in an euil balaiace, that God may se my innocency. * If so be that I haue withdrauene my fote out of the right waye, and yf my hert hath folowed mine eye sight: If I haue stained or defiled my handes: then shall I sowe, and another cate, yee, my generation and posterite shall be cleane roted out. If my hert hath lusted after my neyghbours wyffe, or yf I haue layde wayte at his doze: * then let my wyffe grinde vnto another ma and let other me lie with her. * For this is a wickednesse and synne, that is worthy to be punished, yee, a fyre that vterly shulde consume, and rote out all my substauce. Did I euer thinke scoone to do right vnto my seruautes and maydens, when they had enymatce agaynst me? But sence that God will sytt in iudgment, what shall I do? And for so moch as he will nedes visett me, what answer shall I geue him? He that faithio ned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also: were we not both shapena like in oure mothers bodie? When the poore defired any thinge at me, haue I denied it them? haue I caused the widdowe to stande waytinge for me in wayne? haue I eatē my porcion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte with me? for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. haue I sene any man perishe thozow nakednesse and want of clothinge? Or any poore ma for lack of raymet, whose sydes feared the vengeance and punishment of God, and knewe very well, that I was not able to beare hys burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced because my power was great, and because my hande gat so moche? * Byd I dores vnto him, y went by the waye. Haue I kepte secreete my synne and hyd myne iniquite, as Adā dyd? Haue I feared any great multitude of people: or yf I had bene dispyssed of the synple, then shulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quietly spent my lyfe, and not gone out at the doore. That I had one which wolde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. In the which the almyghty shall answere for me: though he that is my cotrary party, hath written a booke agaynst me.

¶ Yet I will take him vpon my shulder, and as a garlande about my head. I will tell him, the number of my goynges, and go vnto him as to a Prince. But yf case be that my lande crye agaynst me, or that the forowes therof make any complaynte: yf I haue eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for, yee yf I haue greued any of the plowmen: then let thysles growe in steade of my wheate, & cockle for my barleye.

¶ Here ende the wordes of Job:

The. xxxij. Chapter.

¶ Elihu after the other had sayd, they communicacyon, reproche them of folynesse. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the fytte of God.

¶ These thre men wolde stryue no more with Job, because he helde hym selfe a ryghteous mā. But Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullyte of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, because he called hym selfe iust before God. And with Jobs thre frendes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable answer to ouercome Job. Now taried Elihu, tyll they had ended the communicacyon with Job, for why, they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullyte sa-we, that these thre men were not able to make Job answer, he was mycontent: Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullyte answered hym selfe, and sayde: * Considringe, that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was a-frayed, and durst not shew forth my mynde, For I thought thus within my selfe. It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teach wysdome. Every man (no doute) hath a mynde, but * it is the inspiracyon of the Al-myghty that geueth vnderstandinge. Great men are not all waye wyse, nether doth eu-ery aged man vnderstande the thyng that is lawfull. Therefore will I speake also (heare me) and I will shew you also myne vnderstandinge. For when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkyng, and hearde yours wysdome, what argumentes ye made in youre communicacyon: yee, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynst Job, that directly coulde make answer vnto his wordes: lest ye shulde saye. We haue founde out wysdome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. He hath not spoken vnto me, and I will not answe-re hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one worde) but in so moche as ye will not speake, standyng still lyke domme men, and makynge no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte to shewe hym an an-swere, and to shewe him my meanyng: For I am full of wordes, and the spete that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, my belly is as the wyne, which hath no vente, and bursteth the new vessels in sunder. Therefore will I speake, y I may haue a vnto: I will open my lippes, & make answer. I will regarde no maner of personne, no man will I spare. For * yf I wold go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye:

The. xxxij. Chapter.

¶ Elihu sheweth wherein Job offendeth, with God may we not stryue, nor curiously searche out hys wordes.

¶ Therefore, heare my wordes (O Job) and hearken vnto me all that I will saye: Be-holde, I haue now opened my mouth, my tonge hath spoken in my throte. My hert doth orde my wordes a ryght,

a ryght, and my lippes talke of pure wyf-dome. The spyte of God hath made me, and
* the bryth of the Almyghty hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canst, then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I eue as thou, for I am fashyoned and made euen of the same mould. Therefore, thou nedest not to be afrayed of me, nether nedest thou to feare, that my auctorite shalbe to heuy for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne ea-res, and I haue herde the voyce of thy wor-des: I am cleane wythout any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wykednes in me.
But lo, he hath picked a quarrell agaynst me, and taketh me for hys enemy: * he hath put my fore in the stocks, and loketh narrowly vnto all my pathes. Beholde, in thys hast thou not doner yght. I will make answer vnto the, that God is more then man. And why dost thou then stryue agaynst him: for he shall not geue the accomptes of all hys wordes. For whē God doth once commaunde a thyng, there shulde no man be curpous, to searche whether it be ryght. * In dreames and visions of the nyght (when slombing commeth vpon men, that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he roundeth them in the eares, he infourmeth the, and sheweth them playnely, that it is he, whych withdraueth man from euill, deliuereth hym from pryde, kepeth hym from the graue, and hys lyfe from the swearde. He chasteneth hym with syknesse, and byngeth hym to his bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye wyth no bryd, and his soule abhorreth to eat any dayntie meat: In so moche that hys body is cleane consumed awaye, and hys bones appeare no more. Hys lyfe draweth on to the graue, and hys lyfe to death. Now, yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercifull vnto hym, and sayeth: he shalbe deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconciled. Then shall hys flesh be as well lykynge as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in hys youth. For yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God, he shalbe gracious vnto him, and shewe him his countenance ioyfully, & rewarde man for his ryghteousnes. Socha respecte hath he vnto men. Therefore, let a man con-fesse (and saye) I haue offended: I byd vn-ryghteously, and it hath done me no good.
Yee, he hath deliuered my soule from de-struccyon, and my lyfe shall be the lyght. Lo, thus woeketh God all waye with mā, that he kepeth hys soule from perishing, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuyng.
Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the still, and I will speake. But yf thou hast any thyng to saye, then answer me, and speake, for thy answer pleaseth me. If thou hast nothinge, then heare me, and holde thy tonge, so shall I teach the wysdome.

Why one: yee innumerable doth he punyſhe, & ſetteſtether in their ſteades. Therfore ſhall he deſtroye their worckes, he ſhall turne the right, and they ſhall be deſtroyed. They that were in ſteade of ſtears, dealt lyke vngodly men: and therfore he punyſhed them, becauſe they turned back from hym, and wolde not conſyder all hys wayes. In ſomoch that they haue cauſed the voyce of the pooze to come vnto hym, ad now he heareth the complaynte of ſoche as are in trouble. If he graunte pardon, who wyl condeſcend? And yf he hyde awaye hys countenance, who ſhalbe able to ſe it? whether it be to the people or to any man, thus wyl he do. For the vngodlyneſſe of the people, doth God make an ypoſite to reſpygne, ouer them. For ſomoch then as I haue begone to talke of God, I will not hynde y. If I haue gone a myſſe, enſourme thou me: yf I haue done wronge, I will leaue of. Can he do nothinge without the? For thou haſt reſproued hys iudgement. Thou alſo haſt thynne a wone mynde ad not I. But ſpeake on what thou knoweſt. Let men of vnderſtanding tell me, and let a wyſe man herken vnto me. As for Job, he hath nether ſpoken to the purpoſe nor wiſely. O father, let Job be well tryed, becauſe he hath answered for wycked me: yee, aboue his ſynne he doth wyckedly: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplieth hys wordes agaynſt God.

The xxxiij. Chapter.

Whether doth godlyneſſe proſper, or vngodlyneſſe hurt to God but to man.

Ihu ſpake mozeouer, & ſayde: Thynkeſt thou it ryght, that thou ſayeſt: I am ryghtuous before God? For thou ſayeſt: What aduantage will it be vnto the, and what proſp^r ſhalt thou haue of my ſynne. Therfore will I geue anſwere vnto the and to thy companyos wyth the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: conſydre the cloudes, whych are hyer then thou. If thou haſt ſynned, what haſt thou done agaynſt him? If thine offences be many, what haſt thou done vnto hym? If thou be ryghtuous what geueſt thou hym? Or what will he receaue of thy hand? Of ſoche an vngodly perſonne as thou, and of the ſonne of man that is ryghtuous as thou pretendſt to be: there is a greate cry and complaynte made by them that are oppreſſed wyth vyolence, yee, euery man coplayneth vpon the cruelte of tyrauntes. For ſoche a one neuer ſayeth: Where is God that made me? & that geueſt vs occaſion to prayſe hym in ſ night? Whych geueſt vs moze vnderſtandynge then he doth the beaſtes of the earth, & teacheth vs moze then he doth the ſonnes of heauen.

If any ſuch complayne, no man geueſt anſwere, and that becauſe of the wyckedneſſe of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the almyghty accept his crye? Whan thou ſpeakeſt then, ſhulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy ſelfe before hym, and put thy truſt in hym? Then vſeth he no vyolence in hys wrath, nether hath he pleaſure in curſe: & depe iniquityons. Therfore doth Job open hys mouth but in vayne, and ſolpſly doth he make ſo many wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Whether doth wyckedneſſe hurt God punyſheth and correcteth.

Ihu proceeded forth in hys talkynge, and ſayd: holde the ſtyll a lytle, & I ſhall ſhewe y, what I haue yet to ſpeake on Goddes behalfe. I wyl open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderſtandynge, & prouemy mater ryghteous. And truly, my wordes ſhall not be vayne, ſeynge he is wyth the that is perfect in knowlege: behold, the greaſte God caſteth awaye no mā, for he him ſelfe is myghty in power and wyl ſoome.

As for the vngodly, he ſhall not preſerue hym, but ſhall helpe the pooze to their ryght. He ſhall turne hys eyes awaye fro the ryghteous, but as kynges ſhall they be in the throne, he ſhall ſtablyſh them for euer, & they ſhalbe exalted. But yf they be layed in preſon and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyl he ſhewe them theyr worke, and the ſynnes wher wyth they haue vſed cruell vyolence.

He wyth punyſhynge and nurtringe of them, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wyckedneſſe, & to amende. * If they now wyl take hede ad ſerue him, they ſhall were out theyr dayes in proſperite, and theyr yeares in pleaſure and ioye. But yf they wyl not herke, they ſhall go thorow the ſwearde, and perſyſh or euer they be aware. As for ſuch as be fayned ypoſytes, they ſhall heape vpon wrath for them ſelues: for they call not vpon hym, though they be hys preſoners. Thus ſhall theyr ſoule perſyſhe in ſolpneſſe, & theyr lyfe ſhalbe condened amonge the fornicatours. The pooze ſhall he deliuer out of his affliction, & rōude them in the eare whā they be in trouble. Eue ſo ſhall he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) from the bottonleſſe pytte that is beneth: & yf thou wylt holde y quyet, he ſhall ſpyll thy table wyth plenteuſneſſe.

Neuertheleſſe, thou haſt condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yee, euen ſoche a iudgement and ſentence ſhalt thou ſuffre. For

For then ſhall not thy cauſe be ſpylled wyth cruelte, nor pacyfyed wyth many gyftes. Thynkeſt thou, that he wyl regarde thy riches? he ſhall not care for golde, ner for all them that excell in ſtrength. How longe not thou y tyme, tyll ther come a nyght for the, to ſet other people i thy ſteade. But beware that thou turne not aſyde to wyckedneſſe ad ſynne, which hither to thou haſt choſen more the mekenesſe. Behold, God is of a myghty hye power: Where is there ſoche a gyde & lawe gener as he? Who wyl reſproue hym of hys waye? who wyl ſaye vnto him: thou haſt done wronge?

Conſydre how greate and excellent hys wordes be, whom all men loue and prayſe: yee, wōdrie at hym, and yet they ſe hym but afarre of. Beholde, ſo greate is God, that he paſſeth oure knowlege, nether are we able to come to the experience of hys yeares. * He turneth the water to ſmall droppes, he dryneth hys cloudes together for to rayne, ſo y they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can ſprede out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys tabernacle) and cauſe hys lyght to ſhyn vpon them, and to couer the botome of y ſee. By theſe thinges gouerneth he hys people, and geueſt them aboundaunce of meate.

Wyth the cloudes he hydeth the lyght, and at hys commaundement it cometh agayne. The ryſyng vpon the of the weſt he to hys frendes & to the cattell.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

Whether proueth that the wyſdom of God is vnſearchable.

A this, my heart is aſtonied, and moued out of hys place. Heare then the ſounde of hys voyce, ad the noyſe that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth eury thyng vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maieſty geueſt ſoche a thōdre clappe, y (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. It geueſt an horryble ſounde, when God ſendeth oute hys voyce: greate thynges doth he, whych we can not compehēde. * Whan he commaūdeth the ſnowe, it falleth vpon the erth. As ſoone as he geueſt the rayne a charge, immediately the ſhowers haue theyr ſtrength, and fall downe. He ſendeth feare vpon eury man, that they myght knowe ther a wone worckes. The beſtes crepe into theyr denies, and take theyr reſt. Out of the ſouth cometh the tempeſt, and colde out of the north.

At the byeth of God, the froſt cometh, and the waters are ſhed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour in geuyng moſtneſſe, & agayne wyth his lyght he dryneth awaye the cloude. He diſtributeth alſo on eury ſyde, accordynge as it pleaſeth hym to deale out hys worckes, that they maye do whatſoever he commaūdeth them thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punyſh any lande, or to doo good vnto them, that ſeke hym.

Herken vnto thys (Job) ſtande ſtyll, & conſydre the wondrous worckes of God. Art thou of counsell wyth God, when he doth theſe thinges? Whan he cauſeth y lyght to come forth of hys cloudes? Art thou of hys counsell when he ſpredeth out the cloudes? Haſt thou the perfecte knowlege of hys wordes? & how thy clothes are warme, when the lande is ſtyll thorow the ſouth wynde? Haſt thou helped hym to ſprede out the heauen, whych is to loke vpon, as it were caſt of cleare metall? Teache vs what we ſhall ſaye vnto hym, for we are vnnete becauſe of darckneſſe. Shall it be tolde hym what I ſaye? Shuld a mā ſpeake, or ſhulde he kepe it backe? For eury man ſeeth not the lyght, that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes whych he clenſeth whan he maketh y wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of y North, but the prayſe and honoure of Gods feare cometh from God hym ſelfe. It is not we y can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equite, and ryghteouſneſſe, he is hyer than can be expreſſed.

Art men therfore feare hym, for there ſhall no man ſe hym that is wyſe in his awne cōceate.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

Ihu answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the ſtozme, ad ſayd: what is he that hydeth his mynde wyth ſolpneſſe? * Gyde vpon thy loynes lyke a man, for I wyl queſtyon wyth the, ſe thou geue me a directe anſwere. Where waſt thou, when I layde the foundacyons of the earth? Tell playnely, yf thou haſt vnderſtandynge. Who hath meaſured it, knoweſt thou? Or, who hath ſprede the lyne vpon it? Where vpon ſtande the pylers of it? Or, who layed the corner ſtone therof? Where waſt thou, when the moynyng ſtarrs prayled me together, and and all the chyldren of God reioysed triumphantly: * Who shut the see wyth doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of hys mothers wombe: When I made the cloudes to be a couerpyng for it, and swaddled it with the darcke: when I gaue it my commaundement, makyng doores and barres for it, sayyng: hyther to shalt thou come, but no farther, & here shalt thou laye downe thy proud and hye waues. Hast thou geuen the moornyng charge (as lone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye syping hys place, that it myght take holde of the corners of earth, and that the vngodly myght be shakē out: They tokens and weapens are turned lyke clape, and sette vp agayne as the chaungyng of a garment. The vngodly shalbe disapoynted of their lpyght, and the arme of the proude shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see: or walkedest in the lowe corners of the depe: haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doores of the shadowe of death: Hast thou also perceaued how broad the earth is: yf thou hast knowledge of all thys, then shew me, where lpyght dwelleth, and where darcknes is: that thou mayest bypunge vs vnto theyr quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to theyr houses.

Ancwest thou (asore thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be: Wetest thou euer into the treasures of the snowe, or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, * whych I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of batell and warre: By what waye is the lpyght parted, and in to what lande breaketh y cast wynde: Who deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the lpyghtenyng and thonder, that it watereth & moyfureth the drye and barengrounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no mā remayneth: Who is the father of rayne: Or who hath begotten y droppes of dewe: Out of whose wombe came the yse: Who hath gedred the coldnes of the ayre: that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye congeled aboue the depe. Wylt thou byndre the swete influences of the. viij. starres: Or art thou able to breke the circle of heauen: Canst thou bypunge forth the moornyng starre or y euenyng starre at conuenient tyme, & conueye them home agayne: Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vpon the ordinaunce therof vpon the erth: Moreover, canst thou lpyft vpon thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye poore downe a greate rayne vpon the: Canst thou thondre also: that they maye go theyr waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayyng: Lo here are we: Who geueth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandyng: who nombyeth y cloudes in wysdome: who stytleth the vehement waters of the braver: who turneth the cloues to dust, & then to be cloues agayne: Wylt thou hunt the prape from the lyon, or fede hys whelpes lpyng in theyr demmes, and luyng in theyr couches: who * prouideth meate for the rauen, when hys yonge ones crye vnto God, and fle aboute for lack of meate:

The. xxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job bewpyng hym by the examples of hys wythes, that hys rygthynesse is vnscheatible.

Knowest thou the tyme when the wyld goates bypunge forth theyr yonge, amonge the stony rockes: Or layest thou wayte when y hyndes vse to fawne: rekenest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearinge: or when they lye downe, when they cast theyr yonge ones, and when they are delpyered of theyr trauaple and payne: How their yonge ones growe vp, & waxe greate thorow good fedpyng: when they go forth, and retorne not agayne vnto them: who letteth the wyld alle go fre, or who loweth the bodes of the mule: Euen I whych haue geue the wyldernes to be theyr house, and the vntylled land to be theyr dwelling place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, nether regarde the cryenge of the dyuer: but seke theyr pasturage about the mountaynes, & folowe the grene grasse. Wylt thou the vncorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crybbe: Canst thou bynd the pock about the vncorne in thy sorowe, to make hym plowe after y in the valleys: Or sayest thou trust hym (because he is strong) or committe thy labour vnto hym: Sayest thou beleue hym, that he wyl bringe home thy corne, or to cary any thyng vnto thy barne: Or sayest thou the sayre wynges vnto the pecoakes, or wynges & fethers vnto the storkes: For he leaueth hys egges in the earth and layeth them in the dust. He remembereth not, that they myght be troden wyth fete, or broke wyth some wyld beast. So harde is he vnto hys yonge ones, as though they were not hys, and labourerth in wayne wythout any feare. And that because God hath taken wysdome from hym, & hath not geuen hym vnderstandyng. When hys tyme is that he styeth vpon hys, he careth nether for horse ner man.

Hast thou geue the horse hys strength, or lerned him to bowe downe his neck w feare: that he letteth hym selfe be dyuen forth lyke a gresshopper, where as the stoute neyng that he maketh, is fearfull: he breaketh the groude wyth the hooffes of his fete chearfully in hys in his strength, and runneth to mete the hardest men. He layeth as yde all feare, hys stomack is not abated, nether starteth he a back for any swerde. Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shilde glyste: yet russheth he in fearlesly, and beatech vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tush (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battel a farre of, the noyse, the captaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the Goshauke styeth toward the South: Woth the Aegle mount vp, & make hys nest on hys at thy commaundement: He abydeh in the stony rockes, and vpon the hys toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence seketh he his prape, & looketh farre about wyth hys eyes. Hys yonge ones are fed wyth bloud: & where any deed body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

The. xl. Chapter.

Job humbleth hym selfe vnto God, the description of Behemoth and Leuiathan.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Canst thou stryue wyth y Almyghty, be at rest: Shulde not he which dysputeth wyth God, geue hym an answer: Job answered the Lorde, sayyng: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answer the, therefore wyl I laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twise haue I spoken, but I wyl saye nomore.

Then answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: * Gyde vp thy loynes now lyke a man, & tell me the thynges that I will aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement: Or wylt thou cōdemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made rygthtous: Is thy power then lyke the power of God: Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as hys doth: Then arme thy selfe wyth thyne awne power, vp, decke the in thy ioly aray, powze out the indignacion of thy wrath: se y thou cast downe all the proude, loke well, that thou makest all such as be stubburne, to obeye: treade downe all the vngodly in their place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer their faces wyth darcknesse: Then will I confesse vnto the also, that thyne awne right hande shall saue the.

Beholde, & the beast Behemoth (who I made wyth the) whych eateth haye as an ore: lo, how stronge he is in hys loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spredeth out hys tayle lyke a Cedre tre, all hys baynes are styf, hys rynges are lyke pyppes of brasse, hys rydye bones are lyke stauens of yron. Styf, when God made him, he ordered the wildernesse for him, that the mountaynes shulde geue hym grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the Mosles, the fennes hyde him wyth their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour myght he drinke out of the whoale floude, & suppe of Iordane without any trauaple. Who darre laye hande vpon hym openly, and vndertake to catch him: Or, who darre put a hooke thorow his nose, and lay a snare for hym:

Darrest thou drawe out * Leuiathan wyth an Angle, or bynde hys tonge wyth a snare: Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hi, or boze hys chawe thorow with a naule: Wylt thou make many sayre wordes wyth the (thynkest thou) or flatter the: Will he make a couenaunt with the: Or art thou able for to compell hym to do the continuall scrupce: Wylt thou take thy pastyme wyth hym, as with a byrde, or geue hym vnto thy maydes, that thy companions may make a refection of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the marchaunt men: Canst thou fyl the basket with his skynne, or the fyth pannier w his heade: Darrest y laye hande vpon hym: It is better for the to confydre what harme myght happen the there thorow, and not to touch him. For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the.

The. xli. Chapter.

Of the same Leuiathan wherof is mencioned in the Chapter afore.

Man is so cruell, y is able to sterc hi vp. * Who is able to stāde before me: Or who hath geuen me any thyng as fore hade, y I maye rewarde him agayne: All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare him not, whether he threaten or speake sayre. Who lyfteth him vp, and stryppeth hym out of his clothes, or who taketh him by the bytt of his byddle: Who openeth y doze of his face: for he hath horrible tethe rounde about. His body is couered wyth scales as it were wyth shyldes, lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together: One is so ioynd to another, y no ayre can come in: Pee, one hāgeth so vpon another, and stycketh so together, y they cannot be sundered. His nelyng is lyke a glysteyne. Out of his mouth go torches, and out of his nostrils ther goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sethyng pot. His bryth maketh the coales burne, and the flame goeth out of hys mouth. In his necke remayneth strenght, and nothing is so laborious for him. The members of his body are ioynd so stryctly one to another, and cleaue so fast together, that he cannot cannot be moved.

This here is as hard as a stone, and as fast as the styphre that the myghte smyteth upon. When he goeth: the myghte are afrayed, and feare troubleth them. If any man draw out a swerde at him, it shall not hurt him: there may nether speare, iavelinge ner best plate, abyde hym. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by byasse. He starteth not awake for hym that bendeth the bowe: and as for spyng stones, he careth as moch for stubble as for the. He counteth the darteres no better then a strawe. He laugheth hym to scoone that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the gold in the myte lyke the sharpe pottherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see together lyke an oymment. He maketh a path to be sene after hym, the depe is hys walkynge place. Upon erth is there no power lyke unto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consydre all hys thynges, thys same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

The xliij. Chapter.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for hys frenndes, and his goodes are rejoyced dou- ble unto hym.

When Job answered the Lorde, and sayde. * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought hyd vnto y. For whocan kepe hys awne counsell so secrete, but it shal be knowne? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstode not, the thynges that are so hye, & passe myne vnderstanding. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answere vnto the thyng that I wyll aske y. I haue geuen diligence eare vnto the, and now I se the wyth myne eyes. Wherefore, I geue myne awne selfe the blame, and take repen- taunce in the dust and ashes.

Now when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuneth, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thy two frenndes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thyng that is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

Therefore, take you now seven oxen and se- uen rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, and * offre by for youre selues a brent offe- ringe: and my seruaunt Job shall praye for you. hym wyll I accepte, and not deale wyth you after youre folpynesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng which is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

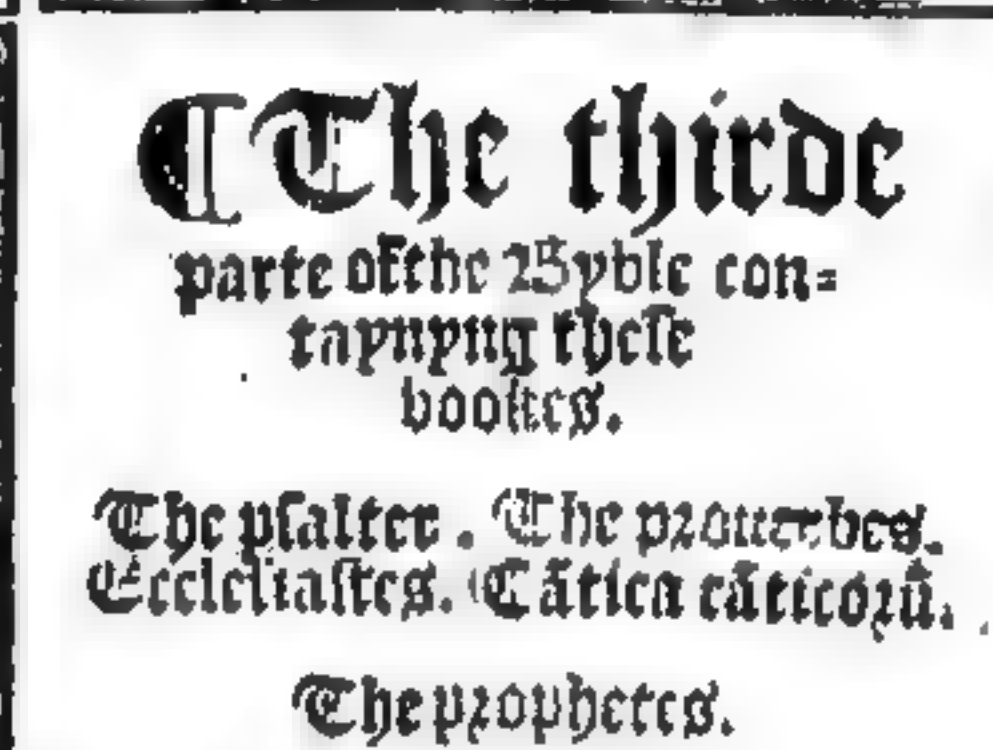

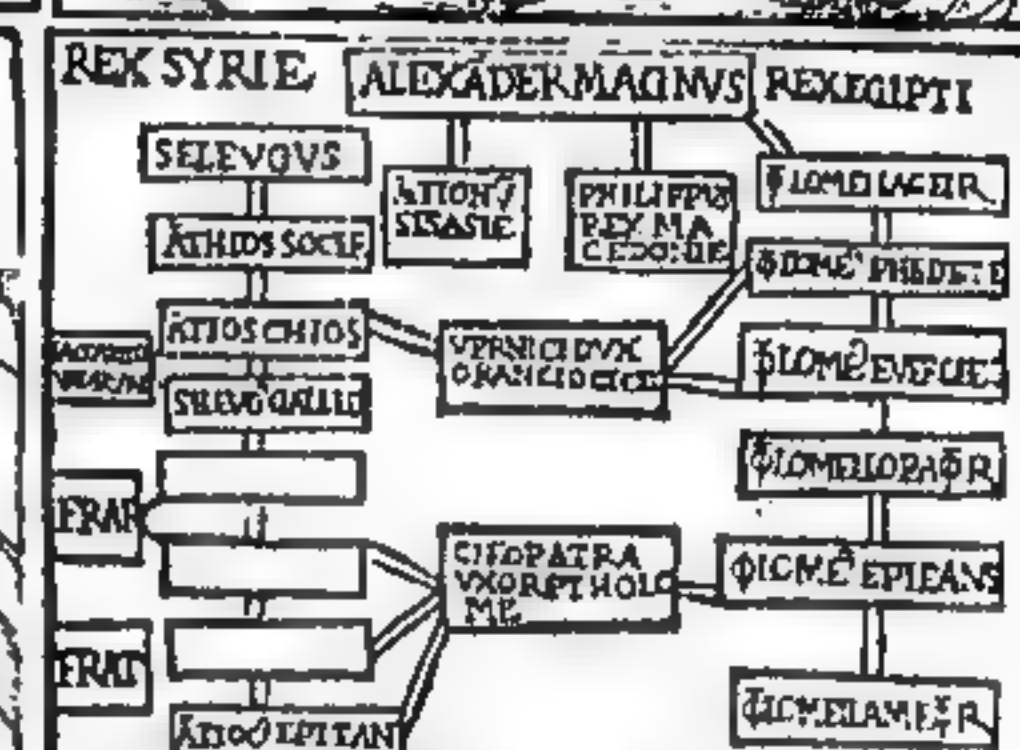

So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Bildad the Suhite & Sophar the Naamathite wot their waye, and dyd accordyng as the Lorde commaunded them. * The Lorde also accep- ted the personne of Job, and the Lorde tur- ned the captiuite of Job, when he prayed for his frenndes: For, the Lorde gaue Job * twofle as moch as he had afore.

And then came there vnto hym all hys brethren, all hys sisters, & all they that had bene of hys acquaintance afore, & dyd eat bread with him in his housse, wondrynge at hym, and confortynge hym ouer all the trou- ble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Every man also gaue hym a certayne some of money and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene thysse. vi. camels, a thysse. x. pouche of oxen, and a thysse. asses. He had seuen sonnes also & thye daugh- ters. The fyrst daughter called he Jemi- ma: the second Kezia, and the thirde Keren- hapuch. In all the land were no wemen found so fayre, as the daughters of Job, and their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethren. After thys luyed Job an hundred and forty peares, so that he sawe * hys chyldren, & hys chyldrens chyldren into the fourth generacion.

And so Job dyed, beyng older of a perfect age.

BEATVS VIR QVI NON ABIIT.

Delight is ma y hath not walked in y counsell of y vngodly, ner stonde
in y waye of sinners, y hath not sytt in the seate of the scornefull.

But hys delight is in the lawe of the Lorde: and in his lawe will he exercise him selfe daye & night.
And y he shal be lyke a tre planted by the watersyde, y wyll bynge forth hys fruite in due season. His leafe also shal not wither: & loke whatsoeuer he doth, it shal prosper.
As for the vngodly, is it not so with: but y they are lyke y chafe which the wynde sca-tered awaye y (fro the face of the erth). Therfore, the vngodly shal nott be able to stande in the iudgment, ner the synners in y congregaciō of the ryghtewes. But y Lorde knoweth the waye of the ryghtewes, and y waye of the vngodly shal perishe.

The second psalme.

QVARE FREMERVNT GENTES.

Why y do the hepten so furiouslye rage together: and why do y prople ymagyne a vayne thyng?
The kynges of the erth stande vp, and the rulers take counsell together y a-gaynst the Lorde, and agaynst hys anoynt-ed. Let vs bycalle theyr bondes asunder, and cast awaye theyr coardes from vs.
He that dwelleth in heauen y shal laugh them to scozne: the Lorde shal haue them in derisyon. Then shall he speake vnto them in hys wrath, and bere them in hys sore displeasure. Yet haue I set my kyng vpon my holy hyll of Syon. I wyll preach the lawe, wherof the Lorde hath sayd vnto me: y thou arte my sonne, thys daye haue I begotten the. Desyre of me, and I shal geue the, y hepten for thyne enheritaunce, & the vmost partes of the erthe for thy possessiō.

y Thou shalt bruse them with a rodd of yron, and breake them in peeces: lyke a potter's vessel. We wyle nowe therfore, O ye kynge, be warned, ye that are iudges of the earth. Serue the Lorde in feare, and reio-yse y (vnto hym) with reuerence. y Lyss the sonne, lest he be angrye, & so ye perishe fro the y (erth) waye, yf his wrath be kyndled (yee but a lytle) blessed are all they that put theyr trust in hym.

The thyrde psalme.

DOMINE, QVID MULTPLICATI.

A psalme of David when he fledd from the face of Absalon hys sonne.

O Lorde, arte my defender: y arte my wor-thyppre, and the lyfter vp of my heed. I did call vpon the Lorde with my voyce, and he hearde me out of hys holy hyll. Sela.

y I layed me downe and slepte, and rose vp agayne, for the Lorde susteyned me.
I will not be afrayde for ten thousandes of the people, that haue set them selues agaynst me rounde about. y O Lorde, y helpe me, O my God, for thou smyttest all myne enemyes y (vpon the cheke bone) thou hast broken the teeth of the vngodly. Salua-cyon beloggeth vnto the Lorde, and thy bles-

For lo, the vngodly benede theyr bowe, and make ready theyr arrowes wth in the bowe: that they maye pynely shote at them, which are true of hert. For theyr foundacions wilbe cast downe, and what hath the ryghteous done?

The Lorde is in hys holy temple: the Lorde seat is in heauen: hys eyes conspyde (the poore) & hys eye lyddes tpeeth the chyldren of men.

The Lorde aloweth the ryghteous: but the vngodly, and hym that delpteth in wickednes, doth his soule abhorre. Vpon the vngodly he shall rayne snares, fyre, and byrmystone, storne & tpeest: thys shalbe theyr porcyon to dysyncke. DIXIT INSIPENS.

To the chaunter a psalme of David.

He * sole hath sayed in hys hert, there is no God. They are corrupt, and become abhomyable in theyr doynges: there is not one that doth good, (no not one.) The Lorde looked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were any that wolde vnderstāde, and seke after God. But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all together become abhominable: there is none that doeth good, no not one. (Theyr throte is an open sepulchre: wth their tonges they haue disceayd, the poyson of aspes is vnder theyr lippes. Theyr mouth is full of cursenge and bitternes, theyr fete are swyft to grab bloude. Destruction and vnhappynesse is in theyr wayes, and the waye of peace haue they not knowe, there is no feare of God before their eyes.)

Haue they no knowledge, that all are soche workers of myschecce, eatynge vpon my people, as it were bread and call not vpon the Lorde. There were they brought in great feare: (euen where no feare was) for God is in the generacyon of the ryghteous. As for you, ye haue made a mocke at the counsell of the poore, because he putteth hys trust in the Lorde. O that the saluacyon were geuen vnto Israel: out of Sion.

Whan the Lorde turneth the captiuite of hys people, then shall Jacob reioyse, and Israel shall be gladd.

The badge or armes of David.

Reserue me, O God, for in the haue I put my trust. O my soule thou hast sayd vnto the Lorde: parte my God, my goodes are nothing vnto the. All my delyte is vpon the sayntes yare in the erth, & vpon soch as excell in vertue. But they y prync after another God, shall haue greete trouble. Their drinck offrynges of bloude will not I offre, nether make mencion of their names within my lippes. * The Lorde hym selfe is the porcyon of myne enheritaunce: and of my cup: thou shalt maynteyne my lot.

The lot is fallē vnto me in a fayre ground, yec, I haue a goodly heritage. I wyll thanke the Lorde for geuyng me warnynge: my reynes also chasten me in the nyght season.

I haue set God alwayes before me, for he is on my right hāde, therefore I shall not fall.

Wherfore my hert was glad, & my glory reioysed, my flesch also shall rest in hope.

For why? * thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, nether shalt thou suffre thy holy one to se corrupciō. Thou shalt thewe me the path of lyfe: in thy presence is the fulnesse of lope, and at thy ryght hande ther is pleasure for euermore.

EXAUDI DOMINE IVSTITIAM.

A prayer of David.

Heare the right, O Lorde, consydre my complaynte, & hearken vnto my prayer, that goeth not out of sayned lippes.

Let my sentence come forth from thy presence: and let thyn eyes loke vpon the thing that is equall. * Thou hast proued & viptyed myne herte in the nyght season: y haste tyed me and shalt fynde no wyckednesse in me: for I am tterly purposed, y my mouth shall not offende. Because of mens workes that are done agaynst the wordes of thy lippes I haue kepte me from the wayes of the destroyer. O holde y vpon my goynges in thy pathes, y my fote steppes slippe not.

I haue called vpon the, O God, for thou shalt heare me: enclpne thyn eare to me, and herkē vnto my wordes. Shewe thy maruelous lounge kyndnesse, thou yart the saypoure of them which put theyr trust in the, from soch as resyst thy ryght hande. I ree

They are enclosed in their awne fatt: & their mouth speaketh proude thynges. They lye waytyng in oure waye on every syde, turnynge their eyes downe to the groude. Lyke as a lyon that is greedy of hys praye, and as it were a Lyons whelp lurching in secrete places. * O Lorde, disapoynte hym, and cast hym downe: deliuer my soule from the vngodly which is as a swearde of thyn.

Fro the men of thy hāde, O Lorde fro the men, I saye, and from the euyl world, which haue their porcyon in thys lyfe, whole helpes y fyllest wth thy hyd treasure. They haue chyldren at their desyre: & leaue the reste of theyr substance for theyr babes. But as for me, I wyll beholde thy presence in rightousnes: & when I awake vpon after thy lykenes, I shalbe satysfied wth it.

vnto the Lorde worshyppe & strengthe.
Geue the Lorde the honoure due vnto his name: worshyppe the Lorde with holy wo-deth the waters: It is the glorious God that maketh the thonder: * it is the Lorde that ruleth the see. The voyce of the Lorde is myghtie in operation, the voyce of the Lorde is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedres of Libanus.

he made them also to shyppe lyke a

Of the Lorde, shaketh the wilderness, & the Lorde shaketh the wilderness of Cades. The voyce of the Lorde maketh the hynde to bring forth younge & discovereth the thicke bushes: in his temple doth every man speake of his honoure. The Lorde spireth abode the water founte, & the Lorde remayneth a hynde for euer. The Lorde shall geue strenght vnto his people, the Lorde shall geue his people the blessing of peace.

EXALTABO. TE. DOMINE.

Chalme and souge of the dedicacion of the house of Dauid.

I will magnifye þe, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp, & thou made my footes to triumphe ouer me. O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the, and thou hast heale me. Thou Lorde hast brought my soule out of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, fro them that go downe to the pytte. Synge prayes vnto the Lorde (O ye saintes of his) and geue thanks vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse. * For hys wrath endureth but the twinklinge of an eye, and in hys pleasure is lyfe: heynesse maye endure for a nyght, but hope cometh in the mornynge. And in my prosperite, I sayde: I shall neuer be remoued: thou Lorde of thy goodnesse hadest made my hill so stronge. Thou dydest turne thy face (fro me) and I was troubled. Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, & gaue me to my Lorde ryght humbly. What profyt is there in my bloude, when I go downe to the pytte? Shall the dust geue thanches vnto the? O shall it declare thy trueth? Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercy vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper. Thou hast turned my heynesse in to hope: thou hast put of my sacke cloth, and gyrded me with gladnesse. Therefore shall (every good man) synge of thy prayse without ceasinge: O my God, I will geue thanches vnto the for euer.

The. xxxi. Psalme.

IN TE. DOMINE SPERAVI.

Chalme of Dauid.

I the, O Lorde, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusyon: deliuer me in thy ryghteousnesse.

Bowe downe thine eare to me, make haste to deliuer me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and a house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For part my stronge rocke, & my castell: be thou also my guyde, & leade me for thy names sake. Draw me out of the net that they haue layed pryncly for me, for thou art my strength. * Into thy handes I commende my spere: for thou hast redeemed me, O Lorde thou God of strength. I haue hated them that holde of superstitious vanities, & my trust hath bene in þe.

Lorde. I will be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast conspyred my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersities.

Thou hast not put me vpon the harte of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble, & myne eye is consumed for very heynesse, & my soule & my body.

It is my lyfe is waxen olde with heynesse, & my yeres with mourninge. My strenght faileth me because of myne iniquite, and my bones are corrupte. I became a reprove amonge all myne enemyes, but specially amonge my neyghbours, and they of myne acquaintance were assayed of me: & they that dyd seme without, coueyed them selues from me. I am cleane forgotten, as a deed man oute of mynde: I am become lyke a broken vessel.

For I haue herde þe blasphemie of the multitude: and feare is on euery syde whyle they conspire together agaynst me, & take ther counsell to take awaye my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the, O Lorde, I haue sayde: thou art my God. My tyme is in thy hande: deliuer me fro the harte of myne enemyes, and fro them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruant the light of thy countenance, and saue me for thy mercyes sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lorde, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodly be put to confusion, and be put to spylle in the graue. Let the lyenge lypes be put to spylle, which cruelly, disdainfully, & despightfully, speake agaynst the ryghteous.

Howe plentyfull is thy goodnesse, which thou hast layed vpon, for them þe feare the: and that thou hast prepared for them, þe put their trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men. Thou shalt hyde them pryncly by thine awne presence fro þe prouokinges of all men: þe shalt kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, fro the styfe of tonges. Thake be to the Lorde, for he hath shewed me maruelous greates kyndnesse in a stronge citie. And when I made hast, I sayde: I am cast out of thy syght. Nevertheless, thou herdest the voyce of my prayer, when I cryed vnto the. O loue the Lorde, all ye his saintes, for þe Lorde preferreth the that are saythfull, and plenteously rewardeth he the proude doer.

Be stronge, & he shall stablyshe poure hart, all ye that put your trust in the Lorde.

Hande is heyn vpon me daye and nyght, and my mysture is lyke the drouth in Sommer.

Sela. I will knowlege my synne vnto the, and myne vnyghteousnesse haue I not hyd.

I sayde: * I will confesse my synnes vnto the Lorde, & so thou forgavest the wickednesse of my synne.

Sela. For this shall euery one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the, in a tyme when thou mayest be founde, but in the great water floudes they shall not come nye hym.

Thou art a place to hyde me in, thou shalt preserue me from trouble: thou shalt compasse me about with longes of deliuerance.

Sela. I will enforme the, & teache the in the waye wherein thou shalt go: and I will guyde the with myne eye.

Be not ye lyke horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandynge. Whole mouthes must be holden with byt & bydle, lest they fall vpon the.

Greate plagis remaine for the vngodly, but who so putteth hys trust in the Lorde, mercy embraceth him on euery syde.

Be glad, O ye ryghteous and reioyse in the Lorde: and be ioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

BENEDICAM DOMINVM.

Of Dauid, when he chaunged his speche before Abimelech, which droue hym awaye and he departed.

I will allwaye geue thanches vnto the Lorde, hys prayse shall euer be in my mouth. My soule shall make her boast in the Lorde the humble shall heare thereof, and be glad. O prayse the Lorde with me, and let vs magnifye hys name together.

I sought þe Lorde & he hearde me, & he deliuered me out of all my feare. They had an eye vnto him, and were lyghtened, & their faces were not ashamed.

Lo, the pooze cryeth, & the Lorde heareth hym, & he saueh hym out of all hys troubles.

The Angel of the Lorde tarpethe rounde about them that feare hym, and deliuereth them.

Taste and se, howe gracious the Lorde is, * blessed is the man that trusteth in hym.

O feare þe Lorde, ye that be hys sayntes for they that feare hym, lacke nothyng.

The Lyons do lacke, & suffre hunger: but they which seke the Lorde: shall want no manner of thyng that is good.

Come ye chyldren & herke vnto me, I will teach you þe feare of the Lorde.

What man is he þe lyfseth to lyue, & wold sayne se good dayes? kepe thy tounge from euell, & thy lypes, þe they speake no gyle.

Eschue euell, & do good. seke peace and enshure it. The eyes of þe Lorde are ouer the ryghteous, & his eares are open vnto thre prayers.

Greate are þe troubles of the ryghteous but the Lorde deliuereth hym out of all.

He kepeth all hys bones, so that not one of them is broken.

But my fortune shall slaye the vngodly, and they that hate the ryghteous, shall be desolate.

The Lorde deliuereth

by the multitude of an host, nether is any myghtie man deliuered by moche strength.

A horse is counted but a vayne thyng to saue a man, nether shall he deliuer any man by hys greates strength.

Schold, the eye of the Lorde is vpon them that feare hym, and vpon them that put they trust in his mercy.

To deliuer they soules from death, ad to fede them in the tyme of dearth.

Dure soule hath patiently tarped for the Lorde for he is oure helpe and oure shylde.

For oure herte shall reioyse in hym, because we haue hoped in hys holy name.

Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse, O Lorde be vpon vs, lyke as we haue put oure trust in the.

The xxxv. Psalme:

IVDICA DOMINE NOCENTES.

Of Dauid.

Rede thou my cause, O Lord, with them that streyne with me: and spght thou agaynst the that spght agaynst me. Laye hande vpon the shilde & buckler, and stande vp to helpe me. Brynge forth the speare, & stoppe the waye agaynst them y persecute me: save vnto my soule: I am thy saluacyon. Let them be confounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let the be turned backe, and brought to confusyon, that ymagyne myschefe for me.

* 1st. 117. 16. c.

* Let the be as the dust before y wynde, and the angell of the Lorde scatterynge the.

Let theyr waye be darcke and slippery, and let the angell of the Lorde persecute the.

For they haue pryncely layed theyr net to destrope me without a cause, yee euen without a cause haue they made a pytte for my soule.

Let a soden destruction come vpon him vnawares: & hys net that he hath layed pryncely, catch hym selfe, that he maye fall into hys awne myschefe. And my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: it shall reioyse in his saluacyon.

All my bones shall saye: Lorde, who is lyke vnto the? which deliuerest the poore from hym that is so stronge for hym, yee the poore and hym that is in misery, from hym that spyleth hym. False witness dyd ryle vp: they layed to my charge, thynges that I knowe not. They rewarded me euell for good, to the greate dyscomforte of my soule. Neuerthelesse, when they were sycke, I put on a sacke clothe: and humbled my soule with fastynge, and my prayer shall turne into myne awne balsome.

I behaued my selfe as though it had bene my frende or my brother, I wente heuely, as one that mourneth for hys mother.

But in myne aduersyte they reioyled, and gathered them together: yee the very abiectes came together agaynst me: vnawares, makinge mooves at me, and ceased not.

With the flatterers were busy mockers, which gnashed vpon me with theyr teeth. Lorde, howe longe wilt thou loke vpon thys?

O deliuer my soule from the calamities which they bypunge on me, and my dearynge from the lyons. So wilt thou geue the thanks in the greate congregacyon. I will prayse the amonge moche people.

Let not them that are myne enemyes triumphe ouer me vngodlye nether: let the wyneke with theyr eyes, y hate me without a cause. And why? theyr comynge is not for peace, but the ymagyne discentfull wordes agaynst them that are quyet in the lande. They gaped vpon me with theyr mouthes, and sayde: eye on the, eye on the: we dyd se it with oure eyes.

This thou hast sene, O Lord: holde not thy tounge then, go not farre frome, O Lord. A wake and stande vp to iudge my quarrell auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lorde. Judge me, O Lord my God, accordinge to thy ryghteousnesse, and let them not triumphe ouer me. Let them not save in their hertes: there, there, so wolde we haue it: nether lett them saye: we haue deuoured hym.

Let them be put to confusyon and shame together that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed with rebuke and dishonoure that boast them selues agaynst me. Let them be glad and reioyse, that fauoure my ryghteous dealinge: yee let the saye allwaye blessed be the Lorde, which hath pleasure in the prosperite of hys seruant.

And as for my tounge, it shall talke of thy ryghteousnesse and of thy prayse, all the daye longe.

DIXIT IN IUSTVS.

To the Chaunter, of Dauid the seruant of the Lorde.

My hert the weth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly, that * there is no feare of God before hys eyes. For he flattereth hym selfe in hys owne syght, tyll hys abhominable synne be founde out.

* 1st. 117. 16. c.

The wordes of hys mouth are vnyghteous, and full of disceate: he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wysely and to do good. He ymagyneth myschefe vpon hys bedd, and hath set hym selfe in no good waye, nether doth he abhoze any thyng that is euell. Thy mercy, O Lord reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes.

Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the greate depe. Thou Lorde shalt saue both man and beest. Howe excellent is thy mercy, O God: and the chyldren of me shall put theyr trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them dryncke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer.

For with the is the well of lyfe, and in thy lyght, shall we se lyght. O contynue forth thy louynge kyndnesse vnto them that knowe the, and thy ryghteousnesse vnto them that are true of hert.

O let not the fote of pryde come agaynst me: and let not the hande of the vngodly cast me downe. For there are they fallen downe, and shall not be able to stande.

A Psalme of Dauid.

Net not thy selfe because of the vngodly: nether be y enuyous agaynst y euell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke y grasse, & be wythered euen as y grene herbe. But y thy trust in the Lorde, & be doinge good: dwell in the lande, and verely thou shalt be fedd. Delite thou in the Lorde, & he shall geue the thy hertes desire. Commytte thy waye vnto y Lorde, & put thy trust in hym, & he shall bypunge it to passe. He shall make thy rightuousnesse as cleare as y light, & thy iust dealing as y noone daye. Holde the styl in y Lorde, & abyde paciently vpon hym: but greue not thy selfe at hym, whose waye doth prospere agens y man y both after euell counceils. Leane of fro wrath, & let go displeasure, frett not thy self, els shalt thou be moued to do euell. Wycked doers shall be roted out: & they y patiently abyde y Lorde, those shall inheret y lande.

Yet a lytle whyle, & the vngodly shall be cleue gone: thou shalt loke after hys place, & he shall be awaye. But the meke sperted shall possesse the earth, & shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly seeketh counsell agaynst y iust, & gnasteth vpo hym with his tethe. The Lord shall laughe hym to scorn, for he hath sene, y his daye is comynge. The vngodly haue drawen out the swerde, and haue bended their bowe, to cast downe y poore and needy, and to slaye soch as be of a ryght conuerfaction. Their swerde shall go thorow their awne herte, & their bowe shall be broken.

A small thinge that the ryghtuous hath, is better then greate ryches of y vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and y Lorde vpholdeth the ryghtuous. The Lord knoweth y dayes of the godly, & their inheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in y perelous tyme, and in the dayes of derth they shall haue ynough. As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: & the enemyes of the Lorde shall consume, as the fawt of lambes: yee, euen as y smoke shall they consume awaye. The vngodly boroweth and payeth not agayne, but y rightuous is mercifull & lyberall. Soch as be blessed of God, shall possesse the lande, & they that be cursed of hym, shall be roted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans goynge, & maketh his waye acceptable to him self. Though he fall, he shall not be cast awaye, for y Lord vpholdeth him with his hande. I haue bene yonge, and nowe am olde: & yet sawe I neuer y rightuous forsaken, nor his seide beggynge theyr bread.

Net me not to rebuke (O Lord) in thine anger: nether chasten me in thy heuyn displeasure. For thyne arrowes styck fast in me, and thy hande presseth me sore.

There is no health in my flesch, because of thy displeasure: nether is there anye rest in my bones, by reason of my synne. For my wyckednesse are gone ouer my heade, and are lyke a sore burthen, to heuy for me to beare.

My woundes syncke and are corrupt, thorow my folyshnesse. I am brought in to so greate trouble & misery, that I go mournynge all the daye longe.

For my loynes are fylled with a sore disease, & there is no whole parte in my body. I am feble & sore smytten, I haue roted for the very dysquyetnes of my hert.

I helde my tōge, & spake nothig, I kepte my lippes, & eue fro good wordes, but it was payne & greue to me. Take thy plage awaye fro me: I am enē consumed by the meanes of thy heuyn hand.

When I wth rebukes dost chasten man for sinne, I makest his bewte to consume awaye, like as it were a mothe frettinge a garment. Euery man therfore is but vanite. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lord, & wth thine eares cōspyre my callinge: holde

* 1. pet. v. c. not thy peace at my teares. For * I am a stranger wth, & a sojournour, as all my fathers were. Oh spare me a lytle, that I maye recouer my strength, before I goe hence, and be nomore sene.

The. xl. Psalm.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of David.

I wayted patiently for the Lord, & he enclyned vnto me: and hearde my calling. He brought me also out of the horrible pitte, out of the myer and clape, and sett my fete vpon the rocke, and ordered my goynges.

And he hath put a new lōge in my mouth, euen a thankelgeuyng vnto oure God.

Many shall se it, and feare, and shall put their trust in the Lord. * Blessed is the man, & hath sette hys hope in the Lord, and turned not vnto his proude, and to such as go aboute with lyes. O Lord my God, greate are thy wondrous woorkes, which thou hast done: like as he also thy thoughtes which are to vs ward: and yet there is no man that ordreth them vnto the. If I wolde declare them, and speake of them, they shulde be moo then I am able to expresse. * Sacrifice and meat offeringe thou woldest not haue, but myne cares hast thou opened: burnt offeringes and sacrifice for synne hast I not required.

Then sayd I: Lo, I come. In the booke of thy will, O my God: I am content to do it: yee, thy lawe is wthyn my hert.

I haue declared thy ryghtuousnesse in y great cōgregation: Lo, I will not refrayne my lippes, O Lord, & I knowest. I haue not hyd thy ryghtuousnes within my hert: my talkyng hath bene of thy truth and of thy saluacion. I haue not kept backe thy louig mercy, & truth fro y greate cōgregation. Withdraue not thy mercy fro me O Lord, let thy louig kyndnesse and thy truth alwaye preferre me. For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my synnes haue taken soche holde vpon me, & I am not able to loke vp: yee, they are mo in nōbre then y heeres of my head, and my hert hath fayled me.

O Lord, let it be thy pleasure to deliuer me, make haste (O Lord) to helpe me. Let the be ashamed & confounded together, & seke after my soule to destroye it: let the be dyspū backward & be put to rebuke, & with me euell. Let the be desolate & rewarded w shame, & saye vnto me: fye vpo, fye vpo. Let all those that seke, be ioyfull and glad in the: & let such as loue thy saluacion, saye alwaye the Lord be prayled. As for me, I am poore & needy, but O Lord careth for me.

Thou art my helper and redemer: make no longe no longe taryng (O my God.)

The. xli. Psalm.

BEATVS QVI INTELLIGIT.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of David.

Blessed is he, & cōspyreth y poore (and needy) O Lord shall delyuer hym in the tyme of trouble.

The Lord preferre hym, & kepe him aliv: & he maye be blessed vpon earth, & delyuer not thou hym in to the wyll of hys enemyes. The Lord comforte hym, when he lyeth syck vpon hys bed: make thou all his bedd in his sicknesse.

I sayde: Lord be mercyfull vnto me, heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the.

Myne enemyes speake euell of me: when shall he dye, & hys name perishe? And yf he come to se me, he speakech vanite, & his hart conceauech falshode within him selfe: & whā he cometh forth, he telleth it. All myne enemyes whisper together agaynst me: euen agaynst me do they ymagin this euell. Let the sentence of gyltynesse procede agaynst him: & now that he lyeth, let him ryse vp no more. Yee, euen mine awne famillier frend whō I trusted * (whych dyd also eate of my bred) hath layed greate wayte for me.

But be thou mercyfull vnto me (O Lord) rase me vp agayne, and I shall rewarde them. Yp this I know thou fauourest me, that my enemye doth not triumphe agaynst me. And whā I am in my health, I vpholdest me, and shalt set me before thy face for euer. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, worlde without ende, Amen, and Amen.

The. xli. Psalm.

QVENIADMODVM.

To the chaunter, a monition of the sonnes of Corah.

As I herde delyuer y water brookes, so longeth my soule after the (O God.) My soule is a thurstie for God, yee, euen for the lyuyng God: whē shall I come, to appeare before y presence of God?

My teares haue bene my meate daye & night, while they daylie saye vnto me: where is now thy God? Now when I thinke there vpo, I powre out my hert by my self: for I went with y multitude, & brought the forth vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thankelgeuyng, among such as kepe holy daye. * Why art thou so full of heuynesse (O my soule) and why art thou so vngyete within me? Put thy trust in God, for I wyll yet geue hym thākes, for the help of hys countenance.

My God, my soule is vexed wthyn me: therfore will I remembre the cōcernyng the land of Iordane, and the lytle hyll of hermonim. One depe calleth another because of the noyse of thy water pipes: all thy wanes & stormes are gone ouer me. The Lord hath graunted his louig kyndnesse on y daye tyme, & in the night season dyd I syng of him, & made my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe. I wyll saye vnto y God of my strength why hast y forgotten me: why go I thus heuely, while the enemye oppreseth me? My bones are smytten asunder, while mine enemyes * (that trouble me) cast me in y fethe. Namely, while they saye daylie vnto me: where is now thy God? Why art y so vexed (O my soule) and why art y so disquyeted wthyn me? O put thy trust in God, for I wyll yet thanke hym whych is y helpe of my countenance, and my God.

The. xlii. Psalm.

IVDICA ME DEVS, ET.

Give sentence w me (O God) & defende my cause agaynst y vngodly people: Oh delyuer me from the disceat full & wyched man. For yart the God of my strength: why hast y put me from the? And why go I so heuely, while y enemye oppreseth me? Oh send out thy lyght & thy trueth & they maye leade me & byyng me vnto thy holy hyll, & to thy dwelling. And that I maye go vnto the alter of God, euen vnto the God of my love & gladnesse, & vpo the harpe wyll I geue thākes vnto the (O God) my God. * Why art y so heuyn (O my soule) & why art y so disquyeted wthyn me? O put thy trust in God, for I will yet geue hym thākes whych is the helpe of my countenance, and my God.

DEVS AVRIBVS NOSTRIS.

To the chaunter an instruction of the sonnes of Corah.

I haue herd w oure eares (O God) oure fathers haue tolde vs, what thou hast done in they tyme of old. How thou hast dyscūen out y heithen w thy hande, & planted the in: how thou hast destroyed the nations, & cast them out.

But thy ryght hād, and thyn arme, and the lyght of thy countenance, because thou haddest a fauoure vnto the. * Thou art my kyng (O God) sende helpe vnto Jacob. Thowowe the, wyll we ouerthrowe oure enemyes, & in thy name wyll we tread the vnder that ryle vpon agaynst vs. For I wyll not trust in my bowe, it is not my swerde that shall helpe me. But it is thou that sauest vs from oure enemye, and puttest them to confusyon that hate vs. We make oure boast of God all the daye lōge, and wyll prayse thy name for euer. Selah. But now thou art farre of, and puttest vs to confusyon, and not forth wth oure armyes.

Thou makest vs to turne oure backs vpon oure enemy, so that they whych hate vs, spoyle oure goodes.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neyghbours, to be laughed to scoone & had in derisyon, of them þare rold about vs. * Thou makest vs to be a by worde amog the heithen, & that the people make theire heades at vs. My confusion is daylye before me, & þ shame of my face hath covered me. For the voyce of the sclauderer & blasphemur, for the enemye & auenger. And though all this become vpon vs, yet do we not forgette þ, ner behaue oure selues frowardly in thy couenaunt. Oure hart is not turned backe, nether oure steppes gone out of thy waye. No not whan thou hast smytten vs in to the place of dragons, & d conered vs wpth the shadow of deeth. Shall not God search it out, for he knoweth þ verp secretes of the hert. * For thy sake also are we kylled all the daye longe, and are cousted as shepe apoynted to be slayne. Up Lorde why slepest þ? To hym that excelleth amonge the lyrics, an instruction of the chyldre of Cozab, a songe of loue.

M There is endyng of a good matter I speake of the thynges, whych I haue made vnto the kyng: & thy tong is the penne of a ready wyrtcr. * Thou art fayrer then the chyldren of men, full of grace are thy lypyes, because God hath blessed the for euer. Syde the w thy swerde vpon thy thygh (Thou most myghtye) accordyng to thy worthe & renoune. Good lucke haue thou w thine honour, ryde on because of the word of treuth, of mekenesse & righteounesse: and thy ryght hande shall teach the terrible thynges. Thy arrowes are very sharpe, & the people shall be subdued vnto the, euen in the myddest amonge the kynges enemyes. * Thy seate (O God) endureth for euer: the scepter of thy kyngdome is a ryght scepter. Thou hast loued ryghteounesse, and hate dinniquite: wherefore God (euē thy God) hath anoynted the wpth the oyle of gladnes aboue thy felowes. All thy garmentes smell of myrrer, Aloes and Cassia, out of the puerpe palaces, wher by they haue made the glad. Kynges daughters were among thy honorable wemē: vpon thy ryght hande dyd stande þ queene in a vesture of gold (brought about wpth byuerse colours.) Herke (O daughter) and confydre: enclpne thyne eare: forget also thine awne people, & thy fathers house. So shall the kyng haue pleasure in thy bewte, for he is thy Lorde (God) & worthepe thou hym. And þ daughter of Tyre shall be there w a gyfte, lyke as the ryche also amonge the people shall make thei supplicacyon before the. DEVS NOSTER REFUGIUM.

To the chaunter, a songe for the chyldren of Cozab vpon Alamoth.

God is our hope & strength: a very present helpe in trouble. Therfore wyll we feare, though the erthe be moud, & though the hylls be carryed in þ myddest of the see. * Though the waters therof rage & swell, & though the mountaynes shake at þ tēpest of þ same. Sela. The ryuers of the floude therof shall make glad þ cytie of God, þ holy place of þ tabernacles of þ most byest. God is in þ myddest of her, therfore shall he not be remoued: God shall help her, & þ ryght early. The heathē makemoch a doo, & the kyngdomes are moued: but God hath shewed his voyce, & the earth shall melt a waye. The Lord of hostes is w vs, þ God of Jacob is oure refuge. Sela. Come hyther, & beholde the workes of the Lorde, what destruccyōs he hath brought vpo the earth. * He maketh warres to cease in all þ worlde: he breaketh the bowe & knappeth the speare in sonder, & burneth the charettes in þ fyre. We styll then & knowe that I am God: I wil be exalted among the heithen, and I wyll be exalted in þ earth. The Lorde of hostes is wpth vs, þ God of Jacob is oure defence. Sela.

OMNES GENTES PLAUDITE.

To the chaunter, a Psalm for the chyldren of Cozab.

Clappe youre handes together (all ye people) O syng vnto God wpth the voyce of melodye. For the Lord is hye and * to be feared, he is the great kyng vpo all þ earth. He shall subdue the people vnder vs, and the nations vnder oure fete. He shall he shall chose out an heritage for vs: euē the worthepe of Jacob whom he loued. Sela. God is gone vp wpth a mery noise, & the Lord wpth the sounde of the troye. O syng prayles, syng prayles vnto (oure) God: O syng prayles, syng prayles vnto oure kyng. For God is kyng of all þ earth syng ye prayles w vnderstandyng. God raygneth ouer the heithē, God sytteth vpo his holy seate. The prynces of the people are loyned vnto þ people of þ God of Abraham: for God (which is very hye exalted) doth defende the earth, as it were wpth a hyde. The. xlviii. Psalm.

MAGNVS DOMINVS.

A songe of a Psalm of the chyldre of Cozab (in the seconde daye of oure Sabbath.)

Greate is the Lorde, & hyelp to be prayled, in the cytie of oure God, euē vpon his holy hyll. The hyll of Sion is a fayre place, & the tope of the whole earth: vpo the north syde lyeth the cytie of the great kyng. God is well knowne in her palaces, as a sure refuge. For lo, the kynges (of the earth) are gathered, & gone by together. They marueled, to se such thynges: they were astonied, and sodely cast downe. Feare came there vpon them, & sorowe, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. Thou shalt breake the thynges of þ see, thou shalt breake the wyndes of þ see, so haue we sene in the cytie of the Lord of hostes, in the cytie of oure God. God upholdeth þ same for euer. Sela. We wayte for thy louyng kyndnesse (O God) in þ myddest of thy tēple. (O God) accordyng vnto thy name, so is thy prayle vnto the worlde: ende: thy ryght had is full of ryghteounesse. Let the mount Sion reioyce, and the daughters of Iuda be glad because of thy iudgements. Walke about Sion, and go round about her, and tell the towres therof. Marke well her bulworkes, set vp her houses, that ye maye tell them that come after. For thys God is oure God for euer & ener, he shall be oure gyde vnto death.

AVDITE HAEC GENTES.

Hear this, all ye people: pondre it with your eares, all ye that dwell in the worlde. Hye and lowe, ryche and poore, one wpth another: My mouth shall speake of wyldome, and my hert shall muse of vnderstandyng. I wyll enclpne myne eare to the parable, and shew my darcke speech vpo the harpe. Wherefore shulde I feare in the dayes of wyckednesse, and whē the wyckednesse of my heles cōpalet me round about? * There be some that put they in trust their goodes, & boast the selues in the multitude of they ryches. But nomā maye deliuer his brother, ner make agreement vnto God for hym. * For it costeth more to redeme they soules, so that he must let þ alone for euer. Per, though he lyue longe, and se nat the graue. * For he seeth, that wyse men also dye, and perthe together, as well as the ignoraunt & folysh, and * leaue they ryches for other: And yet they thynke, that they houses shall continue for euer, and that they dwelling places shall endure from one generacyon to another, & call the landes after they awne names: Neuerthelesse, man wyll not abyde in honour, sepyng he maye be compared vnto the beastes that perthe: this is the waye of them. Thys is their folyshnesse, and their posterite prayse their sayeng. Sela. They lye in þ hell lyke shepe, death gnaweth vpo them, and the ryghteous shall haue dominacyon of them in the moynge: they bewte shall consume in the sepulchre out of they dwellinge. But God shall deliuer my soule from the place of hell, for he shall receaue me. Sela. Be not thou afrayed though one be made ryche, or þ the gloz of his house be increased. * For he shall cary nothyng awaye wth hym when he dyeth, nether shall his pompe folowe hym: For whyle he lyued, he counted hymselfe an happye man: and * so lōge as thou doest well vnto thy selfe, men wyll speake good of the. He shall folowe the generacyons of his fathers, and shall neuer se lyght. Man beyng in honoure hath no vnderstandyng, but is cōpared vnto the beastes, that perthe.

DEVS DEORVM DOMINVS.

A Psalm of Asaph.

The Lorde enen the most myghtye God hath spoken, and called the world from the rysyng vp of the sonne vnto the goyng downe thereof. * Out of Syon hath God appeared in perfecte bewte. Oure God shall come, and shall not kepe silence: there shall go before hym a consuming fyre, and a myghtye tempest shall be stered vp rounde aboute hym. He shall call the heauen from aboue, and the earth, that he maye iudge his people. Gather my sayntes together vnto me, those that haue made a couenaunt with me, wpth sacryfice. And the heauens shall declare his ryghteounesse, for God is iudge hym selfe. Sela. Heare, O my people: and I wyll speake, I wyll shew myselfe my selfe will testifie agaynst the, O Israel, for I am God, and thy God. I will not reprove the because of thy sacrifices, or for thy burnt offerings, because they were not all waye before me. *I will take no bullock out of thy house, nor be goates out of thy foldes. For all the beasts of the forest are myne, & so are the cattell vpon a thoulde bylles. I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes, & the wyld beasts of the feld are in my syght. If I be hungry I will not tell the: for the whole worlde is myne, and all that therein is. Thinkest thou, that I will eat bulles flesh and drinke the blood of goates? Offre vnto God thankesguyng, and paye thy vowes vnto the most hest. And call vpon me in tyme of trouble, so will I heare the, and thou shalt prayse me. But vnto the vngodly sayed God, Why dost thou preach my lawes, & takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Where as thou hatest to be reformed, & hast cast my wordes behynd the? Whan thou sawest a thefe, thou consentedst vnto hym, and hast bene partaker wyth y aduouterers. Thou hast let thy mouth speake wickednesse, and with thy tong thou hast set forth disceat. Thou fastest and spakest agaynst thy brother, yee, & hast sleaured thine awne mothers sonne. These thynges hast thou done, & I helde my tounge: & thou thoughtest, I will reprove the, and set before the, the thynges that thou hast done. O cōpdyre this, ye that forget God: lest I plucke you awaye, and there be none to deliuer you. Who so offeth me thackes and prayse, he honoureth me: and to hym that ordreth hys conuersacyon ryght will I shewe the saluacyon of God.

MISERE MEI DEVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of David, whē p̄phet Nathan came vnto him, after he was gone in to Bethsabe.

Hue mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes: accordyng vnto multitude of thy mercyes, do awaye myne offences. Wash me thorowly from my wickednesse, & cleanse me from my synne. For I knowledg my fautes, & my synne is ever before me. Agaynst the onely haue I synned, and done this euell in thy syght: & thou myghtest be iustified in thy sayinge, & cleare when thou art iudged. Beholde, I was shapen in wyckednesse, & in synne hath my mother conceaued me. But lo, thou requirerest treuth in the inward partes, and shalt make me to vnderstode wylsome secretly. Thou shalt pouge me with hyssop, and I shall be cleane: thou shalt wash me, & I shall be whiter then snowe. Thou shalt make me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones whych thou hast broken, maye reioyse. Turne thy face from my synnes, & put out all my mysdoes. *Make me a cleane hert (O God) & renew a ryght spete wythin me. Cast me not awaye from thy presence, & take not thy holy spete from me. Dgeue me the comforte of thy helpe agayne, & stablysh me wyth thy fre spete. Then shall I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, and synners shall be churched vnto the. Deliuere me from bloud guiltynesse (O God) thou that art God of my health, and my tounge shall syng of thy ryghteousnesse. Thou shalt open my lippes (O Lord) & my mouth shall shewe thy prayse. For thou despyrest no sacrifice, els wolde I geue it: but thou despyrest not in burnt-offerynge. The sacrifice of God is a troubled spete, & a broken and a contrite hert (O God) shalt thou not despyse. O be fauorable & gracyous vnto Syon, buylde thou the walles of Ierusalem. Then shalt thou be pleased with y sacrifice of ryghteousnesse, wyth the burnt offerings & oblations: then shall they offre ponge bullockes vpon thyne auter.

QVID GLORIAS IN MALITIA.

To the chaunter, an exortacyō of David, when Daeg the Edompte came to Saul, and he wed him, sayinge: David is come to the house I hymeleth.

Why boastest thou thy self, thou tyrant, that thou canst do myschefe? Where as y goodnesse of God endureth yet daylie. Thy tōge ymagineth wyckednesse, & wyth lyes thou cuttest lyke a sharpe rasoure. Thou hast loued vngacyon more then goodnes, & to talke of lyes more then ryghteousnesse. Sela. Thou hast loued to speake all wordes that maye do hurt, O thou false tonge. Therefore shall God destroye the for euer: he shall take y & plucke y out of thy dwelling, & rote the out of the lād of the lyuing. Sela. The ryghteous also shall se this, & feare, & shall laugh him to scoone. Lo, this is y mā, that toke not God for hys strength, but trusted vnto the multitude of his ryches, & strengthened hym selfe in his wickednesse. As for me, I am lyke a grene olyue tre i the house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer & euer. I will alwaye geue thankes vnto the, for y hast done: & I will hope in thy name, for thy sayntes lyke it well.

DIXIT INCIPIENS.

To the chaunter vpon Mahalath, an instruccyō of David.

The foolysh bodye hath sayed in hys hert: there is no God. Corrupte are they, & become abhominable in theyr wickednesse: there is none that doth good.

God looked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were eny that wolde vnderstande, and seke after God.

But they are all gone oute of the waye, they are all together become abhominable: there is also none that doth good, no not one. Are not they without vnderstandynge that worke wickednes, eating vpon my people as yf they wolde eate bread: they haue not called vpon God. They were astraied, where no feare was: for God hath broke the bones of hym that beleged the: thou hast put them to confusion, because God hath despyced the. Ob that the saluacyon were geuen vnto Israel out of Sion: Ob that the Lord would deliuer hys people out of captiuite.

Then shulde Jacob reioyse, and Israell shulde be ryght glad.

DEVS IN NOMINE TVO.

To the chaunter in melodys, an instruccyō of David, when the zephites came and sayde vnto Saul: hath not David yd hym selfe amongest vs?

Sue me, O God, for thy names sake, and auēge me in thy strength. Heare my prayer, O God, & hearken vnto y wordes of my mouth.

For strangers are rylen vpon agaynst me, and tyrantes (whych haue not God before their eyes) seke after my soule. Sela.

Beholde, God is my helper, the Lord is with them that vpholde my soule.

He shall rewarde euell vnto myne enemies: destroye thou them in thy treuth.

An offering of a fre hert will I geue the, and prayse thy name (O Lord) because it is so comforteable. For he hath deliuered me out of all my trouble, and myne eye hat seene his deliuerie vpon myne enemies.

EXAUDI DEVS.

To the chaunter in melodys, an instruccyō of David.

Hear my prayer (O God) and hide not thy selfe from my petition. Take heede vnto me, & heare me, how I mourne in my prayer, & am vexed. The enemy cryeth so, and the vngodly cometh on so fast: for they are mynded to do me some myschefe, so maliciously are they sett agaynst me. My herte is dysquyeted within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulness and trembling are come vpon me, and an horryble drede hath ouerwhelmed me. And I sayd: O that I had winges like a doue, for then wold I flee awaye, and be at reste. Lo, then wolde I gett me awaye farre of, and remaine in the wilderness. Sela. I wolde make hast to escape, because of the stormy wynd and tempest. Destroye theyr tonges (O Lord) and deuide them, for I haue spyed vnrigh-teousnes and strepe in the cyte. Daye and night go they about within the walles thereof: myschefe also, and sorow are in the myddest of it. Wyckednes is therein, dysceate, and gyle go not out of her stretes. For it is not an open enemye that hath done me thys dishonoure: for then I coulde haue borne it: nether was it myne aduersary, that did magnifye hym selfe agaynst me: for then I shuld haue had my selfe from hym.

We toke swete counsell together, & walked in the house of God as frendes. Lett death come hastily vpon them, and let them go downe quyk into hell, for wyckednes is in theyr dwellynge, and amonge them.

As for me, I will call vnto God, and the Lord shall saue me. In the euening, and moornyng and at noone daye will I praye, (and that instantly) and he shall heare my voyce. It is he y hath deliuered my soule in peace, from the vaspill that was agaynst me: for there were many with me. Yee, euen God that endureth for euer, shall heare me, and byng them downe. Sela. For they will not turne, ner feare God. He layd hys handes vpon such as be at peace with hym, and he brake hys couenaunt. The wordes of hys mouth were softer then butter, banynge warre in his hert: hys wordes were smother then oyle, and yet be they very sweardes. O cast thy burthen, vpon the Lord and he shall norrysh the, and not suffer the ryghteous to fall for euer. And as for them, thou (O God) shalt byng them into the pyt of destruccyō. The bloude thynst and disceatful me shall not lyue out halfe theyr dayes. Reuerthelesse, my trust shall be in the.

To the chaunter vpon the done of him that was domme in a farre countrey: the badg (or armes) of David, when the Philistines toke hym in Geth.

is the God of Israel. Thou O God send-dest a gracious rayne vpon thyne inheri-rye. Thy congregacion shall dwell the-rin: for thou (O God) hast of thy goodnesse prepared for the poore. The Lord gaue þ

Why hoppe ye so? ye hye hylls?

Thys is Gods hill, in the which it pleaseth for euer. The charettes of God are twetie thousande, euen thousandes of angels, & d the Lord is amonge them as in the holy plaeuen the God which helpeth vs, and poureth

God, euen the God of who comineth salua-cion: God is the Lord by whom we escape death. God shall woude the heade of his enemies, and the heare scalpe of soch one as goeth on still in his wickednes. The Lord hath sayd: I will bringe my people agayne as I byd from Basan: myne owne wyll I byynge agayne as I byd somtyme from the depe of the see. That thy fete maye be dipped in the bloude of thyne enemyes, & that thou goest, how þ my God and kyng goest fore, the mynstrels folow after: in þ myddes are the damocles playeng with þ tymbrels.

Geue thanks O Israel, vnto God þ Lord de in the congregacions from the grounde of the hart. There is lytle Beniamin their ruler: and the Princes of Iuda, their coun-cell: the Princes of Zabulon, and the Prynces SALVVM ME PAC DEVS.

To the chaunter vpon the Solanum of Dauid.

Ame, O God, for the waters are come in euē vnto my soule I sticke fast i f depe myre, where no ground is: I am come to depe waters, so that the floudes renne ouer me. I am wery of crying, my throte is due, my sight faileth me, for waytinge so long vpon my God. They p hate me with out a cause, are mo then p heeres of my head: they that are myne enemies & wolde destroe me gilelesse are mightie: & I payed them the thinges that I neuer toke. God, thou knowest my simplenesse, and my fautes are not hid from the. Let not the that trust in p, O Lord God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded thowowe me, O God of Israeli.

And why: for thy sake haue I suffered reprofe, shame hath couered my face. I am become a strainger vnto my brethren: euen an aleat vnto my mothers children. For p zele of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of the that rebuked the are fallen vpon me. I wepte and chastened my selfe with fastyng, and that was turned to my reprofe. I put on a sacke cloth also, & they iested vpon me. They that sitte in p gate, speake agaynst me, and the dronkar-des make songes vpon me. But Lorde I make my prayre vnto the in an acceptable tyme. Heare me, O God, in p multitude of thy mercy, euen in the trueth of thy salua-cion. Take me out of the myre, p I sincke not. Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me, and out of the depe waters. Let not the water floud browne me: neither let p depe swallowe me vp, and let not the pytte shut her mouth vpon me. Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louyng kyndnesse is cofort-able: turne the vnto me accordyng vnto the multitude of thy mercies. And hyde not thy face from thy seruait, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and here me. Drawe nye vnto my soule, and saue it: Oh deliuer me because of myne enemies. Thou hast knowen my reprofe, my shame and my dysho-nour: myne aduersaries are all in thy syght.

The rebuke hath broken my herte, I am full of heynesse: I looked for some to haue pi-tye vpon me, but there was no man: neither founde I anye to coforte me. * They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thyrsty, they gaue me vineger to drinke. + Let their table be made a snare to take them selues with all, and let the thinges that shuld haue bene for their welth be vnto them an occasion of fallinge. Let their eyes be blinded, p they se not: and euer bowe p downe their backs.

Dowze out thyne indignacion vpon the,
and let thy wrathfull displeasure take holde of them. * Let their habitation be voyde and no man to dwell in their tentes. For they persecute hym whom thou hast anoynted, & they talke how they maye vexe the whom thou hast wounded. Let them fall fro one wyckednesse to another, and not come into thy ryghteousnesse. * Let them be wypped out of the boke of the lyuynge, & not be wyrt-ten amog the ryghteous. As for me, what I am poore and in heynesse, thy helpe (O God) shall lyfte me vp. I wyll prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it w thankesgeuyng. This also shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath horns and hooffes. The humble shal con-fyde this, and be glad: seke ye after God, ad poure soule shall lyue. For the Lord heareth the poore, and despyseth not his pre-soners. Let heauē and earth prayse hym, the see & all that moueth therein. For God will saue Syon, and buyde the cyties of Juda, that men may dwell there, and haue it in possession. The posterite also of his ser-uautes shall inheret it: & they that loue hys

Aste p, O God, to deliuer me: make haste to helpe me, O Lorde.
* Let them be shamed and confounded that seke after my soule: let them be turned backwarde, & put to confusion, that wyshe me euill. Let them (for they rewarde) be soone brought to shame, that crye ouer me: there, there. But let all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the:
and let all such as delpte in thy saluarpon, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in misery, haste the vnto me (O God.) Thou art my helpe, and my redemer: O Lorde, make no longe tarpenge.

The lxxi. Psalme.

IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

Let me neuer be put to confusyon, but rydde me, and deliuer me in thy righteousnesse: encluyne thyne eare vnto me, and saue me. Be thou my strong holde (where vnto I maye all waye resorte) thou hast prompled to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence ad my castell. Deliuer me, O my God, out of the hand of the vngodly, out of the hande of the vngodly and cruell ma.
For thou, O Lorde God, art the thyng that I longe for, thou art my hope euen fro my yowth. Thowow the haue I bene holden vpon euer sence I was borne * thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe, my prayses shal be all waye of the. I am become as it were a monster vnto many: but my sure trust is in the. Oh let my mouth be fylled with thy prayse: * (that I maye syng of thy glory) and honour all the daye longe.

Cast me not awaye in the tyme of age, for sake me not whe my strength faileth me.
For myne enemies speake agaynst me: & they that laye wayte for my soule, take their councell together, sayenge: God hath forsaken hym, persecute hym, and take hym, for there is none to deliuer him. So not farre frome, O God: my God, haste the to helpe me. Let them be cofounded and perpyche, that are agaynst my soule: let them be coue-red with shame and dyshonoure, that seke to do me euill. As for me, I wyll patiently abyde all waye, and will prayse the more ad more. My mouth shall daylie speake of thy ryghteousnesse & saluacion, for I knowe no ende therof. I will go forth i p strength of the Lord God, & will make mencion of thy ryghteousnesse onely. Thou, O God, hast taught me fro my yowth vntill now, therfore will I tell of thy wondrous woorkes.

For sake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am gray headed: vntill I haue shewed thy strength vnto this generaciō, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come. Thy ryghteousnes (O God) is very hye, and great thynges are they p thou hast done: O God, who is lyke vnto the?
O what greates troubles and aduersyties hast thou shewed me: ad yet didest thou turne and refreie me: yee, and broughtest me from the depe of the earth: * (agayne)

Thou hast brought me * to great honour and comforted me on euery syde. Therfore will I prayse the and thy faythfulnesse, O God, playnge vpon an instrumēt of musick, vnto the wyll I syng vpon the harpe, O thou holy one of Israeli. My lyppes wyll be sayne, when I syng vnto the: and so will my soule whom thou hast deliuered.
My tonge also shall talke of thy rygh-teousnesse all the daye longe, for they are co-founded and brought vnto shame, that seke

DEVS IUDICIUM TVVM.

(A Psalme) For Salomon.

Euen the kynges thy indgements (O God) and thy ryghteousnesse vnto the kynges sonne. Then shall he iudge thy people * accordyng vnto right, and defende the poore. The mountaynes also shall bypunge peace, and the lytle hilles righteousnesse vnto the people. He shall kepe the symple folke by their ryght, defende the chylde of the poore, and punish the wyge doer. They shall feare the as long * as p some and more endureth, from one generacion to another. He shall come downe like the rayne into a fiesse of wolles, euen as the drowpeth that water p earth. In his tyme shall the ryghteous flozish, yee, and aboun-dauce of peace, so longe as the more endu-reth. * His dominio shal be also from the one see to the other, and from the floud vnto the worldes ende. They that dwell in the wildernes shall knele before hi, his enemies shall lick the dust. * The kynges of Charlis and of the fless shal geue presentes, the kynges of Araby and Saba shal bring gyftes. All kynges shal fall downe before him: all nacions shal do him seruice.

For he shall deliuer the poore when he cryeth: the neaby also and him that hath no helpe. He shal be fauorable to the symple and neaby: and shal preserue the soules of the poore. He shall deliuer their soules fro falshe and wronge, and deare shal they blond be in his syght. He shall lyue, & vnto him shal be geuen of the golde of Arabia: prayer shal be made euer vnto hi, and day-lie shal be prayed. There shal be an heape of corne in the earth hye vpon the hylles, his frute shal shake lyke Libanus, and shal be grene in p cite, like gras vpon p earth.

His name shal endure for euer, * his na-

Blessed be the Lorde God, euen the God of Israeli * which onely doth wondrous thinges. And blessed be the name of hys maiesty for euer, ad all the erth shal be filled with his maiesty. Amen, Amen.

QVAM BONVS ISRAEL.

A Psalme of Asaph.

Ruly God is louing vnto Israeli: eue vnto such as are of a cleane hert.
Neuerthelesse, my fete were almost gone, my treadinges had well nye slypte.
And why * I was greued at p wicked, I do se also the vngodly in such prosperite:

For they are in no parcell of death, but are lusty and strong. They come in nomisfortune like other folke, neither are they plagued like other me. And this is the cause p they be so holden with pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte. Their eyes swell for fatnesse, and they do euen what they lyst.

They corrupte other, & speake of wicked blasphemye

blasphemye: they talkynge is agaynst the most hieft. For they stretch forth they mouth unto the heauen, & they tongue goeth thorow the world. Therefore fall the people vnto them, and there out sucke they no small aduantage. * Cuth (saye they) how shuld God perceauet: is there knowlege in the moost hieft? Lo, these are the vngodly, these prospeere in the worlde, and these haue riches in posseltyon. * (And saye.) Then haue I clenfed my herte in dayne and washed my handes in innocency. All the daye long haue I bene punished, and chastened euery moynynge. Per, and I had almost sayde euen as they: but lo, then shuld I haue condemned the generacyn of thy chyl- dren. The thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to harde for me. Untill I wen- te into the Sanctuary of God, then vnder- stood I the ende of these me. Namely, how thou dost sett them in slippyng places, and castest them downe and destroyest them. How suddenly do they consume, peryshe, and come to a fearfull ende. * Per, euen like as a dreame when one awaketh, so shalt thou make & theyr ymage to vanysh out of the cyte. Thus my hert was greued, ad it wente euen thorow my reynes. So fol- lysh was I and ignorant, euen as it were a beast before the. Neuerthelesse, I am all waye by the, for thou hast holde me by my right hande. Thou shalt gyde me with thy counsell, and afterwarde receaue me with glo- ry. Whom haue I in heauen but thou? And there is none vpon earth, that I despye in co- paryson of the. My fleashe and my hert fayleth, but God is the strength of my hert, * and my porcyon for euer. For lo, they that forsake the shall peryshe: thou hast de- stroyed all them that commytte fornicacyon agaynst the. But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God, to put my trust in the Lorde God, and to speake of all thy workes. * (in the gates of the daughter Saron)

VT QVID DEVS REPVLISTI.

An instruccyn of Asaph.

God, wherefore art thou absent from vs so long? why is thy wrath so hote agaynst the shepe of thy pasture?

Thynke vpon thy congregacyon, whō thou hast purchased and redemed of olde: Thynke vpon the trybe of thine inheritaunce and mount Sion wherin thou hast dwelt.

Lift vp thy fete, that thou mayest vter- ly destroye euery enemye which hath done euell in the Sanctuary. Thyne aduersa- ryes roare in the myddes of thy congrega- tions, and set vp their banners for tokens.

He that hewed tymbre afore out of y thick trees, was knowne to byynge it to an excellent worke. But now they breake downe all y earned worke therof w axes & hammers. * They haue set fyre vpo thy holy places, and haue despyled the dwellynge place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.

Per, they sayed i their hertes: let vs make haouke of them alltogether: thus haue they bent vp all the houses of God in the lande.

We se not oure tokens, ther is not one Prophet more, no not one is ther among vs that vnderstandeth eny more. O God, how long shall the aduersary do this disho- noure: how longe shall the enemy blaspheme thy name: for euer? Why withdra wast thou had: why pluckest thou not thy right hande out of thy bosome, to consume y ene- mye? For God is my kynge of olde: the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doth it him selfe. * Thou dydest deuyde the see tho- rowe thy power, thou brakest the heades of the dragōs in the waters. Thou smorest the heades of * Leuiathan in peeces, and geuest him to be meate for the people in the wyldernesse. Thou broughtest out fountaynes and waters out of y harde roc- kes: thou dydest vp myghtye waters.

The daye is thine, & the nyght is thine: thou hast prepared the lyght and the sonne. Thou hast sett all the borders of y earth, thou hast made sommer ad wynter. Re- membze this, O Lorde, how the enemye hath rebuked, ad how the folyshe people hath blas- phemed thy name. O deliuer not y soule of thy turtle doue vnto the multitude of the enemies: and forget not the congregacyon of the poore for euer. Loke vpon the coue- nant, for all the earth is full of darkness, ad cruell habitaciōs. O let not the symple go awaye as I am, but let the poore and nedye geue prayse vnto thy name. Arise, O God, maynteyne thine awne cause: remēbze how the folyshe man blasphemeth the dayly. Forget not the voyce of thine enemyes: the presumpcyō of them that hate the increa- selye euer more and more.

CONFITEBIMVR TIBI DEVS.

To the chaunter, Destroye not. A Psalme and songe of Asaph.

Not y (O God) do we geue thanks y pce, vnto the do we geue thanks: thy name also is sonye, & that do thy wo- derous workes declare. Whē I receaue the congregacyon, I shall iudge accorpyng vnto ryght. The earth is weake and all y in habiters therof, I beare vp y pylers of it. I sayde vnto the foles: deale not so madly, and to the vngodly: set not vp your hohne. Set not vp your hohne on hye, & speake not with a styfnecke. For promo- tion commeth nether from the East, ner fro the the west, ner yet from y south. And why? * God is the Judge: he putteth downe one, and setteth vp another. For in the hande of the Lorde there is * a cuppe, & y wyne is redd, it is full mixte, & he poureth out of the same. As for the dregges therof, all y vngodly of the earth shall drynke them, and sucke them out. But I wyll talke of the God of Jacob, and prayse hym for euer.

All the hornes of the vngodly also wyll I breake, and the hornes of the ryghteous shalbe exalted.

NOTVS IN IVDEA.

To the chaunter, in melodye, a Psalme, & songe of Asaph.

In mynne is God knowne, his name is greates in Israel. At * Schall is his tabernacle, and * his dwellynge in Sion. There brake he the arrowes of the bowe, the shylde, the swerde, and y bat- taye. Sela. Thou art of more honour and myght then the hylles of robbers.

The proude are robbed: they haue slepte their slepe: and all the men (whose handes were myghtie) haue found nothinge. At thy rebuke (O God of Jacob) both the cha- ret and hohse is fallen. Thou, euen thou art to be feared: and who may stande in thy syght, when thou art angreye. Thou dydest cause thy iudgement to be herde from heauen, the erth trembled and was still.

When God arose to iudgement, & to helpe all the meke vpon earth. Sela. The fearcenesse of man shall turne to thy prayse: and the fearcenesse of other shalt thou re- frayne. Promyse vnto the Lorde poure God, & * kepe it, all ye that be rounde about hym: byng presentes vnto hym that ought to be feared. He shall refrayne the spretes of dynces, and is wonderfull amonge the kynge of the earth.

VOCE MEA AD DOMINVM.

To the Chaunter, for Jeduthun a Psalme of Asaph.

I will crye vnto God w my voyce, euen vnto God wyll I crye wyth my voyce, and he shall herken vnto me. In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde: my soze ranne and ceassed not in the nyght ceason: my soule refused comforte.

When I am in heynnesse, I wyll thynke vpon God: when my hert is vexed, I wyll complayne. Sela. Thou holdest myne eyes wakynge, I am so feble, that I cannot speake. I haue cōsydered the dayes of olde, and the yeares that are past. I call to re- mēbraunce my songe: and in the nyght I cō- mune with myne awne hert, and search out my spretes. Wyll y Lorde absent him selfe for euer? And will he be no more intreated? As hys mercy clene gone for euer? And is hys promyse come vterly to an ende for euermore? Hath God forgotten to be gra- cyous? And wyll he shut by hys lounge kynnesse in dyspleasure? Sela. And I sayde: It is myne awne infirmyte: But I wyll remembre the yeares of the ryght hāde of the moost hieft. I wyll remembre the workes of the Lorde, and * call to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme. I wyll thynke also of all thy workes, and my talkynge shalbe of thy doynge. * Thy waye, O God, is holy: who is so greates a God as * (oure) God? Thou art the God that doth wonders, ad hast declared thy power among people. Thou hast myghtely deliuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob ad Jo- seph. Sela. The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, & were afrayed: y deapthes also were troubled. The clou- des poured out water, the ayer thondered, & thynne arrowes went a broade. The voyce of thy thōder was hearde rounde aboute, the lyghtenynge shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued and shoke wythall.

Thy waye is in the see, and thy pathes in the greates waters, and thy foreshoppes are not knowne. Thou leddest thy people lyke shepe, by the hande of Moyses and Aaron.

Heare my lawe, O my people, enclp: I ne poure eares vnto the wordes of my mouth. * I wyll open my mouth in a parable, I wyll declare hard sen- tences of olde. DEVS! VENERVNT GENTES.
A Psalm of Asaph.

God * the heathen are come into thy defyled, and made Ierusalem an heape uauntes haue they geuen to be meate, vnto the foules of the ayre, and the flesh of thy sainctes vnto the beastes of the lande.

Their blood haue they shed lyke water on every syde of Ierusalem, and there was no

O God of oure saluacion, for the glory of thy name: O delyuer vs, and be mercyfull vnto oure synnes for thy names sake.

* wherefore do the heathen saye: where is now their God? Let the vengeance of thy seruantes bloude y is shed, be openly bewed vpon the heathen in oure syght.

¶ Let the sorrowfull syghyng of the prisoners come before the: accordyng vnto the greatnesse of thy power, prelerue thou those that are appoynted to dye. And for the blasphemy (wherewith our neyghbours have blasphemed the) rewarde thou them, O Lorde, seven folde into their bosome. So we, that be thy people and shepe of thy pasture, shall geue the thanckes for ever, and wyl alwaye be shewyng forth thy prayse from generacion to generacion.

Solepne feast daye. For this was made a statute for Israel, & a lawe of God of Jacob. This he ordeined in Joseph for a testimony, when he came out of the lande of Egypt, and had heard a strange language. Healed by his shoulder from the burthen, & his handes were deliuered from (making) the pottes. Thou calledst vpon me in troubles, and I deliuered the, and heard the. What tyme as the storme fell vpon me. I proued the also at waters of streyfe. Sela. Heare, O my people, and I will assure the of Israel, yf thou wilt hearken vnto me. There shall no strange God be in the, neither shalt thou worshippe any other God. I am God thy God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypt, open thy mouth wyde, and I shall fyll it. But my people wold not heare my voyce, and Israel wolde not obey me. So I gaue them vnto their awne hertes lust, and let them followe their awne ymaginacions. That my people wolde haue hearkened vnto me, for yf Israel had walked in my wayes. I shulde soone haue put downe their enemyes, & turned myne hand agaynst their aduersaries. The haters of God shulde haue bene founde lyars, but their tyme shulde haue endured for euer. He shuld haue fed them also wyth the fynest wheate flour, and with honny out of the stony roke shulde I haue satisfied the.

DEVS STETIT IN SINAGOGA.
A Psalme of Asaph.

Od standeth in the congregacyon of prynces: he is Judge amonge Goddes. How longe will ye geue wydg iudgement, and accept: the personnes of the vngodly? Sela. Defende the poore and fatherlesse, se that such as be in nede and necessite haue ryght. Deliuere the out caste & poore: saue them from the hande of the vngodly. They wyll not be lerned ner vnderstande, but walcke on styll in darknesse: all the foundacyons of the earth be out of course. I haue sayde. Ye are Goddes, and ye all are chyldren of the moost hyest. But ye shall dye lyke men, and fall lyke one of prynces. Arise, O God, and iudge thou earth, for thou shalt take all heathen to thine inheritaunce.

DEVS QVIS SIMILIS.
A songe and Psalme of Asaph.

Old not thy tge, O God, kepe not thy silence, refrayne not thy self O God. For lo * thyne enemyes make a murmur, and they that hate the haue lyft up their heade. They haue ymagyned craftely agaynst thy people, and taken counsell agaynst thy secrete ones. They haue sayde: come, & let vs rote the out that they be nomore a people, & that the name of Israel maye be nomore in remembrance. For they haue cast their heades together wyth one consent, and are confederate agaynst the. The tabernacles of the Edomites and Ismaelytes, the Moabites and Hagarenes. Gebal, and Ammon, ad Amalech: Philistynes with them dwell at Tyre. Thus also is ioynd vnto them, and haue helpe the chyldren of Lotb. Sela. But do thou to them * as vnto the Moabites, vnto Sitera, and vnto Jabin * at the broke of Ixson. Whych perished at Endor, and became as the donge of earth. Make them & their prynces lyke * Deb and zeb. Pee, make all their prynces lyke as zebek and Salmana. Whych saye: let vs take to oure selues the houses of God in possession. O my God, make them lyke vnto a whele, ad as the stubble before the wynde. Lyke as a fyre that burneth by the wod, and as the flame that consumeth the mountaynes. Persecute them euen so with thy tempest, and make them afrayed wyth thy storme. Make their faces ashamed, O Lord, that they maye seke thy name. Let them be confounded and vexed euer more and more: let them be put to shame and perishe. And they shall know, that thou (whose name is Jehoua) art only the moost hyest ouer all the earth.

QVAM DILECTA TABERNACVLA.
To the chaunter vpon Githith, a Psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

How amiable are thy dwellynge, O thou Lord of hostes? My soule hath a desyre and longinge to entre into the courtes of the Lorde: my heart and my flesh reioyse in the luyng God. Pee, I sparrow hath founde her an house, and the swallowe a nest, where she may laye her yonge: euen thy altars O Lord of hostes, my kynge and my God. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, they wil be all waye pray-syng the. Sela. Blessed is that man whose strength is in the, in whose herte are thy wayes. Whych goynge thorow the vale of misery vnto a well, and the pooles are fylled with water. They wyll go from strength, and into the God of Goddes appeareth euery one of them in Sion. O Lord God of hostes, heare my prayer: hearken O God of Jacob. Sela. Behold O God oure defender, and loke vpon the face of thyne anoynted. For one daye in thy courtes is better then a thousande. I had rather be a doze keeper in house of my God, then then to dwell in the tentes of vngodlynesse. For the Lord God is a lyght and defender, the Lord will geue grace and worshippe, and no good thyng shall be wythholde from them that lyue a godly lyfe. O Lord God of hostes, blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the.

BENEDIXISTI DOMINE.
To the chaunter, a Psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

O Lord, thou art become gracious vnto thy lande, thou hast turned awaye the captiuite of Jacob. Thou hast forgiven the offence of thy people, and couered all they synnes. Sela. Thou hast taken awaye all thy displeasure, and turned thy selfe from thy wrathfull indignacyon.

Turne vs then, O God oure Sauour, and let thyne anger cease from vs. Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer? and wilt thou stretch out thy wrath from one generation to another? Wilt thou not turne agayne & quicken vs, that thy people maye reioyse in the? Shewe vs thy mercy O Lord and graunt vs thy saluacyon. I wyll hearken what the Lord God will saye: (conceale me) for he shall speake peace vnto his people and to hys sayntes, that they turne not agayne. For his saluacyon is nye the that feare him, that glozy maye dwell in oure lande. Mercy and trouth are met together, ryghtuousnesse and peace haue kyssed eche other. Trueth shall flourish out of the earth, & ryghtuousnesse hath looked downe fro heauen. Pee, the Lord shall shewe lounge kynnesse, and oure lande shall geue her increase. Ryghtuousnesse shall go before hym, and he shall directe hys goynge in the waye.

INCLINA DOMINE AVREM.
A prayer of Dauid.

Owe downe thyn eare, O Lord, & heare me, for I am poore & in misery. Preserue thou my soule, for I am holy: my God saue thy seruaunt, that putteth his trust in the. Be mercifull vnto me (O Lord) for I wyll call dayly vnto the. Comforte the soule of thy seruaunt, for vnto the (O Lord) do I lyft up my soule.

For thou Lord art good and gracious, and of greatesse mercy vnto all them that call vpon the. Geue eare O Lord vnto my prayer, and ponde the voyce of my humble desyres. In the tyme of my trouble I wyll call vnto the, for thou hearest me. Amonge the Goddes there is none lyke vnto the (O Lord) there is not one that can do as thou doest. All nacyns whom thou hast made, shall come and worshippe the (O Lord) and shall glozifye thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous thynges, thou art God alone. Teach me thy waye, (O Lord) and I will walke in thy trouth: O knytt my herte vnto the, that it maye feare thy name. I wyll thanke the, O Lord my God with all my hart, and wyll prayse thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercy towarde me and thou hast deliuered my soule from the nextermost hell. O God, the proude are ex-sen agaynst me, and the congregacions of naughtye men haue sought after my soule, and haue not set the before they eyes.

But thou, O Lord God, art full of compassyon, and mercy, longe suffrynge, ple-teous in goodnes and trouth. Turne the then vnto me and haue mercy vpon me: geue thy strength vnto thy seruaunt, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmayde.

Shewe some token vpon me for good, that they wyche hate me, maye se it, and be ashamed, because thou Lord hast helpe me, and comforted me.

DOMINE DEVS SALVTIS.
A song and Psalme of the sonnes of Corah, to the chaunter vpon Nabelath, to geue thankes: an instructio of the man the Ezrabyte.

O Lord God of my saluacion, I haue cryed daye and nyght before the: O let my prayer entre into thy presence, incline thyn eare vnto my callinge.

For my soule is full of trouble, and my lyfe draweth nye vnto hell. I am counted as one of the ygo downe vnto the pytte, and I haue bene eue as a man y bath no strength. I am amonge the deed, lyke vnto the that be wounded in the grane, whych be out of remembrance, and are cut awaye fro thy hande. Thou hast layed me in the lowest pytte pytt, in a place of darknesse and in the depe.

Thyne indignacyon lyeth harde vpon me, and thou hast vexed me wth all thy tormes. Selah. Thou hast put away my acquaintance farre from me, and made me to be abhorred of the. I am so fast in prison, that I can not get forth. My syghte lay-eth for very trouble: Lorde I haue called dayly vpon the, I haue stretched out myne handes vnto the.

Shall thy loupnge kyndnes be shewed in the graue, or thy saythfulnesse in destruccio?
Shall thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darcke, and thy ryghteousnes in the lande? where all thynges are forgotten. Vnto the haue I cryed O Lorde, and early shall my prayer come before the.

Lorde, why abhorrest thou my soule? and hydest thou thy face from me? I am in mytery, & lyke vnto hym that is at the paynt to dye (euen from my youth vpon) thy terrors haue I suffered with a troubled mynde.

Thy wrathfull displeasure goeth ouer me, and the feare of the bath vndone me.

They came round about me daylye lyke water, and compassed me together on euery syde. My louers and frendes hast thou put away from me, and hyd myne acquaintance out of my syghte.

MISERICORDIAS DOMINI.
An instruccyon of Ethan the Ezrahite.

* Psal. lxxix.
v. 1. b. d.

My longe shalbe all waye of the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde, wth my mouth wyll I euer be shewynge thy trueth from one generacyon to another.

For I haue sayde: mercy shalbe set vpon for euer, thy trueth shalbe thou stablysh in the heauens.

* I haue made a couenaunt wth my chosen, I haue sworne vnto Da-uid my seruaunt.

* Thy seide wyll I sta-blysh for euer, and set vpon thy throne from one generacyon to another. Selah. O Lorde

* the very heauens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, & thy trueth in the congrega-cyon of the sayntes. For who is he amonge the cloudes, that shall be compared vnto the Lorde? And what is he amonge the god-des, that shall be lyke vnto the Lorde?

* God is very greatly to be feared in the councell of the sayntes, and to be had in reue-rence of all them that are aboute hym.

O Lord God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the? thy trueth (most myghtie lord) is on euery syde. * Thou rulest the ragynge of the see, thou stillest the waues therof, when they arise. Thou hast subdued Egypte and destroyed it, thou hast scattered thyne enemyes abroad wth thy myghtie arme. The hea-uens are thyne, the earth also is thyne: thou hast layed the foundacyon of the rounde worl-de, and all that therein is. Thou hast made the north and the south, Tabor and Hermon shall reioyse in thy name. Thou hast a myghtie arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy ryght hande. Ryghteousnes and equite is the habitacyon of thy seate, mercy and trueth shall go before thy face. Blessed is the people (O Lorde) that can reioyse in the: they shall walke in the lyght of thy countenance. They shall deliuer the daylye in thy name, & in thy ryghteousnesse shall they make the day boist. For thou art the glory of thy strength, & in thy loupnge kyndnesse shalt thou lyft vpon our hornes. For the Lorde is oure defence, The holy one of Israel is oure kyng. Thou spakest somtyme in wysdom vnto thy sayntes, and saydest: I haue layed helpe vpon one that is myghty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people. * I haue founde Dauid my seruaunt: wth my holy oy-le haue I anoynted hym. My hand shall holde hym fast, and myne arme shall strengthen hym: The enemye shall not be able to do hym violence, the sonne of wickednesse shall not hurte hym. I shall smyte downe his foes before his face, and plage the that hate hym. My trueth also and my mercy shalbe wth hym, and in my name shall his horne be exalted. * I wyll set his dominion also in the see, and his ryght hande in the floudes. He shall call me: thou art my father, my God, & my stronge saluacio. And I wyll make hym my first borne, hyer then the kynges of the earth. My mercy wyll I kepe for hym for euermore, & my couenaunt shall stande fast wth hym. His seide also wyll I make to endure for euer, and his throne as the dayes of heauen. But yf his chyldren for sake my lawe, and walke not in my iudgements. * If they breake my statutes and kepe not my commaundementes.

* I wyll visyte theyr offences wth the rod and theyr synne wth scourges.

Neuerthelesse, my loupnge kyndnesse will I not utterly take from hym, ner suffer my trueth to faile. My couenaunt wyll I not breake, nor alter the thinge that is gone out of my lippes. I haue sworne once by my holynesse, that I wyll not faile Dauid.

His seide shall endure for euer, and his seate is lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande fast for euermore as the moone, and as the saythfull wytnesse in heauen. Selah: But yf thou abhorrest & forsake thyne anoynted, & art displeased at hi.

Thou hast broken the couenaunt of thy seruaunt, and cast his crowne to the groude.
* Thou hast ouerthrowne all his hedges, and broken downe his stronge holdes.

All they that go by, spoyle hym, and he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou hast set vpon the ryght hande of his enemyes: & made all his aduersaries to re-ioyce. Thou hast taken a waie the edge of his swerde: & geuest hym not victory in the battayle. Thou hast put out his glory, & cast his throne downe to the groude. The dayes of his youth hast thou shortened: and couered him wth dishonoure. Selah. Lorde, howe longe wilt thou hid thy selfe for euer?
and shall thy wrath burne lyke fyre?

Remember, howe shorte my tyme is, wher fore hast thou made all me for naught? * What man is he that lyueth, & shall not se death?
and shall he deliuer his owne soule from the hande of hell? Selah. Lorde, where are thy olde loupnge kyndnesse, which thou sworest vnto Dauid in thy treuth? Remember (Lorde) the rebuke & thy seruantes haue & how I do beare i my bolome thy rebukes of many people. Wher with thyne enemyes haue blasphemed the, & sclander the fotsteppes of thyne anoynted. Prayed be the Lorde for euermore: Amen: Amen.

The xc. psalme.
DOMINE REFUGIUM.
A prayer of Moses the man of God.

Lorde, thou hast bene oure refuge from one generacyon to another.
Before the mountaynes were brought forth, or euer the earth & the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlastyng and worlde without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruction. Agayne, thou sayest: come agayne ye chyldren of men. * For a thousande yeres in thy syghte are but as yesterdays, seynge that is past as a watch in the nyght. As soon as thou scatrest them, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse,

In the mornynge it is grene and groweth up, but in the euenynge it is cut downe & withered. For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, & are afrayed at thy wrathfull indignacyon. Thou hast set oure misdeedes before the, and oure secrete synnes in the lyght of thy countena-ce. For when thou art angrey, all oure dayes are gone: we bynge our yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are thye score yea-res and ten: and though men be so stronge that they come to foure score yeres, yet is theyr strength then but labour & sorrow:
so soone passeth it awaye, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, for euen thereafter as a man feareth, so is thy displeasure. * Teach vs, to no-blye oure dayes, that we maye applye oure hertes vnto wysdome. Turne the agayne (O Lorde) at the laste, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. Satisfye vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shall we reioy-se and be glad all the dayes of oure lyfe.

Comforte vs agayne, now after the tyme that thou hast plagued vs, and for the yea-res wherin we haue suffered aduersyte.

Shewe thy seruantes thy worke, and theyr chyldren thy glory. And the glorious maiesty of the Lorde oure God be vpon vs: prosperethou the worke of oure handes vpon vs, O prosperethou oure handy worke.

The xcii. psalme.
QVI HABITAT.

Who so dwelleth vnder the defence of the most hyst, shall abyde vnder the shadow of Almightye. I wyll saye vnto the Lorde: Thou art my hope, and my stronge holde, my God, in hym will I trust. For he shall deliuer the from the snare of the hunter, and fro the noysome pestilence. He shall defende the vnder his wynges, and thou shalt be safe vnder his fetters: his saythfulnesse and trueth shall be thy wynde and buckler. Thou shalt not be afrayed for any terror by night, ner for the arrow that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darknesse, ner for the sicknesse that destroyeth in the noone daye. A thousande shall fall before the & ten thousande at thy ryght hand, but it shall not come npe the. Pee, with thyne eyes shalt thou beholde, and se the rewarde of the vngodly. For thou Lorde arte my hope, thou hast set thyne house of defence very hye there shall no euell happen vnto the, nether shall any plage come npe thy dwelling.

* For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shall beare the in theyr handes, that thou hurt not thy fote agaynst a stone.

Thou shalt go vpon the Lyon and Adder, the yonge Lyon and the Dragon shalt thou treade vnder thy fete. Because he hath set his lone vpon me, therefore shall I de-liuer him: I shall set him vpon, because he hath knowne my name.

* He shall call vpon me, & I wyll beare hym: yee I am with hym in trouble, I will deliuer hym, and bynge hym to honoure. With longe lyfe wyll I satisfye hym, and shewe hym my saluacion.

The xciii. psalme.
BONVM EST CONFITERI.
A psalme and songe for the Sabboth daye.

It is a good thing to geue thanks vnto the Lorde, and to synge pray-ses vnto thy name, O moste hyst.

Ec. ii. Totell

To tell of thy longynge byndnesse early in the mornynge, and of thy tructh in the nyght season. Upon an instrument of ten stryn- ges, & vpon the lute: vpon a lowde instrument & vpon the harpe. For thou Lord hast made me glad thowow thy workes, and I will re- ioice in geuyng prayse for the operations of thy handes. O Lord, how glorious are thy workes: thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwyle man doth not well cōsidre this, and a foole doth not vnderstande it. Whan the vngodly are grene as the gras, & whan all the workes of wyckednes do flourish, then shall they be destroyed for euer. But y Lord art the most hyst for euermore. For lo, thyne enemyes, O Lord, lo, thyne enemyes shall perishe, and all the workes of wycked- nes shall be destroyed. But my hope shall be exalted like the hope of an Anticorne, for

I am anoynted with freysch oyle: Myne eye also shall se hys lust of myne enemyes, and myne care shall heare hys desyre of the wyck- ed that ryle vp agaynst me. The rygh- trous shall flourish lyke a palme tree, and shall sprede abroade lyke a Cedre in Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of y Lord shall flourish in y court: (of the house) of our God. They shall also byng forth more frute in theyr age, & shall be fat and well likynge.

That they maye shewe, how true y Lord my strength is, and that there is no vnrygh- tuousnesse in hym.

The xciiij. Psalme.
DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is sayng, and hath put on glo- rious apparell: the Lord hath put on his apparell, & gydded hym selfe with strength: he hath made the rōnde worlde so sure, that it can not be moued. Euer send the worlde begane hath thy seate bene prepared, thou art from euerlastynge. * The floudes are rylen (O Lord) the floudes haue lyft vp theyr nōyle, the floudes lyft vp the wanes. The wanes of the see are myghtie, & rage horribly: but yet the Lord be that dwelleth on hye, is mightier. Thy testimōies, O Lord, are very sure, holynesse becommeth thyne house for euer.

The xcviij. Psalme.
DEVS VLTIONVM.

Lord God* to whome vengeance be- longeth: thou God to whome vengeance be- longeth, shewe thy selfe. Arise thou iudge of the worlde, and rewarde the proude after theyr deservynge. Lord how longe shall the vngodly, how longe shall the vngodly triumph? Howe longe shall all wycked doers speake so disdainfully, & ma- ke soch proude boasting? They smyte down thy people, O Lord, and trouble thyne he- ritage. They murthure the wyddow and the strainger, and put y fatherlesse to death.

And yet they saye. Cusch* the Lord shall not se, neither shall y God of Jacob regard it. Take hede, ye vnwyle amonge the people, O ye fooles, whan will ye vnderstande?

He that planted the care, shall he not heare? O be that made the eye, shall not he se? O be y mureth the beathen, it is he y teacheth man knowlege, shall not he punysh? * The Lord knoweth the thoughtes of mā, & they are but vayne. Blessed is the man, whome thou chastenest (O Lord) & teachest hym in thy lawe. That thou mayest geue hym pa- cience in tyme of aduersite, vnpyll the pyll be dygged vp for the vngodly. For the Lord will not faple hys people, neither will he for- sake his inheritance. Untill righteounes turne agayne vnto iudgemēt all soch as be true of hert shall folow it. Who will ryle vp w me agaynst the wicked? O who will take my part agaynst the euell doers? If the Lord had not helpe me it had not failed, but my soule had bene put to sylence. * But whē I sayd: my fote hath slipped, thy mercy (O Lord) helde me vp. * In the multitude of the sorowes y had in my herte, thy com- fortes haue refreshed my soule. Wilt thou haue any thynge to do with y scole of wic- kednesse, whiche ymagineth mischefe as a lawe? They gather the together agaynst the soule of the righteous, and condemne the innocēt bloude. But the Lord is my refuge, & my God is the strength of my cōfidence.

He shall recompence the their wickednes and destroye them in their owne malice, yee the Lord our God shall destroye them.

The xcvi. Psalme.
VENITE EXULTEMVS.

Come, let vs synge vnto y Lord, * let vs hertely reioice in the strenght of our saluacion. Let vs come before his pre- sence w thankesgeuyng, & shewe our selfe glad in hym w psalmes. For the Lord is a great God, & a great kynge aboue all god- des. In his hande are all the corners of the earth, & the strenght of the hylls is his also.

The see is hys, and he made it, & his handes prepared the dyce lande. O come, let vs worshyppe & fall downe, and kuele before y Lord oure maker. For he is (the Lord) oure God: and we art y people of his pasture, and y shepe of his handes. * To daye yf ye will heare his voyce, hardē not your her- tes, as in y pronokaciō: as yf daye of tēpta- cion in the wilderness. Whē poure fathers tēpted me, proued me, and saw my workes.

Fourty yeaeres long was I greurd with y generation, & sayd: it is a people y do erre in theyr hertes: for they haue not knowen my wayes. * Vnto whō I swaie in my wrath that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

The xcvi. Psalme.
CANTATE DOMINO.

O synge

Synge vnto the Lord a new songe, synge vnto the Lord all the whole earth. Synge vnto the Lord, and prayse his name, be tellynge of his saluaciō from daye to daye. Declare hys honoure vnto the heathen, ad his wonders vnto all people. * For the Lord is great, and can not worthely be prayled: he is more * to be feared then all goddes. As for all y god- des of the heathen, they be but Idols, but it is the Lord that made the heauens.

Glorie and worshyppe are before hym, power & honoure are in hys Sanctuary. Ascribē vnto the Lord, (O ye kynredes of the people) ascribē vnto the Lord wor- shippe and power. * Ascribē vnto y Lord the honoure due vnto his name, byngge pre- sentes, & come into hys courtes. O wor- shippe the Lord in the beutye of holynesse, lett the whole earth stande in awe of hym.

Tell it out amonge the heathen, that the Lord is kynge: and that it is he which hath made the rōunde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shall iudge the people ryghteously. Let the heauens reioice, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a nōyle, and all that therein is.

Let the selde be ioyfull and all that is in it, shall all the trees of the wodd reioyce. before the Lord, for he cometh: for he cometh to iudge the earth: and with righ- teounesse to iudge the worlde, and the peo- ple with his tructh.

The xcviij. Psalme.
DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is kynge, the earth maye be glad therof: yee the multytude of the fles maye be glad therof. Clou- des and darcknesse are rōunde aboute hym, ryghteounesse and iudgment are the habi- tacyon of his seate. There shall go a fyre before hym, and burne vp hys enemyes on euery syde. His lightenynges gaue spynne vnto the worlde, the earth sawe it and was afrayed. * The hylls melted lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of y Lord of the whole earth. * The hea- uens haue declared his ryghteounesse, & all the people haue sene hys glory. * Con- founded be all they y worshypped carnal yma- ges, and that delpte in vayne goddes: wor- shippe hym & all ye goddes. Sion heard of it and reioyled: and the daughters of Ju- da were glad because of thy iudgementes, O Lord.

For thou Lord art hyer then all that are in the earth, thou art exalted farre aboue all goddes. O ye that loue the Lord, se that ye hate the thynge which is euell: the Lord preserue the soules of hys sayntes, he shall delpue them from the hande of the vngodly. There is sprōge vp a lyght for the ryghteous, and a ioyfull gladnesse for soch as be true herted.

* Reioice in the Lord, ye ryghteous: and geue thanckes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

CANTATE DOMINO.

A Psalme. * (to David).

Synge vnto y Lord a new songe, for he hath done maruelous thyn- ges. With hys awne ryght hande and wth his holy arme hath he gotten hym selfe the victory. The Lord declared hys saluacyon, his ryghteounesse hath he openly shewed in the syght of the heathen. He hath remembred hys mercy and tructh to- warde the house of Israel: & and all the en- des of the worlde haue sene the saluacyon of oure God. Shewe poure selues ioy- full vnto the Lord all ye landes, synge, re- ioice, and geue thanckes. * Prayse y Lord vpon the harpe, synge to the harpe wth a psalme of thankesgeuyng. With trom- pettes also and shawmes: O shewe poure selues ioyfull before the Lord the kynge.

Let the see make a nōyle and all y therein is, the rōunde worlde, and they that dwell therein. Let the floudes clappe their han- des, and let the hylls be ioyfull together.

Before the Lord, for he is come to iudge the earth. Wth ryghteounesse shall he iudge the worlde, & the people with equite.

The xcix. Psalme. * (of David.)
DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is kynge, be the people ne- uer so vnpatient: he sytteth betwene the Cherubins, be the earth neuer so vnquiet. The Lord is greete in Sion, and hys aboue all people. They shall geue thākes vnto thy name, which is great, wo- derfull & holy. The kynge's power longeth iudgemēt, y hast prepared equyte, thou hast executed iudgment ad ryghteounesse in Ja- cob. O magnifye the Lord oure God, and fall downe before his fote stole, for he is holy. Moses and Aaron among his pra- ttes, and Samuel amonge soche as call vpon hys name: these called vpon the Lord, and he heard them. He spake vnto them * out of the cloudy pyller, for they kepte hys te- stimōyes, and the lawe that he gaue them.

Thou heardest them (O Lord oure God) thou forgavest them (O God, and puny- shedst theyr awne inuencyons. O ma- gnifye the Lord oure God, and worshyppe him vpon his holy hyll, for the Lord oure God is holy.

We p sure, that the Lorde he is God: It is he that hath made vs, and not we oure selues: we are his people, and the shepe of his pasture. MISERICORDIAM ET

A Psalme of David.

*Psal.cij.a

* Songe shalbe of mercy and iudgment: vnto y (O Lord) will I synge. Let me haue vnderstandynge in the waye of godlynesse: Whan wilt thou come vnto me? I wyll walke in my house with a perfecte herte. I wyll take no wicked thinge in hand. I hate the synnes of vnfaithfulnesse, there shall no such cleue vnto me. A frowarde herte shall departe from me, I wyll not knowe a wycked personne. Who so pryncely slaundereth hys neyghboure, hym will I destroye: Who so hath also a proude lorde and an hys stomack, I wyll not suffre hym. Myne eyes loke vnto such as be faithfull in the lande, that they maye dwell with me: who so leade the godly lye, he shall be my seruauant. There shall no disceatfull personne dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes, shall not tary in my syght. I shall soone destroye all the vngodly that are in the lande, that I maye rote out all wycked doers from the cytie of the Lorde.

DOMINE EXAUDI ORATIONEM.

A prayer of the affyct, when he hath an heuy hart, and powereth out hys complaynte before the Lorde.

* Care my prayer, O Lorde, ad lett my cryenge come in vnto the. Lorde not thy face fro me in the tyme of my trouble: eclipse thyn eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and p ryght soone. For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, ad my bones are brent by, as it were a fyre brande. My hert is smytten downe and wythered lyke grasse, so that I forget to eate my bred. For the voyce of my gromynge, my bone wyll scarle cleue to my flesh. I am become lyke a bellycane of y wilderness, ad lyke an owle y is in y deserte. I haue watched, & am eu as it were a sparow, that sitteth alone vpon the house toppe. Myne enemyes reuyle me all the daye longe: & they that are madd by me, are sworne together agaynst me. For I haue eaten ashes as at vntere bred, and mingled my drynck with wepyng. And that because of thyn indignacyon & wrath, for thou hast taken me by, & cast me downe. My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe, and I am wythered lyke grasse. But thou, O Lorde, walt endure for euer, and thy remembraunce thow row out all generacyons. Thou shalt aspye, & haue mercy vpon Sion, for it is tyme that thou haue mercy vpon her, yee the tyme is come. And why? thy seruantes thinck vpon her stones, and it pisseth them to se her in the dust. The heathen shall feare thy name, O Lorde, & all the kynges of the earth thy maiesty. Whan the Lorde shall buyde by Sion, and whan his glory shal apere:

Whan he turneth him vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, & despyseth not the praye. This shalbe wyrtten for those that come after: * y people which shalbe borne, shall prayle the Lorde. For he hath looked downe from his Sanctuary, out of the heauen byd the Lorde beholde y earth. That he might heare the mournynge of such as be in captiuite, and deliuer the chyldren appoynted vnto death. That they maye declare the name of the Lorde in Sion, ad his worshippe at Ierusalem: Whē the people are gathered together, & y kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde. He brought downe my strength in my iourney, and shortened my dayes. But I sayed: O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy peares, they endure thow row out all generacions. * Thou Lorde in the begynnyng hast layed the foundacyon of the earth, and the heauens are the worke of thy handes. They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall waxe olde as doth a garment, and as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, and they shalbe chaunged. But thou art y same, and thy peares shall not fayle. The childe of thy seruantes shall cotynue, & their seide shall stonde fast in thy syght.

* Rayle the Lorde, O my soule, and all that is in me prayle his holy name. Prayle the Lorde, O my soule, and forget not all hys benefytes. Whych forgeneth all thy synne, & healeth all thy infirmities. Which saue thy lyfe from destruction, and crowneth the with mercy ad lowynge kyndnesse. Whych satisfyeth thy mouth with good thynges, making the ponge and lusty as an Agle. The Lorde executeth ryghteousnesse and iudgment, for all them that are oppressed with wronge. He sheweth

He will not allwaye be chydynge, neither kepeth he his anger for euer. He hath not dealt with vs after oure synnes, ner rewarded vs according to oure wyckednesse.

*Psal.cij.a

* For loke how by the heauen is in comparison of the earth, so greates is hys mercy also towarde the y feare him. Loke how wyde also the east is from the west, so farte hath he set oure synnes from vs. Pee like as a father pitieth his awne chyldren, eu so is the Lorde mercifull vnto the y feare him. For he knoweth wherof we be made, * he remembreth y we are but dust. The dayes of man are but as grasse, for he flourisheth as a floure of the felde. For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and y place therof shall knowe it nomore. But the mercifull goodnesse of y Lorde endureth for euer & euer, vpon them that feare him, & hys ryghteousnesse vpon chylders chyldren.

Eu vpon such as kepe his couenaunt, & thincke vpon hys commaundementes to do them. The Lorde hath prepared hys seate in heauen, ad his kyngdome ruleth ouer all. O prayle the Lorde ye angels of his, ye y excell in strength: ye that fulfyll his commaundement, & hearken vnto the voyce of his wordes. O prayle the Lorde all ye his hostes, ye seruantes of his, that do his pleasure. O speake good of y Lorde all ye workes of his, in all places of his dominion: prayle thou the Lorde, O my soule.

They go vp as hye as the hylls, and downe to the valleys beneth: euen vnto the place, which thou hast appoynted for them. * Thou hast set them their boundes, which they shall not passe: neither turne agayne to couer the earth. The trees of the Lorde also are full of sappe, euē the Cedres of Libanus which he hath planted. Wherin the byrdes make their nestes, and the fyre trees are a dwelling for the storcke. The hye hylls are a refuge for the wilde goates, and so are the stony rocks for the conyes. He appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons, and the Sunne knoweth hys goynge downe.

So is this greates ad wyde see alio, wherin are thynges crepyng innumerable, both small and greates bestes. There go the shippes, and there is that * (Leuia = thā, whom thou hast made, to take hys pasture therin. * These wayte all vpon the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season. When thou geuest it them, they gather it: and when thou openest thyn had, they are fylled with good. Whē thou bydest thy face, they are troubled: whan thou takest awaye their breath, they dye, and are turned agayne to their dust. When thou lettest thy breath goo forth, they shalbe mad, and thou shalt renue the face of the earth. The glorious maiesty of the Lorde shall endure for euer, the Lorde shall reioyse in hys workes. The earth shall tremble at the loke of hym: yf he do but touch the hylls, they shall smoke. I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as long as I lyue, I will prayle my God whyle I haue my beynge. And so shall my wordes please hi: my ioye shalbe in the Lorde. As for synners, they shalbe consumed out of the earth, and the vngodly shall come to an ende: * prayle thou the Lorde, O my soule. They are carped by to the heauen, and downe agayne to the deape, their soule melteth awaye because of the trouble. They reie to and fro, and stacher lyke a drunken man, & are at their wittes ende. So whā they crye vnto p Lord in their trouble, he deliuereth the out of their distresse. For he maketh the storme to cease, so that p waues therof are still. Then are they glad because they be at rest, & so he byngeth them vnto the haue where they wolde be.

Which turneth the floudes into a wilderness: and dryeth vp the water sprynges. A frutefull lande maketh he bare, for the wyckednesse of them that dwell therein.

Agayne, he maketh the wilderness a standinge water, and water sprynges of a drye ground. And there he setteth the hongrie, that they maye buyde them a cytie to dwell in. That they maye sowe their londe, and plante vyneyardes, to yelde them frutes of increase. He blesteth the, so that they multiplye exceedingly, and suffreth not their cattell to decrease. And agayne: whā they are minished and brought lowe thozow oppression, thozow eny plag or trouble. Though he suffre them to be euell intreated thozow tpayntes, and lett them wandze out of the waye in the wilderness. Yet helpeth he the poore out of misery, & maketh him housholde lyke a flocke of shepe. The ryghteous wyl conspyre this, and reioyse, & the mouth of all wyckednesse shall be stopped. Who so is wyle, wyl ponde these thynges: and they shall vnderstand the louyng kynndnesse of the Lord.

PARATVM COR MEVM.

A songe and a Psalme of David.

God my hert is ready: my hart is ready. I will synge, and geue prayse, w the best mēbre that I haue. I wake thou lute and harpe, I my selfe wyl awake ryghte early. I will geue thanckes vnto p (O Lord) among the people, I wyl synge prayles vnto the among the nacions.

For thy mercy is greater then the heauens, and thy truth reacheth vnto the cloudes.

Set vp thy selfe (O God) aboue p heauens, and thy glory aboue all the earth.

That thy beloued maye be deliuered: let thy ryght hande saue them, and heare p me.

God hath spoken in his holynes, I wyl reioyse. therfore, and deuyde Sichem, and meete out the valley of Suchoth.

Gilead is myne, and Danas is myne. Ephraim also is p strength of my head, Juda is my lawgeuer. Moab is my washpote, ouer Edd will I cast out my shoe: vnto Philistea will I triumphe. Who wyl leade me in to the stronge cytie? And who wyl byng me in to Edom? Hast not thou forsaken vs (O God)? And wilt not p God, go forth with oure hostes? O helpe vs agaynst p enemye: for dayne is the helpe of man.

Thozow God we shall do great actes: & it is he, p shall treade downe our enemyes.

DEVS LAVDEM MEAM.

Didst not thy tonge (O God) of my prayse. For p mouth of p vngodly, pre and the mouth of the discaitfull is opened vnto me, & they haue spoken against me with false tonges. They cōpased me about also with wordes of hatred, & fought agaynst me without a cause. For the loue p I had vnto them, lo, they take now my contrary part, but I geue my self vnto prayer.

Thus haue they rewarded me euell for good, & hatred for my good wyl. Set thou an vngodly man to be ruler ouer hym, & let Satan stande at his ryght hande.

When sentence is geuen vnto him, let him be condemned, & let his prayer be turned in to synne. Let his dayes be few, and let another take his office. Let his chyldze be fatherlesse, & his wyfe a wydow. Let his chyldzen be vagaboundes, & begg their bred: lett them seke it also out of desolate places.

Let the extorcioner consume all p he hath, and let straungers spole his laboure.

Let there be no man to petye hym, ner to haue compassyon vpon his fatherlesse chyldzen. Let his pollerite be destroyed, and in the next generacyn let his name be cleane put out. Let p wickednesse of his fathers be had in remembrance in the syght of the Lord, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye. Let them alwaye be before the Lord, that he maye rote out the memoriall of them from of the earth. And that because his mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpelesse man, that he myght slaye him, that was vexed at the hert.

His desyre was in cursyng, & it shall happen vnto him: he loned not blessing, therfore shall it be farre from him. He clothed him self with cursyng lyke as with a rayment: & it shall come in to his bowels lyke water, & lyke oyle in to his bones. Lett it be vnto him as the cloke that he hath vnto him, & as the gyrdle that he is allwaye girded w all.

Let it thus happen from the Lord vnto myne myne enemyes, & to those that speake euell agaynst my soule. But shal thou w me (O Lord God) accordyng vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy. O deliuer me, for I am helpelesse and poore, & my hert is wounded within me. I go hence lyke p shadow that departeth, and am dryue awaye as the grethopper. My knees are weake thozow fastyng, my flesh is dryed vp for wat of fastnesse. I became also a rebuke vnto them: they that looked vpon me, shaked their heades. Helpe me (O Lord my God) oh laue me accordyng to thy mercy. And they shall know, how that thys is thy hand, and that thou Lord hast done it. Though they curse, yet blese thou: and let them be cōfounded, that ryle vp agaynst me, but let thy seruauent reioyse. Lett myne aduersaries be clothed with shame: and let them couer them selues w their owne cōfusiō, as w a cloake.

As for me, I wyl geue great thanckes vnto the Lord with my mouth, and prayse him among the multitude. For he shall stand at the ryght hand of the poore, to saue his soule from vnyghteous iudges.

Blessed * are those that be vndefyled in the waye: and walke in the lawe of the Lorde. Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke hym with theyr whole herte. For they whych do no wyckednes, walke in his wayes. Thou hast charged that we shall diligently kepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were made so direct, that I myght kepe thy statutes.

So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto al thy commaundementes. I wyll thanke y with an vnlayned herte, whan I shall haue learned the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse. I wyll kepe thy ceremonies, O forsake me not vterly.

Where with all shall a yonge man cleanse his waye? Euen by culyng ymyselfe after thy worde. With my whole herte haue I sought the. O let me not go wronge out of thy commaundementes. * Thy wordes haue I byd within my herte, that I shulde not synne agaynst the. Blessed art thou O Lorde, O teach me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I bene tellynge of all the iudgementes of thy mouth. I haue hadde as great delpte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryches. I wyll talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respect vnto thy wayes. My delpte shalbe in thy statutes, and I wyll not forget thy worde.

O do wel vnto thy seruauit, that I may lyue and kepe thy worde. Open thou mine eyes, that I maye se the wonderous thynges of thy lawe. * I am a stranger vpon earth, O hyde not thy commaundementes from me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desyre that it hath alway vnto thy iudgementes. Thou hast rebuked the proud, and carsed are they that do erre from thy commaundementes. O turne fro me shame and rebuke, for I haue kept thy testimonies.

Bynnes also dyd sytte & speake agaynst me, but thy seruauit is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my delpte, and my counclers. * My soule clea- ueth to the dust, O quyen thou me accordyng to thy worde. I haue knowledged my wayes, and thou berdest me, O teach me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melleth a waye for very heynesse, comforte thou me accordyng vnto thy worde. Take from me the waye of lyeng, & cause thou me to make much of thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, and thy iudgementes haue I layed before me.

I haue spoken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not. I wyll runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast set my herte at lybertie. Teach me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Geue me vnder standynge, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yee I shall kepe it with my whole herte. Make me to go in the path of thy commaundementes, for therein is my desyre. Encline my herte vnto thy testimonies, and not to concouynse. O turne a waye myne eyes, lest they beholde vanitie: and quyen thou me in thy waye. O stablysh thy worde in thy seruauit that I maye feare the. Take a waye therebuke that I am afrayd of, for thy iudgementes are good. Beholde, my delpte is in thy commaundementes, O quyen me in thy ryghteousnesse. Let thy louynge mercy come also vnto me, O Lorde, euen thy saluacion accordyng vnto thy word. So shall I make answer vnto my blasphemers.

Take not the worde of treuth vnterly oute of my mouth, for my hope is in thy iudgements. So shall I alwaye kepe thy lawe, yee for euer & euer. And I will walke at liberty, for I feke thy commaundementis. I will speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges, & wyl not be ashamed. And my delite shalbe in thy commaundementis, which I haue loued. My handes also wyl I lyfte vp vnto thy commaundementis whyche I haue loued, and my stude shalbe in thy statutes. Thinke vpon thy seruaut as concernynge thy worde, wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust.

The same is my comforte in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me exceedynge in derision, yet haue I not shynked from thy lawe.

For I remembred thyne euerslastynge iudgements, O Lord, and receaved comforte: I am horrible afraied for the vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. I made haste, and prolonged not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementis.

Let the proude be confounded, for they go wyckedly aboute to destroye me: but I wyl be occupied in thy commaundementis. Let soch as feare the, and haue knowen thy testimonies, be turned vnto me. O let myne herte be sounde in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacion: and I haue a good hope because of thy worde.

How many are the dayes of thy seruant? when wylt thou be aueraged of them that persecute me? The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, whyche are not after thy lawe. All thy commaundementis are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They had almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundementis. O quicken me after thy lounge kyndnes, & so shall I kepe thy testimonies of thy mouth.

I am troubled aboute measure: quicken me, O Lord, accordynge vnto thy worde. Let the frowll offer ynges of my mouth please the, O Lord, and teache me thy iudgements.

The testimonies that thou hast commaunded are exceedynge ryghteous and true. * My zeile hath euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgottē thy wordes. * Thy worde is tried to the vttermost, and thy seruante loueth it.

maundementes and testimonys, for all my wayes are before the. Let my complaynte come before the, O Lorde, geue me understayndinge, accordinge vnto thy worde. O let my supplicacye come before the, deliuer me accordyng to thy worde. My lippes shall speake of thy prayse, when I shall taught me thy statutes. For, my tounge shall spunge of thy worde, for all thy commaundementes are ryghteous. Let thine hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes. I haue longed for thy sauynge health, O Lorde, and in thy lawe is my delite. O let my soule lye and it shall prayse the, and thy iudgementes shall helpe me. I haue gone astraye, lyke a shepe that is lost: O seke thy seruante, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

C The.cxxi. Psalme.

AD DOMINUM CVM TRIBVLARER.

A songe of the steares.

When I was in trouble, * I called vpon the Lorde, and he heard me. Deliuere my soule, O Lorde, fro lyenge lippes, and fro a deceitfull tounge. What rewarde shall be geuen or done vnto the, that falslye tounge? Euen myghtie & sharpe arrowes, w hote burnynge coales. Wood is me, I am constrained to dwell with Mesch, and to haue myne habita-cyon amonge the tentes of Cedar. My soule hath longe dwelt amonge them, that be ene- mies vnto peace. I laboure for peace, but when I speake: (vnto them) therof, they make them to battaile.

LEVAVI OCVLOS.

A songe of the steares.

Will I set vpon myne eyes vnto the hylles, from whence cometh my helpe? * My helpe cometh euen from the Lorde, which hath made heauen and earth. He wyl not suffre thy fote to be moued, and he that kepeth the, wyl not slepe. * Beholde, he that kepeth Israel, shall neither slombze nor slepe. The Lorde hym selfe is thy keeper, the Lorde is thy defence vpon thy ryght hande. So that the sunne shall not burne the by daye, neither the moone by nyght. The Lorde shall preserue the from all euill, yee it is euen he that shall kepe thy soule. The Lorde shall preserue thy goynge out and thy comynge in, from thys tyme forth for euer moze.

LETATVS SVM.

A songe of the steares of Dauid.

I Was glad, when they sayde vnto me: * We will go into the house of the Lorde. Our fete shall stande in thy gates, O Ierusalem. Ierusalem is builded as a cytie, as at vnto in it selfe. For thyther the trybes go vp, euen the trybes of the Lorde:

to testifie vnto Israel, to geue thanks vnto the name of the Lorde. For there is present of iudgement, euen the state of the house of Dauid. O prayse for the peace of Ierusalem: they shall prosper that loue the. Peace be within thy walles, and plentyfullnes within thy palaces. For my brethren and companions sake, I wyl wythe the prosperite. Yee, because of the house of the Lorde oure God, I wyl like to do the good.

AD TE LEVAVI.

A songe of the steares.

When I set vpon myne eyes, * thou that dwellest in the heauens. Beholde, euen as the eyes offeruantes loke vnto the hāde of their masters: and as the eyes of a mayden vnto the hande of her mastresse, euen so our eyes wayte vpon the Lorde oure God, vntill he haue mercy vpon vs. Haue mercy vpon vs, O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs, for we are utterly despised. Our soule is fylled with the scoz- nefull reproche of the welthy, and with the despitfullnesse of the proude.

NISI QVIA DOMINVS.

A songe of the steares of Dauid.

If the Lorde hym selfe had not bene of our syde (nowe maye Israel saye) If the Lorde hym selfe had not bene of our syde whē me rose vpon agaynst vs. * They had swallowed vs vpon quicke, whē they were so wrathfully displeased at vs. Yee, the waters had drowned vs, and the streame had gone ouer oure soule. The depe waters of the proude had gone euen ouer oure soule. But prayse be the Lorde, which hath not geuen vs ouer for a praye vnto their teeth. Our soule is escaped, euen as a byrde out of the snare of the fowler: the snare is broke, and we are deliuered. * Our helpe standeth in the name of the Lorde, which hath made heauen and earth.

QVI CONFIDVNT.

A songe of the steares.

When they put their trust in the Lorde, shall be euen as the mount Syon, which maye not be remoued, but standeth fast for euer. The hylls stande about Ierusalem, euen so standeth the Lorde rounde about his people, from thys tyme forth for euer moze. For the rod of the vngodly cometh not into the lot of the ryghteous, lest the ryghteous put their hāde vnto wyckednesse. Do well, O Lorde, vnto those that be good and true of herte. As for those as turne backe vnto their owne wyckednesse, the Lorde, shall leade them forth with the euill doers, but * peace shall be vpon Israel.

IN CONVERTENDO.

A songe of the steares.

When the Lorde turned agayne the ca-ptivite of Sion, then were we lyke vnto them that dreame. Then was oure mouth fylled with laughter, and oure tounge with ioye. Then sayd they amonge the heathē: the Lorde hath done greate thynges for the. Yee, the Lorde hath done greate thynges for vs all ready, wherof were ioyse. Turne oure capti-te, O Lorde, as the ryuers in the south. They that sowe in teares, shall reape in ioye. He that nowe goeth in his waye we-pynge and beareth forth good seede, shall doubtles come agayne with ioye, and bynge his sheaves with him.

NISI DOMINVS.

A songe of Salomon of the steares.

Except the Lorde buyde the house, their labour is but lost that buyde it. Except the Lorde kepe the cytie the watchman waketh but in vayne. * It is but lost labour that ye haste to ryle vpon early, and so late take rest, and cate the brea-de of carefullnesse: for so he gyueh his beloved sleape. Lo, chyldren and the frute of the wombe are an heretage and gyfte, that cometh of the Lorde. Lyke as the arrowes in the hande of the gyaunt, euen so are the yonge chyldren. Happy is the man, that hath his quiver full of them, they shall not be ashamed, when they speake with their enemyes in the gate.

C The.cxxvii. Psalme.

BEATI OMNES.

A songe of the steares.

Blessed are all they that feare the Lorde, and walke in his wayes. For thou shalt cate the laboures of thyne hādes. Well is the, and happy shalt thou be. Thy wyfe shall be as the frutefull vyne vpon the walles of thy house. Thy chyldren lyke the Olyue brāches rounde aboute thy table. Lo, thus shall the man be ble-sed, that feareth the Lorde. The Lorde frome out of you shall so blesse the, that thou shalt se Ierusalem in prosperite all thy lyfe lōge. Yee that thou shalt se thy chylders chyldren, and peace vpon Israel.

SEPE EXPVGNABVRVNT.

A songe of the steares.

Many a tyme haue they fought agaynst me fro my youth vp (maye Israel nowe saye.) Yee, many a tyme haue they bered me fro my youth vp, but they haue not preyed agaynst me. The plowers plowed vpon my backe, & made longe furrowes. But the ryghteous Lorde hath hewen the snares of the vngodly in pe-ces. Let them be confounded and turned backward, as many as haue euill wyl at Sion. Let them be euen as the grasse growynge vpon the house toppes, which wythereth afore it be plucked vp. Wher-of the mower fylleth not his hande, neither he that byndeth vpon the sheaves, his bosome.

So that they which go by, saye not so moche: as the Lorde prospere you, we wysh you good lucke in the name of the Lorde.

C The.cxxx. Psalme.

DE PROFVNDIS.

A songe of the steares.

Out of the depe haue I called vnto the Lorde, Lorde heare my voyce. O let thyne eares conspyre well the voyce of my complaynte. * If thou Lorde wylt be extreme to marche what is done amysse, O Lorde who maye abyde it?

For there is mercy with the, therfore shalt thou be feared. I loke for the Lorde, my soule doth wayte for hym, in his worde is my trust. My soule slepeth vnto the Lorde, before the moynynge watche (I saye) before the moynynge watche. O Israel trust in the Lorde, for with the Lorde there is mercy, and with hym is plenteous re-dempcyon. And he shall redeeme Israel, from all his synnes.

Dauids songe of the steares.

O Lorde, I am not hye mynded, I haue no proude lookes. * I do not excyle my selfe i greate matters, which are to hye for me. But I restryne my soule and kepe it lowe, lyke as a chyld that is weaned fro his mother: yee, my soule is euen as a weaned chyld. O Israel trust in the Lorde, from thys tyme forth for euer moze.

MEMENTO DOMINE DAVID.

A songe of the steares.

O Lorde, remembre Dauid, and all his trouble. * Howe he swoze vnto the Lorde, and vowed a vowe vnto the almyghty God of Jacob: I wyl not come wythin the tabernacle of my house, nor clyme vp in to my bedd. I wyl not suffre myne eyes to slepe, nor myne eye lyddes to slumber (neither the temples of my head to take anye rest.) Untill I fynde out a place for the temple of the Lorde, an habitaciō for the myghty God of Jacob. Lo, we heard of the same at Ephrata, and founde it in the wood. We wyl go in to his tabernacle, and fall lowe on oure knees before his fote stole. * Arise, O Lorde, into thy resting place, thou and the arche of thy strength.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

Lorde, thou hast searched me out, and thou vnderstandest my thoughtes longe before. Thou art about my path, and about my bedd: & synest out all my wayes. For lo, there is not a worde in my tōge, but p, O Lorde knowest it all together. Thou hast fastyned me behynde and before, and layed thyne hande vpon me. Soch knowledge is to wonderfull & excellent for me: I can not attayne vnto it. * Whyther shall I go then fro thy syneste: or whither shall I go then fro thy presence? If I clyme vpon into heauen, thou art ther: yf I go downe to hell thou art there also. If I take the wynges of the monyng, & remayne in the uttermost partes of the see. Euen ther also shall thy hande lead

I scape: peradventure the darcknesse shall couer me, then shall my nyght be turned to da-

They haue sharpened theyr toges like a serpet: *adders popson is vnder their lippes. Selā. Hepe me, O Lorde, from the handes of the vngodly: pserue me from the wycked men, which are purposed to ouerthrowe my goynges. The proude haue layed a snare for me: and spyed a net abroad with cordes: yee, & set trappes in my waye. Selā. I sayde vnto the Lorde: thou art my God, heare the voyce of my prayers, O Lorde. O Lorde God, thou strenght of my health, thou hast couered my heed in the day of battayll. Let not the vngodly haue his desyre, O Lorde, let not hys mischeuous ymaginacyon prosper: lest they be to proude. VOCE MEA AD DOMINVM.

The instruccyon of David, a prayer whan he was in the caue.

Cryed vnto the Lorde w my voyce: y yee, euen vnto the Lorde dyd I make my supplicacyō. I powzed out my complayntes before hym, and shewed hym of my trouble. Whe my spyete was in heynesse, thou knewest my path: in the waye wherin I walked haue they preuely layed a snare for me. I looked also vpon my right hande, and se, there was no man that wolde knowe me. I had no place to flee vnto, and no man cared for my soule. I cryed vnto the, O Lorde, and sayde: thou arte my hope, and my portyon in the lande of the lpyunge. Confyde my complaynte: for I am brought very lowe. O delyuer me frō my persecutours: for they are to strōge for me. My sonne, yf thou wilt receave my woreare vnto wysdome, applye thyne hert then wysdome, and callest for knowledge: yf thou sekest after her as after money, and byggest

For the iust shall dwell in the lāde: and they that be perfecte shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be toied out of the lande, and y wycked shal be toied out of it.

The proverbes

The. iij. Chapter.

The commandmentes of God must be diligent: ly regarded and observed.

My sonne, * forget not thou my lawe, but se þy thynge hert kepe my comaundementes. For they shall prolonge the dayes & yerres of thy lyfe, and bringe þy peace.
Let mercy and faythfulnes neuer go fro the:
bynde them about thy necke, and wyte the in the tables of thyne herte. So shalt þynde fauour & good vnderstanding, in the syght of God and men. But thy trust in God withall thyne herte: and leane not vnto thyne awne witte. In all thy wayes haue respecte vnto hym: & he shall order thy goynges. * Be not wyle in thyne awne conceite: but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall thy nauell be whole, and thy bones stronge.
* Honour the Lord wth thy substance: and with thy firstlinges of all thyne increase. * (geue vnto the poore:) so shall thy barnes be fylled with plenteousnesse: and thy pressen shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. My sonne, despyle not the chastenynge of the Lorde, nether saynte whē thou art rebuked of hym.
* For whom the Lorde loueth, hym he chastenth, and yet delieth in him, euen as a father in his awne sonne. Well is him that fin-deth wysdome, and opteyneth vnderstanding: for the getting of it is better then any marchaundise of syluer, and the profet of it is better then golde. * Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and all the thin-ges that thou canst desire are not to be compared vnto her. Upon her ryght hande is longe lyfe, and vpon her left hande is riches and honour. Her wayes are pleasaut wayes and all her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of lyfe to them that laye hold vpo her, and blessed is he that kepeth her fast.

With wysdome hath the Lorde layed the foundacion of the erth: and thowowe vnderstandinge hath he stablyshed the heauens.
Thowowe his wysdome the deapthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe the dew.
My sonne, let not these thynges departe, from thyne eyes: but kepe my lawe and my councell, that thou mayest haue the pleasure of longe lyfe and vnderstandinge: for they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, & grace vnto my mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye: and thy fote shall not stumbe. * If þy sleepest, thou shalt nott be afraied: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe sweetly. Thou nedest not to be afraied of any soden feare, nether for the vyolent rushynge in of the vngodly when it cometh. For the Lorde shall stode by thy syde, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Withdrawe no good thinge from them that haue nede, so longe as thyne hand is able to do it. Saye not vnto thy neygh-bour: go thy waye, & come agayne, to mo-rowe wyl I geue the: where as thou haste nowe to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neyghbour, seynge he dothe dwell in rest by the. * Tryne not lyghtly with anye man without cause, where as he hath done the no harme. * Followe not a wicked mā, and chouse none of hys wayes: for the Lorde abhoreth the frowarde: but hys councell is amonge þy ryghteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellinges of the ryghteous. As for the scornefull dothe not he laugh them to scone: but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honour in possession: but the meane is the promocioun that foloweth haue.

The. iij. Chapter.

Wysdome and her frutes ought to be searched.

Hear, O ye chyldren, the fatherly exhortacyon, and take good heade, that ye maye lerne wysdome. For I haue geuen you a good doctryne, forsake nott ye my lawe. For when I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and sayde vnto me: * Lett thyne herte receaue my wordes, kepe my commandmentes, and thou shalt lyue. Set the wysdome: and get the vnder-standing: forget not þy wordes of my mouth, and shynke not from them. Forsake her not and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the. The chiefe paynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to optayne wysdome: and befoze all thy goodes to gett the vnderstandinge. * Make moche of her and she shall promote the: Pee, yf thou embrace her, she shall bypunge the vnto honour.

She shall make the a gracious heed, and garnyshe the with a crowne of glozy. Heare my sonne, and receaue my wordes and the yeares of thy lyfe shall be many. I haue sewen the, the waye of wysdome, and ledde the into the ryght pathes. So that yf thou goest therin, there shall no straytenes bynder the:
and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.
Take fast holde of doctryne, and let her nott go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. * Come nott in the pathe of the vngodly: and walke nott in the waye of the wycked. Abhorre it, and go not therin: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they cannot slepe, excepte they haue fyrst done some myschefe: nether take they anyeste, excepte they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the breade of wyckednesse, and dryncke the wyne of robberye.
The pathe of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyght, that is euer brighte and brighte vnto the perfect daie. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknesse: they knowe nott where they fall. * My sonne, marcke my wordes, and encline thyne eare vnto my saynges. Let the not departe from thyne eyes: but kepe them euen in the myddist of thyne herte.

Of Salomon.

Jo. xxi.

herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that synde the, and healeth vnto all theyr bodyes.
Kepe thyne herte with all diligēce, for there vpon hangeth lyfe. Put awaye from the a frowarde mouth, & let the lippes of sclauder be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thyng þy is ryght, and let thyne eye lyd-des loke strayght befoze the. Wode the path of thy fete, and let all thy wayes be ordred a ryght. * Turne not asyde, nether to þy ryght hande nether to the lefte, but withholde thy fote from euell. * (For the Lorde knoweth the wayes that are on the ryght hande. As for the wayes that be on the lefte hande, they be frowarde. For he shall direct thy goynges, and thy wayes shall be gyde in peace.

The. v. Chapter.

The warneth to eschue and flee whozome. He for-biddeth prodigalitye and wastfull spending. He wylleth be to liue of cure awne labourer. Men must loue theyr wyues.

My sonne, geue hede vnto my wyldome, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayest re-garde good counsel, and that thy lippes maye kepe knowledge. * (Applye not thou thy selfe to the discreitnesse of a woman.) * For þy lyp-pes of an harlot are a droppynge hony combe and her throte is more glisterynge then oyle.
But at the last she is as bytter as wormewod, and as sharpe as a twoedged swerde: her fete go downe vnto death and her steppes pearle thowowe vnto hell.
Darchaule thou dwellynge with her wylt ponder the path of lyfe: so vntedfast are her wayes, þy thou canst not knowe the. Heare me nowe therfoze (O my sonnes) & departe not fro the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the doores of her house. That thou geue not thy strength vnto other, & thy peares to þy cruell.
That other men be not fylled with thy goo-des, and that thy labourer come not in a straunge house. Pee that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and lusty greane yowth) and the laye: Alas, why dated I nourtoure: why did my herte despyse correccion? Wherefoze was not I obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, and hekened not vnto them that infourmed me? I am come almost into all misfortune, in the myddest of the multitude and cōgregacion. * Drincke of the water, of thyne awne well and of þy ryuers that runne out of thyne awne springes. * Let thy welles flowe out a broade, that there may be ryuers of water in the stre-tes: but let the be onely thyne awne, and not strangers with the. Let thy well be blessed and be glad with the wyfe of thy youth. Lo-uinge is the hynde, and frendly is the Roo: let her byestes alwaye satisfye the, and holde the euer content with her lone. My sonne, why wylt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, & embrace the holome, of another woman? For euery mans wayes are ope in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondreth all theyr goynges: The wyckednesse of the vngodly shall catch hym selfe, and with the snares of hys awne synnes shall he be trapped. He shall dye without amendement, and for hys greute foly-nesse he shall go astraye.

The. vi. Chapter.

The flouthfull and slough is pycked and cry-ed to wycke. The crymathe is repoued. Aduou-tye ought to be earnestly auoyded.

My sonne * yf þy be suertye for thy neyghbour, and hast fastened thyne had for another man, thou art bounde to thyne awne wordes, and taken with thine awne speache. Therefore, my sonne, do thys & thou shalt be discharged: whē thou art come into thy neighbours dainger. Soo thy wayes then soone, hūble thy selfe, and with thy fren-des intreate thy creditour: let not thyne eyes sleepe, ner thyne eye lyddes slomber. Haue thy selfe as a doo from the hande of the hun-tre, & as a byrde from the hande of the fouler. So to the Emmet (thou slougarde) con-fesse her wayes & lerne to be wyle. She hath no gypde, no ouerfear nor ruler: yet in þy so-mer she prouideth her meate, and gathereth her fode to gether in the harvest. * Howe longe wylt thou slepe, thou sloughy man?
When wylt thou aryse out of thy slepe? Pee sleepe on styll a lytle, slōber a lytle, fould thy-ne handes together yet a lytle, that þy mayest sleepe: so shall pouertye come vnto the as on that traunyleth by the waye, & necessyte! ke a weakened man. * (But yf thou denot stode gethull, thy harvest shall come as a springynge well, & pouer-tye shall fyre farre from the.) An vngodly person, a wycked mā goeth with a frowarde mouth he wycketh with his eyes, he tokenteth with hys fete, he paynteth with hys fyngers, he is euer ymagynynge myschefe, and froward-nesse in hys herte, & causeth discorde. Ther-foze shall hys destruccyon come hastily vpon him, sodenly shall he be all to broken, and not be healed. * These syre thynges doth the Lorde hate, and the seuenthe he vtterly abhorreth: A proude looke a lynginge toge, handes þy shed innocent bloude, an herte that goeth a-boute wyth wycked ymaginacyons * fete that be swyfte in rennyng to do myschefe, a falle wytnesse that bringeth vp lyes, and so-che one as soweth discorde amonge byethren.
My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaunde-ment, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother.
Put the vp together in thyne herte, and byn-de the aboute thy neck. That they may leade the where thou goest, preserue the whē thou art a slepe, and that when þy awakest, thou mayest talke of them. For * the commaun-dement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: pee chastenynge and nourtoure is the waye of lyfe that they may kepe the from * the euell woman, and from the flatterynge tonge of þy harlot:

harlot: that thou lust not after her beauty in thine herte, and lest thou be taken with her fayre looks. An harlot wyl make a man to begge his bread, and a woman wyl hunt for the precious lyfe. Have a man take fyre in his bosome, and his clothes not be brent? Can one go upon hote coales, and his fete not be hurte? Euen so, who soeuer goeth into his neyghbours wyfe, and toucheth her, shall be vngilty. * When ho not betterly doth a thete that stealeth to satysfy his soule, when he is hungry: but yf he maye be gotten, he restozeth agayne seuen tymes as moche, or els he maketh recompense with all the good of his house. But who so committeth aduoutry with a womā, he is a foole and b: pugeh his lyfe to destruction. He getteth hym selfe also shame and dishonour, soche as shall neuer be put out. For the gelousy and voyath of the man wyl not be intreated, no though thou woldest offre him great gyftes to make amendes, he will not receaue the.

The vii. Chapter.

God ought to feared and honoured. His commaundmentes ought to be kept, without appetites and desyres ought to be forgoon.

MY sonne, * kepe my wordes, & laye vp my commaundmentes by the. Repe my commaundmentes and my lawe, euē as the apple of thine eye, as thou shalt lyue. Bynde them vpon thy fyngers, and wyte them in the table of thine herte. Sape vnto wysdome: thou art my syster, and call vnderstandynge thy kynswomā: that they maye kepe the from the straunge woman, and fro the harlot which geueth swete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I looked thowme the latysse, & behelde the symple people: and amonge other ponge folkes I spyed one yonge foole, goinge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waye towarde the harlots house, in the twylight of the euenynge, when it beganne nowe to be nyght & darcke.

And beholde, there mett hym a woman wā hyde, she was full of loude wordes, & rebd to daly: whose fete coulde not abyde in the house, nowe is she without, now in the stretes, and layeth abayte in euery corner, she caught the pongeman, kylled hym, and was not ashamed, sayinge: I had a vowe of peace offerynges to paye, & and thys daye I persoume it. Therfore came I forth to mete the, that I myght seke thy face, and so I haue founde the. I haue deckte my bed with couerynges and clothes of Egypte. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come lett vs ly together, and take oure pleasure tyll it be daye lyght: and we wyl enioye the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of moneye with hym: And will retourne home at the appoynted solempne fesse. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame him, and with her flatterynge lyppes she entyled hym sphehlye to folowe her: as it were an ore led to the slaughter, & lyke as it were a foole that laugheth whē he goeth to the stockes, to be punished, so lōge tyll she had wounded his lyue with her dart: lyke as yf a byrde basted to the snare, not knowynge that the parell of his lyfe lyeth ther vpon. Heare me nowe therfore, O my chyldzen, and marcke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine herte wandze in her wayes, and be not thou disceined in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe, yee many a strōge man hath bene slayne by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waye vnto hell, and byrnye men downe into the chambers of death.

The viii. Chapter.

The praple of the wysdome of God.

Doth not * wysdome crye doth not vnderstandynge put forth her voyce: Standeth she not in the hye places in the stretes and wayes: doth she not crye before the whole cytie, and in the gates where men go out and in? It is you, O ye men (sayeth she) whom I call: vnto (the chyldzen of men) do I lyst vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowledge O ye ignorant be wyle in herte, O ye folles. Geue care, for I wyl speake of greute matters, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be ryght. For my throte shalbe talkynge of the trueth and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous, there is no frowardnesse nor falshe thetin. They are all playne to loche as wyl vnderstande, and ryght to them that fynde knowledge. Receaue my doctryne, and not syluer: and my knowledge, more then fyne golde. For * wysdome is more worth then precious stones, yee all thynges that thou canst desyre, maye not be copared vnto it. I wysdome haue my dwellynge with knowledge, and prudent counsell is myne awne. The feare of the Lorde abhorreth wyckednesse, pryde, dydayne, and the euell waye: and a mouth that speaketh wycked thynges, I utterly abhorre. I can geue counsell, and I conferre thynges: I haue vnderstanding, I haue strength. * Thowme me, rynges repyne: thowme me counsellars make iust lawes. Thowme me, do prynces beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am lounge vnto those that loue me: and * they that seke me early, shall fynde me. Ryches and honoure are with me, yee excellent goodes and ryghteousnes. My frute is better then golde and precious stone, and myne encrease more worth then fyne syluer. I wyl gyde gyde the in the waye of ryghteousnes, and in the strete of iudgement. That I maye sende prosperite to those that loue me, and to encrease their treasure. * The Lorde him selfe had me in possession: in the begynnyng of his wayes, or euer he beganne his workes a foze tyme. * I haue bene ordered from euerlastynge, and fro the begynnyng of euer the earth was made. When I was bozne, there were nether depthes nor springes of water. Before the foundacyons of the moztaynes were layd, yee before all hylles was I bozne. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made, no not the grounde it selfe. * For when he made the beauens, I was present: when he sett vp the depthes in ordze, whē he hanged the cloudes aboue: whē he fastened the springes of the depe: When he shut the see within * certayne bowndes, that the waters shulde not go ouer their marches the commaunded.

When he layd the foundacyons of the earth I was with him, ordzynge all thynges: delitynge dayly, and reioysynge allwaye before him. As for the rounde copase of this worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be amonge the chyldzen of men. Therfore herken vnto me, O ye chyldzen, blessed are they that kepe my wayes. O geue care vnto nactoure, be wyle, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watchynge dayly at my gates, and geuyng attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For who so spyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe, and shall obtayne fauour of the Lorde. But who so offendeth agaynst me, hurteth his awne soule. All they that hate me, are the louners of death.

Wysdome: mozt all men to embrace her. The praperte of a whoze.

Wysdome hath buylded her selfe an house, & hewen out seuen pylles: she hath kylled her vitayles, powred out her wyne, & prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maydens to crye vpon the best place of the cytie: who so is ignorant, let hym come hyther. And to the vnwyle she sayde: Come on your waye, eate my bread, and drinke my wyne, which I haue poured out for you. For sake ignorance, and pe shall lyue: and se that ye go in the waye of vnderstandynge. Who so reprooeth a scornfull personne, getteth him selfe dishonour: and he that rebuketh the vngodly, skayneth him selfe. Reproue not a scorner lest he owe the euell wyl: but rebuke a wyle man, and he wyl loue the. Geue a discrete man but an occasyon, and he wyl be thy wyser: teache a ryghteous mā, and he wyl increase in knowledge. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, & the knowledge of holy thynges is vnderstandynge. For thowme me thy dayes shalbe prologed, and the yeares of thy lyfe shalbe many. If thou be wyle, thy wysdome shal do thy selfe good but yf thou thynkest scorner therof, it shalbe thyn awne harme. A folye the restless woman, full of wordes, and soch a one as hath no knowledge, fytteth at the doze of her house, and in the hye places of the cyte, to call loch as go by, and that walke streyght in the wayes. Who so is ignorant (sayth she) let hym come hyther, and to the vnwyle she sayeth: stollen waters are swete, and the bread that is pzenely eaten, hath a good taste.

And he doth not consydze, that they are but deed which be there, and that her gestes are in the depe of hell. * For he that wyl be toged vnto her, shall go downe to hell: but he that auoydeth from her, shalbe saued.

The x. Chapter.

In this chapter and in all that foloweth vnto the thyrtye, the wyse man sheweth by spures sentences wher he calleth parables, to folowe betwixt and the wyse: And sheweth also what good cometh of wysdome, and what harme cometh of folye.

Proverbes of Salomon.

A wyle * sone maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete sone is an heynesse vnto his mother. * Treasures yare wyckedly gotten, prapte no thynge: but ryghteousnesse deliuereth fro death.

* The Lorde wyl not let the soule of the righteous suffre hōge, but he taketh a waye the ryches of the vngodlye: An ydle hande maketh poore, but a quicke labourynge hande maketh ryche. * (who so regardeth letynges, leueth the wynde, and doth but folowe byrdes that haue taken the flyght.) * Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wyle: but he that is slougly in harvest, byngeth him selfe to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the heade of the ryghteous, and the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. * The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good reperte, but the name of the vngodly shal stynke. A wyle mā will receaue warnynge, but a pratinge sole shall be punished. * He that leadeeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wyronge waye shalbe knowne. * He that wycketh with his eye, will do some harme: but he that hath a foolyshe mouth, shalbe beaten. The mouth of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe, but the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. Enyll wyl stereth vp streyfe, * but the lone couereth the multitude of synnes. In the lyppes of him that vnderstandynge, a man shal fynde wysdome, but the rod belongeth to the backe of the folye. Wyle mā laye vp knowledge, but the mouth of the folye is ripe destruction. The riche mā's goodes are his stronge holde, but the awne pouerthe feareth the poore. The ryghteous labourereth to rect to do good, but the vngodly vseth hys encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto chastenynge of nurture, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed disceaueth him selfe. * Dissemblynge lypyes kepe hatred secretly, and he that speaketh any slander, is a foole. Where moch bablynge is, there must nedes be offence: and he that refrayneth his lypyes, is wysse. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodly is nothyng worth. The lypyes of the ryghteous fede a whole multitude, but foles shall dye in their awne folye.

The blessinge of the Lorde maketh ryche men * as for carefull trauaile, it doth nothyng thereto. A foole doth wyckedly and maketh but a spoyle of it, but wysdome ruleth the man that hath vnderstandynge.

The thyng that the vngodly are afrayed of, shall come vpon them, but the ryghteous shall haue their desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempest cometh: but the ryghtwylle remaineth sure for ever. As vynerger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a sloughy personne to them that sende hym forth. The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodly shall be shortened. The patient abynge of ryghteous shall be turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the vngodly shall perishe. The waye of the Lorde geueth a courage vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wycked doers. * The ryghteous shall neuer be ouerthrowne, but the vngodly, shall not remaine in the lande. * The mouth of the iust wyll be talkynge of wysdome, but the tongue of the frowarde shall perishe.

The lypyes of ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thynges, but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst. * The. xj. Chapter.

* False balace is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde, but a true weight pleaseh him. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlynes, there is wysdome. The innocent denyng of the iust shall leade them, but the wyckednes of such as dissemble, shall be their awne destruction. * Riches helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth fro death. The ryghteousnesse of the innocent ozbreth his waye, but the vngodly shall fall in his awne wyckednesse.

The ryghteousnesse of the iust shall deliuereth, but the wycked shall be taken in theyr awne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, the confidence of riches shall perishe. The ryghteous shall be deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shall come in his steade. Chozowe y mouth of y dissembler is his neyghboure destroyed, but chozowe knowledge shall the iust be deliuered. * When it goeth well with the ryghteous, the cytie is merry: and when vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cytie prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A foole bringeth vpon a slander of his neyghboure, but a wysse man wyll kepe it secret. * A dissemblynge person wyll discover prey thynges, but he that is of a faithful herte, wyll kepe counsell. * Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsell, there is wealth. * He that is suertye for a strainger, hurteth him selfe: and he that medleth not wth suerties, is safe. A gracious woman maynteyneth honestye, as for the wycked, they maynteyne ryches. * He that is mercifull doth hym selfe a benefyte, but who so hurteth his neyghboure, is a tyrant. The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he that soweth ryghteousnesse, shall receaue a sure rewarde. As keas ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euell, byngeth death. The Lorde abhorreth the that be of a fawned hert, but he hath pleasure in them that are of an vndeuyled conuersacion. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage, but the seide of the ryghteous shall be preserved. A fawne woman without discrete maners, is lyke a ryng of gold in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable, but the hope of the vngodly is indignacyon. * Some may geueh out his goodes, and is the rycher, but the nygard (haupnge ynough) wyll departe from nothyng, and yet is euer in pouerthe. * He that is libeall in geuynge, shall haue plenty, and he that watereth, shall be watered also him selfe. Who so hoordeth vpon his corne, shall be cursed amonge the people: but blessinge shall lyght vpon his head that geueth foode. He that laboureth for honestly, fyndeth his desyre: but who so seeketh after myschefe, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his ryches, shall haue a fall, but the ryghteous shall floreye as the grene lease. Who so maketh disquietnes in his awne house, he shall haue wynde for his heritage, and the foole shall be setuaunt to the wysse. The frute of the ryghteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endenoureth him selfe to wyne mens soules is wysse. * If ryghteous be recouered vpon earth, howe moch moze then the vngodly and the synner.

The. xij. Chapter. Who so loveth wysdome, wyll be chastyt to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reformed, is a foole. * A good man is acceptable vnto the Lorde, but the wycked ymagines wyll be condempned. A man cannot endure in vngodlynesse, but the rote the rote of the ryghteous shall not be moved. * A huswylly womā is as a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corrupcion in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghteous are ryght, but the ymaginacion of the vngodly are disceatfull. The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they maye laye wayte for bloud, but y mouth of the ryghteous wyll deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked & they stande not: but the house of y ryghteous shall stande steadfaste. A man shall be commended for hys wysdome, but a foole shall be despyled. * A symple man which laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgous and lacketh bread. A ryghteous mā regardeth the lyfe of hys catell, but the vngodly haue cruel hertes. * He that sylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of bread: but he y foloweth ydolnes: is a very foole.

A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the ydle shall be vnder tribute. * Hynnesse discorageth the herte of man, but a good worde maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth hys neyghboure, but the waye of the vngodly wyll disceau them selues. The disceyfull man shall not roste, that he toke in hyspyng, but the riches of the iust man is of great valewe. In the waye of ryghteousnesse there is lyfe, and in the same waye there is no death.

A wysse sonne wyll herken to hys fathers warnynge, but he that is scoonefull, will not heare whe he is reproved. A good man shall enioye y frute of his mouth but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shall be spoyled. He that kepeth hys mouth kepeth hys lyfe: but who so openeth hys lypyes to euell, destroyeth hym selfe. The flogarde wolde sayne haue, & cannot get hys desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty. A ryghteous man abhorreth lyces, but the vngodly shameth both other and hym selfe. Ryghteousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye, but vngodlynesse doth ouerthrowe the synner. * Some men are ryche, though they haue nothyng, agayne some men are poore, hauing greates ryches. With goodes euer y man deliuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyll not be reproved: The lyght of the ryghteous maketh ioyfull, but the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thynges with a buysement, there is wysdome. Capnys gotten goddes are soone spent: but they that be gathered to gether with the hande, shall increase. Longe tarpenge for a thyng that is differred, greuethe the herte: but whe the desyre cometh: it is a tree of lyfe. * Whoso despyseth any thyng, shall be hurt for the same: but he y feareth the commaundement, shall haue the rewarde. * A disceatfull sonne shall haue no good: but a discrete seruant shall do full well, and hys waye shall prosper. The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto y wysse, that it maye kepe hym from the snares of death: Good vnderstandynge geueth fauour, but harde is y waye of the despylers. A wysse man doth all thynges with discrecion, but a foole wyll declare hys folynesse. An vngodly messainger falleth into myschefe, but a faithful ambassadour is wholsome. He y thynketh scoone to be reformed, cometh to pouerthe & shame: but who so regardeth correccion shall come to honoure. When a desyre is brought to passe, it deliuereth y soule: but foolcs counten abhominacyon to departe from euell. He that goeth in the company of wysse men, shall be wysse: but who so is a company of foolcs, shall be hurte. Myschefe foloweth vpon synners, but the ryghteous shall haue a good rewarde. He that is vertuous, leaueh an inheritaunce vnto hys chylders chyldren: and y ryches of the synner is layed vpon for the iust. There is plenteousnesse of fode in the felde of the poore, but y felde not well ordred is without frute. * He y spareth the rodde, hateth hys sonne: but who so lo- ueth hym, chastyleth hym by tymes.

Wise women upholde theyr house, but a folysh wyfe plucketh it downe. He that walkeþ in the ryght path of the Lorde feareth him: but he that turneth him selfe a waye fro his wayes, dyspleth hym.

In the mouth of the foolþ is the rodd of pryde, but the lippes of the wyse wyll prelerue them. Where no ox is, there þeþ he is emptye: but where the ox labourer the- re is moche frute. A faythfull wytnesse wyll not dyscible, but a fals recorde wyll make a lye. A scornfull body seeketh wys- dome, and fyndeth it not: but knowledge is easy to come by, vnto hym that wyll vnderstande. Se that thou medle not with a fool, in who thou perceuest to be no know- ledge. The wysdome of hym that hath vnderstanding is, to take hede vnto his waye but the folyshnesse of the vnywysle dyscuereth.

Foles make but a spoete of synne, but there is fauorable loue amouge the ryghteous.

The herte feleth hys owne lyues bytter- nesse: nether shall straunger be partaker of his tope. The house of the vngodly shall be o- uerthrowne, but the tabernacle of the rygh- teous shall flozpe.

* There is a waye which some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeþ vnto death. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of myrthis is heynnes.

A backly- dyng hert shall be fylled wth a wne wayes, but a good mā shall lyue of his frutes. An ignoraunt body beleueth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstanding, loketh well to his go- ings. (A dyscautull soule shall haue no good, but a di- recte seruante shall do fullwell, & hys waye shall prosper.)

A wyse man feareth, and departeth fro euell, but a furiose foole goeth on presumpuously.

An vnpacient man dealeth folyshly: but he that is well aduysed, is hated of the fol.

The ignoraunt haue folyshnes in posses- syon, but the wyse are crowned with know- ledge. The euell shall bowe them selues befoze the good, and þ vngodly shall wayte at the dozes of the ryghteous. The poore is hated euen of hys a wne neyghbours, but the ryche hath many frendes. Whoso des- pylleth his neyghbour doth a mysse: but blef- sed is he that hath pytie of þ poore. (He that put- teth hys trust in the Lorde, loueth to be mercifull.)

With- out doute they erre that ymagyne wycked- nes, but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto soche shall happen mercy and faythful- nesse. In euery labour there is some pro- fecte. But only lippe labour, bringeth forth penurpe. Ryches are as a crowne vnto the wyse, but the ignoraunce of foolles is very folyshnesse. A faythfull wytnesse de- lyuereth soules, but a dysceyfull wytnesse byngeth forth lyes. The feare of þ Lorde is a stronge holde, and hys chyldren are vn- der a sure defence. The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the shaxes of death. The increase and prosperite of the comens is the kynges honoure, but the de- cay of the people is the confusyon of the Prynce.

He that is pacient, hath muche vnderstanding: but he that is soone dysplea- sed, prouoketh folyshnesse. A mery herte is the lyfe of the body, but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones. He that doth a poore mā wrog, blasphemeth hys maker: but who- so hath pytie of the poore, doth honoure vn- to God. The vngodly is cast awaye for hys iniquyte, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in death. Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstanding and it shall be knowne amouge them that are vnderstand. Ryghteousnesse setteth by the people, but the sacrifice of the bethen is syn- full. A discrete seruaunt is a pleasure vn- to the kyng, but one that is not honest pro- uoketh hym vnto wrath.

The xv. Chapter.

Softe answer putteth do- wne displeasure, but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto anger. The tonge of such as be wyse, vseth knowledge a right, as for a folysh mouth it blabbeth out noþyng, but folyshnesse.

The eyes of the Lorde loke on euery place, beholding both the good & badd. A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A fool despyleth hys fathers correcyon, but he that taketh hede whan he is reponed shall haue the more vnderstanding. (where ryghteousnesse is plentyfull, there is very greute power: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly shall be rote out.)

The house of the ryghteous is full of ryches, but the increase of þ vngodly are nye destruccio. A wyse mouth poureth oute knowledge but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the ryghteous is accepta- ble vnto hym. The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde, but who- so foloweth ryghteousnesse, hym he loueth. He that forsaketh the ryght strete, shall be soze punyshed: and who so hateth correc- cyon, shall dye. The hell wth her payne is knowne vnto the Lorde, howe moche more then the hertes of men. A scornfull bo- dy loueth not one that rebuketh hym nether will he come vnto the wyse. A mery her- te maketh a chearfull countenance, but an heuy herte compelleth a man to spegh.

The hert of hym that hath vnderstanding, doth seke after knowledge, but the mouth of foolles is fedd wth folyshnesse. All the dayes of þ poore are myserable, but a quyet herte is hert is as a continual feast. Better is a litle with the feare of the Lorde, then greute trea- sure wth sorowe. Better is a measse of po- tage wth loue, the a fat ore wth euell will. An angrey man stretcht by stryfe, but he that is pacient, stypleth dyscorde. The waye of a slouthfull mā, is as it were hedged wth thornes, but the strete of þ ryghteous is well clenfed. A wyse sonne maketh a glad fa- ther, but an vndiscrete body shameth hys mo- ther. A fool reioyleth in foolyshe thynges, but a wyse man loketh well to his a wne go- ynges. An aduysed thoughtes shall come to naught, but where as me are þ canne geue counsell, there is stedfastnesse. A loyfull thyng is it, to a man whē his counsell is fo- lowed: and very pleasunt is a worde spo- ken in due season. The waye of lyfe lea- deth vnto heauen, that a man shulde beware of hell beneth. The Lorde will breake do- wne the house of þ proude, but he shall make fast the borders of þ widdowe. The Lorde abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wy- ked, but pure wordes of innocētes are plea- sant vnto hym. The conctous man ro- teth vphys a wne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shall lyue. (The Lorde doth curp one eschue euell.)

Lyke as the cle- arnesse of the eyes reioyleth the herte, so doth a good name fede the bones. The eare that harkeneth to the refourmacyon of lyfe, shall dwell amouge the wyse. He that refuseth to be refourmed, despyleth hys a wne soule: but he that submyteth hym selfe to correc- cyon, is wyse. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght science of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth befoze honoure.

The herte of þ ryghteous studieth hys answer afoze, but þ wy- ked mā mouthe spueth out myschefe. The Lorde is farre fro þ vngodly, but he heareth þ prayer of þ ryghteous. Lyke as the cle- arnesse of the eyes reioyleth the herte, so doth a good name fede the bones. The eare that harkeneth to the refourmacyon of lyfe, shall dwell amouge the wyse. his very enemies to be his frendes. Bet- ter is it to haue a litle thyng with ryghte- ousnes, then greute rentes, wrogeously got- ten. A man deuileth a waye in his herte, but it is þ Lorde that ordreth hys goynges. When the prophesy is in the lippes of the kyng, his mouth shall not go wronge in iudgment. A trewe measure & a trewe balannce are the Lordes iudgment, he ma- keth all weyghtes. It is a greute abhomi- nacyon when kynges are wycked, for a kyn- ges seate shulde be holden vpon ryghte- ousnesse. Ryghteous lippes are pleasunt vnto kynges: and he that speaketh the truth shalbe beloued. The kynges displeasure is a mellaunger of death, but a wyse man will pacifye him. The cherefull countenance of the kyng is lyfe, and his louynge fauour is as the eucynge dewe. To haue wys- dome in possession is better then to haue gol- de: and to get vnderstanding, is rather to be chosen then to haue syluer. The path of þ ryghteous is to eschue euell: & who lo loketh well to his wayes, kepeth hys a wne soule.

Presumptuousnes goeth befoze destruc- cyon, and after a proude stomake there folo- weth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoyles wth the proude. He that handleth a matter wysely, opteyneth good: & blef- sed is he, that putteth hys trust in the Lorde. Who so hath a wyse vnderstandinge, shalbe called to counsell: and he þ can speake fayre, shall haue the more lernynge. Un- derstandinge is a well of lyfe vnto hym that hath it: as for the chaffenyng of foolles, it is but folyshnesse. A wyse hart ordreth hys mouth wysely, and amēdeth the doctryne in his lippes. Fayre wordes are an hony co- de, a refrethyng of the mynde, & health of þ bones. There is a waye that mē thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeþ vnto death. A troublous soule dysquyeteth her selfe, for her a wne mouth hath brought her therto. An vngodly persone stretcht vpon euell, and in his lippes he is as an whet- nyng stele. A frowarde body causeth stry- fe, and he that is a blabbe of hys tonge, ma- keth deuilyon amouge prynces. A wycked man begyleth hys neyghbour, and leadeþ hym in to the waye that is not good.

The vngodly þ loketh gastely wth hys eyes vpon ymagineth myschefe, & whē he moueth his lippes, he wyll do some harme. Age is a cro- wne of wozthpye, yf it be foude in the waye of ryghteousnes. A pacient man is better then one strōge: and he that can rule him sel- fe, is more wozth then he that wyuneth a cy- tye. The lottes are cast in to the lappe, but the ordynge ther of standeth all in þ Lorde.

Better is a dyre morsell wth quyetness, then a house full of fast offynge wth strepfe. * A discrete seruaunt shall haue more rule the the somes p^r haue no wysdome, and shall haue lyke heritage wth the b^rethren. * A p^r as syluer is tryed in f^r fyrre, and golde in the forname, eue so doth the Lorde proue the hertes. A wycked body gryueth audice to false lyp^res, & a frowarde personne geueth eare to a discreatfull tonge.
Who so laugheth the poore to scozne, blasphemeth his maker: and he p^r is glad of another mans hurte: shall not be unpunished.
Chylde's chylde's are a worshyppe vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of the chylde's. Sp^reach of auctorytie becometh not a foole, moche lesse a lyp^ring mouth then be semeth a p^rince. A rewarde is as a p^reci-ous stone vnto him p^r hath it: but vnto who foruer it turneth it maketh him vnwise.
Who so couereth another mans offence, se-keth loue: but he p^r discloseth the faute, setteth p^r p^rince agaynst him selfe. One reprofe only doth more good to hym that hath vnderstandynge, then an. C. stryppes vnto a foole.
* A sedycious personne seketh myschefe, & therfore is a cruell messainger sent agaynst hun. It were better to come agaynst a the-Beare robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole. * (trustyng) in his foolisshnes. * Who so rewardeth euell for good, the plage shall not departe from his house. The begynnyng of strepfe is as when a man maketh an issue for water, therfore of the metynge be leaue of cōtencyon. The Lorde hateth as well him that iustifieth the vngodly, as him that con-demneth the innocent. What helpeth it to geue a foole treasure in hys hande, where as he hath no mynde to v^re wysdome?
* Who so buydeth his house to hys, seketh destruccyon: and he that refuseth to lerne, shall fall into myschefe. He is a frede that all waye loueth, and in aduersitye a man shall knowe who is hys brother.
* Who so promyseth by the hande, and is uertye for his neyghboure, he is a foole.
He that delyteth in synne loueth strepfe:
and who so setteth his doze to hys, seketh after a fall. Who so hath a frowarde herte, opreyneth no good: and he p^r hath an ouerthwarre tonge, shall fall into myschefe. He that begettith a sole begettith his sorowe, & p^r father of a foole can haue no iope. * A mery herte maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mynde dzyeth v^r bones. The vngodly taketh gyttes out of the bosome, to wzeite p^r wayes of iudgement. * Wysdome shyneth in the face of him that hath vnderstandynge, but the eyes of foolles wandze thozowe out all landes. * An vndiscrete sonne is a greke vnto hys father, and an heynesse vnto hys mother. To punyche the innocent, and to smite the p^rinces that geue true iudgement, are both euell. * A wyle man, blyth se we wordes, and he is a man of vnderstandynge, that maketh moche of hys sp^rete. * Dee a very foole (when he holdeth hys tonge) is counted wyle, and to haue vnderstandynge, when he shuterh hys lyp^res.

The. xviij. Chapter.

His accompanieth hym selfe with all steadfast & helth some doctryne, p^r hath a feruēt desyre to it and is sequestrate from companie. A foole hath no delyte in vnderstan-dinge, but onely in those thynges wherein his herte reioyseth. When the vngodly commeth, them cometh also dysdayne, and with the dishonest person cometh shame and di-shonour. The wordes of a wyle mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a full streame. * It is not good to regarde the personne of the vngodly, or to pull backe the ryghteous in iud-gement. A foolles lyp^res are euer byawelpge, and his mouth prouoketh vnto battayll.

A foolles mouth is hys awne destruccyon, and hys lyp^res are the snare for hys awne soule. The wordes of a sclauderere are very woundes, and go thozowe vnto the p^rinmost partes of the body. * (fearceth do-tore him that is slouthfull: and the soules of such as lye in beluptuousnes shall hunger.) Who so is slouth-full and slacke in hys laboure, is the brother of him that is a waster. The name of the Lorde is a stronge castell, p^r ryghteous flyeth vnto it, and is in sauegarde. But the ryche mans goodes are his stronge holde, ye he taketh the for an hys wall roude aboute him.

After pyde cometh destruccyon, and honour after lowynes. * He p^r geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and worthy to be confounded. A good stomache dzyeth a waye a mans discafe, but wth the sp^rete is vexed, who maye byde it? A wyle herte laboureth for knowledge and a p^rudent eare seketh vnderstandynge. A liberalite bryngeth a mā to honoure and worshyp^r, and setteth him amonge great men.

The
ryghteous declareth his awne cause first hym selfe, p^r hys neyghbour come, he shall finde h^r.
The lott pacifyeth the variatice, & parteth p^r myghtye a sunder. A brother though he be grieved wth offence, yet is he more worth then a very stronge castell: and they p^r holde together are lyke p^r barre of a palace. A mā's hely shal-be satysfied wth the frute of his awne mouth, and with the increase of hys lyp^res shall he be tyllid. Death and lye are in the instrument of the tonge: and they that loue it, shall enioye the frute therof. * Who so synbeth a good wyse synbeth a good thyng, and receaueth an wholsome benefyte of the Lorde.

(He that putteth away a good wyman, putteth away a good thyng: but he that keepeth an harlot, is a foole and wastefull.) The poore maketh supplicacyon & prayeth

prateh mekely: but the riche geueth a rough answere. A mā that loueth his frendes wyl be compynable with them: and some frende sicketh faster to a man then his brother.

The. xix. Chapter.

Better is the poze that lyueth godly, then p^r blasphemere that is but a sole.
Where na discrecyon is, there p^r soule is inclined to the thyng that is not good, and is swyft on foote, and offendeth. Afolyshe-nes maketh a man to go out of hys waye, & then is hys herte vnpacient against the Lorde.

Ryches make many frendes: but the poze is forsaken of hys neyghboure. * A false witnes shall not remayne unpunished: and he p^r speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon great men: and euery man faouureth hym that geueth rewardes. As for the poore, he is hated amonge all his b^r-then: yee, hys awne frendes withdraue fro him: and p^r he aske them the cause, they dysdayne to answer hym. He that is wyle, lo-ueth hys awne soule: and kepeth vnderstan-dinge, that he maye prospere. A false witnes shall not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh lyes shall perishe. Pleasure becommeth not a foole, moche more vnseemly is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of p^rinces.

A wyle man can put of displeasure: and it is hys honoure to lett some fautes passe.

* The kynges dysfaoure is lyke the roa-rynge of a lyon, but hys frendshyp^r is lyke the dewe vpon the grasle. * An vndiscrete sonne is the heynesse of his father: & a brau-lyng wyse is lyke the top of an house, where thozowe it is euer dzyppynge. House and ryche inaye a man haue by the herfyage of hys elders: but a dyscrete womā is the gyft of the Lorde. Slouthfulness bryngeth slepe: and a soule accustomed with crafte shall suffer hunger. Whoso kepeth the cōmaundmēt, kepeth his awne soule: but he that regardeth not hys waye, shall dze. He that hath pitye vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lorde: and loke what he layeth out, it shalbe payed hym agayne. Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope: but let not thy soule be moued to slaye hym. A mā of great wrath beareth a payne: and though thou once deliuer him, thou must agayne do almost for hym. A geue eare vnto good counsell, and be content to be refozmed: that thou mayest be wyle in thy latter dayes. * There are many deuyces in a mans herte: neuertheles, the counsell of the Lorde shall stande. (for ever.) It is a mans worship to do good: & better it is to be a poze mā then a dissembler. The feare of the Lorde bryngeth a man to lye: and he shall rest the hole nyght in plenteousnes, without visitacyon of anye plage. * A slouthfull man shuteth his hādes into his b^rom, as into the pot: and wyl not take payne to put it to hys mouth. * If thou shytest a scozefull persone, the ignoraunt shall take better heed: and yf thou reprouest one that hath vnderstandynge, he wyl be the wylse. He that hurteth his father or shuteth out hys mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne. My sonne, heare nomore the doctryne that leadeth the vnto errors from the wordes of vnderstandynge. A false witnes laugheth iudgement to scozne: and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednesse.

Punishments are ordeyned for the scoznefull: and stryppes for foolles backes.

The. xx. Chapter.

One maketh a mā to be scozefull:
and stronge dyspnyce causeth a mā to be vnquyte: who so delyteth therin, shall neuer be wyle. * The kyng ought to be feared as the roaryng of a lion: who so prouoketh him vnto anger offen-deth agaynst his awne soule. It is a mans honour to kepe him selfe fro strife: but they that haue pleasure in bzaulyng are foolles euery one. A slouthfull body wyl not go to plowe for colde of the wynter: therfore shall he go a beggyng in sommer, & haue nothyng. Wyle counsell in the herte of man is lyke a water in the depe of the earth: and a man that hath vnderstandynge bryngeth it forth. * Many there be that wolde be called good doers: but where shall one fynde a true saythfull man.

* Whoso leadeth a godly and an innocent life: is righteous and happy shall hys chylde be whom he leaueth behynde him. A kyng that sitteth in the throne of iudgment, and loketh well about hym, dzyrth a waye all euell.
* Who can saye, my hert is cleane, I am innocent from synne? To vse two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhominable vnto the Lorde.

A childe is knowne by his couerlacion, whether his wordes be pure & ryght. The care to heare, the eye to se: the Lorde hath made the both. Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouertye: but open thyne eyes, p^r thou mayst haue bzed ynough. It is naught it is naught (sayeth he that byeth any thyng-ge:) but when he cometh to his awne house, then he boasteth of hys peny worth. A man that hath a mouth of vnderstandynge hath many p^recious stones and costly Jewels.

* Take hys garment that is suretye for a straunger: and take a pledge of hym for the vknowne mā's sake. Euery man lyketh the bzed that is gotten with discafe: but at the last hys mouth shalbe fylled with grauell.

Thozowe counsell, the thynges that men deuple go forwarde: and wth discrecyon ought warres to be taken in hande. The crafty di-scatfull bewrayth secret coucell: and to him that custometh flaterynge lyp^res ioyne note thy selfe. * Whoso curseth hys father & mother: his lyp^rge shalbe put out in the myddes

* G. Reg. rb. a. of darclines. * The heritage that commeth to hastily at the first, shall not be praped at the ende. * Saye not thou: I wyl receyue euell: but put thy trust in the Lorde, and he shall defende the. * The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a fals balace is an euell thinge. * The Lorde ordreth euery mans goinges: howe maye a mā then vnderstande bys awne waye? It is a snare for a mā to deuoure that which is holy: and after the vowe to turne to thyne awne vse, the thyng thou hast vowed. * A wyle king destroyeth the vngodly, and byngeth the whele ouer them. The lanterne of the Lorde is the bryght of mā: and goth thorowe all the inwarde partes of the body. * Mercye and fapthfulnes preferue the kinge: and with loyngge kynndnes bys seate is holden by. The strenght of yonge men is theyr worthyppe, and a gray heed is an honour vnto the aged. Woundes bygne awaye euell, & so do they the inwarde partes of the body.

The .xxj. Chapter.

He * kynge herke is in the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither soeuer he wyll. Euery man thynketh hys awne waye to be ryght: but the Lorde iudgeth the hertes. * To do ryghteousnesse and iudgement is moze acceptable to þe Lord then sacrifice. A p̄sumptuous loke, a proude stomacke: and the plowynge of the vngodly is synne. The deuycies of one that is diligent in ynnge plentyousnes: but he that is vnadui-sed cometh vnto pouertie. Whoso hoodeth hy pryche with the dyceatfullnesse of hyss tonge, he is bayne and a foole, and lyke vnto þe that seke theyr awne deeth. The robberes of the vngodly shalbe theyr awne de-struccyon: for they wyll nott do the thyng that is ryght. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge: but * the woorkes of hym that is cleane are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a braulynge woman in a wyde housle. The soule of the vngodly wytheth euell: and hath no pitye vpon hyss neyghboure. * When the scornefull is punished, the ignoraunt take the better head: and when he leyth the wyle men prosper, he wyll receaue the moze vnderstandynge. The ryghteous man wysely consydereth the house of the wicked: and for theyr wickednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. * Whoso stoppeth hyss eares at the cryenge of the poore: he shall crye hym selfe, and not be hearde. A preyreward payfeth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bolome; spylleth furiouslynesse. The luste delpyteth in doynge the thyng that is ryght: but ouer the woorkes of wyckednesse baggeth destructyon. The mā that wandzeth out of the waye of wydsome, shall remayne in the cōgregacy of the deed. * He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shall be a poore man. * Whoso de-lyteth in wyne and belycates, shall nott be ryche. * The vngodly shall be geuen for the ryghteous, and the wycked for the iust.

* It is better to dwell in a wilderness then with a chydynge & an angry woman. In a wyle mannes house, there is grate treasure and oyle: but a foolys body spendeth by all.
Whoso foloweth ryghteousnesse and mercy, syndeth bothe lyfe, ryghteousnesse, and honoure. A wyle man wyreth the clype of the myghtye: and as fo, .or strength that they trust in, he byngeth it downe. * Whoso kepeþ his mouth and bys tonge: the same kepeþ bys soule from troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scoz-nesfull man, which in wrath darre worke malicypouste. The voluptheousnesse of the flouthfull is bys awne death: for his handes wyl not labour. He coueteth and despyeth all the daye longe: but the ryghteous is all-wayne geuyng, and kepeþ not byng backe.
The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhormacyon: howe manche more when they offre the thyng that is gotten with wyckednesse!

* A false wyneſſe ſhall perſe: but he that is a true man boldly ſpeaketh that he hath heard. An vngodly man goeth forth raly:
but the iuſt reformeth bys a wone waye.

* There is no wisdom, there is no under-standynge, there is no counsell agaynst the Lorde. * The horre is prepared agaynst the daye of battayll: but the Lorde geueth the victorye.

The xxij. Chapter.

 * Good name is moze worth then greater rycheſſe, and ſoluinge ſauoure is better then ſiluer and golde. The ryche and poore are together: the Lorde is the maker of them all. A wyle man seeth the plague, and hydeth hym selfe: but the folpþ go on styll and are punysshed.

The ende of sowlynes and the feare of God is ryches, honoure, prosperite, and healtþ.
Thornes and snares are in the waye of the frowarde: but he that doeth kepe hys soule, wylle fle from forthe. Teache a chyld in hys youth what waye he shulde go: for he shall not leane it, when he is olde. The ryche ruleth þy pooze: & the bozower is seruaunt to the lender. He that soweth wyckednesse shall reape sorowe: and the rodde of hys cruelte shall perpeþe. * He that hath a lounge eye shal be blessed: for he getteth of his breed vnto the pooze. * Whoso getteth swordes, shall obtayne þe spoyle & honoure: but he taketh awaye the soule of such as receaue them.) Cast out the scoznefull man, and he shall styfle go out wþ hym: yee, variatice & claunder shall cease. Whoso delpeth to be of a cleane herte and of gracypus lyppes, the

The xxiii. Chapter.

B*E not thou gelous ouer wycked to do hurte, ad they lyppes talke of myschese. Thowow wylscome is an hou se buyled, and wyth vnderstandynge is it sett vp. Thowow discrecion shalt the cha bers be fylled with all costly ad pleasaunt tynges. A wyle mā is euer stronge, yee, a mā of vnderstanding encreaseth of strength.

For with discrecyon must warres be ta ken in hāde, & where as are many that can geue counsell, there is the victorie. Wylsom is to hve a thinge for a sole, for he darre not open his mouth in the gate. He that ymagyneth myschefe, maye welbe called an un-gracious personne. The thought of the foolys is synne, & the scornfull is an ab-hominacion vnto men. If thou be ouersene and negligent in tyme of neede, then is thy strength but smal. Deliuere the & go vnto death, & are led awaye to be slayne, & be not neglyget therin yf & be able to do the good.

If & wilt save: I knewe not of it. Thinkest thou & he which made the hertes, doth not cōsidre it? & & he which regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shall not he recōpence euery man according to his woꝝkes? Wyl soune, yeatest hony & the swete hony cōbe, because it is good & swete in thy mouth. Cūe so shall & knowledge of wylsōme be vnto thy soule, allone as & hast gotten it. And thou shalt haue longe dayes, yee, thy hope shall not be in vayne. Laye no pryuy wayte (o wicked mā) vpo the house of the ryghteous & disquiete not his resting place. * For a iust man falleth seue tymes, & ryseth vp a-gayne, but & vngodly fall ito wyckednes.

* Reioyce not & at & fall of thyn enemye, & lett not thyn herte be glad whē he stombleth. Lett the Lord (when seith it) be angrye, and turne hys wrath from hym vnto the. * Let not thy wrath & glosy in oue the, to folowe the wycked & vngodly. And why? the wicked shall haue no posterite, ad the candle of the vngodly shall be put out.

* Wyl soune, feare & the Lord & the kynge, & kepe no company wth the & flyde backe from his feare: for they destruccio shall come so-denly, & who knoweth & aduersyte & maye come from them both? These are also & sayenges of & wylse. * It is not good, to haue respecte of any persone in iudgemēt. He hym shall the people curse, yee, the cometic shall abhorre him. But they & rebuke the vngodly, In the doth God delite, & a ryche swere. If & make vp thy woꝝke & is withfelde & then buyde thyn house. We no false witness against thy neyghbour & speake no falschode wth thy lyppes. Saye not: I will hāde hi, eue as he hath deale w me, & will rewarde euery mā accordyge to his dedes. I arde of the foolys man. And lo, it was all couered w nettels, & stode full of thystles,

I sawe, & considered it well: I loked vpon

The xxv. Chapter.
These also are the parables of Salomō, which the men of Ezechiah kynge of Juda copied out.

It is & honour of God to kepe a thinge secreete, but & kynge's honour is to search out a thynge.

The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, & the kynge's herte is unsearcheable. Take & drosse fro & syluer, & there shall be a cleane vessel therof. Take awaye vngodlynesse fro & kige, & his seate shall be stablished w ryghteousnes. But not forth thy selfe in the presēce of & kig, & prea-ce not ito & place of greute mē. * Better is it that it be layde vnto &: come vp hyther, then & to be put lower in the presēce of the pynce whō & seyth w thyn eyes. * We not hastie to go to the lawe, lest haplye & do some offence after & strife be eded wherby thy neyghbour put the to shame. Handle thy matter w thy neyghbour him selfe, ad discouer not another mā's secreete: lest when mē heare therof, it turne to thy dishonou-re, and least thyn euell name do not cease.

* Grace and frendshipp doth deliuer: to bych se that thou kepe for thy selfe, lest thou be reproued. A woꝝde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a graued woꝝke of syluer. The correccio of & wylse is to an obediēt eare, a golde chaine & a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the witer coole i the haruest, so is a saythfull messenger to the & send hi: for he refresyth his masters mynde. Whoso maketh greute boasts & geueth nothynge, is lyke cloudes & wynde without rayne. With paciēce is a pīce pacified, & * w a soft tōg is ryghteousnes broken. If & fidest hony, eate so moch as is sufficient for &: lest & be ouerfull, & perbake it out agayne. With draw thy foote from thy neyghbours house least he be wery of &, & so abhorre &. Who so beareth false wytnesse agaist his neyghbour, he is a verye clubb, a swearde, & a sharpe arrowe. The hope & is put in a false mā i tyme of neede, is lyke a cotte toth & a sylpperi foote. Who so taketh awaye a mā's garment i the colde weather, is lyke byneger vpo chalc, or lyke hi & syngeth sores to an heule hart.

* Lyke as the moth hurteth a garment, and a wyne the tree, so doth the bruyne of a man hurt the hart. * If thyn enemye hōger, feade him: yf he thyrst, geue him drinke: for so shalt thou heape coales of fyre vpon hys head, and the Lord shall rewarde the. The North wynde dryueth awaye the rayne, eue so doth an earnest sober countenance a backbiters tonge. * It is better to syt in a corner vnder the rose, then with a brayling woman in a wyde house. A good reporte out

te out of a farre coltre, is lyke coulde water to a thyrstie soule. A ryghteous man fallynge downe before the vngodly, is lyke a troubled well & a springe that is destroyed. Lyke as it is not good to cate to moch hony, * eue so he that will search out hye thynge, it shall be to heuy for hym.

He & cannot rule hym selfe, is lyke a cyte which is broken downe, & hath no walles.

Angodly flyeth whā no man chasteth hym, but the ryghteous standeth styf as a lyon. * Because of synne, þ lande doth oft chas-ge her prince: but thozow men of vnderstādyng and wysdome a realme en-ge another by violence, is lyke a continuall

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the ungodly: but loch as kepe þ lawe, abhorre ge that is ryght, but they that seke after þ Lorde, discusse all thynges. * A pooze man leadyng a godly lyfe, is better then the ryche that goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a chyld of vnderstandyng: but he that is a cōpanyō of ryotous men, shameth his father. He that by vsurpe and vniuste garynes gathe-rith ryches: he shall lape them in store for a man that will ppyte the poze. * He that turneth a waye bys care from hearing the lawe, bys prayer shall be abhominable.

Who so ledeth the ryghteous into an euell waye, shall fall into bys awne pytt, but the iust shall haue the good i possesio. The ryche mā thynketh him self to be wysse, but the pooze þ hath vnderstandyng, can perceaue him well ynough. * When ryghteous men are in prosperite, then doth honoure flozpy but when þ vngodly come vp, þ state of mē chaungeth. He that bydeth his synnes, shall not prospere: but * whoso knowledgeth the and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy. Well is him that standeth alwaye in awe: as for him that hardeneth his herte, he shall fall i to myschance. Lyke as a roaryng lyon and an hōgre beare, euē so is an vngodly prynce ouer the pooze people. Where the prince is without vnderstādyng, there is greate oppresyon and wronge: but þ he be loch one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raygne. * He that by violence sheddeth any mans bloude, shall be a rennagate vnto bys graue, and no man shall be able to souccoure hym. * Who so leadeþ a godly & an innocent lyfe, shall be saued: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall once haue a fall.

* He that sylleth his land, shall haue ple-teousnesse of bread: but he þ foloweth vbylnesse, shall haue pouerte ynough. A man þ dealeth fapthfully, shall be fylled with blessynges: * he that maketh to moch haste for to be ryche, shall not be vngylte. To haue respecte of personnes in iudgemēt is not good: And why? A mā will do wronge, yee, euen for a pece of bread. He þ will be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye, and consydereth not, þ pouerte shall come vpon hym.

He that folowynge my precepts rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the last, then he that flatreth hym. * Whoso rob-beth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a destroyer.

He that is of a proude stomache & without feare, stereth vp styf: but he that putteth bys trust in the Lorde, shall be well fedd.

He that trusteth in bys awne herte, is a foole: but he þ dealeth wylly, shall be safe.

* He that geueth vnto the pooze, shall not lacke: but he that turneth a waye bys eyes fro loch as be in necessity, shall suffre greate pouerte byn selfe. * When the vngod-ly are come vp, men are sayne to hyde them selues: but when they perissh, the ryghteous increase.

The. xxix. Chapter.

stroyed without any help. * Whē rynges, he turneth it vpsyde downe. Who awne snare, but the ryghteous doth syng &

If a price deyle i lyes, all his seruantes are vngodly. The pooze and the lender mete together, & the Lorde lyghtheneth both theyr fully iudgeth the pooze, shall continue sure for euermore. The rodde and correccion ministre wysdome, but þ a chyld be not loked vnto, he byngeth his mother to shame. When the vngodly come vp, wycked-nes increaseth: but the ryghteous shall se theyr fall. Hurtoure thy sonne w correccion, and thou shalt be at rest, yee, he shall do the good at thyne herte. When the worde of god is not preached, the people peryshe, but well is hym that kepeth þ lawe.

A seruant wyl not be the better for wor-des, for though he vnderstande, yet wyl he not regarde them. If thou seest a man þ is hasty to speake vndupled, thou mayest trust a foole more then hym. He that delycately byngeth by his seruant from a chyld, shall make hi bys master at length.

An angry man stereth vp styf, and he that beareth euell wyl in his mynde, doth moch euell. After pryde cometh a fall,
* but a lowely sperte byngeth greate worthyp. Who so kepeth company wth a these, hateth his awne soule: he heareth blas-phemyes, and telleth it not forth. He that feareth mē, shall haue a fall: but who so put-teth bys trust i the Lorde is with out danger. Many there be that seke the princes fauoure, but euer any mans iudgement cōmeth from the Lorde. The ryghteous ab-horreth the vngodly: but as for those that be in the ryght waye, the wicked hate the.

Thozow a seruant þ beareth rule. Tho-row a foole þ hath to moche byced, thozow wysdome they excede the wyse. The em-

The wordes of

kyng Lamuel, & the lesson that hye mother taught hym.

My sone (why do ye so) sone of my body: O my deare beloued sone, geue not ouer thi strenght & waies vnto wine, which are þe destructione of kynges. O Lamuel, yt is not for kynges, it is not (I saye) for kynges to drike wyne, nor þe stronge dryncke: (for this is no secret where bynckenne the reigneth) lest they byynge drenched forgett the lawe, and peruerete the iudgement of all poore mē's children. Geue stronge dryncke vnto such as are condemned to death, and wyne vnto those that mourne: that they maye drike it, and forgett theyr mysery & aduersyte.

Be thou an aduocate, for the dowe and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all such as be socoured in this transitorye worlde. Ope thy mouth, defende the thyngge that is lawfull and ryght, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

Who so fyndeth an honest saythfull woman, she is moche more worth then perles. The heart of her husband maye safelye trust in her, so that he shall fall in no pouerthe.

She will do hym good and not euell, all the dayes of her lyfe. She occuppeth woll and flaxe, & labourerth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchauntes shyppe, that byngeth her vytayles from a farre.

She is vp in the nyght season, to prouide meate for her houtholde, and fode for her maydens. She consydreth lande, & byeth it, and with the frute of her handes she planteth a vnyeyarde. She gyrdeth her loynes with strenght, & courageth her armes. And yf she perceaue that her houtholde doth good, her candle goeth not out by nyght. She layeth her fyngers to the spynnell: and her hande taketh holde of þe distaffe. She openeth her hande to the poore, yee she stretcheth forth her handes to such as haue neede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurte her house, for all her houtholde folkes are clothed with skarlett. She maketh her selfe sayre oznametes, her clothynge is whyte sylke & purple.

Her husband is moche let by in the gates, when he sitteth amonge the rulers of the land. She maketh cloth of sylke and sellet it, & deliuereth gyrdles vnto the marchaunt. Strength and honoure is her clothynge, & in the latter daye she shall reioyse. She openeth her mouth with wysdome, and in her tonge is the lawe of grace.

She loketh well to the wayes of her houtholde: & eateth not her bred with ydolnes. Her children shall arple, and call her blessed: & her husband shall make moche of her.

Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goest aboue them all. As for fauoure, it is deceatfull, and ventie is a vayne thyngge: but a woman that feareth þe Lord, she is worthy to be praised. Geue her of þe frute of her handes and let her a lone workes prayse her in the gates.

Of the preacher,

No. xxxvii.

The. ii. Chapter.

The booke of the

Preacher, otherwyle called ecclesiastes.

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ That is in this wyse to be vnderstande.

These are the wordes of the Preacher, sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalem. * All is but mosse vayne vayne (sayeth þe Preacher) & all is mosse vayne (I saye) & but plaine vante. For what els hath a mā, of all þe labour þe taketh vnder þe Sunne? One generacion passeth awaye, another cometh, but þe earth abyedeth still. The Sunne arpleth, þe sunne goeth downe, & returneth to hye place, þe maye there rise vp againe. The wynde goeth toward þe South, & turneth vnto the north, fetcheth his course, whirleth aboute, & goeth forth, & his circuite returneth agayne to him selfe. * All floudes rūne into the see, & yet þe see yt selfe is not fylled: for loke vnto what place þe waters rūne, thence they come to floue agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen, y no mā can expresse the. * The eye is not satisfied w sight, the eare is not fylled w hearinge. * The thyng þe hath bene, cometh to passe agayne: & þe thyng þe hath bene done, shall be done agayne, there is no new thyng vnder þe sunne. Is there eny thyng wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is new: for it was longe agoon in þe tymes þe haue bene before vs. The thyng þe is past, is out of remembrance: Euen so the thynges þe are for to come, shall no more be thought vpon amonge them þe come after. I my selfe þe Preacher, was kynge of Israel at Ierusalem, & dyd applye my mynde to seke out & search for þe knowledge of all thynges that are done vnder heauē. Soch trauaile and labour hath God geue vnto þe children of men, to exerceple them selues therein.

Thus I haue consydred all the thynges þe come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vayne, & vexacion of minde. The croked canot be made straght, nor þe thigge þe is vnperfecte, canot be accepted w thynges þe are perfecte. I comoned w mine a lone herte, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gottē moze wysdome, the all they þe haue bene before me in Ierusalem. Yee my herte had greute experie of wysdome & knowledge, for there vnto I applied my mynde: þe I myght knowe what were wysdome & vnderstanding, what were errour & foolishnes: & I perceaued, þe this also was but a vexacion of minde: for where moche wysdome is, there is also so greute trauaile & disquietnes: & þe moze knowledge a man hath, þe moze is hye care.

The sayd I thus in my herte: Now go I to, I wil take mine ease & haue good dayes. But lo, þe is vayne: also in so moche þe sayd vnto þe mā geue to laughter: þe arte madd, & to myght: what doest thou? So I thought i my herte, to geue my selfe vnto wyne and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehend folkes vntill the tyme þe (amonge all þe thynges whiche are vnder the Sunne) I myght le what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gorgeous sayre workes. I builded me houses, and planted vnyeyardes. I made me orchardes and gardes of pleasure, and planted trees in them of al maner frutes. * I made poles of water, to water þe grene and fruteful trees withall. I bought seruantes and maydens, and had a greute houtholde. As for catell and shepe, I had moze substance of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer & golde together, eue a treasure of kynnes and landes.

I prouided me syngers & women, which coulde playe of instrumentes, to make men myght and pastime. I gat me psalteries & songes of musike. And I was greater and in moze worshippe, the all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysdome remained with me: & loke whatsoeuer myne eyes despyed, I let the haue it: and wherin soeuer my herte delpted, or had eny pleasure, I with helde it not fro it. Thus my herte reioysed in all that I dyd, and this was my porcion of all my trauaile. But when I consydred all the workes that my handes had wrought, and all þe labour that I had take therein: lo, all was but vayne and vexacion of mynde, and nothing of eny valur vnder þe Sunne. The turned I me to consydre wysdome, erreure, and folyshnes (for what is he among men that myght be compared to me the kynge in soch workes?) and I sawe: that wysdome excelleth folyshnes, as farre as light doth darknesse. For a wyse man hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in the darknesse: I perceaued also, þe they both had one ende. The thought I i my mynde, If it hapen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny moze for wysdome? So I confessed within my herte, that this also was but vayne. For the wyse are eny as lytle in remembrance as the folysh, for þe dayes shall come whē all shall be forgotten, yee þe wyse man dieth as well as þe foole. Thus beganne I to be weery of my lyfe, in so moche that I coulde awaye with nothing that is done vnder the Sunne, for all was but vayne & vexacion of minde: Yee I was weerye Wecp of all my labour, whych I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shulde be sayne to leaue them vnto another man that cometh after me: And who knoweth, whether he shal be a wyse mā or a foole? And yet shall he be lord of all my labours, which I with soch wysdome haue taken vnder the Sunne. Thys is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from all soch trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sunne: for so moch as a man shulde wecry hym selfe with wysdome, with vnderstandyng and oportunitie, & yet be sayne to leaue his labours vnto another that neuer stetteth for the. This is also a vayne thyng & grea- te misery. For what getteth a mā of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heynesse, sor- rowe and desquyetyng all the dayes of his lyfe? In so moch that his hert cannot rest in the nyght, this is also a vayne thyng. * Is it not better then for a mā to eate & dync- he, & his soule to be mery in his labour? Yee I sawe that thys also was a gyfte of God: For who will eat or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God gyueth to the man that is good before him, wysdome, vnderstandyng, & gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth wecrynges: * (and superfluous care) that he maye gather and heape toge- ther the thynges, that afterwarde shal be ge- uen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thyng, yee a hevy disquie- nesse and veracyon of mynde.

The.iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in their tyme, and passe a- waye in their tyme.

Every thyng hath a tyme, yee all y is vnder the heauen, hath his coue- nient season. There is a tyme to be bozne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante and a tyme to pliche vp the thyng, that is planted.

A tyme to slaye, and a tyme to make whole.

A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to build vp.

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh:

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce.

A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together.

A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracing.

A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to lese.

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to speede.

A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe together.

A tyme to kepe sylvence, & a tyme to spea- ke.

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a man els (y doth any thing) but wecrynges & labour? For as touchyng the trauayle and carefulnesse whych God hath geuen vnto men, I se y he hath geuen it them, to be exercysed in it. All thys hath he ordered maruelous goodly, to euery thig his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of me, that they shuld not comprehend the ground of hys workes, which he doth from the begynning to y en- de. So I perceaued, y in these thynges there is nothing better for a man, then to be me- ry and to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a mā eateth & dynceth, yee what fouer a mā enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I considered also y what fouer God doth, it cōtinueth for euer and that nothing can be put vnto it, nor ta- ken from it, and that God doth it to the in- tent, that me shuld feare hym. * The thyng that hath bene, is now: and the thyng that is for so come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thyng that was past. * Moreover, I sawe vnder the Sunne vngod- ly nesse in the steade of iudgement, and ini- quyte in steade of ryghteousnesse. Then thought I in my minde: God shal separate the ryghteous from the vngodly, and then shal be the tyme and iudgement of all coun- cels and workes. I commennded with myne awne hert also, concernyng the chyldren of men: how God hath chosen them, & yet let- teth them apaire: as though they were bea- stes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yee they haue both one maner of bryth: so y (in this) a man hath no premy- nence aboue a beast, but all are subdued vn- to vanytie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne. * Who knoweth y spre- te of mā that goeth vwarde, and the bryth of the beast that goeth downe into y earth? * Wherfore I perceaued, that there is nothing better for a man, the to be ioyfull in hys la- bour, for that is hys porcyon. But who wyl byng him to se the thyng that shall come after hym?

The.iiii. Chapter.

The myserys of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The chyldre that is poore, and wepe, &c.

I turned me, & * considered all y violent wrong that is done vnder the sunne, & beholde, the teares of soch as were oppressed, & there w- as no man to conforthe the, or y wolde dely- uer & defende the from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then soch as be alpye: yee, him that is yet vnbayne to be bet- ter at ease then they both, because he seyth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle, & dily- gence of labour, y euery man taketh in han- de, was done of enuy agaynst his neybour. This

This is also a vaine thyng, and a veracyon of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes to- gether, and eateth vp hys awne fleshe. One haue full (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour & trauay- le of minde. * Moreover, I turned me, & behol- de yet another vanyte vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but hym selfe a- lone, haupng nether chyldre ner brother: yet is there no ende of his careful trauayle, his eyes can not be satysfied with riches, * (yet doth he not remembre hym selfe, and saye.) For whom do I take soch trauayle? For whose pleasu- re do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne & miserable thyng. * Therfo- re, two are better then one, for they maye well enioy the profyt of theyr laboure.

For if one of them fall, his cōpanyon hel- peth him vp agayne: But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, when two slepe to- gether, they are warme: but how cā a body be warme alone? One maye be ouertome, but two maye make resistauce: A thre fold cable is not lyghtly broken. A poore chyldre byng wyse, is better then an olde kyng, y doth, and cānot beware in tyme to come.

Some one commeth out of prison, and is made a kyng: and another which is bozne in the kyngdome, commeth vnto pouerte. And I perceaued, that all men lyuynge vn- der the sonne, go with y seconde chyldre, that shall stonde vp in the steade of the other.

As for the people y haue bene before him, and y come after hym, they are innumera- ble: And they y come after him shall not re- toyse of him. This is also a vayne thyng & a veracyon of mynde. When y comest in to y house of God, kepe thy fote & draw nye y God which is at hāde may heare: * y thou gyue not the offeringes of fooles, for they knowe nowght, but to do euell.

The.v. Chapter.

A monition to beware of rache communicacyon: he ought not to meruell at the oppres- sion of the poore. The courteous is not satysfied with his riches.

Not hastye with thy mouth, and let not thine hert speake eny thing rashly before God. For God is in heauen, and y vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where moch ca- refulnesse is, there are many dreames: and where many wordes are, there men maye heare fooles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to perfourme it. As for folsh voves, he hath no pleasure in the: If thou promyse eny thyng, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, the that thou shuldest promyse, and not paye. * Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to syn- ne, nether saye thou before the angell, y it is thy ignorance. For then God will be angrie at thy voyce, & destroye all the workes of thyne handes. And why? where as are ma- ny dreames and many wordes, there are al- so diuerse vanytes: but loke that thou feare God. * If thou seyst the poore to be oppres- sed and wrongeously dealt withall, so that equite & the ryght of the lawe is wasted in the lāde: maruell not thou at soch a thyng, for one grea- te man kepeth touch with ano- ther, & y myghtie men are in auctorite ouer the poore. The encrease of y erth vpholdeth all thyng, yea the kyng himselfe is mayn- tened by husbādrys. He that loueth money, wyl neuer be satysfied w money: & who so deliteth i riches, shal haue no profyt therof. This is also a vayne thyng. Where as mo- che ryches is, there are many also that spen- de them awaye. And what pleasure moze hath he that posseseth the, sayng that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A la- bouringe mā slepeth sweetely, whether it be lytle or moch that he eateth: but the aboun- dance of the ryche will not suffre him to sle- pe. Yet is there a soze plage, which I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kepte to the hurte of him that hath the in posses- sion. For oft tymes they perissh with his grea- te misery & trouble: & yf he haue a chyld- re, it getteth nothyng. * Lyke as he came naked out of hys mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carryeth nothing awaye with hym of all his labour. This is a mise- rable plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also he byd eate in y darcke, with grea- te carefulnesse, sycknesse and sorow.

Therfore me thinke it a better & a fayrer thyng, a man to eate and dyncke, and to be refreshed of all hys labour, y he taketh vn- der the Sunne all y dayes of his lyfe which God geueth hym, for this is hys porcyon.

For vnto whosouer God geueth riches goodes and power, he geueth it hym to en- ioye it, to take it for hys porcyon, and to be refreshed of hys labour: thys is y gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moch howe lōge he shall lyue, for so moch as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

The.vi. Chapter.

The myserys of the ryche and couetous. The disre- sence of a foole and a wyse man.

Here is yet a plage vnder the sun- ne, & it is a generall thyng among men: when God geueth a man ry- ches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothyng of all that hys herte cā desyre: and yet God geueth him not leaue to enioy y same, but another man spendeth them them. This is a vayne thinge & a miserable plage. If a mā begett an hundred children, & lyue many yeres, so þ his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, nether be buried: as for him I saye, þ an vn-tymely byrth is better then he. For he commeth to naught, & spedyth his tyme in darr-knes, & his name is forgotte. Moreover, he seeth not þ sonne, & knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more rest then the other. Yee though he lyued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour þ a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer fylled after his min-de. For what hath þ wylle more then þ fooler?

What helpeth it the poore, þ he knoweth to walke w̄ foolles before the lyuig? The clea-re syght of the eyes is better, then þ the soule shulde walke after desires of þ luste. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thinge & a dysquietnelle of mynde. The thinge þ hath bene: is named already, & knowen þ it is euen mā him selfe: nether maye he go to lawe w̄ hym þ is myghtier then he. Many thinges ther be þ increase vanite, & what hath a man els. For who knoweth what is good for mā lyuig, i the dayes of þys vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? Who wyl tell a mā, what shal happen after him vnder the Sunne?

The vii. Chapter.

That to bych passeth our strengthes and wylles ought we not to seke after.

A Good name is more worth then a precious oymnt, and the daye of death is better then the daye of byrth.
It is better to go into an house of mourninge, then into a baketinge house. For there is the ende of all men, & he þ is liuig, taketh it to hert: grauntie is better then to laugh: for when the countenance is heuy, the herte is reformed. The hert of the wylle is in the mournyng house, but the hert of the folp is in the house of myrth. * It is better to geue care to the chastenynge of a wylle man then to heare the songe of foolles. For the laughinge of foolles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thyng.

The wylle man hateth w̄ longe delynge: & abhorreth the harte þ couetith rewardes.
Better it is to cōspire, the ende of a thinge then the begynnynge. The paciet of sprete is better then the hpe mynded. Be not haste-ly angrie in thy mynde, for w̄rath resteth in the bolome of foolles. Saye not þ: What is the cause, þ the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they þ be now: for þ were no wylle questiō. Wylldome w̄ inheritaunce is good pet better is it w̄ them þ without care may beholde the sonne. For wylldome defendeth as well as moneye, & the excellēt knowledge & wylldome geueth lyfe vnto him þ hath it in possession. Considre the worke of God how þ no man can make the thinge straight which he maketh croked. Else wel the tyme of prosperite, & remēbre the tyme of mysfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so þ a man cā fynde nothing els. All thinges haue I considered in the tyme of my vanite: þ the iust mā perissheth for his righteousnes sake, & the vngodly lyueth in þys wycked-nelle. Therefore * be þ nether to ryghteous ner ouer wylle, þ thou perishe not: be nether to vnyghteous also ner to folp, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, commeth forth with them all.

Wylldome geueth more corage vnto the wylle, then ten myghtie mē of the cite: * for there is not one iust v̄p̄ earth, þ doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spokē, lest thou heare thy ser-uaunt curse þ: for thine a wne hert knoweth that þ thy selfe also hast oft tymes spoken euell by other mē. All these thinges haue I proued i wylldome: for I thought to be wyse * but the wēt farther from me then he was before, pec & so depe that I might not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, & to seke & searche oute science, wylldome & vnderstāding: to knowe the foolyshnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of do-tinge foolles. And I founde, þ a woman is betterer then death: for she hath cast a byrde, her herte as a nett that men fysh with, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseh God, shal escape from her: but the synner will be taken with her.

Scholde (sayeth the preacher) thys haue I diligently searched oute & proued. One thinge must be considred with another, that a man may come by knowledge: whych as pet I seke, & fynde it not. Among a thousande mē I haue founde one, but not one womā amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I founde, þ * God made man iust and ryght, but they

The viii. Chapter.

Glories: one of the cheste thynges vnder þ sonne.

Who is wylle? Who hath knowledge to make answere? A mans wylldome maketh þys face to shine: but vnchamefastnes putteth it out of fauoure. I must kepe the kynge's commaundement, and the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of þys syght, and se thou continue in no euell thinge: for whatsoeuer it pleaseh hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kynge geueth a charge, his commaundement is myghty: Euen so * who maye

Of the preacher.

Job. xxi.

maye saye vnto him: What doest þ? Who so kepeh the commaundement: shal sele no harme: but a wylle mans herte discerneth þ tyme & iudgement: For euery thinge will haue oportunitie & iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulness and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyl tell him?
Nether is there eny man þ hath power ouer the sprete, to kepe ityll þ sprete, ner to haue eny power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, nether maye vngodlynes deliuer them that medle with all.

All these thinges haue I considered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sonne: howe one mā hath lord-shype v̄p̄ another to his a wne harme. For * I haue seene often þ vngodly brought to ther graues: and yet they haue retorned in to the cite ageyne, and came from the place of holy men, which in the cite were gro-wen out of memory as were those also that lyued well. Thys is also a vayne thyng.
Because now that euell workes are not hastely punished, the hert of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euell persone offende an hundred tymes, & God differ gyuynge him lōge lyfe: pet am I sure, þ it shal go well w̄ them that feare God, because they haue hi before their eyes. Agayne, as for þ vngodly, it shal not be well w̄ him, nether shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngod-ly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous. Thys haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therefore I commend glad-nesse, because a mā hath no better thing v̄- der the Sunne, then to eate and dryncke, & to be merry: for þ shal he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the sunne. And so I applyed my mynde to learne wylldome, & to knowe the trauayle that is i the worlde (and þ of such a fastyon, þ I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye ner nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possible for a mā, to attayne vnto the workes þ are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: yee though a wylle man wolde vntertake to knowe them, pet shal he not fynde them.

The ix. Chapter.

A mā wotteth not, by þ wylldomes of þys a wne wylle, whether he be wylldome of loue or hate. A mā ought to lye meryly with his wylle, & praye of wylldome

E all these thinges purposed, I haue my mynde to seke out. The ryghteous and wylle, yee and they: ser-uautes also, are in þ hāde of God:
and * there is no man þ knoweth ether loue or hate, but all thynges are before the.
It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with þ ryghteous as with þ the vngodly: * with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with hym that offereth as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with þ vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the persured, so happeneth it also vnto him that is afeayed to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, thys is a misery þ it happeneth vnto all a lyke.
This is the cause also that the hertes of mē are full of wyckednesse, & madd foolishnesse is in their hertes as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

And why? As lōge as a mā lyueth, he hath a hope: for a quyk dogg (saye they) is better then a deed liō: for they þ be lyuig, knowe þ they shal dye: but they þ be deed: knowe nothing, nether deserue they eny more. For their memorial is forgotte, so that they be nether loued, hated ner enuyed: nether haue they eny more parte in the worlde, I all that is done vnder þ Sunne. So thou thy wape then, eate thy bred with ioye, and dryncke thy wyne with a glad hart, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be allwaye whyte, & * let thy head lack none oymnt.
* Alse thy self to liue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, þ God geueth tye v̄- der the Sunne, all the dayes of thy vanite: for that is thy porcion in this lyfe, of al thy laboure and trauayle that thou takest vnder the Sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that þ goest vnto, there is nether worke, counsell, knowledge ner wyl-ldome.

So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder the Sunne, & I sawe, that in ruinynge, it helpeth not to be wytt: in batayle, it hel-peth not to be strōge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wylle, to riches, it helpeth not to be suttell: to be had i fauoure, it helpeth not to be cōpyng: but that all lyeth in tyme & for-gane. For * a man knoweth not þys tyme, but lyke as the fysh are takē with the angle, and as the byrdes are catched with the snare: Euen so are men takē in the perious tyme, when it cometh sodenly vpon them.

Thys wylldome haue I seene also vnder the Sunne, & me thought, it a greate thig.
There was a lytle cite, & a fewe mē with it: so there came a greate kynge and beseged it, and made greate bulwarkes agaynst it.
And

And in p^ritie there was folide a poore mā, (but he was wyse) which with hys wyf-dome deliuered the cite: yet was there no body that had eny respect vnto such a simple-man. Then sayde I: wyfdom is better the strength. Neuertheles, a simple mans wyf-dome is despised, & hys wordes are not hered. A wyse mans counsell that is folowed in p^ritence, is fatte above the crenelle of a captaine amonge fooles. * For wyfdom is better the hardnesse: but one vnto hyt alone detropeth much good.

The .c. Chapter.

The difference betwixt a foole and a wyse man.
Fortunate and happye is that realme which hath a wyse prince.

A Deed hye doth corrupt swete opyment & maketh it to stynk: Euen so oft tymes he that is made for wyfdom & honour, is abhorred because of a lytle foolishnes. * A wyse mā's herte is vpoⁿ p^ryghe hāde, but a fooles herte vpoⁿ p^r left. A foole will shewe himself whē he goeth by p^r way, yet thiketh he p^r every mā doth as foolysly as hi selfe. If a p^rncipal sp^rete be geueⁿ p^r to beare rule, * he not negligēt thē in thine office: for he p^r can take cure of him selfe, auoydeth great offences. Another plage is there, which I haue se-ne vnder the sonne: namely, p^r ignoraunce p^r is comenly amonge p^rncipes: in that a foole sytteth in greate dignite, & the ryche are sett downe beneth: I haue seue seruauntes ryde vpon horses, and p^rncipes goyng vpon their fete as it were seruauntes. * But he p^r dyggeth vpoⁿ a p^ryt, & all fall therein him selfe: and who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shall bite hym. Who so remoueth stones, shall haue trauaple withall: & he p^r he weth wood, shall be hurt therewith.

When an y^ro is blont, and the popnt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, and p^r to myght: Eue so both wyfdom folowe diligence. A habler of hys tōge is no better, thē a serpent that styngeth wythout hyspyng.
The wordes out of a wyse mā's mouth are gracious, but the lypyes of a foole wyll de-trope him selfe. The beginnyng of his tal-kyng is foolysnes, & the last worde of his mouth is starke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, & a man cannot tell what shall come to passe: who wyll then warne him of it that shall folow after him? The labour of the folysh is greuous vnto thē, whyle they knowe not howe to go into the cite.

Who be vnto the (O thou lande) whose kyng is but a child, and whose p^rncipes are early at their banquettes: But well is the (O thou lande) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose p^rncipes eate in due season, for necessyte & not for lust. Thozow flourishnelle the balches fall downe, & thozow vnde-hādes it tyngeth in at the house. Meate ma-keth men to laugh, and wyne maketh the mery: but vnto money are all thinges obedient. With p^r apyng no euell in thy thought & speake no hurte of the ryche in thy p^reu-chable: for a vyrd of the wyse shall betraye thy voyce, and with hit fetters shall he bewraye thy wordes.

The .xl. Chapter.

Wysheke ought to be distribute vnto the peaple.

If thy hyde vpon waste faces, & so shalt thou fynde after many dayes. Geue parte. vii. dayes, and all vpoⁿ the eyght, for p^r knowest not what misery shall come vpoⁿ earth. Wi-hen p^r cloudes are full, they p^rvyze out rayne vpon the earth. And when the tre falleth (whether it be toward p^r South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth.
He that regardeth the wyde, shall not Lowe and he that hath respecte vnto the cloudes, shall not reape. Now lyke as p^r knowest not the waye of p^r sp^rite howe he entred into p^r body beinge yet in a mothers wombe: Eue so p^r knowest not the workes of God, whych is the workemaster of all.

Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to Lowe thy fete, whether it be in the moninge or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prospere, and yf they both take, it is p^r better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaunt thyng is it for the eyes to loke vpon the Sūne. If a man lyue many yeres, and be glad in thē all, let him remembre the dayes of darkenesse, whych shall be many: and that foloweth, all thynges shall be but vanyte. Be glad then (O thou yong mā) in thy youth, and let thyne hert be mery in thy yong dayes, folowe p^r wayes of thyne awne herte, & the lust of thine eyes but be thou sure, that God shall bypnyge the into iudgement for all these thynges.

The .xli. Chapter.

From oure mouth ought we to confesse, and re-garde the goodnes of God.

or the cloudes turne agayne after p^r rayne, when the keepers of p^r house shall tremble, & when p^r stronge mē shall bowe them selues:
when p^r myllers stide styll, because they be lettes of Salomon: called in Latyn,

The fyrst Chapter.

loue, betwene Christ the spouse, and the church or congregacion hys spouse.

That he wold kysse me with the kysses of his mouth: for thy loue is more pleasaunt then wyne, & that, because of p^r good & pleasaunt sauoure of thy most p^recious balme.

Thy name is as swete smel-lynge opyntment when it is shed forth, therfore do the maydes loue the: drawe thou me vnto p^r: we wyll runne after the. The kyng hath brought me into hys p^reuⁿchambres.
We wyll be glad & reioyce in the, we & synke more of thy loue then of wyne. They that be ryghteous loue p^r. I am black (O ye daughters of Ierusalem) lyke as * the tētes of p^r Ce-darenes, & * as the hangynges of Salomon: *
but yet am I sayre & well fauoured withall.
Aruell not at me p^r I am so black: for why? the sunne hath shyned vpoⁿ me. My mothers chylde had euell wyll at me, they made me p^r keeper of the vyneyardes: but myne owne vyneparde haue I not kept. Tell me of him whō my soule loueth where thou feedest the shepe, where thou makest the rest at p^r noone daye: for why shall I be lyke him, that goeth wzonge aboute p^r flockes of thy cōpanyons?
If thou knowe not thy selfe (O thou sayrest amonge weimē) then go thy waye forth after p^r fotesteppes of the shepe, and fede thy goates besyde the shepherdes tentes. Vnto * the hoost of Pharao's charrettes haue I compared the, O my loue. Thy chekes and thy neck, is beawtyfull as p^r currys, and hanged with spanges and goodly Jewels: a neck bāde of golde wyll we make the with syluer buttōs.
When the kyng sytteth at the table, he shall smell my hardus: a bondell of Myrr is my loue vnto me: he wyll lye betwixt my brestes. A cluster of Camphore in the vyneardes of Engaddi is my loue vnto me.
* Howe sayre art thou (my loue) O howe we sayre art thou: thou hast doues eyes.
O howe sayre art thou (my beloued) howe well fauoured art p^r: Oure bed is deckt with floures, the syllynges of oure house are of Cedre tree, and oure crosse soyntes of Cypresse.

The .ii. Chapter.

I Am the lylic of the felde, and rose of the valleyes: as the rose amonge the thornes, so is my loue amonge the daughters. Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wodd, so is my beloued amonge the scēns. My delect is to syt vnder hys shādow.

ware hymme, when the dozes in the stretes shal be shut, and when the voyce of the myller shall be layed downe: when men shall rype vnto the voyce of the byrde, and when all p^r daughters of myspke shall be brought lowe: when men shall feare in hys places, and be afraid in the stretes: when the Almonde tree shall flozthe and be laden with the greshopper, and when all lust shall passe (because man goeth to his longe home, and the mour-ners go aboute the stretes.) O zener the spl-uer lace be taken awaye, and or the golden well be broken. O z the pot be broken at the well, and the whele vpon the cysterne: Then shall the dust be turned agayne vnto earth from whence it came, and the sp^rete shall returne vnto God, which gauest. * All is but vanyte (sayth the Preacher) all is but playne vanyte. The Preacher was yet more wyse, and taught the people knowledge: he gaue good hede, sought out the croude, and set forth many parables. Hys diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, and the wordes of trouth. For * the wordes of p^r wyse are lyke pyches and nay-les that goothozow, wherewith p^r stiffe gathered is holden vpoⁿ: for they are geuen of one sheperde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) of that doctrine that is besyde thy: for to make many bookes it is an endles worke:
and to loude cryng we cryeth the bodye.

Let vs heare the conclusyon of all thyn-ges: feare God, and kepe hys commaunde-mentes: For that toucheth all men.

For God shall iudge all wor-kes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or euell.

The iii. Chapter.

By nyght I my berd I sought, who my soule loueth: ye diligently sought I him, but I founde him not. I will get vp (thought I) and go aboute the cytie, in the wayes in all the stretes will I seke him whom my soule loueth: but when I sought hym, I founde hym not. The watchmen also that go aboute the cytie, founde me. Sawe ye not him whom my soule lo-ueth? So when I was a litle past the, I found him who my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon hym, and will not let him go vntill I bringe hym into my mothers house, and into her chambere that bare me.
* I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the Roses and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vnto my loue her touche her, tyll she be content her selfe. Who is this, that cometh vp out of the wylderne like vapours of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrr, frankincense, and all maner spyes of the Apotecary? Beholde, aboute Salo-mons bedde she stande, & valeant men of the most myghtie in Israel. They holde swordes euer, one, and are expert in warre.

Euery man also hath by a swerde vpon his thigh, because of feare in the nyght. Myrr Salomon had made him selfe a palace of the wod of Libanus, the pillars are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the grounde is pleasantly paved with lye for the daughters of Jerusalem. So forth (O ye daughters of Syon) and beholde Myrr Salomon in the crowne: wher with his mother crowned him in the daye of hys mariage, and in p daye of the gladnesse of his bert.

The iiii. Chapter.

How saye art thou, my loue, howe saye art thou, p hast doulles eyes, beside that which lyeth vpon within. * Thy doulles eyes are lyke well of a flocke of goates p he wo-ne vpon mount Silead: Thy teth are lyke the pe of the same bignesse, which went vp from the washinge place: wher euery one beareth two twyns, and not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy lippes are lyke a rose coloured ry-bonde, thy roodes are lowly, thy chekes are lyke a peece of a pomegranat within thyne bea-res. Thy neck is lyke p tower of Dauid builded with costly stones lyng out on the sides wher vpon there hang a thousande spydes, yee all the weapens of the geauntes. * Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of ponge roes, which fede amonge roses. O that I myght go to the moztayne of Myrr, & to p hyll of frankincense: tyll I haue breake & tyll p shadowes be past awaye. Thou art all saye, O my loue, & no spott is there in the.
Come to me fro Libanus (O my spouse) come to me fro Libanus loke from the toppe of Amana, from the toppe of Sanir & Hermo, fro the lyes denues and from p mountaynes of p leoparbes. Thou hast with loue bewitched my bert. O my syster, my spouse, p hast bewitched my bert, with one of thyne eyes, and w one cheyne of thy neck. O howe saye are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse? Thy brestes are moze pleasaunt then wyne, and p smel of thyne oymntes pasterhall spyes.
Thy lippes, O my spouse, droppe as p hony cobe, yee my lye and hony is vnder thy tong, and the smel of thy garnetes is lyke p smel of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse, a garden well locked, and a sealed well. The frutes p are planted in the,
are lyke a very Paradyse of pomegranates with swete frutes: as Camphore, Cardus, and Saffro, Calamus, & Spynom with all swete smelling trees: Myrr, Aloes and all the best spyes: a well of gardes, a well of lyuinge waters, which refreth wone fro Li-banus. O thou noyssh wynde, come thou south wynde, and blowe vpon my garden, p the smel thereof may be carryd on euery lye: yee p my beloued maye come into hys garde, and eate

of p swete frutes that growe therein.

The v. Chapter.

In come into my garden, O my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrr with my Myrr. I haue eaten hony with my hony cobe, I haue drake my wyne with my mylke. Eate, O ye fr-des, dyncke and be mery, O ye beloued.
As I am allepe, and my bert is waking I heare voyce of my beloued, wher he knocketh. Open to me, O my sister, my loue, my doue, my derlyng: for my beade is full of dewe, & the lockes of my beare are full of the nyght dropes. I haue put of my rode, howe I do it on agayne: I haue washed my fete, howe shall I fyle the agaynes?
My loue put in his hand at the hole, and my bert was moued within me. I stode vp to ope vnto my beloued, & my hades dropped with Myrr, & the Myrr ranne done my fyngers vpon p locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his waye. Now when he spake, my bert was gone: I sought hym, but I could not fynde hym: I cryed vpon hym, neuer thelesse, he gaue me no answer. So p watchmen p wente about the cytie, founde me, smote me, & wounded me: yee, they p kepte p wal-les, toke awaye my hercheate fro me.
I charge you therefore, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, p ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell hym, howe that I am syck for loue.
What maner of man is thy loue aboue other louers? O p sayest amonge women?
O what can thy loue do, moze then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitly?
As for my loue, he is white and rebde coloured, a goodlye persone amonge ten thousande: his heade is as the most fyne golde, the lockes of hys beare are vylshed, and black as a crowe. His eyes are as p eyes of doves by the water brokes, as though they were washed with mylke, & are sett ly-ke perles in golde. Hys chekes are lyke a garde bedd, where in the Apotecaries plate all maner of swete thynges: hys lippes are lyke roses that droppe swete smelling Myrr. His handes are lyke gold rynges haunge enclosed p pprecious stone of Charlis. His body is as the pure puerp, decte ouer with Sapphires: his legges are as the pylers of Harbell, set vpon sokettes of golde. His face is as Libanus, and as p beuty of the Cedre trees. The wordes of his mouthe are swete, yee, he is altogether lowly. Soche one is my loue. O ye daughters of Jerusalem, soch one is my loue.

The vi. Chapter.

Wither is thy loue gde then (O thou sayest amonge women) whether is thy loue departed? we will seke hi with the. My loue is gone downe into hys garden, vnto the swete smelling bed-des, that he may refresh hym selfe in the garden, and gather roses. My loue is myne & I am his, which sedeth amonge the roses.

Thou art beutyfull, O my loue, as is the place of Thirza, thou art saye as Jerusalem, fearfull as an armye of men, w they banners. Turne awaye thyne eyes fro me, for they haue set me on fyre. * Thy beartye lockes are lyke a flocke of goates thorne vpon the mount of Silead. Thy teth are lyke a flock of thorne shepe, which go out of p washing place: wher euery one beareth twyns, & not one vnfrutefull among them. Thy chekes are lyke a peece of a po-granate, with in thy volupers. There are * 12. Quenes, 12. wyues, and dame selles without noblye. One is my doue, one is my derlyng. She is the onely beloued of her mother, & deare vnto her p bare her. W he p daughters sawe her, they sayde, she was blessed. Yee the Quenes and wyues praysed her. What is the this, p loketh forth as the moztayne: saye as the moone, clea-re as the sunne, and fearful as an armye of men w their baners. I wente downe to p nutt garde, to se what grewe by p brokes, & to loke p the vyne paroe flourished, or p pomegranates were shot forth. I knewe not p my soule had made me p charyote of the people that be vnder tribute. Turne agayne, turne agayne. O thou perfecte one turne ageyne, turne agayne, & we will loke vpon the. What wil ye se in the Sulamyte? She is lyke men of warre syngynge in a compagne.

The seuenth Chapter.

How pleasaunt are thy readyngges with the shoes, thou princes daughter? Thy thighes are lyke a saye iewel, which is wrought by a connyng wozyke master.
Thy nauell is lyke a roud goblet, which is neuer without dyncke. Thy wobe is lyke a hepe of wheat that is sett aboute w roses.
* Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of ponge roes. Thy neck is as it were a tower of puerp: thine eyes also are lyke the water poles p are in Hesebo, beyde p porte of Bathabbim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Li-banus, which loketh toward Damascus.
That head p standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel & the beare of thy beade is lyke purple and lyke a kyng goynge forth w his garde aboute hym. O how saye & lowly art p my derlyng, i pleasures? Thy stature is lyke a Palme tree & thy brestes lyke the grapes. I sayde I will clyme vp to p Palme tree, & take holde of his nye braiches.
Thy brestes also thalbe as p vyne clustres p smel of thy nostrels lyke is the smel of p apples

apples, and thy laves lyke the beste wyne. Whiche goeth straye vnto my beloued and brusteth forth by sylppes of the Xuyent eldres. There wyl I turne me vnto my loue & he shall turne hym vnto me. Come on my loue, we will go forth into the felde, & take oure lodgyng in the villages. In the mornyng we will go se þ vnyeparde: we will se þ the vyne be spryde forth, þ the grapes be growne, and þ the þggrates be shot out. There wyl I geue þ my brestes: þ Wandjagoras geue theþ sweate smell: and besyde oure doores are all manner of pleasaunt frutes: both newe, & olde: whych I haue kepte for the, o my beloued.

The viii. Chapter.

That I myght fynde the wythout, and kysse the, whom I loue as my brother whych suckte my mothers brestes: and that thou shalt not be despised I will leade the, and byng the in to my mothers house: that thou myghtest teach me, & that I myght geue the drynke of cyced wyne, & of the swete sappe of my pograntes. * His left hande shall be vnder my head & his ryght hande shall embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, þ ye wake not vpon my loue, ner touch her, tyll she be content her selfe. What is the this, that cometh vpon the wildernes, and leaneth vpon her loue? I waked the vpon amonge the apple trees, where thy mother concyued the, where thy mother (I saye) brought the into the worlde. O set me as a scale vpon thine herte, and as a scale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghtie as the death, & gelousy as the hel. Her coales are of fyre, & a very flame of the Lorde: so þ many waters are not able to quench loue, neher mape the streames drowne it. Yee, þ a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shuld counte it noþyng. Our lyster is but ponge, & hath no brestes: what shall we do for our lyster, when she shall be spoken for? If she be a wall, we shall buylde a syluer holwercke ther vpon: if she be an open doore, we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght. Salomon hath a vnyeparde at Baal hamon, & this vnyeparde deliuered he vnto the hepers: þ euey one for the frute therof shulde geue hym a thousande peces of syluer. My vnyepard is in my sight: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the hepers two hundred wigh the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyons maye hearken to the same. O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a roo or a pong hert vpon the swete smellynge mountaynes.

The ende of the Ballet of Ballettes of Salomon: called in Latin: Canticiu Canticozu.

The booke of the prophete Esay

The first Chapter.

Esay propheseth that the angell of God shall doe the vpon Ierusalem because of thers synnes.

The vision of Esay þ sonne of Amos which he sawe vpon Iuda and Ierusalem in the dayes of Azia and Iotha, Ahaz & Iehesiah kynges of Iuda. Heare, O heauen, & hearken O earth: for the Lorde hath spoken: I haue nourished & promoted chyldren, but they haue done wyckedly agaynst me. The ore hath knowne his owner & þ alle his masters cribb: but Irael hath receaued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for thys synfull nacton, a people of great iniquitie: a seed of vngacions people corruptinge ther wayes. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Irael vnto anger, and are gone backward. Wherby shulde þe be plagued any more: for þe are euer fallige awaye. The whole head is syck, & þ hert is heuy. fro the sole of the fote vnto þ head, there is no whole parte in all your body: but all are wouddes, botches, sores, & stryppes, whych caner be helped, bounde vpon, molified, ner eased w any opment. Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are bzent vpon, your enemyes deuoure youre lade, & ye must be sayne to stade, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate, as they were subuerted þ were alienate fro þ Lorde. Moreover, the daughter of Syon ys left alone lyke a cote in a vineyard, lyke a lodge in a garde of cucumbers, lyke a wasted cytie. And excepte þ Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe alyue: we shuld haue bene as Sodoma, and lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare þ worde of the lorde ye Lordes of Sodoma: & heke vnto þ lawe of our God, þ people of Gomorra. Why offere þe so many sacrifices vnto me saith Lorde: I am full of þ bzentoffrynges of wethers, & of þ fatnesse of fedbeastes. I haue no pleasure in þ bloud of bullakes, laves and goates. When þe come to appeare before me, who requireth this of you to treade within my porches? Therefore offere me no mo oblacids, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thinge vnto me. I haue not awaye with youre newe moones, your Sabbathes & gatherige together at þ solēne dayes. I hate your newe mone dayes & solēne feastes, eue from þ very hert. I can not awaye w suche vanitie & holdinge in of the people. They lye vpon me as a burthen, and I am wey of beryng the. When þe holde out your handes, I will turne myne eyes from you. And though þe make many prayers, yet wil I heare noþyng at all, leyng your handes afeul of bloude. Wash you therfore, and make you cleane, put awaye your euell entetes out of my syght, cease from doyng of euell. Lerne to do ryght, applye your selues to equite, deliuer þ oppressed, helpe þ fatherles to his ryght, let the widowes cōplainte come before you. Come I praye þe (sayeth þ Lorde) let vs reald oure matter together. Though youre synnes be as read as scarlet, they shalbe as white as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whit as wolfe. If þe be lounyng & obediēt, þe shal enioye þ best thyng þ groweth i þ lād. But if þe be obstinate & rebellious, þe shalbe deuoured w þ swerde: for thus þ Lorde hath promised w his awne mouth. How happeneth it then þ þ ryghteous cytie (which was full of equite) is become vnfaythfull as an whore/ryghtuousnes dwelt i it, but now murderers. Thy syluer is turned to drosse, & thy wyne myrte with water. Thy prices are wicked & companyons of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewarde. As for þ fatherles, they helpe þi not to his ryght, neher wyl they lett the widowes causes come before the. Therefore, sayeth þ Lorde God of hostes, þ myghty gouernour of Irael, Oute vpon þe, I will ease me of myne enemyes, & I will auenge me of myne aduersaryes, I shall lave my had vpon þ, & burne out thy drosse fro þ synnest & purcell, & put out all thy synne, & set thy iudges agayne as they were som tyme & thy Senatours as they were fro þ begynnyng. Then shalt þ be called þ ryghteous cytie, þ faythfull cytie. So shalbe redeemed w equite, & they shal turne agayne vnto her ryghteousnesse. For þ trasgressours & vngodly, and for þ as are be come vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, must altogether be vtterly destroyed. For they shall be ashamed of the goddes þ you longed for. And þe shall be put to shame for þ Idols groue gardes þe haue chosen: þe shalbe as a tree whose leaues are fallen awaye, & as a garden þ hath no moystnesse. And as for the glozy of your graued Images, it shalbe turned to dyre strawe, and he þ made them to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The second Chapter.

Of the comynge and deeth of Christ, and of the callenge of the Beachen.

Esay is the worde þ was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amos, vpon Iuda & Ierusalem. It wilbe also in the last dayes þ þ wyl where þ house of þ Lorde is bulded, shal be þ cheste amonge wylls, and exalted aboue all lytle wylls. And all nacyns shal pzeace vnto hym, and the multytude of people shal go speakyng thus one to another: vp, * let vs go to the house of the Lord, & to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and p we maye walcke in his pathes. For the lawe shal come out of Sion, and the word of the Lorde from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall reforme the multitude of people: They shall breake theyr swerdes also i to mattocks, and theyr speares to make fythes. And one people shall not lyfe vp weapen agaynst another, neither shal they learne to fyght from this forth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walcke i the lyght of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde the east cōtreys i Soiercyes (who they haue as i Philistines had) and in straunge chyldren they thinke them selues to haue ynough. Theyr land is full of siluer and gold, neither is there any ende of theyr treasure: Theyr land is also full of horses, & no fde is there of theyr charrets. Theyr lande is also full of bayne goddesses, and before the worke of theyr awne handes haue they bowed the selues, yee, euē before the thinge that theyr awne fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before the, but the (O Lorde) wilt not leaue them unpunished.

And therfore get the in to some rock, and hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his magesty: Which casteth downe the high lookes of presumptuous persones, and bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde only shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shall go ouer al pryde and presumption, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall bypunge the all downe: vpon all the hygh and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, & vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all the hygh hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all hyppes of Charlis, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke vpon. And it shall bypunge downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumption full lowe, and the Lorde shall only haue the vitory in that daye. But the Idols shall utterly be rote out. When shall crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his magesty: what tyme as he shall arple vp to condemne the earth. Then shall man cast awaye his goddesses of syluer, and his goddesses of gold (which he neuertheles had made to honour them) vnto Holles & Backes: And they shall crepe in to the caues and rockes, & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his magesty, when he shall to condemne the earth. Feare not ye then any man, whose byeth is in hyss nostrils. For what is he of reputacion?

The thyrde Chapter.

The prophecies that at the coming of Christ all strength and power shall be put forth of Iherusalem.

In the Lorde God of hostes both take awaye from Ierusalem and Iuda, all possessions & power al weat and bypunge, the captayne and the souldyar, the iudge and prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of fysle peare olde, and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstandinge: the master of craftes and oratours. And I shall geue the chyldren to be theyr princes, & babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shall be pyllled and polled, and one shall euer be doyng violence and wronge to another. The bope shall presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Yee, one shall take a frende of his awne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs fro this fall & perrell. Then shall he sweare & saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreover, there is neither meate ner clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Ierusalem is ouerthrowne & Iuda must fall to the ground, because that both theyr wordes & counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his magesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance betwixt them, yee, they declare theyr awne synnes, the selues, as the Sodomitites, & hyde the not. Who be vnto theyr soules for they haue retourned euill vnto the selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shall enioye the frutes of theyr studies. But who be to the vngodly and vnyghteous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are extorcioners of my people, and women haue rule of them.

O my people, those that call the blessed decaue the, and depraue the waye of thy foteystepes. The Lorde is rysen vp to comen of the matter, and stādeth vp (I saye) to geue iudgement of the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vineyard, the extorcion done to the poore is i your houses. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, & marre the faces of the poore? sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. Moreover, they sayth the Lorde: Seing the daughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in stretched out neckes and with bayne wanton eyes: seynge they come i tryppynge so nyce with theyr fete: Therfore shall the Lorde shane the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shal discover theyr theyr shame. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgeousnes of theyr apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partelettes, and colarres, bracelettes and boones, & goodly floured, wyde and bordered rayment, brooches, and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vales, kercheffes and pinnes, glasses and cypresses, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell, there shall be stynck amonge the. And for theyr gyddles there shall be losse of bades. And for well sett heare there shall be baldnesse. In steade of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for theyr bewty witherdesse, and sonne burnynge. Pourer housbandes and myghtie men shall perishe with the swerde in batayle.

At that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall sytt as desolate folck vpon the earth.

The fourth Chapter.

For want of men, fewen women desyre to haue one man.

Then shall seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we will laye all our meate and clothynge together in comen, only that we may be called thy wyues, & that theyr shamefull reproche maye be taken: fro vs. After that tyme shall the braunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull and myghty, and the frute of the earth shall be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelytes that shall lyue therof. Then shall the remnaunt in Sion & the remnaunt at Ierusalem be called holy: Namely all such as are wytted among the lyuynge at Ierusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall wash awaye the fylthyness of the daughters of Sion, and pource the bloude out from Ierusalem with the wynde of his iudgemente and with fyre. Moreover, vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Sion and vpon theyr whole congregacion, shall the Lorde proude a cloude and smoke by daye, & the bypunge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr glory shall be prelerued. And Ierusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye tyme a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wetter & rayne.

The v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyard, with an exhortacion of courtousnes and dyuocenes.

Now will I syng my beloued frende a songe of my frendes, because of his vineyard. My beloued frende hath a vineyard in a very frutefull plenteous grounde.

This he hedged, theyr he walled rounde aboute, and plated it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therein. And afterwarde when he looked that it shulde bypunge his grapes, it brought forth thornes. Now therfore (O ye Cyprians of Ierusalem and whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you betwixt me, and my vineyard. What more could haue bene done for it that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geue thornes, wherfore I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, now I shall tell you how I will do with my vineyard: I will take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be trode vnder fote. I will laye it waste, that it shall neither be digged nor cut, but beare thornes and briers. I will also forbyd the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vineyard of the Lorde of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda his sayre planting. Of these he looked for equite, but se there is wrong: for ryghteousnesse, lo, it is but mysery.

Who vnto the that soyne one house to another, & bying one lande so nygh vnto another, that the poore can get no more ground, & the poore maye dwel vpon the earth alone. These thynges are i the ears of the Lorde of hostes: shall not many greater & more gorgeous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in the? And ten akers of vynges shall geue but a Quarte, and xxx. buibels of seide shall geue but any? Epha.

Who be vnto them, that ryse vp early to folowe dyuocenes, and to them that continue so, vntill nyght, & tye they be sett on fyre with wyne. In those copanys are harpes and lutes, tabzettes & pipes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and cōsyde not the operacion of his hādes. Therfore cometh my folk also in to captiuite, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glory is famished with hunger, and theyr pryde is marred for theyr ste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that theyr pryde, boastynge and welth, with such as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the hygh lode of the proude shall be layde downe. But the Lorde of hostes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is praysed in ryghteousnes: Then shall the shepe eate in ordre, and the ryche mens landes that were layde waste, shall straungers deuoure. Who be vnto the, that drawe wyckednes vnto them with coardes of vanite and synne, as it were with a cart rope.

Which vnto to speake on this maner: let hym make haste now, & go forth with his wycke, that we maye se it. Lett the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Who be vnto them the call euell good, and good euell, which make darchnesse lyght, & lyght darchnesse, that make lowe swete, & swete lowe. Who be vnto them that are wylle in theyr awne lyght, and thynke the felices to haue vnderstandynge. Who be vnto them, that are strong to suppe out wyne and experte men to sett by dyonchenesse. These geue senten with the vngodly for rewardes, but comdeigne the iust cause of the ryghteous.

Therefore, lyke as fyre lycketh by the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shall be as corruption: and theyr blossom shall vanysh awaye lyke dust: for they haue cast awaye the lawe of the Lord of hostes, & blasphemied the word of the holy maker of Israel.

Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst hys people, and he shaketh his hande at them: pee, he hath myten, so that the hylls dyd treble. And theyr carcasses dyd lye in the open streates, lyke myre. And in all thys, the wrath of God hath not recalled, but hys hande is stretched out styl. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto the in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastily with speede. There shall not be one faynt nor feeble amonge the, no not a sleggy nor sleper person. There shall not one of the put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor lowse theyr lache of his shoe. Hys arrowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke flynt, & his cartwheles lyke a storme wynde. His crepe is as it were of a lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, & hantch by the praye, & no man shall recoure it or get it from the. In that daye they shall be so ferece vpon them, as the see. And yf we looke vnto the lade, beholde, it shall be all darchnesse & sorowe. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it shall be darcke.

The vi. Chapter.

Esay sawe the glory of the Lord, and was sent to prophesie the desolacion of Ierusalem.

In the same yere that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord sittynge vpon an hygh and glorious seate, & his trayne fylled the temple. And aboute hit stode the Seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe wyges. With twayne eche couered his face, with twayne hys fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one to ather on thys maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glory. Pee, & geastes and dozechekes moned at his cryng, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde, Who is me for I am lost in almost as I am a man of vncleane lippes, & dwell amonge people that haue vncleane lippes also: for myne eyes haue sene the kynge and Lord of hostes.

Then flew one of the Seraphims vnto me, haupnge a hote cole in his hande, which he had taken from the auter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, & thy synne vncleane is taken awaye, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I herd the voyce of the Lord saye on this maner: Whom shall I send, and who shall be oure messenger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde, go, and tell this people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnely se, and not perceaue. Harden the harte of this people, stoppe theyr eares, & shut theyr eyes, that they se not with theyr eyes, heare not with theyr eares, and vnderstand not with theyr hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lord, how longe he answered: vntill the cyties be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lord shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lade shall lye waste a longe season, yet in yt shall succede x. kinges, and the lande shall retorne and be layde waste. And as the terebint tre and oke in winter cast ther leaues, and yet haue ther saype in them so shall the holy seed conuerne in theyr substance.

The vii. Chapter.

The Syrians moue batayle agaynst Ierusalem. A byrgyn shall beare a chyld.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Iotham, which was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: & Rezin the kynge of Syria, and Berchah sonne of Romeliah, kynge of Israel: went vnto Ierusalem to beseege it, but Rezin was not able to winne ye. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde worde therof, Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (pee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jashub) at the head of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, & saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe & be styl, but feare not, nether be faynt harted, for these two taples: y is: for these two smokynge fyre brazens, the wrath and furiosyness of Rezin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspyred agaynst the sayng: We will goo vnto agaynst Iuda, bere them, and bypunge them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus.

For thus sayeth the Lord God therto, It shall not so goo forth, nether come so to passe: for the head cytie of Syria is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue & threscore yere, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the cheefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. If ye beleue not: it cometh of thys: that ye are vnfaythfull to God. Moreover, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz, sayinge, requyre a token of the Lord thy God, whether it be toward the depth beneth, or toward the heygth aboue. Then sayd Ahaz: I will requyre none, nether will I tempte the Lord. The Lord answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore the Lord shall geue you a token: Behold, a byrgyn shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (ye hys mother) shall call his name Emanuel. But ter ad hony shall he eate, & he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For oz euer the chyld come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou so abhorrest) shall be desolate of both her kynges. The Lord also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed fro Iuda) thozowe the kynge of the Assyrians. For at the same tyme shall the Lord whysle for the flies that are aboute the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in the Assyrians lade. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the desolate valeys, in the holes of stones, vpon all thornes and bushy places.

At the same tyme shall the Lord make due the heare of the head and the fete and the beerd cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall hyper beynde the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a howe, and two shepe. Then, because of the aboundance of mylke, he shall make butter & eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lade, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, & were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shall be turned to briers & thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande w arrowes & bowes, so shall all the lande be come briers and thornes. And as for al hylls that are hewe downe, ther shall not come vpon the anye feare of briers & thornes. But ye catell shall be dryuen thither, and the shepe shall fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

The despyraunce of the lande by Emanuel. A. done of offence, at whiche many shall stumbe.

Moreover, the Lord sayd vnto me: Take a greate leaf, & write in it, as men do w a penne, make hastye speede to robbe, & haste to the people. And I called vnto me saythfull witness to recorde. Uryah the prest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wet I vnto the Prophetisse, & had conceaued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lord to me: geue him this name: a speedy robber: an hastie spoiler. For why, oz ouer the chyld shall haue knowledge to crye father, & mother: shall the ryches of Damascus & the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoiler, before the kynge of the Assyrians.

The Lord spake also vnto me, sayinge: For so moch as thys people refuseth the still rennyng water of Sylo, and put theyr delpte in Rezin & Romelies sonne: Behold, the Lord shall bypunge myghtie & greate floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kynge of the Assyrians with all his power: which shall clyme vpon vnto all his floudes, and renne ouer all theyr banckes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowinge & increasynge in power, tyll he gett hit by the neck. He shall fylle also the widenesse of the lande with hys brode wynges, Emanuel. Breake downe (o peple of Assur) and ye shall be, broke downe: herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muster you, and you shall be broken downe, prepare you to batell and you shall be toyme in peeces: take your counsell together, yet must your counsell come to naught: go in hande withall, yet shall it not proce: for God is with vs. For the Lord spake thus to me in the powre of his hande, & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people.

He sayde moreover: rounde with none of the, whosoeuer saye: ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, nether be a frayd of them, but sanctifie the Lord of hostes, lett hym be your feare and dyde. For he shall be the holy place to flye to, and stone to stumbe at: the rock to fall vpon: a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem.

And many shall stumbe, fall, and be broke vpon hym: pee, they shall be snared & taken. Now laye the witness together & seale the lawe w my disciples. Thus wil I wayte vpon the Lord that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I will loke for him. But lo, as for me, and the children which the Lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at the sothelayers, witches, charmers and conurers, then make them thys answer.

As there

 Luk. xliii.* Is there a people thy where, that asketh not counsel at his God?  Shulde me reme vn-* to the dead for I luynges. If eny mā want lyght, lest hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testimony, whether they speake not after this meanig. If he do not thys, he stoblet and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger he is out of pacience, and blasphemeth his kyng & his God. Then loketh he vpon warde, & downwarde to y earth, & beholde, the re is trouble and darcknesse, veraciō is rounde aboute hym, and the cloude of erroure. And out of such aduersite, shal he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past, it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabulon and the lande of Nephtaly (where thozow y see Waye goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrst in lytle trouble: but afterwarde soze vexed.

The ix. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyue & domynion.

 Isa. xliii.* The people that walke in darcke-nesse haue sene a greace lyght. As for them that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath y lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplyed the people, & not increased theyr toye.  They reioyce before the,* euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten y victorie, whe they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of y peoples burthen: the staff of yps shoulder and the rod of yps opprelloure, as in the dayes of Hadrian.

And trulie every batayll y the warry-ure accomplissheth, is done w confused nople & defpylge ther garmentes w bloude: But this batayle shal be w burnynge & consu-myng of fyre. For vnto vs a chyld is boz-ne, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon yps shoulder doth the kyngdome lye, and he is called w yps awne name: wonderfull. The geuer of coucell, y myghty God, y eueraling father, the pryce of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease y kyngdome & peace, & shal lye vpon the seate of Dauid & in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, & to stablisy it w equyte and ryghteousnesse, from hēce forth for euermore. Thys shal the gelyusy of the Lorde of hostes byynge to passe.

The Lorde sent a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shal knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, y can sape with pryde and hys stomackes, on this maner. The tyle worcke is fallē downe, but we will buyl-de it w squared stones. The Wolbery tymbre is broke, but we shal sett it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, y Lorde shal prepare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so orde theyr aduersaries, that the Sicians shal laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistynes behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouth.

After all thys is not the wrath of y Lorde ceased, but yet yps hande stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastyleth them, nether do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therefore hath y Lorde roted oute of Israel both head and tayle, byaunche and twygge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by the tayle the Prophet that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryght case, soch be disceainers. Soch as men thynke also to be perfecte among these, are but cast awayes.

Therefore shal the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr ydge men, nether fauoure theyr fatherlesse & wyddowes. For they are all together ypprecytes and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake foly. After all thys is not y Lordes wrath ceased, but yet yps hande is stretched oute styll. For vngodlynesse burneth, as a fyre in the byers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wood or a rebe bush, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pyde.

For cause of the wrath of the Lorde of hostes, is the lande full of darcknesse, and the people be consumed, as it were with fy-re, no mā doth spare his brother, but he rob-byth on y ryght hand: & doth famishe, he eateth on the left hande, and he shal not haue ynough. Every man shal eate the flesh of his awne arme. Manasses shal ea-te Ephraim, and Ephraim, Manasses, and they both shal cate Iuda. After all thys is not the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is yps hande stretched oute styll.

The x. Chapter.

The threatneth the opprellours of the poore, and prophete shal sayn & beynaheris.

Whe vnto the y make vnyghteous lawes, & deuyse thinges, which be to harde for to kepe:
wher thozow the poore are oppressed, on every syde, and y in-nocentes of my people robbed of iudgement: that wyddowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye robbe y fatherlesse. What will ye do in tyme of the visticapon, and whan destruction shal come fro farre? To whom wyll ye runne for helpe? and to whō wyll ye geue poure honoure, that he maye kepe it? that when I with drawe my hāde ye come not amonge the presoners, or lye amonge the deed? After all this doth not the wrath of the Lorde cease, but yet is his hande stretched oute styll.

Who be

Who be also vnto Affir, which is a staf of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my vnyghment. I shal sende hym amonge those yppocritish people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dysfaoures shal I send hym: that he may utterly robbe the, spoyle the, and treade them downe lyke the myze in y strete. Howbeit, his meanynge is not so nether thynketh his hert of thys falschyon.
But he ymagineth onely, how he may rote out and destroye moch people, for he sayeth are not my wynges all kynges? Is not Calno as easie to wyne, as Charcha-mis? Is it harder to conquire Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who say: I were able to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goodes: but not Jerusalem & Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Jerusalem & their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ydoles?

Wherefore y Lorde sayeth: Alone as I haue perfourmed my whole worcke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I vyset the noble and stoute hart of the kyng of Assyria, with yps proude lookes.
For he standeth thus in his awne conceate: this do I thozowe y power of myne awne hāde, and thozow my wyldome: For I am wyle, I am he that remoue the lādes of the people: I robbe their treasures: and (lyke one of the worthyes) I dyue them fro their hye scates. My hande hath founde out the strenght of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, y darre be so bolde, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whyssper.

Shall the are boast it selfe, agaynst him that he weth therwith? or doth y sawe make eny braggig agaynst him that ruleth it?
That were eue lyke, as yf the rod dyd exal-te it selfe agaynst him that beareth it: or as though the staff shulde magnifye it selfe, as who saye: it were no wood. Therefore shal y Lorde of hostes send hi amonge his fatlinges leanes, & burne vpon his glory, as it were w a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shal be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shal be the flamme and it shal kyndle, and burne vpon his thones and breezes in one daye, per all the glory of his woddes and felde shal be consumed with body & soule: And they shal be as an hoost of men, whose standerd bearer sayleth. The trees also of yps felde which remayne, shal be of such a nōbre, that a childe maye tell them.

After that daye shal the remnant of Israel, & soch as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke nomore conforzte at him that smote the, but with saythfulnesse & treuth shal they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remnant, euen the wyke-ryte of Jacob, shal conuertere vnto God the myghty one. For though thy people (O Israel) be as y sande of the see, yet shal y remnant of them conuertere in hym. Perferte is the iudgement of him that floweth in rygh-teousnesse, and therefore the Lorde of hostes shal perfectly fulfyll the thyng, y he hath determined in y myddest of y whole worlde Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: Thou my people, y dwellest in Syon, be not afrayed, for y kyng of the Assyrians:

he shal smyte the with a rodd, & shal wagg his staff at the, as the Egypcians dyd some tyme: But soone after, shal my wrath and myne indignaciō be fulfylled i the destruction of them.

Moreover, the Lorde of hostes shal prepare a scourge for hi, lyke as was y slaughter of Hadria vpon the rock of Oreb. And he shal lyft vp his rodd ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egypcians. Then shal yps burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yock from thy neck, yee, the same yock shal be corrupte for very fatnesse.
He shal come to Aiath, and go thozow toward Mygdon: at Mychmas shal he laye vpon his harnesse, and go ouer the foorde. Sy-don shal be their resting place, Hamath shal be a frayed, Sydon Saul shal lye awaye. The voyce of y noyes of thy hostes (y daughter Gallim) shal be herde vnto Lays & to Anathoth, which also shal be in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare, but y citelins of Sabin are manly, yet shal he remayne at Rob y daye. After that, shal he lyft vp yps hāde agaynst the mount of y daughter Syon, the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of hostes shal take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. he shal hewe downe the proude, & sel the hys mynded. The busshe also of y wood shal he ro-te out with yron, and Lybanus shal haue a myghty fall.

The xi. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyue of Christ and of hys people: of the remnant of Israel, and of the sayth of the heathen or gentyles.

And there shal come a rodd forth of the kyng of Isai, and a blofsome shal flourish out of yps rote.
The sprete of y Lorde shal lyght vpon hym: the sprete of wyldome, and vnderstandynge: y sprete of counsell, & strenght the sprete of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lorde: and shal make hym feruent in the feare of God.

For he shal not geue sentence, after the thyng that shal be brought before his eyes, nether reproue a matter at y fyrst hearing: but w ryghteousnesse shal he iudge y poore, and with

and with holynes that he reforme the simple of the worlde.

We shall smyte the worlde with the rodd of hys mouth, & wth the breath of hys mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Ryghteousnesse shall be the gyde of his loynes, & trueth & faythfulnesse, the gydyng v^o of hys ray-nes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by a goate. Bullockes, & yox & catell shall kepe company together, so a lytle chyld shall rule them. The kowe & the Bere shall fede together, & their yonge ones shall lye together.
The Lyd shall eate strawe lyke the ore, or the kowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh, shall haue a desire to the serpes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put hys hnde into the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euill to another, no mā shall destroye another, in all the byll of my holynes. For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, euē as the see floweth ouer with water.

And in y^e dape that the gentyles enquire after y^e rote of Jesse which shall be set v^o for a token vnto the people, & hys dwellinge shall be glorious. At y^e same tyme that y^e Lord take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnant of his people (which shall be left alyue) From the Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Moziās, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians and frō the Ilandes of the see. And he shall set v^o a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israel, pece the out castes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemies of Iuda shall be cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare no euill will to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lye vpon the shoulders of y^e Philistines toward the west, and spyle the together that dwell toward the East. The Idumites and the Moa-vites shall lett their handes fall, & the Am-monites shall be obedient vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleue the tungenes of the Egyptians see, & with a myghtie wynde shall he lyft v^o hys hnde ouer Nilus, and shall smyte hys Ieuē streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a waye for his people, y^e remaneth from the Assyrians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed out of y^e land of Egypt.

The xii. Chapter.

The songe of the Church for the abapnyng of the viciozite and ouer coming of the worlde.

That then I shall saye: O Lord, I shall thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Behold, God is my saluacion in whom I will trust, and not be afrayde. For the Lord God is my strength, & my songe, he also is become my saluacion. Therefore with loye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Saloure, & then shall ye saye: geue thankes vnto the Lord, call vpon his name, declare his counceils amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng prayes vnto the Lord, for he hath done greates thynges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crye out, and syng thou y^e dwellest in Syon, for great is the holy one of Israel in the myddes of the.

The xiii. Chapter.

The prophete the destruction of Babylon, the capitale, and the coming agayne of the people.

This is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which shall saye the sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyft v^o the banner vpon the hye hyl, call vnto the, holde v^o poure hande that the wyndes maye go in at the dore. I haue sent for my debytes & my gyautes (sayth the Lord) which shall execute wrath, I wyll call for soch, as trumphe in my glory.

There is a nysle of a myltitude in the mountaynes, like as of a great people, a rushyng, as though the kyngdomes of y^e na-cions came together. (And the Lord of hostes, mustreth his armye to bataile.) They come out of a farre countree, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lord hym selfe wth the ministers of his wrath, to destroye y^e whole lande. Yourne ye, for y^e dape of the Lord is at hande, and shall come as a destroyer from the almyghtie. Therefore shall all han-des be letten downe, & all mens hertes shall melt awaye, they shall stnde in feare, care-fulnesse and sorow shall come vpon them, & they shall haue payne, as a woman y^e trauayleth with childe. One shall be abashed of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flamme of fyre.

Beholde, the dape of the Lord shall come, terrible, full of indignaciō, furoure & wrath to make the lande waste, & to roote out the synners therof. For the starres & planetes of heauen shall not geue their lyght, the sun-ne shall be darkened in the ryng, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I wyll punyssh the wyckednesse of the world, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hye stomackes of the prou-de wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boastyng of tyrautes. I will make a man dearer the fyne golde, and a mā to be more worth then a golde wedge of Ophir.
Therefore, I wyll shake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the dape of hys fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted or chased doo, and as a shepe

there y^e no man taketh v^o. Every mā shall turne to hys awne people, and syle eche one into his awne lande. Who so is founde alone, shall be shot thow: And who so gather together, shall be destroyed with the swerde.
Their chyldren shall be slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wyues rauisht. For lo, I shall byng v^o the Me-des agaynst them, which shall not regarde siluer, nor be desirous of gold. With bowes shall they destroye the yong chidren, & haue no ppytie vpon women wyth chylde, & their faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon (that glozy of kyngdomes and be-tye of the Caldees honour) shall be destroyed euē as God destroyed Sodome and Go-more. It shall not endure for euer, nether shall there be any more dwelling there, frō generacyon to generacyon.

The Arabians shall pytch no tentes there, nether shall y^e shepherdes make their foldes there any more: but fearfull wild beastes shall lye there, & y^e houses shall be full of great Dules. Estriches shall dwell there, & Ages shall daūse there wild cattes shall crye in the palaces, and Dragōs shall be in y^e pleasant houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is at pād, & her dayes shall not be prologed.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The returne of the people from captiuitie. The prosperite of the people of God, and a reuenge of their enemies. The pyte of Babylon.

At the Lord wyll be mercifull vnto Jacob, and wil yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in their awne lande. Strangers shall cleaue vnto them, & get them to the house of Jacob.
The people shall take them, & cary them home to their awne lade. And make the to enderite y^e house of Israel in y^e lande of y^e Lord y^e they maye be seruautes & hand maydes of the Lord. They shall take those prisoners whose captiues they had bene a fore: & rule those y^e had oppressed them. Whē the Lord now shall bryge the to rest, frō the trauayle, feare, & harde bondage y^e thou wast laden wth all: the shall thou v^o hys mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: how happe-neth it y^e the oppressour leaueh of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath broke y^e ceptre of y^e vngodly & the rodd of the lordly. Which whē he is wroth smyteth y^e people wth cotinual strokes, & tyranou-selye reigne the ouer y^e hethen whom he persecuted without compassion. And therefore the whole worlde is now at rest & quyetnes and men syng for ioye.

Pe, euē y^e fyre trees & Cedres of libanus reioyse at thy fall saye: Nowe y^e thou art layd downe, there come no mo v^o to heve downe vs. Hell also beneth trebleth to mete y^e at thy comyng, & for thy sake hath ray-sed his deade, & all myghtie mē & pynces of y^e earth. All kynges of y^e earth stnde v^o frō their seates, y^e they may all answere & speake vnto y^e. Art y^e become weake also as we?

Art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pyde is layde downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes.
Woymes be layde vnder the, & woymes are thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauē (O Lucifer) thou faire moynynge childe: how hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, and art become weaker the y^e people? For thou saydest in thyne herte: I will clyme v^o into heauen, & exalte my throne aboue beyde y^e starres of God, I will spt also vpon the holy mount toward the North, I will clyme v^o aboue the cloudes, and wyll be lyke the hyghst of al. Yet thou shalt be brought do-wne to y^e depe of hell. They that se the, shall narrowly lōke v^o the, and thynke in themselues, sayenge: Is this the mā, y^e brought all lades in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde i a maner waste, and layde the cytyes to the groude, which let not his prisoners go out?

The kynges of the naciōs lye euery one in his awne house with wo:shyppe, and y^e art cast out of thy graue lyke a filthy abhominable brāuch: lyke as dead mens raynēt y^e are shot thow: with the swerde, & go do-wne to the stones of the depe: as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried with them. Eue because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people The generacyō of the wycked shall be without honour, for euer. Let there a waye be sought to destroye their chyldren, that be in their fathers wyckednes, y^e they come not v^o agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of enemies.

I will stnde v^o agaynst the, sayeth the Lord of hostes, & roote out y^e name & remant sonne, & sonnes sonne of Babylon (sayeth y^e Lord) & will geue it to y^e Otters, & will make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe the out wth the besome of destrucciō, sayeth y^e Lord of hostes. The Lord of hostes hath sworne an othe, sayenge: It shall come to passe as I haue determyned, and shall be ful-fylled as I haue deuysed. So that Assyria that I destroye in my lande, & v^o my moutaynes will I treade h^o vnder foote. Wher thow his yock shall come from them, and his burthen shall be taken frō their shoulder.
Thys denye hath God taken thow: the whole worlde, and thys is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For y^e the Lord of hostes determineth a thyng, who is able to dysanulle it? And y^e he stretch forth his hnde, who maye holde it in agayne?

The same peare that kyng Azaz dyed, god threatened on this maner: Reioyse not thou

(thou whole Palestyna) because the rod of hym þ beateth the is broken: for out of the scrpetes rote, there shall come an adder, & þ frute shall be a fyrie synge worme. But the fyrst boone of þ pooze shall be fed, & þ symple shall dwell in safete. Thy rote also will I destroye wþ hunger, & it shall slaye thy remnant. Mourne þ pozte, wepe þ cite, for the whole land of Palestyna þ art layde waste for there shall come fro þ North, a smoke that not one alone may abyde in his place. Who shall then answer þ messengers of þ Gtyle? For þ Lord hath stablyshed þ, & the pooze of his people þ be therein, do put theyr trust in him.

The. xv. Chapter.

A prophete agayn Moab.

In this is the heuy burthen vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed & overthrowen in þ nyght season: Ar also in Moab was destroyed & perished in the nyght. They wente vpon to the ydols house, euen to Dibon to the hye places, to wepe for Abo, and Moab dyd mourne for Medba:

All theyr heades, were balde & all theyr beardes shauen. In theyr stretes are they gyrded aboute with sack cloth. In all þ topes of their houses & stretes shall be no synge but mournynge & weppynge. Helebou & Eleale shall crye, þ theyr voyce shall be heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab shall bleare out and crye for very sorow of their myndes: Who shall in herte be for Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto þ cpte of zoar, which is lyke a fayre pong bullock of thre pere olde, for they shall all go vpon to Luth, wepyng. Eue so by þ waye to ward honouraim they shall make lamentacion for ther vtter destruccio. For þ waters of Rintri shall be dried vp, by reason wherof þ grasle is withered, þ herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the residue þ he hath done, they are soyr. As for theyr substaunce, þ enemyes haue caried the to the broke of þ wyllyes. For þ crye wet ouer þ whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Beer Elim was there nothing but mournynge, because the waters of Dimo were full of bloude: for the Lord shall sende more bloude vpon Dimon, & lyons vpon the remnant of the lande, & on them that are escaped from Moab.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The destruccio of Moab.

Ende þ Lord of the world a la be, fro the rocke þ lyeth toward þ deserte, vnto þ hil of the daughter Spō. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shall be as a treblpyng byde, þ is put out of her nest, for they shall carpe them vnto Arnon: gather your coucel, come together in iudgemēt, couer vs wþ your shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde the chased, and be traye not them that are fled. let my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou their refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersary is brought to naught, þ robber is vndone, the tpyaunt is waysted out of the land. And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, and he shall syt vpon it in the truetly, I the tabernacle of Dauid iudgyng and sekynge iudgemēt, & making hast vnto ryghteousnes. We haue heard of the pryde of Moab, he is very proude, presumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignacyon, & vayne are his lyes. Therefore shall Moab make lamentacio because of the Moabites (that shall be slayne) þee they shall wayle all together. Because of the foundacyon of the cite that is made of brick, shall ye complayne: eue þe lame people that are left onely behinde.

For the bynes of Hesbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sibma, the Lordes of the heithen haue broken downe byz principall brasiches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wet on wadering vnto þ wilderness. Byz goodly braunches were thowen downe, as they wet ouer the see. Therefore will I mourne for Jazer, & for the vyne of Sibma. I will poure my teares vpon the, O Hesbon and Eleale, for the crye of thyne enemyes is fallen vpon thy sommer frutes, and vpon thyne haruest. The Myrith and chere is taken awaye out of the plentifull felde, and in the vyneyardes there shall be no ioye ner gladnesse.

The treader shall treade out no wyne in the presses, þ song of theyr mery chere haue I layde downe. Wherefore, my bowels shall romble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde partes for the ctyes sake þ is made of byck. And it shall come to passe, that whā it is sene that Moab shall be made wery of his byll chapels, he shall come to his tēple to praye, but he shall not be able. So then, thys is the sayeg þ the Lord hath spoken concernynge Moab lens that tyme. But now the Lord hath spoken sayeng. In thre yeares which shall be as the yeares of an hyred seruaunt: shall the glozpe of Moab be turned into cofusion, thowout al his multitude, which is very great. And that whych remaineth, shall be very small and feble.

The. xvii. Chapter.

A prophete agayn Damascus.

In this is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus: Beholde, Damascus is taken awaye, to be nomore a cite, but shall be an heape of broken stones. The waste ctyes of Aroer shall be folde for catel which shall lye there, and there shall be none to fraye them awaye. Ephraim also shall nomore be strong, strong, & Damascus shall nomore be a kyng dome, & the remnaunt of Syria shall be as þ glozpe of þ child of Israel, sayeth þ Lord of hostes. And in þ dape it shall come to passe þ Jacob shall be made very pooze, & þ fanelle of his flethe shall waxe leane. And he shall be as one þ gathereth vpon come in haruest, eue lyke him whole arme reapeth þeares of cozne. He shall be also lyke hym þ gathereth eares of cozne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gathering in dede shall there be left in it, eue as in the thakynge of an olyue tre there remayne two or thre berpes in the toppe of the vppermost bowe, & four or fyue in þ brode frutefull braunches therof, sayeth the Lord God of Israel.

Then shall mā turne agayne to his maker, & his eyes shall haue respecte to þ holy one of Israel. As for the altares which are his a wne handy worke, he shall not regarde them, & the thynges þ his fyngers haue made (as groues & pynges) those shall he not cast his eye vnto. In þ dape shall their strong ctyes be as the forsaken shrubbes & braunches, which they left because of the children of Israel, & the lande shall be desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, and hast not bene myndefull of thy strong rock, therefore shall thou set pleasant plantes, & shalt graffe the brasiche of another mans vyne. In the dape shall thou make thy plāt to growe, & early in the moynge shall thou make thy seve to flourish. The haruest shall be gone in the dape of enheritaunce, & there shall be sorowe without hope of coforte. Who shall be to the multitude of moche people, which shall make a sounde lyke the noyse of þ see: And the violence of þ nations, which shall rage lyke the rushyng in of many waters: Eue lyke many waters shall the people rage. God shall rebuke hym, and he shall flye farre of. He shall be chased awaye lyke as dyce strawe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde, and lyke a thing that turneth before the storme. At euen beholde, there is trouble: & oz euer it be moynng, lo, he is gone. This is þ porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lott of them that robbe vs.

The. xviii. Chapter.

A prophete agayn Egypte.

That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of wynges, that lande which is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: Sending messengers by the see, euen in vessels of rebes ouer the water. Set you hence (ye spedye messengers) to a naciō that is scatred a brode & robbed of that they had: a fearfull people from their begynning vnto therto: a naciō troden downe by lytle and lytle, whose lader the floudes haue spoy-

led. All ye inhabitors of the world and in-dwellers of þ earth, loke vpon whā he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and harken whā he blisweth wþ the trompe. For so þ Lord sayde vnto me, as for me, I will take my rest, & loke vpon the matter in my habitacio, lyke a fayre heate after þ rayne, & lyke a cloude of dew in þ heat of haruest.

For afore the haruest, whā the braunche is growne, there shall come ripe frute out of the floure, & he shall cut downe the increace wþ sythes, & the braunches shall be take awaye with hokes. Thus shall they be left together vnto the foules of þ mountaynes, and to the bestes of the erth: for in sommer the byrdes shall remayne vpon it, and eue-ry beest of þ lande shall be vpon it in þ wynter. In þ tyme shall there a presēt be brought vnto the Lord of hostes: eue a people that is scatred a brode, and robbed of that they had, that same people which hath bene scat full from theyr begynnyng vnto therto: a naciō troden downe by lytle and lytle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: To the place of the name of þ Lord of hostes, euen to the mount Spōn.

The. xix. Chapter.

The prophete agayn Egypte.

In this is the heuy burthen of Egypte: Beholde, the Lord rydeth vpon a swyfte cloude, and shall come in to Egypte, & the ydols of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of hym, & the hert of Egypte shall quake in the myddes of her. And I wyll set the Egyptians one agaynst another, so that one brother shall fyght agaynst another, & one neyghboure agaynst another, cite agaynst cite, & realme agaynst realme. The mynde also of Egypte shall be cleane without coucell withui it selfe, & the deuyce that they take, wyll I destroye, so that they shall seke counsell at ydols & at sozcerers, at workers with syctes & at sothslapers. And the Egyptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruell Lord, & a myghtie kyng shall haue dominion ouer them, sayeth the Lord God of hostes. The waters of the see shall fayle, & the ryuer shall decrease and be dyed vp. The waters shall be drawen out: the ryuers of Egypte shall be emptyed & dyed vp, the rebes and flagges shall be cut downe.

The grasle in the ryuer & by the ryuers banck, & all that groweth by the ryuer shall wither awaye, and be brought to naught. The fyfthers also shall mourne and all they that cast angle into the water, shall make lamentacion, and they that laye forth theyr nett besyde þ waters, shall be roted out. Wo-rouer, they þ worke in flaxe, and make fyne workes, shall be confounded, and so shall they þ weane open workes. For theyr dyen workes workes shall be euen destroyed, and all they that make pontes and strewes for fish shall come to naught.

But ye foolish prynces of zoon, ye wyse counsellours of Pharao, whose wit is turned to foolishnes, how saye ye vnto Pharao: I am come of wyse men & of auncient kynages: What at they: where are (I saye) thy wyse men? Let the tell yf they can what y lord of hostes hath deuyled vpon Egypte.

The prynces of zoon are become fooles, the prynces of Roph are disceaued, they haue disceaued Egypte, eue they that were taken for the chiefe kyned therof. In the myddes of it hath the lord powred the spere of wyckednes, ad they haue disceaued Egypte in euery worke therof, euen as a drunken mā staketh in his vompte. Neither shall the heade of taylor, the braunch of rebe be able to do anye worke i Egypte. In y dape shall Egypte be lyke vnto women: It shall be afrayed and stode in feare at the morcyon of the hand of the Lord of hostes, which he maketh ouer it. And Egypte shall be afrayed of y land of Iuda: so p euery one which maketh mēcyon of it, shall be afrayed therat, because of the counsell of the Lord of hostes which he deuyseth for it.

In that dape shall spue cities in the land of Egypte speake the language of Canaā, & swere by the Lord of hostes: the citie of desolaciō shall be called one of them. In y dape shall the altare of the Lord be in y myddes of the land of Egypte, & thys tyle becyde it: VNTO THE LORDE. And it shall be a token and witness vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto y Lord because of such as trouble them, & he shall send the a Saviour & a great man to delpue them.

And the Lord shall be knowne in Egypte, and the Egyptians shall knowe y Lord in that dape, and do sacrifice and oblatiō: pee they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The lord also shall smyte Egypte sore, & heale them agayne, & they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shall be intreated of them, & shall heale them. In that dape shall there be a comē waye out of Egypte vnto Assyria, and Assyria shall come in to Egypte, & Egypte in to Assyria, so that the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serue the Lord together. In y dape shall y naciō of Israel be the thyrd wyth Egypte & Assyria, and they shall be blessed in the myddes of the lande, which lade the Lord of hostes hath blessed, sayeng: blessed is my people of Egypte, Assur also is the worke of myne handes, and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

The .xx. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypte and Ethiopia.

In the yere that Tharthā came vnto Alhod (whan y Sargon y kynge of Assyria had sent him) and had foughte agaynst Alhod and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hāde of Esay the sonne of Amos, sayeng: Go and take of the sacke clothe from thy lopnes, & put of thy shooe from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and bare foote. And the Lord sayde: lyke as my seruauit Esay hath walked naked, and bare foote for a signe and wonder thre yeaeres vpon Egypte, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kynge of Assyria take a waye out of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, chyliden and olde men, naked and bare foote wyth their lopnes vncouered, to the greateshame of Egypte.

They shall be brought in feare also, & ashamed one of another: Ethiopia of Egypte, and Egypte of Ethiopia, considerynge what gloze they were in a fore. And they p dwell in y same yle, shall saye in that dape: Beholde, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we flye for helpe, that we maye be delpyered fro the kynge of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

The .xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babilon, Dumma, and Arabia.

The burthen of the wayst see: Euen as the stormy wether y passeth thowrow at the noone dape, to come from the wyldernes, from that horrible lande. A greuous visiō was shewed vnto me: Let one dysceatfull offender come agaynst another, & one destroyer agaynst another. Up Elam, laye sege thou of Media: all their gronyngs haue I layed downe. Therefore are my lopnes fylled with sorow, heynnes, hath taken holde vpon me, as the pāges of a woman that is traueyng. It made me stoupe when I herde it, & it vexed me whan I sawe it. My hart pated, fearfulness came vpo me. The nyght of my voluptuousnes hath he turned agaynst me into feare.

Whyle they garnished the table, y watchman looked: And while I was eatynge and drynkynge (it was sayde:) vpon ye captaynes, take pou to your shylde. For thus hath the Lord sayd vnto me: Go and set a watchman, to tell what he seyth. And he sawe a charēt, which two horsmen sat vpon, with the cariage of an Asse, and the cariage of a camell. So he looked & toke very diligēt heed. And y lyeon cried, Lord, I stode wayting all the whole dape, & am appoynted to kepe my watch euery nyght. And beholde, here cometh a charēt of men, with two horsmen. And he answered & sayde: Babilon is fallen, it is fallen, & all the pynages of hyz goddes hath he smytte downe vnto the ground. Thou art he whom I must threke, and thou

and thou belogest to my corne flooze. This that I herde of the Lord of hostes y God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchman, what hast thou espyed by nyght? Watchman, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchman sayde: The moynynge cometh, & so doth the nyght. If ye wyll aske anye question, then aske it, retourne and come agayne.

The burthen concernynge Arabia: In the pleasaunt groude of Arabia shall ye tary all nyght, euen in the stretes of Dedanin. The inhabitours of the lāde of Thema brought forth water to him that was thyrstie, they puffed him with their bzed that was fled awaye. For because of swerdes are they become fugitive, euen for the drawn swerde, and for the bent bowe, & because of the greuousnes of warre. For thus hath the lord sayde vnto me: There is yet a yere accordeynge to the yeaeres of an hyrd seruauit, & all the gloze of Cedar shall fayle. And the nombze of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be mynished by the myghtye chyliden of Cedar, for so the Lord God of Israel hath spoken.

The .xxii. Chapter.

A prophecie agaynst Iherusalem.

The burthen of the valley of vision: What hast thou to do here, that thou clymest vnto the house toppes? Thou that art full of occupieng, thou sedicious & proude citie: thy slayne men are nether put to death wyth swerde, ner deed in batell. All thy captaynes are fugitive together, the archers haue taken them prisoners: All they y are founde in the, are in captiuite together, because they fled farre of. Therefore layd I: let me alone & I wyll make lamentaciō. Ye shall not be able to comforte me, because of the destrucciō of the daughter of my people. For thys is a dape of trouble, of rypne, & of destrucciō y the Lord wyll byng to passe in the valley of vision, breakynge downe the citie, & cryng vnto mountaynes.

Elam bare the quyer to a charēt of fote men and of horsmen, and the cytye of Ierusalem the shylde of. Thy chiefe valley also was full of charētes, and the horsmen set theyz faces directly towarde the gate. And in y dape dyd the enemye take awaye y bewte of Iuda, and the dydest thou loke towarde the armoure of the house of the focest. Pee haue sene also y broken places of y citie of Dauid, how that they are many, & ye gathered together the waters of the lower pole. As for the houses of Ierusalem haue ye broke downe to make y wall strong. A pytt also haue ye made betwene the two walles, for the waters of the olde pole, and haue not regarded the maker therof, nether had respecte vnto him that toke it in hāde.

And in that dape dyd the Lord God of hostes call men vnto wepyng and mourning, to baldnesse & dryndynge aboute wyth lack cloth. And Behold, they haue ioye and gladnesse, sayeng oren & kyllyng shepe eatynge flesch & drynkynge wyne: * Let vs eate and drynke: for tomorrow we shall dye. And it came to the eares of the Lord of hostes: This iniquite shall not be purged fro you till ye dye, sayeth y lord God of hostes.

Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: Go, get the into poulder treasurer, euen vnto Sebna, which is y ruler of y house. What hast thou to do here? and whom hast thou here, that thou shuldest here bewte the out a sepulcre, as it were one that bewteth hym out a sepulcre an hyc, or y graunth an habitation for him self in a hard rock?

Beholde, O thou man, the Lord shall carye the awaye into captiuite, & shall surely couer the wyth confusiō. The Lord shall turne the ouer lyke a ball with hys handes (and shall sende the) into a farre contree: There shalt thou dye, & there (in steade of the charctes of thy pōpe) shall y house of thy lord haue confusiō. I wil dryue the fro thy place, & out of thy dwellynge shall be ouerthrowe. And in that dape shall I call my seruauit Eliakim the sonne of helkia. And with thy garmentes will I clothe him, and wyth thy gyrdle will I strength hym: thy power also will I committe into his hāde & he shall be a father of such as dwel in Ierusalem, and in the house of Iuda.

* And the keye of the house of Dauid will I laye vpon his shoulde, so y he shall open and no man shall shut. He shall shut, and no man shall open. And I wyll fasten hym as a nayle in a sure place, and he shall be the gloriouse seate of hys fathers house. Moreover, all generaciōs and posterities shall hang vpo him, all the gloze of their fathers house, all vessels both great and small, and all instrumēttes of measure and musick. In that dape (sayeth the Lord of hostes) shall the nayle that is fastened i the sure place departe, be broken and fall, and the burthen y was vpo it, shall be plucked awaye, for so the lord hath spoken.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

A prophecie agaynst Assyria, and a promes that it shall be rejoyced agayne.

The burthen of Tyre: Dourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for there cometh such destrucciō that ye shall not haue an house to entre into: Out of the lande of Cytim haue they knowledge of thys place. Be still, ye that dwell in y Ile, the marchauntes chaufes of zidon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made p plenteous. The corne that groweth by the great waters of Eilus, and the frutes of the ryuer were by vitayles, so that it became a comen marce of p nacions.

Ene ashamed thou zidon, for the see (eue the strenght of the see) hath spokē, saye: I haue not trauayled, ner broughte forth chil dren, ner noyshed vp young me, or brought vp virgins.

Wha tydinges cometh to the Egipcians they shall be soz for the rumoze that goeth of Tyre. Set you to Charlis, mourne ye p dwell in the Ile. Is not this that gloriouse cyte of poures, which hath bene of olde anti quiter, hys awne fete shall cary hys forth to be a logeourner in to a farre countrie. Who hath deysournd thys agaynst Tyre (that geueth garlades vnto other cities) whose mar chaunters are princes, and whose captaynes are honozable in the worlde. Euen the lord of hostes hath deysournd thys, to put downe the pyde of all such as be gloriouse, and to mynysh all them that be proude vpo earth: Set the out of thy lade vnto p daughter of Charlis, sayng thou hast nomoze strenght.

He that smote the kpngdomes together, holbeth out his hande ouer the see: euen the lord him self hath geuen a comaundement agaynst the same comen place of marchadi se, that they shall utterly destroye p might therof. And he sayd: Make nomoze thy boast (O virgin thou daughter zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: Up, get the ouer vnto Citim, where neuertheles thou shalt haue no rest. Behold, this people came not of the Caldees, but Assur made them strong with great shippes. They set vp the strong holdes therof, & destroyed his palaces, & he brought it i decaye. Mourne ye shippes of charlis for your strenght is brought downe.

And in that daye shall Tyre be forgotten seuenty peares (acordinge to the peares of one kpng) and after the ende of the seuenty peares shall Tyre syng as doth an harlot. Take an harpe, & go aboute the citie (thou harlot that hast bene forgottē) make swete melody, sing moo songes, that thou mayest be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of the seuenty peares shall the lord visyt Tyre, & he shall conuerte vnto her rewarde, and shall committe fornicacio with all the kpngdomes of the earth p are in the worlde. Thei occupieng also and their rewarde shall be holp vnto p lord. Their gaynes shall not be layde vponer kepte i store, but it shall be theys that dwell before the lord, that they maye eate ynough, & haue clothyng sufficient.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A prophetic of tribulations come vpon the worlde because of synne.

Behold the lord maketh the earth wayst and empye: he turneth it vpon lyde downe, & scatred abrode p inhabitours therof: And p prest shall be as the people, & the master as the ser uant, p mastresse lyke p mayd, p seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vpon vsury, lyke hym that borroweth vpon vsury: the creditoure as the better. The worlde shall be cleane wasted & utterly spoyled, for so the lord hath spokē. The earth is soz & consumeth awaye, the worlde is feble & perissheth: the proude people of p earth are come to naught. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitours therof, which haue tras gressed the lawes, chainged the ordinaunce, broken the euerlasting couenaunt.

Therfore hath p curse consumed p earth, and they that dwell therein, are fallen into trespase. Wherefore, the inhabitours of the earth are perished with drouth, ad some me are left behynde. The wyne faileth: the wyne hath no myght, all they p haue bene mery of hart, are come to mournyng. The myrth of tabrettes is layed downe, p nops of such as haue made mery, is ceased, p ioye at p herpe is at an ende. They shall dypke nomoze wyne w myrth, strong dypke shall be bytter to them that dypke it. The citie of vanite is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, p noman maye come in. In p strectes is there a crye because of wyne, all the re is vanished awaye, p myrth of the worlde is gone, in the citie is left desolacyō and the gate is smytten with destruccion.

For in the myddes of the worlde, euen amonge the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shakynge of Olyues, and as the grapes are whā p wyne haruest is done. They shall lyft vp theys voyce: and make a mery nops, and in magnifyng of the Lord shall they crye out of the west. Wherefore, prayse ye the lord in the valleys, euen the name of the lord God of Israel in the fles of the see. From p vttemost parte of p earth haue we heard prayles and myrth because of the ryghteous. And I sayd: I knowe a thyng in secrete, I knowe a thyng i secrete, wo is me, the trasgressours haue offēded, the trasgressours haue greuously offēded. Fearfulnesse, the pytt and the snare are vpo the, O thou that dwellest i the earth. It will come to passe, that whoso escapeth the fearfull nops, shall fall in to the pytt. And he that cometh vpon out of the pytt, shall be taken wyth the snare. For the wyndowes from an hye are open, and the foundations of the earth are moued.

The earth is viterly broken downe, the earth hath a soze ryne, the earth quakech excedyngly. The earth shall reue to p fro lyke a dzonkerd, and shall be remoued lyke a tent.

Like a tent (of one nyght) & the iniquitie therof shall be heny vpo it. It shall fall, & not rise vp agayne. And in that daye shall the Lord visyt the world p are vpo the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as they p be in pison: & they shall be shut vp inwarde, & after many dayes shall they be visited. The mone shall be abashed, and the sunne ashamed, whē the Lord of hostes shall raygne in mount Sio and in Jerusalem with wozypp, and in the syght of such as shall be of hys councill.

The. xxv. Chapter.

A thankesgyng to God for hys wozykes.

Thou arte the Lord my God, I wyll magnifye p, I wyll geue thakes vnto thy name. For p hast brought wonderfull thinges to passe, according to thynne olde counceils truly & saythfully. Thou hast mad of a citie an beape of stones, and brought a stronge towne into decaye. The habitation of straungers hast p made to be no citie, nether shall it be builded any moze. Therefore shall p mighte people geue gloz vnto p: the citie of p valeant heithen shall feare p. For thou hast bene a strenght vnto the poze, and a succour for the neady in his trouble. A refuge agaynst euell wether, & shadowe agaynst p heate. For the blast of ragynng men is lyke a storme that casteth downe a wall.

Lyke as thou byngest beate downe out of a dyre place, so shalt p suppress p nops of alauites. The heate is in p shadow of p cloude: p bzauch of p mighte shall be brought lowe. And in this moitayne shall p Lord of hostes make vnto all people a feast of pleteous & delicate thinges, eue of most pleasant & depntie dishes. And in this moitayne shall p Lord destroye the couering, p all people are wyaped in, and the hanging p is lyed vpon all nacys. As for death, he hath destroyed it for euer. And p Lord God shall wype awaye teares fro all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take awaye out of all the earth. For so the Lord hath sayde.

And in that daye it shall be sayde: Lo, this is our God, we haue wayted for hym, & he shall saue vs. Thys is the Lord, in whō we haue hoped, we wyll be mery & reioyce in the saluation that cometh of hym. For in this moitayne shall the hande of the Lord cease and Moab shall be thershed vnder him, euen as strawe is thershed vpo p groude. And he shall stretch out hys hande in the myddes of them (as he that swymmeth, casteth out his handes) and with the strenght of his handes shall he byng downe their pyde. The strongholde also and fence of thy walles shall be ouerthrowe & cast downe, & brought them to the grounde, euen vnto dust.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

A songe of the despayraunce of the people.

In p daye shall thys songe be songe in the lande of Iuda. We haue a stronge citie, & Saluacion shall God appoynte in steade of walles and bulwozke. Ope p gates p the righteous people which kepeth the trouth maye entre in. Their minde is set vpon the, because thou pseruest them in peace, euen in peace: because they put their trust in the. Put ye your trust all waye in the Lord: for in the Lord God there is strenght for euer moze. For he hath brought downe hys mynded citelens. As for p proude citie, he hath brought it lowe: euen vnto the grounde shall he cast it downe, & bring it vnto dust. The fote euen the fote of the poze: and the steppes of such as be in necessitie shall treade it downe.

The path of equite wilt thou graut vnto the iuste, & thou moost ryghteous, thou shalt order p path of him that is ryghteous. Per, in the waye of thy iudgementes, Lord, haue we put our trust in the. Thy name also: & the remembraunce of the, is p thyng that oure soule longeth for. O p soule hath longed for the all the night, and w my spere (which is within me) wyll I seke the earlye in the morning. For when thy iudgementes are in the earth, the inhabitours of p worlde shall learne righteousnes. Shall the vngodly man be fauoured, which hath not learned ryghteousnes, but doth wickedly in the earth where nothyng ought to be done, but that which is ryghteous: he shall not se the glory of the Lord. Lord, when thy hande is lyfte vpo to stryke, they se it not: but they shall se it, and be confounded with the zeile of the people, and the spere that columeth thynne enemies, shall deuoure them.

Lord, vnto vs thou shalt proude peace: for thou also hast wrought all our wozykes in vs. O Lord our God, other lordes besyde the hath subdued vs: but we wyll be myndfull only of the & of thy name. The deed will not lyue, & they p be out of lyfe, will not ryle agayne: therfore hast thou visited & ro ted them out, and destroyed all the memory of them. Thou hast increased the people (O Lord) thou hast increased the people, & thou art prayled: thou hast sent the farre of vnto all the coastes of the earth. Lord in trouble haue they visited the: they powzed out their prayer, whē thy chastenng was vpo theu. Lyke as a woman w chylde that draweth nye towarde her trauell, is soz & cryeth in her paynes, eue so haue we bene in thy sight, O Lord. We haue bene w chylde & suffered payne, as though we had brought forth winde. For there is no saluation in the earth, nether do p inhabitours of p worlde submyt the selues. Thy deed me shall lyue, euen w my body shall they rise agayne. Awake and syng ye that dwell in dust. For thy dewe is euen as the dewe of herbes, and the earth shall cast out them that be vnder her. Come my people, * enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doores about þe: * hyde thy selfe a litle for a while, vntyll the indignation be ouerpast. * For so, the Lorde is comyng out of his place, to viset the wickednes of such as dwell vpon earth. The earth also shall disclose her awne bloud, and shall nomoze hid them that are slayne in her.

The xxviii. Chapter.

A prophete of the comyng of Christ, and destruction of poplarye.

In that daye, the Lorde w his soze, great and myghtye swerde shall viset * Leuiathan þe fugityue serpent, eue Leuiathan that crooked serpent, and he shall slaye the dragon þe is in the see. In that daye, se þe syng of the congregatyon which is the vineyard, þe bringeth forth þe best wyne. Eue the Lorde do kepe it. In due seasons shall I water it, & lest the enemye do it any harme, I will both nyght and daye preserue it. There is no displeasure in me, els (when the vineyard bringeth in the forth beere & thornes) I wold go thowow it by warre, & burne it vp together. Let it take holde of my strength, and it shall be at one w me, euen at one shall it be with me.

The dayes are comyng, that Jacob shall take rote. Israel shall be grene & flozpye, and the worlde shall be fylled with frute. Hath he synnten him as soze, as he did the other that smote him? Or is he slain w so soze a slaughter as they that sle w hym? In measure doth he synre him, whye he sedeth vnto him soch thinges, wherby he cometh to hys mynde agayne. For in the daye that the east wynde bloweth soze, it taketh a waye the frutes.

Thus therfore shall the iniquyte of Jacob be reconcyled, and here is all the frute of the takynge a waye of his synne, þe he make all the stones of þe altars of ydolles, as chalc stones that are beaten in lunder, that theye growes and ymages rpe not vp agayne.

Els, shall the stronge cite be desolate, & the habitation forsaken & left lyke a wilderness. There shall the calfe fede, & ther shall he lye, & cate vp the grasses therof. * When þe braunches of it are drie, they are broken of, & the women come, and set the on fyre. * For it is a people of no vnderstanding, & therfore he that made them, shall not fauoure the, and he þe created the, shall geue them no grace. And in that daye shall the Lorde make a thershyng from the middes of the riuer Euphrates vnto the riuer of Egypt: and þe childre of Israel shall be gathered together one to another. In þe daye shall þe great trope be blowne, so þe they which were lost in the lade of Assyria: & they that were banished into þe lande of Egypt, shall come and worshyp the Lorde in the holy mount at Jerusalem:

The xxviii. Chapter.

Agaynst the pydes of Ephraim, & agaynst false prestes and preachers.

Whe vnto the crowne of pryde, eue to the dylcken people of Ephraim * whose great pope is as a flour that fadeth a waye) * vpon the head of the valkye of such as be in welth, and are overladen with wyne. Beholde, * ther cometh a vehemēt and soze daye fro the Lorde lyke an vnmeasurable hayle and percellous tempest, euen lyke the force of myghtye and horrible waters, þe hioletye beareth downe all thinges. The crowne of the pryde of the dionken Ephraimites shall be troden vnder fote: * so that the flour of hys saynnes and bewty, which is in the head of the valley of fatnes, shall fade a waye, as doth an vntimely rype fygg afoze heruest. Which whā a man spyeth, he lobeth vpon it: and whye it is pet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In þe daye shall the Lorde of hostes be the crowne of glozy, & bademe of be wyte vnto the residue of his people. He wille also a spirite of persyte knowledge to him þe sterteth in iudgement, & strength vnto them that turne a waye the battell to the gate of the enemies. But they are out of the waye by reason of wyne: þe farre out of þe waye are they thowowe strong dzyne. * The preste also & the prophet are gone astraye by the meanes of strong drynke, they are dionken w wyne, they go amisse thowowe strong drynke: they fayle in pphceping & stoble in iudgment. For tables are so full of vomyte and spychines, þe no place is cleane. Who then shall such one teach knowledge? And whom shall he make to vnderstode the thing that he heareth? For they are as ignorant as yong children, that are taken fro the mylke and are weaned.

For they that be such must haue after one lesson, another lesson: * after one comāndement, another comāndement, after one rule another rule, after one instructyon another instructyon, there a litle and there a litle. For he that speaketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rudenes of spech, and a straunge language. If any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest wherwith ye maye ease hym that is weerye, thys is the refreshinge, they wyll not herken. * Therfore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpon lesson, comāndement vpon comāndement, rule vpon rule, instructyon vpon instructyon, there a litle and there a litle) shall be vnto them an occasyon of stomblyng that they maye go on, and fall backward, be bzused, tangled and snared.

Wherfore, heare the worde of the Lorde þe mockers, ye that haue rule of this people which is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue sayd: We

of Elaye,

Jo. I.

We haue made a couenaunt with death, & with hell are we at agreement. And though there go forth a soze plage, it shall not come vnto vs. For we haue made falshode our refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hid. Therfore thus sayth þe Lorde God: Beholde, I laye in Sion for a foundation a stone, eue a tryed stone, a precio⁹ corner stone, a sure foundation: Whoso beleueth, let hym not be to hastye. Iudgment also will I laye to the rule, and righteousnes to the balaunce: so þe the hayle shall take a waye your bayne confidence as a byome, and the prey place of youre refuge shall the waters renne ouer.

And thus the couenaunt that ye made w death, shall be disanulled: and your agreement that ye made with hell, shall not stand. Yee, when the soze plage goeth forth, ye shall be troden downe vnder it. Fro the tyme that it goeth forth, it shall take you a waye. For early in the moznyng euer daye: yee, both daye & night shall it go thowowe: & when the noyse ther of is perceaued, it shall gendze veneration. For the bed is narrow, and not large: & the couering so small that a man can not wynde him selfe vnder it. * For þe Lorde shall stonde as in mount + Berazim, and shall be wrothe lyke as in þe valley * Sibe, þe he maie do his worke, & his straing worke & bying to passe his acte, his straunge acte.

Now therfore se þe be no mockers, lest your punishment increace: for I haue heard of the Lorde of hostes, that there shall come a thort ende vpon the whole earth. Heare ye then, & herken vnto my voyce, considre & podye my spech. Doth not þe husbandman plowe all the daie, and openeth & breaketh the clottes of his grounde, þe he maye sowe: Whā he hath made it playn, will he not spred abrode the fitches, and sowe comyn, & cast in whete by measure, & the appoynted barlye and rye in their place? God will instructe hym to haue discretion, euen his God wyll teach hym. For fitches shall not be treshed with an harowe: nether shall a carte whele be brought thowowe the comyn: but the fitches are beate out with a stafe, and comyn w a rodd. But the seede that bread is made of, is treshed, though it be not alwaye a thershyng. And þe carte whele must be brought ouer it, lest he grynde it with his feth. This also cometh of the Lorde of hostes, which worketh w wonderfull wysdome, and bringeth excellent workes to passe.

The xxix. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Jerusalem, and agaynst the bayne tradicions of men.

W vnto þe Ariel Ariel thou cite þe * Dauid dwelt in Go on from yeare to yeare, and let the lambs be slayne. I will laye lege vnto Ariel, so that there shall be heynnes and sozome in it: and it shall be vnto me euen an altare of slaughter. I wyll besege the round about, and fight agaynst the thowowe a bulwowe: and wyll reare vp ditches agaynst þe. Thou shalt be brought downe, & shalt speake out of the grounde, and thy spech shall go lowe out of the duste. Thy voyce also shall come out of the grounde lyke the voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shall whisper out of the dust. Moreouer, the noyse of thy straunge enemyes shall be lyke thyne dust, & the multitude of tyauntes shall be * as dzye strawe, that cannot tarp: euen sodenly and in hayste shall theye blast go.

Thou shalt be visited of the Lorde of hostes w thodze, earthquake, and w a great noyse: with storme and tempest and w the flame of a columing fyre. And the multitude of all nations that fyght agaynst Ariel, shall be as a dreame sene by night: * eue so shall all they be that make warre agaynst it, and stronge holdes to overcome it, and that late eny sege vnto it. In conclusion, it shall be eue as when an hongry man dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, hys soule is emptye. Or as when a thurstye man dreameth that he is drynking: and when he awaketh, he is yet saynt: and his soule lacketh the appetite. Euen so shall be the multitude of all nations that fyght agaynst Sion.

Wondre these thynges once in your wyndes, & wondre. * Blinded are they them selues and the blind guides of other. They are dionken: but not with wyne: they are vnstable, but not thowowe strong drynke. For the Lorde hath couered you with a sloubringe sprete, and hath closed your eyes. Your prophetes also & rulers that shuld se, the hath he couered. * And the visyon of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a boke that is sealed vp, which men deliuer to one that is learned, saying: Reade thou in it. And he sayth: I cannot, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto him that is not learned, saying: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therfore thus hath the Lorde sayde: * For somoche as this people when they be in trouble, do honour me with their mouth & w their lippes: but their hert is far fro me, & the feare which they haue vnto me, proceedeth of a comāndment that is taught of men. Therfore wyll I do maruapls amonge this people, eue maruclous thinges (I saye) & a wonder. * For the wysdome of their wise men shall perishe, & the vnderstanding of their wyte men shall byd it selfe.

Wo vnto the that kepe secrete their thoughtes, to hyde their counsell fro the Lorde, and do their workes in darknesse, sayinge: * who seeth vs? & who knoweth vs? Wontles, your destruction is (in my handes) in re- putacyon as the potters claye. And doth the woorde saye of hym that made it, he made not me: And doth an earthen vessel saye of him that fashioned it, he had no understanding: Is it not hard at hande, that Ipharus shall be turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shall be take as the wodde? And in that daye shall deaffe men heare the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of y^e blinde shall se euen out of the cloude and out of darkness. The meke spiced also shall be merry in the Lorde, and the poore amonge them that be lowly, shall reioyce in the holy one of Israel. For he that dyd violence, is brought to naught, and the scozefull man is consumed: and they roted out that were hastie so soone to vnyghtcousnes, & makynge a man to synne in the worde, and that toke hym in a snare which reyned them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the ryghteous to naught. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Jacob, eue thus sayeth he that redeemed Abraham: * Jacob shall not now be confounded, ner his face pale. But when he seeth hys chyldren the woerde of my bades in the middes of him, they shall sanctifie my name, and prayse the holy Lord of Jacob, and feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronouse spete, shall come to vnderstandyng: and they that haue bene scozefull, shall learne doctryne.

The xxx. Chapter.

Agaynst them that forsake the counsell of God, & cleue in the counsell of men. The prophet also threatneth the remnant of the people, that after the destruction of Iherusalem went into Egypte.

Alas, for those disobedient chyldren (sayth the Lorde) * that they wyll take counsell without me. Alas, y^e they wyll take a secret aduice, and not out of my spete, and therefore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypte, and haue asked no question at my mouth: but seke strength in the myght of Pharaon, and trust in the shadowe of Egypt. Therefore shall the strength of Pharaon be your confusion, and the truste of the shadowe of Egypte your shame. For his captaynes were at zoan, and his ambasadours came vnto hanes. * They were all ashamed of the people that could do them no good, and that might not helpe the, ner shew them any profyt, but were they confusyon and rebuke.

The heauy burthen of the bestes of the south in a lande of trouble and anguyshe, from whence shall come the ponge and olde lion, the wyper and fyre serpent that flyeth agaynst them that vpon coltes beare they riches, and vpon camels their treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For vaine and nothyng worth shall the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therefore haue I erped vnto Iherusalem. * They shall haue strength pnough, yf they wyll sette their myndes in quietnes. * Now therefore, go thy wale, and wyte thys before the in a table, & note it in a boke, that it maye finally remayne and be kept styll for euer. For it is an obstinat people, * and dissembling chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lorde.

For they saye vnto the seers: Se not, and to the y^e be cleare of iudgement: loke not out ryght thynges for vs: but speake saye wordes vnto vs: * loke out errorres, gett you out of this waye, departe out of this path, & turne the holy one of Israel fro vs. Wherefore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: Because your hertes rise agaynst this worde, & because ye trust in wrongeous dealyng & peruerse iudgment, & put your confidence therein. Therefore shall ye haue thys myschefe for y^e destruction and fall. Ilike as an hye wall that falleth, because of some ryfte or blast, whose breaking commeth sodenly. * And the hurte therof is lyke an erthen vessel, which breaketh without helpe: so that in y^e burstyng of it, there is not found one sheuer to fetch fyre in, or to take water withall out of the pyt.

For thus sayth the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel: * In repentance & in * rest shall ye be safe: in quietnes and sure confidence shall be your strenght. But ye haue had no lpf thereto. For ye haue sayd: No, but we will escape thozowe horses. (Therefore shall ye flye) & we will get vs vp vpon swyft beastes. And therefore shall your persecutours be swyfter. * A. H. shall flye at the rebuke of one, & at the rebuke of v. shall ye all flye, tyll ye be left as a thyp mast vpon the topp of a mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hyll. * Therefore doth y^e Lorde cause you to wayte, y^e he maye haue mercy vpon you: to thynke that he maye haue the preeminence, when he is gracious vnto you. For the Lorde is the God of iudgement. Blessed are all they that hope in hym.

Yf the people remayne in Syon and at Iherusalem, thou shalt not be in heynes: but at the voyce of thy complaynte shall he haue mercy vpon the. And when he heareth it he shall geue the an answer. And though the Lorde geue you the bread of trouble, and the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shall be nomore so skant, but thyme eyes shall see thy rayne. Yee, and thyme care shall heare y^e tal-kyng of hym that doeth speake behynde the. * Thys is y^e waye, walke ye in it. Turne not aside nether to the ryght hande ner to the lyft. Ye shall destroye also the couerynge of youre syluer ymages, and the deckyng of youre golden ydols. Euen as filthynes shall ye put them awaye. And thou shalt say vnto it. Gett the hence. Then shall God geue rayne vnto thy seebe, that thou shalt sowe the ground withall, and bred of the increace of the of the earth, which shall be fat and very plentiful. In that daye also, shall thy cattell be fed in large pasture. The oxen lyke wise and the pouge asses, that eate the ground, shall eate cleane prouender, which is pouged with the wynde and the sanne.

Finally, vpon euery hye mountaine and hyll shall ther be riuers and streames of waters, * in the daye of the greates slaughter, when the towers fall. Moreover, the lyght of the moone shall be as the light of the sunne, and the sunne lyght shall be seuen folde, and haue as much hyne as in leue dayes besyde: when the Lorde byndeth vpon the soze of hys people, and healeth the stroke of their wound. Beholde, the fame of the Lord commeth fra farre, and his presence is so hote, that no man is able to abyde. His lypses are full of indignation, and hys tonge is as a consuming fyre. Hys bryth is as a vehement floude of water, that reacheth vnto the necke. That he maye lyft awaye the hepythen in the spue of vanitey: And his bryth is as a byrdie of error in the chawes of the people.

And ye shall syng, lyke as in the ryghte, when the holy solempnyte beginneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of hert, lyke as when one commeth with a pyper vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the moost myghty one of Israel. And the Lorde shall cause his glorpyous voyce to be heard, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible countenance and with the flame of a consuming fyre, with noysome lyghtenynge, with a shouer, and with hayle stone. For thozowe the voyce of the Lorde shall * Assur be destroyed, which smote other men with the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whitherlocuer he goth, y^e rodde shall cleue vnto him, which the Lorde shall laye vpon him & with tabrettes and harpes: and with greates warre shall he fyght agaynst his host. * For the fyre of payne is ordeyned from the beginning: yee, euen for kynges is it prepared. Thys hath y^e Lorde set in the depe, and made it wyde: the burnyng wherof is fyre and muche wodde. The bryth of the Lorde, which is a ryuer of bypinstone, doth kyndle it.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

Be vnto them that go downe in to Egypte for helpe, and truste in horses, and put their confidence in charettes, because they be manye, and in horsmen, because they be lusty and strong. But they regarde not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no question at y^e Lord. Where as he neuertheles (beyng wyldest of all) plageth the wycked, and yet goeth nott from his worde, when he steppeth forth, and taketh the victorie agaynst the household of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesh and not spete. And alsoone as the Lorde stretcheth oute hys hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that shulde haue bene helped, and they shall all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Like as the * lyon or * lyons whelp roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not ascraped, though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon hym, nether abashed for all the heape of the. So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe to fyght for mount Syon, and defende hys hyll. Ilike as byrdes flote aboute their nestes, * so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, sa-ue, defende and deliuer Iherusalem.

Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne, from that infidelitey, wherin you drowned your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out hys ydols of syluer and hys ydols of golde, which ye haue made with youre awne handes vnto youre synne. * Assur also shall be slayne with the swearde, not with a mans swearde, nether shall the swearde of any man denoure hym: And he shall fle from the slaughter: and his seruantes shall be discomfyted in their hertes. He shall go for feare to hys strongholdes, and hys prynces shall fle from hys bad-ge. Thys hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and his fyre in Iherusalem.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Beholde, a king shall gouerne after the rule of ryghtewelsse, and the princes shall rule, accordyng to the balauce of equitye. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the wynd, and as a refuge for the tempest: lyke as a riuer of water in a thirsty place, and the shadowe of a greates rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dym, and the cares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnparfyt tong shall speake playnely and distinctly. Then shall the folp the nygarde be nomore called getle, ner the churle liberall. But the nygarde will be niggardly minded, and his hert wyll worke euell and playe the pocritye, and ymagyn abominations agaynst God, to make the hongry leane, and to withhold drinke from the thursty. These are the perlonous weapons of the churlysh, these be his shamefull coun- cels: that he maye begyle the poore with dis-centfull wordes: yee, euen there as he shulde geue sentence with the poore. * But the lyberall persone ymagineth honest thynges, & commeth vpon for liberalitey vnto promotyng

E Up (ye ryche and ydell women) herken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cities, marke my wordes. After yeares and dayes shall ye be brought i feare. Ye careles cities. For haue ye not come. Ye ryche ydell cities ye that feare no parell. Ye abashed, you that lyue in aboundaunce: tremble, you that lyue careles: cast of your rayment, make your selues bare, put sacke cloth aboute you. For as the infanten wepe when their mothers teetes are dryed: so shall you weape for your fayre felde and frutefull vyneyardes. Wy people: selde shall vynges thornes and thistles: and so shall it be euen in euery house of voluptuousnesse and in euery cite that reioysyth.

D The palaces also shall be broke, & the greatly occupied cities desolate. The towres and bulwarckes shall become denues for euermore, & pleasure of mulles shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that I sprete be powred vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wyldernes be a frutefull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wodde. Then shall egyptie dwell in y desert, and righteousnes in a frutefull land.

E And the rewarde of righteousnes shall be peace, and her frute rest & quyetnes for euer.

E And my people shall dwell in the pynnes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of conforste. And when the hayle falleth, it shall fall in the wodde, and the cite shall be set lowe in the valleye. Howe happy shall ye be, when ye shall safely loue your seed besyde all waters, and bypue thyther the fete of your oxen and asses.

The xxxij. Chapter.
The thientenpage agaynst the Assyrians. A descrep: upon of them that shall see the Lozde.

M O to the that destroyest, whet thou waste not destroyed, thou breake the leage, where as none hath broken it with the: for when thou shalt leaue destroying, * thou thy self shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceaseest from breakeinge the leage, then shall they breake it to the. O Lozde, haue mercy vpon vs: we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to suche early: and * our helth, in y tyme of trouble. At that confuse noyse, the people fledd, and at thynne exaltinge, the hepten were scarred. And the spoyles shall be gathered (which shall be yours) as are the gathering of Asuchus. And the multitude going to it, shall be as locustes runnyng to and fro.

The Lozde is exalted, for it is he y dwell- leth an hye: he hath fylled zion with iudgement and righteousnes. And a sure stablyshing of thy tymes shall be strength, health, wisdom & knowledge: and the very feare of the Lozde shall be y treasure of it. Beholde, y messengers shall crye without: & the ambalsatours of peace shall weape bytterly: The stretes are wast, ther walketh no man therein: God hath broken the appoyntment, the cities are cast awaye, & me are nothing regarded y desolat erth is in heynnes. Libanus is shamed: & herwe downe. Saron is lyke a wyldernes: Basan & Charnel are despoiled of their frutes. And therfore sayth the Lozde: I will vponowe: now will I be auanced: now will I be exalted as a mightye God. * Ye shall cocraue stubble, & beare strawe, & poure sprete shall be the fyer. y it maye consume you, & y people shall be burnt like yme, & as thornes burne y are hewen of, & cast in the fyer.

Now herke to ye y are farre of, how I haue done, & conside my power, ye y be at hande.

The sinner at zion are asfayde, a soden fearfulness is come vpon y pporities. What is he amoge vs, say they, y shall dwell by y coluining fier: which of vs maye abyde that euerlasting heat? he y ledeth a godly lyfe, say I, & speaketh the trueth. he y abhorreth gaines wone by violence & disceyte: he y kepeth his hnde y he touch no rewarde: which stoppeth his eares, y he heare no counsell agens y innocet bloude: which holdeth downe his eyes, y he se none euell. he it is, y shall dwell on hye: whose sauegarde shall be in a bulwarcke of rockes, to hym shall be geuen meate, & hys waters shall not faile. Thynne eyes shall se y king in his glorie: eue y king of y farre countreis shall they se: thine herte studied for feare thinkinge thus: * What shall then become of y scribe, of y preceptuer of our money: what of him y taxed our fairest houses: There shalt y not se a people a strange tong to haue so diffused a language, y it may not be vnderstod: neither so strange a speech but it shall be perceaued. There shall zion be sene the heed cite of oure solempne feastes.

There shall thynne eyes se Ierusalem that glorious habitap: y tabernacle y neuer shall remoue: whose nayles shall neuer be taken out wout ende: whose coardes euerychone shall neuer corrupte: for the gloriuous mageste of y Lozde shall there be present among vs: as a place, where saye broad ryuers & streames are, thozow the which shall nether galey rowe, ner greateshyppes saile.

* For the Lozde is our iudge, the Lozde is our lawe gener. The Lozde is our king, and he him selfe shall be our sauoure. There are y coardes so layde abroade, y they cannot be better. And therfore they haue not tyred their make, nor spredde abroade their saile.

Then there is dealed great spoyles: yee, lame men rone after the pray. There lyeth no man that sayth: I am syck, but all euell is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

Come ye hepten and heare, take hede ye people. Herken thou erth & all y is therein: y round copaste and all that groweth there vpon: for the Lozde is angry w all people, and his displeasure is kindled agaynst all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, & deliuered them to the slaughter. So y their slayne shall be cast out, and their bodies synck: that euen the very hylls shall be wet w the bloud of the. All the starres of heauen shall waite, and the heu shall folde together lyke a roll, and all the starres therof shall fall, lyke as y leaues fall from the vynges and fyggetrees.

For my swerde shall be barbed in haue, and shall immediatly come downe in iudgment vpon Idumea, and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

And the Lozdes swerde shall be full of bloude, & be rusty w the fatnes and bloude of lames and goates, with the fatnesse of the kidneys of wethers. For the Lozde shall kill a great offering in Bozra, & a great slaughter in the lande of Idumea. There shall the vnicornes fall w them, and the bulles w the gyautes: and their lande shall be thozowely soaked with bloude, & their grounde corrupt with fatnes. Vnto the also, Zion, shall come the daye of y vngreace of God, and the peare when thynne a wne iudgmentes shall be recompensed. And his shoudes shall be turned to pyrch, and his earth to bymstone: & there with shall the land be kindled, so that it shall not be quenched daye ner nyght: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall go thozowe it for euer. But pellicanes, storkes, great oules and rauens shall haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

For God shall sprede out the lyne of desolation vpon it, & wepe it with the stones of emptynes. When kynges are called vpon there shall be none, & all prices shall be awaye.

Thornes shall growe in their palaces, nettels and thistles in their strongholdes, that the dragons may haue their pleasure therein, and that they maye be a court for estryches. There shall strange visures and monstrous bestes mete one another, and the wyld kepe company together. There shall the lamia lye, & haue her lodging. There shall the oule make her nest, buyde, be there at home and byng forth his yonge ones. There shall the kytes come together, echone to his lyke.

Seke thozow the scripture of the Lozde and reade it. There shall none of these thynnes be left out, there shall not one, ner loche lyke, saile. For what his mouth commaundeth that same doeth his sprete gather together, or fulfilleth. he hath cast y lot for the, and to those beastes hath his hndes deuyded the line: therfore those shall possesse the enherptaunce, from generatyon to generatyon, and dwell therein for euer.

Of the tyme and kyngdome of chile.

B ut the deserte and wildernes shall reioyce, the waste grounde shall be glad and flozpy as the lylly. She shall flozpye pleasauntly, and be topfull, and euer be geuyng of thankes more and more. For the glorie of Libanus, the betwye of Charnel and Saron shall be geuen her. These shall knowe the honoure of the Lozde, and the magesty of oure God. * And therfore strength the weakie hndes, and conforste the feble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a fearefull hert. Be of good chere, and feare not. * Be holde, poure God cometh to take vengeance: and you shall se the rewarde that God geueth: God cometh his awne selfe, & will deliuer you. * Then shall the eyes of y blinde be lpghtened, and the eares of the deaffe opened. Then shall the lame man leape as an hert, & the ydone mans tonge shall geue thackes. * In the wildernes also, there it all welles spring, & foudes of water in y deserte. The drye grounde shall turne to riuers, and the thirsty to springes of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, ther shall growe sweete floures and grene rushes. There shall be fote pathes & comestretes, this shall be called the holy waye. No vnclene person shall go thozowe it: for the Lozde him self shall go with them that waye, and the wayferer, nor ignorant shall not erre. There shall be no lyde, & no raulshing beast shall come therein, nor be there but me redemed shall go there fre and safe. And the redemed of the Lozde, I saie, shall conuerste and come to zion with thankesgelyng. Eueralstynge love shall they haue: pleasure and gladnes shall be among the. The xxxviij. Chapter.

When hezekias hearde that, he rent hym clothes, * and putt on a ſacke * and went into the temple of the Lord. But he ſente Eliakim the preſident, Sobna the ſcribe, with the eldeſt preſtes clothed in ſacke, vnto the prophet Eſay the ſonne of Amoz, and they ſaid vnto hym: Thus ſayth hezekias: Thyſ is the daye of trouble, of plage and of blaſphemye: for the chyldren are come to the place of byrth: but there is no power to brynge them forth. The Lord thy God (no doubt) hath well conſidered the wordes of Rabſakech, whom his Lord the king of Aſſyrians hath ſent to deſpye & blaſpheme the lypunge God: with ſoche wordes as the Lord thy God hath hearde epght well. And Eſay gaue the theſe anſwere: Saye thus vnto þour lord: thus ſayth the Lord: Be not afraid of the wordes that thou haſt hearde wherwith the kynge of the Aſſyrians ſeruantes haue blaſphemed me. * Beholde, I will cauſe a wynde to go ouer hym, aſſone as he heareth the rumour, he ſhall go againe into hym contrey: there wyll I deſtroye hym with the ſwarde in his awne lãde. * Howe when Rabſakech returned, he founde þ king of Aſſyria laying ſege to Libnas: for he had vnderſtãde þ he was departed fro Lachis. For ther came a rumour þ Charbakeſ hige of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynſt hym. And whẽ the king of Aſſyria heard that, he ſent other meſſengers to kynge hezekias w this commaundement: Saye thus to hezekias king of Iuda: Let not thy God diſceauce the, in whõ thou hopeſt, and ſayeſt: Ieruſalem ſhall not be geuen into the handes of the king of Aſſyria. For lo, thou knoweſt well howe the kinges of Aſſyria haue handled all the landes that they haue ſubuerſed, and hopeſt thou to eſcape? Were the people of Genetyles (whom my progenitours conquered) deliuered at any tyme thowow their goddeſſe? * As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the chyldren of Eden, which were at Chalaſſar. of the cyle Sapharum, Ena & Aua? Now when Ezeckia had receaued the lettere of the meſſengers, and read it, he went vnto þ houſe of the Lord, and opened the letter befoze the Lord. And Ezeckia prayed befoze þ Lord on this maner. O Lord of hoſtes, þ God of Iſrael, which dwelleſt vpon * Cherubin. Thou art the God, that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely haſt * created heauen and earth. * Enclyne thyne eare Lord & conſyde, open thyne eyes, O Lord, and ſe, and ponde all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, which hath ſent þis emballage to blaſpheme the lypunge God. It is true, O Lord, that the kynges of Aſſyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and lãdes, and caſt theyr goddeſſes in the fyre. Not withſtãdpyng thoſe were no goddeſſes, but þ worckes of mens handes, of wood or ſtone, therfoze haue they deſtroyed them. Welouer vs then, O Lord oure God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely art the Lord. Then Eſaye the ſonne of Amoz ſent vnto hezekia, ſayinge: Thus ſayth þ Lord God of Iſrael. Where as thou haſt made thy prayer vnto me, as touchyng Sennacherib þ kynge of Aſſyria, this is the anſwere, that þ Lord hath geuen concernyng hym. Deſpiſed art þ, and mocked (O daughter of Syõ) he hath ſhake his head at the, O daughter of Ieruſalem. But thou Sennacherib, * whom haſt thou deſpyed and blaſphemed? Agaynſt whom haſt thou liſted vpon thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lookes: euen agaynſt þ holy one of Iſrael. Thou with thy ſeruantes haſt blaſphemed the Lord, and thus holdeſt thou of thy ſelfe. I will coner the hye mountaynes, and ſydes of Libanus with my hoſmen. And there wyll I cut downe the hye Cedre trees and the ſapreſt ſpyre trees. I wyll vnto the hepgth of it, and into the cheſt of hym tymbre wooddeſ. If there be no water, I wyll graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I ſhall drye the vpon with the ſete of myne hoſt. Yee, haſt thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, & brought to paſſe of olde tyme? That ſame wyll I do nowe alſo: waſte, deſtroye, and brynge ſtronge cyties vnto heapes of ſtones. For theyr inhabitaours ſhall be lyke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. They ſhall be lyke þ graſſe & grene herbes in the felde, lyke the þey vpon houſe toppes, that withereth afore it be growne vpon.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goinge forth and thy commynge home, yee, & thy madneſſe agaynſt me. Therfoze thy furiousneſſe agaynſt me, and thy pryde is come befoze me. I wyll put my ryng in thy noſe, and my byrdle vpon the chawes of the, and turne the about, euen the ſame waye thou cameſt. I wyll geue the alſo this token (O hezekia) thyſ pere ſhalt thou eate ſuch as groweth of yt ſelfe & the ſeconde yere, þ which ſpringeth agayne of the ſame, and in the thyrde yere, yee ſhall ſowe & reape, yee ſhall plante vineyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And ſoche of the houſe of Iuda as are eſcaped, ſhall come together, and the remnaunt ſhall take rote beneth, and brynge forth frute aboue. For the eſcaped ſhall go out of Ieruſalem, and the remnaunt from the mounte Syon.

And thyſ ſhall the gelouſy of the Lord of hoſtes brynge to paſſe. Therfoze thus ſayeth the Lord, concernyng the kynge of the Aſſyrians. He ſhall not come into this cyle, and ſhall ſhote no arrowe into it, there ſhall no ſhilde hurt it, nether ſhall they caſt ditches about it. The ſame waye þ he came, he ſhall retorne, and not come at thyſ cyle. ſayeth þ Lord. And I wyll kepe and ſaue þ cyle (ſayeth he) for myne awne, and for my ſeruante Dauids ſake.

* Thus the angel went forth, and ſlew of the Aſſyrians hoſt, an hundred foureſcore and ſyue thouſande. And whẽ men aroſe vpon early in the moynyng. Beholde, they were ſlayne, and all laye full of deed bodyes. So Sennacherib the kynge of the Aſſyrians brake vpon, & dwelt at Aſinue. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Neſtath his God, that Adramalech and Sarazer his awne ſonnes ſlew him with the ſweard, and fled into the lande of Armenia. And Aſar hadon his ſonne raygned in his ſteade.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ Hezekia ſpoke vnto the deeth, but is yet reup: ured by the Lord, and lyueth ſyftene yeres after, for which benefite he geueſt thankes.

Nor lãge afore this, was hezekia ſycke vnto the deeth, * & the prophete Eſay þ ſonne of Amoz came vnto bi, & ſayd: Thus commaundeth the Lord: Set thyne houſe in order, for thou muſt dye, and ſhalt not eſcape. Then hezekia turned hym face toward the wall, and prayed vnto the Lord, and ſayde: Remembre (O Lord) that I haue walcked befoze the in treuth and a ſtedfaſt herte, & haue done the thynges that are pleaſant to the. And hezekia wepte ſore. Then ſayde God vnto Eſay: Go and ſpeake vnto hezekia: the Lord God of Dauid thy father ſendeth the this worde: I haue hearde thy prayer, and conſyded thy feares, * beholde, I wyll put ſyftene yeres mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer the and the cyle alſo, from the hande of the kynge of Aſſyria: for I wyll defende the cyle. * And take the thyſ token of the Lord, that he will do it, as he hath ſpoken: Beholde, I wyll retorne the ſadowe of Ahaſ dyl, that nowe is layed out with þ ſunne Sunne and bringe it ten degrees backward.

 * So the Sunne turned ten degrees back-
 * warde, the which he was descended afore.

¶ A thanchelgeyunge, which hezekia kyng of Iuda wrote, when he had bene sycke, and was recovered.

I thought I shulde haue gone to the gates of hell when myne age was shortned, and haue wanted the respyne of my peeres.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer vi-set the Lorde (the Lord I saye) in thys lyfe: I shall neuer se man among the dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is folden vp together, & taken awaye from me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: I haue hewen of my lyfe by my syn-nes, lyke a weener cutteth of hys webbe.

He wyl with pyninge sycknesse make an ende of me: yee, he wyl make an ende of me in one daye. * I thought I wolde haue lyned vnto the morowe, but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, and in one daye thou wilt make an ende of me.

¶ Then chafred I lyke a swalowe, and ly-ke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes into the heygth: O Lorde (sayde I) my sycknes kepeth me do-wne: ease thou me. * ¶ What shall I saye?
The Lorde hath made a promise to me. Yee, and he him selfe hath perfourmed it. I shall therfore as longe as I lyue remembre thys bitternes of my lyfe. ¶ Lorde men maye lyue beyond the yere, and I wyl declare to all men: that euē in those yeres I haue a soyfull lyfe, and that it was thou that causedest me to scape and agayne thou hast geuen lyfe to me.

¶ Beholde bytter as gall was my pensynesse, so sore longed I for hele. And it was thys pleasure to deliuer my lyfe, from the fylthye pytt, for thou it is (O Lorde) that hast cast all my synnes behynde thys backe. * ¶ For heil prayseth not the, death doth not magnifye the.

¶ They that go downe into the graue pray-se not thys trueth: but the lyuinge, yee, the lyuinge a knowledgē p. lyke as I do thys daye.

¶ The father telleth hys chyldren of thys saythfulnesse: * To heale me it is the Lorde des worke, and we wyl synge in songes in thys house, all the dayes of oure lyfe. ¶ And Esaie sayde: take a playster of fygges, and laye it vpon the soze, so shall it be whole.

¶ Then sayd hezekia: O what a great miracle is this, that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde?

¶ The xxxix. Chapter.

¶ Hezekia is reported of Esaie, because he shewed hys treasure vnto the embassytours of Babylon.

¶ The same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladamus sonne kyng of Babylon, sent lettres ad presentes to hezekia. For he understode howe p. he had bene syck, & was recovered agayne. * And hezehia was glad therof, & shewed the the com-dittes of his treasure, of syluer, of gold, of spices & rotes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cabbodges & treasure houses. There was not onethyng in hezekias house, and so tho-row out all his kyngdome, but he let the se it.

¶ Then came Esaie the prophete to kyng hezekia, and sayd vnto him. What haue the men sayde, and from whete came they vnto the? hezekia answered: they came oute of a farre cowntre vnto me, out of Babylō: Esaie sayde: what haue they looked vpon in thys house? hezekia answered. All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothyng in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

¶ Then sayde Esaie vnto hezekia: Under-stande p. worde of the Lorde of hostes: * Be-holde, the tyme wyl come, that euery thyng which is in thys house, and all that thys pro-genitours haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shall be caried to Babylon, and nothing left behynde. This sayeth the Lorde. Yee, and parte of thys sonnes, that shall come of the, ad whom p. shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons court. ¶ Then sayde hezekia to Esaie. Now God prosper his awne counsell, which p. hast tolde me. He sayde moze ouer: So p. there be peace & faithfulness in my tyme.

¶ The xl. Chapter.

¶ The commynge of S. John baptist. The preparacion of the Apostles. The callynge of the Disciples.

¶ Comforte my people (O ye prophetes) comforte my people, sayeth your God, comforte Ierusalem at the hert, & tell her: p. her tranayle is at an ende that her offence is pardoned, that she hath recovered of the Lordes hande sufficient correccion for all her synnes. * ¶ I voyce crieth in wil-dernesse. Prepare the waye for p. Lorde in the wildernesse, make streyght p. path for our God in p. deserte. Let all halleyes be exalted, & euery moystayne & hill be layed lowe, what so is croked, let it be made straght: & let the rough be made playne felde. * ¶ For p. glory of the Lorde shall appeare, and all flesh shall at once se it, for why: the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

¶ The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And p. prophet answered: what shall I crye? * that all fleshe is grasse, & that all the godlines therof, is as p. floure of p. felde. The grasse is wythered, p. floure falleth awaye. Euē so is the people as grasse, when the breath of p. Lorde bloweth vpo the. Nevertheless, whether the grasse wyther, or p. floure fade awaye. * Yet p. word of our God endureth for ever. So vp vnto p. hye hyll (O hye) p. that bright good tydynges, lyfte vp thys voyce with power, & thou preacher Ierusalem. Lyfte it vp without feare, and saye vnto the cyties of Iuda: Beholde

Of Esaie.

Jo. liii.

Beholde your God, beholde the Lord God shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he bringeth hys treasure with him, and his workes go before hym.
¶ He shall fede his flock lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lumbes together with hys arme, and carye them in his bosome, & shall kyndely intreate those that beare yonge.

¶ Who hath holden the waters in hys fist?
Who hath measured heauen w. his spanne, & hath comprehended all the earth of p. worlde in thys measure? Who hath weyed p. moystay-nes & hylles in a balauce. Who hath refourmed the mynde of p. Lorde: or to who hath he shewed his counsell. * ¶ Who is of his coucell to teach him: or who hath geuen him understandynge and hath taught him the path of iudgement. Who taught him counge and opened to him the waye of vnderstandynge.

¶ Beholde, all people are in comparyson of hym, as a droppe to a bocket full, & are counted as the lest thyng that the balauce weyeth. Yee & p. fleshe taketh vp as a very lttel thyng. Li-banus is not sufficient to minstre fyre for hys offeringe, and all the bestes therof are not ynough to one sacrifice. All people in comparison of him are rekened as nothing, * yf they be compared with him lesse then nothyng and as it that is not. ¶ To who then wyl ye liken God: or what similitude wyl ye set vp vnto him? Shall the caruer make him a carued ymage: & shall p. goldsmith couer hym with golde, or cast him into a fourme of syluer plates? ¶ Moze ouer, shall the ymage maker (that the pooze man which is dyspoled, maye haue some thyng to sett vp also) seke out and chole a tree, p. is not rotten, & carue therout an yma-ge, p. moueth not: knowe ye nothing o wretches: hearde ye neuer of it: hath it not bene preached vnto you sence the begynning: haue ye not bene enformmed of this, by the foudacyon of the earthe, that he sytteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitours of the worlde are in comparyson of him, but as grethoppers. * ¶ That he spredeth out p. heanens as a conerynge, that he stretched them out, as a tent to dwell in. ¶ That he bringeth prynces to nothing, and the iudges of the earth to dust: so p. of the it may be sayde they be not planted nor sowe agayne, neither their stock roted agayne in the earth: for as soone as he bloweth vpon the, they wyther & fade awaye, lyke p. straw in a whyrle winde.

¶ To who nowe wyl ye lyken me, & whom shall I be lyke, sayeth the holy one. Lyfte vp your eyes on hye, & consyde. * Who hath made those thynges, which come out by so great heapes: & he call them all by their names.
¶ For there is nothing hid vnto the greatnesse of hys power, strength, & myght. Howe may then Iacob thinke, or how may Irael saye: My wayes are hid fro the Lorde, & my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Know-west thou not, or hast thou not hearde, that the euerlastynge God, the Lorde which made all p. corners of the earth, is nether weery nor fatynt: and that his wysdome can not be copyehended: but that he geneth strength vnto the weery, and power vnto the fatynt: Children are weery and fatynt, and the strongest men fall. * ¶ But vnto them that haue the Lord before they eyes, shall strength be encreased.

¶ Agles wynges shall growe vpon the. Whe they runne they shall not fall: and when they go, they shall not be weery.

¶ The xli. Chapter.

¶ Of the goodnes and mercy of God towarde the people.

¶ I sayll (ye I landes) and herke vnto me. Be stronge ye people, Come hy-ther, and he we poure cause, we wyl go to p. lawe together. ¶ Who raysed vp p. iust man fro the rynginge of the Sunne, & called him to go forth? Who cast downe the prople, and subdued the kynges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the groude with his swearde, and scatre the lyke stubble with his bowe: he foloweth vpon the, and goeth safely him self. And that in a waye where, before his fote had not troden. Who hath made and created thes thynges: euē he that called

I the Lorde, which am p. fyrst, and with the last. The yles sawe it, & did feare, and the endes of the earth, were abashed, drewe nye, & cam hither. ¶ Every man exhorted hys neygh-boure, & brother, and bad him be stronge. The carpenter comforted the goldsmith, & the goldsmith p. hance mā, saying: Glue wylld obe-ry wyl in it. ¶ It shall be good, p. we fasten this cast worke: & then they fastened it with nay-les, that it shulde not be moued, ¶ But thou Irael art my seruauite: thou Iacob art ele-cte, thou art p. scede of Abraham my beloued thou art he who I led fro the endes of p. earth

Thou shalt fanne them and the roynde shall carpe them awaye, and the whirly wynde shall scatter them. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delpyte in praylinge the holy one of Israel.

* When the thyrst and pooze seke water & fynde none, and when theyr tonge is drye of thyrst. I geue it them sayth the Lorde. I God of Israel forsake them not. * I bypunge forth foudes in the hylls, and welles in playne felde. I turne the wyldernes to ryuers, and the drye lande to condyttes of water. I plante in the waste grounde trees of Cedre, Bore, Myrr and Olives. And in the drye I set ffyre trees, Olmes, & Hawthornes together. All this do I, that they altogether may se and marche, perceauing with their hertes and cōsydare, that the hande of y Lord maketh these thynges, and that the holy one of Israel bypungeth them to passe. Stande at your cause (sayeth the Lorde) & bringe forth your strongest grounde, sayth the kynge of Jacob. Let the bring forth their goddes, and let ther goddes tel vs what shall chaunce here after: yee, let the shewe vs the thynges y are past, what they be: let the declare the vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Ethen, shewe vs thynges for to come, & tel vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shall we knowe, that you are goddes do somthing, ether good or bad: so will we both knowledg the same: and tell it out.

* Beholde, ye goddes are of naught, & your makynge is of naught, yee abhominable is y man that hath chosen you. Neuertheles, * I haue waked vp one from the North, and he shall come. But there is none that sheweth or declareth eny thing, there is none also y heareth your wordes. The fyrst is he y shall saye to yon, Beholde, beholde they are present, & to Ierusalem it selfe will I geue an Euāgellike. But when I cōsyder there is not a man amonge the, nor any y can geue counsell, nor that when I examen them that can answer one word. Lo, wicked are they & vayne, w the thynges also y they take in hād: yee, their ymages are but wynde & vayne thynges.

The xlii. Chapter.

The commenge of Chyrr, and hys baptyme.

* Beholde, * this is my seruaunte vpon whom I leane, my electe, In whom my soule is pacified. I haue geuen hym my spyrite, that he maye shewe forth iudgement and equyte among the Gentyles. He shall not be an outcrier, nor lyfte vp his voyce. His voyce shall not be heard in the stretes. And a bysed rede shall he not breake, and the smoking flaxe shall he not quench: but saythfully and truly shall he geue iudgement, not be penyue nor carefull, that he maye restore ryghteousnes vnto the earth, and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. * For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto hym (euen he that made the heauens, and spred them abroad, and set forth the earth w her increase: which geneth breath vnto the people that is in it, and spirete to them that dwell therin) I the Lorde haue called the in ryghteousnes, and led the by the hāde. * Therefore wyl I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be the * lyght of the Gentyles. That thou mayest open y eyes of the bynde, * let out y prisoners fro ther bondes & them that spt in darcknesse, out of the dongeon house. Euen I am the Lorde, and this is my name: * And my glozy wyl I geue to none other, nether myne honoure to grauen ymages. Beholde, olde thynges are come to passe, & new thynges do I declare. And o euer they come, I tell you of them.

* Spynge vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thanckelgeynge, blowe out his prayse from the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the see, and all that is therein, prayse hym, y Iles and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernes with the cyties like vpper voyce, y townes also that they of Cedar dwell in. Let the be glad that spt vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hye mountaynes: as cryynge glozye vnto the Lorde, and magnifyng hym amonge the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a gyaute, and take a stomack to hi lyke as a fresh mā of warre. He shall roare & crye, & overcome his enemies.

I haue longe holden my peace (sayeth the Lorde) I haue bene styll and refrayned my selfe, but nowe I wyl crye lyke a traue-lyng womā, & at once wyl I destrope, and denoure. I will make wastes both mountayne and hill, & drye vponer grene thing y groweth thereon. I will drye vpon the floudes of water, and dryncke vpon the ryuers. I wyl bring the blinde into a strete, that they knowe not: and lede them into a fote path, that they are ignoraunt in. I shall make darcknesse lyght before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges haue I done vnto them, and not forsaken them: * They are fallē backe yee, and let them be ashamed earnestly, that hope in y doles, & saye to fashyoned ymages: yee are oure goddes.

Heare, O ye deafe men, and sharpe your epyghetes to se (O ye blinde,) * Who is blinde, but my seruaut? O so deafe, as my messanger, whom I sent vnto them? For who is the rule so bynde (saye they) as the perfecte man and so bynde as the Lordes seruante? Thou vnderstondest moch, and kepest nothyng: the eares are open, & no man heareth. The Lorde is mercifull vnto the for his ryghteousnes sake: that his worde myght be magnified & praysed. But the people them selues is robbed and trode vnder the fote chapynd in dongeons and they all (I saye) be shut into prison houses. * They be carped awaye captiue and no man doth losse the: They be troden vnder fote, and no mā doth labour to bring them agayne. * But who is he amonge yon, y pondreth this, that cōsydareth it, & taketh it for a warnyng in tyme to come?

* Who suffered Jacob to be troden vnder fote, and Israell to be spoyled? wyl not the Lorde? Because we haue synned agaynst him & haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, nether bene obedient vnto his lawe. Therefore hath he poured vpon hym hys wrathfull displeasure, and stronge battayll, which cryeth hym on euery syde, yet wyl he not vnderstande. He burneth hym vp, yet synneth it not into hys herte.

The xliii. Chapter.

God promysed to send hys Chyrr, which shall deliuer hys people. He saygeueth synners for hys awne sake.

* Nowe, the Lorde that made the Jacob, and he that fashyoned the: O Israell, sayeth thus: * Feare not, for I haue redeemed the. * I haue called the by name: thou art myne awne. * Yf thou goest thorow the water, I wil be with the, that the stronge floudes shulde not pluck the awaye. * And yf thou walkest thorow the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shall not kynde vpon the. For I am the Lord thy God the holy one of Israel, thy Sauoure. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Mozaues & the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my lyght, and because I set by the, and lo-ued the. I wyl geue ouer all men for the, and deliuer vp all people for thy sake, feare not: for I am with the. * I wyl bringe thy sede fro the East, and gather the together fro the west. I wyl saye to the North, lett go. And to the South, kepe not backe: * but bring me my sonnes from farre, and my daughters fro the endes of y worlde. Namely, all those that be called after my name. For them haue I created, fashyoned, & made for myne honour.

* Bring forth that people, which is blinde & yet hath eyes, which are deafe although they haue eares. * All nations come in one and be gathered together, which amonge the shall declare soche thynges, and tell vs what is to come: Let them bypunge theyr witness so shall they be fre: els, let them heare, and saye, it is truth. You are my witnesses (sayeth the Lorde) and my seruant, whom I haue chosen: therefore be certified & geue me faithfull credence: and cōsydare, * that I am he, * before whom there was neuer any God, and that ther shalbe none after me. I am euen, I am the only Lorde & beside me ther is no Sauoure. I gaue warnyng, I made whole. I taught you when there was no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde must ye beare me your selues, (sayth the Lorde, that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnyng, and * there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. I do the worke and who shall be able to let it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde the holy one of Israel your redeemer: * for your sake I haue sent to Babylon, and brought downe y strengest of them. All they are hightyng with the Chaldees that boost them of theyr synnes: Euen I the Lorde your holy one which haue made Israell, and am your kynge. Thus sayeth y Lorde (euen he that maketh a waye in the * see, & a footpath in the myghty waters: * which bringeth forth y charrettes & horses, the hoste & the power of warre, that they may fall and neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towre is quenched.

Remembre not thynges of olde, and regard nothyng that is past. Beholde I shall make a newe thyng, and shortly shall it appere, & shall you not knowe it? I wyl make stretes in the deserte, and ryuers of water in the wyldernes: The wyld beasts shall worshyppe me: the dragons, and the yonge Estriches. * For I shall geue water in the wyldernes, and streames in the desert: that may geue dryncke to my people, who I chose. Thys people haue I made for my self, and they shall shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnlust toward me, O Israell. Thou gauest me not thy bestes for burnt offeringes nether dydest honour me with thy sacrificys. Thou boughtest me no deare spyce with thy money, nether pourest the fat of thy sacrificys vpon me. * howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offeringes, nether greuous in incēse. But thou hast labored me with thy synnes, & wroged me with thyne vngodlynes.

* Where as I yet, eue I am he onely, that for myne awne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: so that I will neuer thinke vpon them. But me now in remembraunce (for we wyl reason together) and shewe what thou hast for the, to make the ryghteous. * Thy fyrst father offended fore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therefore I ether suspēded, or slue the cheefest pynces. I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israell into reprofe.

The xliiii. Chapter.

Chyrr

Chis promyseth to dargene his church.

Sheare nowe, O Jacob my seruaunt, and Israel who I haue chosen. For thus sayeth the Lord, that made the, fashyoned y, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe. We not asayed, O Jacob my seruaunt, thou ryghteous, who I haue chosen. * For I shall poure water vpon the drye grounde, & ryuers vpon the thurstye. * I shall poure my sprete vpon thy sede, and myne encrease vpon thy rock. They shall growe together, lyke as y grasse, and as the wyllowes by the waters syde. * One shall saye: I am the Lordes. Another shall call hym selfe after the name of Jacob. The thyrde shall subscribe with hys hande vnto the Lord, and geue him self vnder the name of Israel.

Thus hath the Lord spoken: euen the kynge of Israel, and his redeemer, the Lord of hostes: * I am the fyrst and the last, and without me is there no God. Yf any be lyke me, let hym call forth the thynge paste and openly shewe it, and laye it playne before me what hath chaused synce I apoynted y people of the worlde, and what shall be shortly or what shall come to passe, in tyme longe to come, let them shewe thes thynge. We not abashed nor asayed. For haue not I euer tolde you hyther to, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde poure selues. Is there any God excepte me? or any maker, that I shulde not knowe hym?

All caruers of Images are but vayne, & the carued ymages that they loue, can do no good. They must beare recorde the selues, that (seynge they can nether se nor vnderstande) they shalbe confounded. * Who darre the make a God, or fashyon an ymage, that is profytful for nothynge? * Beholde, all the felowshyppe of them must be brought to confusion. And truly all the worke masters of them at men, they shall all be gathered together, they shall stande, tremble, and be confounded one with a nother. The smith maketh an are, and tempereth it with hoate coales, and fashyoneth it with hammers, and worketh w it with all the strength of hys armes: yee, so metyme he is faynt for very hunger, and so thurstye, that he hath no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh measure of the tymbre: and spredeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some coloure, he playneth it, he ruleth it, ad squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and according to the bewty of a man: yf it maye stande in the temple.

Mozzouer, he goeth oute to hewe downe Cedre trees. He bypnygeth home Olmes and Olex: and takynge a bolde corage, he seketh out the best tymbre of the wodde. He him selfe hath planted a pyne tree, which the rayne hath swelled, which wodd serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fyre of it to bake breade. And afterwarde maketh a God there of, to honoure it: an Idole to knele before it. One pece he burneth in y fyre, with another herosteth flesh, that he maye ente roste his belly full: with the thyrde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh hi a God, & an Idole for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, & sayeth: deliuer me, for thou art my God.

* Yet men nether cōspyre ner vnderstande, because theyr eyes are stopped, that they cannot se: and their hertes, that they cannot perceiue. They pōndre not in theyr myndes, for they haue nether knowledge ner vnderstandynge, to thinke thus. I haue bzent one pece in the fyre: I haue baked bread with the coles there of, I haue roasted flesh with all, & eaten it: shall I none of the residue make an abhominable Idole, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wood? Thus he doth but lese hys labour, and hys herte which is disceayned, doth turne hym asyde: so that none of them can haue a fre cōscience to thinke: maye not I erre?

Conspyre thys (O Jacob and Israel) for thou art my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou myghtest serue me. O Israel, forget me not. * As for thynge offences, I haue dyspūen them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me, for I haue redeemed the.

Beglad ye heauens, who the Lord hath made for the Lord hath dealete graciously w hys people, let all that is here beneth vpon y earth, be to yfull. Reioyse ye mountaynes and woddes, with all the trees therof: for y Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and wyl shewe hys glozy vpon Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord thy redeemer, cū he that fashyoned the from thy mothers wombe. * I the Lord, do all thynge my selfe alone. I only spede out the heauens and I only haue layde the foundacyō of the earth by myn awne selfe. I destroye the cokes of witches, and make the Soothsayers foolles. As for the wyle, I turne them backward, and make theyr connyng folysnesse.

He doth set vp the purpose of his seruante, and fulfilleth the counsell of his messengers. Concernynge Ierusalem, he sayeth: It shalbe inhabited. And of the cyties of Iuda: They shalbe buylded agayne, and I will repayre theyr decayed places: he sayeth to the groude: be drye. And I will drye by thy wader floudes. He sayeth of Egypt. * He is myne herdman: so that he shall fulfill all thynge after my will. He sayeth also of Ierusalem: It shall be buylded, and of the temple: It shalbe fast grounded.

The xlv. Chapter.

The

The assurance of the people by Egypt. The comynge of Christ and callynge of the Gentyles.

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto Egypt his anoynted whom I haue taken by y ryght hāde, to subdue natiōs before hi. * I wyl lowse the gyde of kynges, & I wyl open y gates before his face, and not to shut their doores. I will go before the, and make the croked streyght, I shall breake the brasen doores, & burst the yron barres. I shall geue the y byd treasures, & the thynge which is secretly kept: y thou mayest knowe that I am y Lord God of Israel which haue called the by thy name: & * that for Jacob my seruaunt sake, & for Israel my chosen. For I called the by thy name, and ordeyned the or euer thou knewest me. * Cū I the Lord be fore who there is none other: for without me ther is no God. * I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me, that I myght be knowne fro the rylling of y sunne to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothynge without me. For I am y Lord, and there is els none. It is I y created the lyght & darcknes. * I make peace and trouble: yee, cū I the Lord do all these thynge. * Ye heauens fro aboue droppe downe, & let the cloudes rayne ryghteousnes. The earth open it selfe, and bringe forth health, that therby righteounes maye flopph. Cū I the Lord bringe it to passe.

* Who be vnto him y stryuerth w his maker, the pottherde with the potter. Sayeth y claye to the potter. What maketh thou? or thy worke serueth for nothynge? Who be vnto him that sayeth to hys father. Why begettest y? And to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the Lord, euen the holy one, & maker of Israel. Alike me of thynge for to come, cōcernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembrance, as touching the workes of my hādes: I haue made the earth, and created man vpo it. With myne handes haue I spred forth heauen, and geuen a commaundement for all the host therof. I shal wake him vp with ryghteousnes, and ordeyne all his wayes. * He shal buyde my cytie, and let out my prisoners: & that nether for gyft nor rewardes, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Thus sayeth the Lord. The occupiers of Egypt, the marchautes of the Morians and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shalbe thynge, they shal followe the, and go with cheynes vpo their fete. They shal fall downe before the, and make supplicacyon vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shalbe with the. * O howe profounde art y God, thou God and Sautoure of Israel. Confounded are they all, and put to dishonoure: they are gone hence together with shame, euen y makers of ymages. But Israel shalbe saued in y Lord, which is the cuerlastynge saluacyō. Ye shall not come to shame ner confusion, worlde without ende.

For thus sayeth the Lord: * euen be that created heauē, the God that made the earth, that fashyoned it, and sett it forth. He dyd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited: Cū I the Lord, without whom there is none other. * I haue not spokē secretly, ne ther in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Jacob: like me, I am the Lord, which when I speake, declareth the thing that is righteous & true: gather you & come together, draw me hyther, you y are escaped of the people. * Haue they eny vnderstandynge, that let vp the stockes of theyr Idols, & praye vnto a God, that cannot helpe them? draw nye, come hyther, and let the aske counsell one at another and shewe forth. What is he, that tolde thys before? or, who spake of it, euer sence the begynning? haue not I the Lord done it? * I am the true God and Sautoure, and ther is els none but I. * And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) that ye maye be saued: for I am God, & there is els none. I swaie by my selfe: oute of my mouth cometh the word of ryghteousnesse, and that maye no mā turne: * but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tungen shal swaie by my name, saying. Verily, in the Lord is my ryghteousnes and strength. To him shal men come: but all they that thinke scoime of him, shalbe confounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustified and make their boast in the Lord.

The xlv. Chapter.

The health that cometh by Christ is prophesied.

Bell is fallē, Rado is broke downe: whose ymages were a burthen for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make them weary. They are soucke downe, and fallen together: for they maye not ease them of theyr burthen, therfore must they go into captiuitie. Herten vnto me, O house of Jacob, and all ye that remaine yet of the household of Israel: whom I haue bozne from poure mothers wombe, and brought you vp fro poure byrth, tyll ye were growē. I, I, which shal beare you vnto poure last age. I haue made you, I wyl also norysh you, beare you and saue you. * Whom wyl ye make me lyke or to whom wyl ye make me equall or cōpare me that I shulde be lyke hym, in fashyon or ymage, that I maye be lyke him? * Ye foolles (no doute) wyl take out syluer & golde oute of poure purses, and weye it, & hye a goldsmith to make a God of it, that men maye knele downe and worshyppe it. * Yet must he be take on mennes shouldeers: bozne, and set in his place, that he maye stande and not moue out of his place. Alas, y shuld crye vnto crie vnto him which geueth no answer: and helpuerth not the man that calleth vpon him, from hys trouble:

Consyde this well, and be ashamed. Go into poure a wne selues (O ye runnagates.) Remembre the thynges which are past, sence p begynninge of the worlde: that I am God & that there is els no God, yee: & that there is nothyng, lyke vnto me. In the begynnyng of a thyng. I shewe the ende therof: & I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe.
My deuice stondeth, stedfastly stablyshed, & I fulfyll all my pleasure. * I call a byrde out of the East, & the ma by whom my counsell shall be fulfylled out of farre countreys, as soone as I thynke to deuise a thyng, I do it.

Hearre me, O ye p arc of an hys stomacke, but farre from ryghteousnesse. I shall bring forth my ryghteousnesse. It is not farre, & my health shall not tary longe awaye. I will laye health in Sion, and in Israel my glory.

The xlvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde Agaynst Babylon.

Behold, I will bring downe the daughter, y^e byrgyn Babylon) syt thou downe in the dust
syd vpon the grounde, & not in a throne (O thou mayden of Caldea.) Thou shalt no more be called tender & pleasant. Bring forth the quene, & grinde merle, vntill she thy brodded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees: & waide thozowe p water ryuers.

* Thy name shall be discouraged and thy prynyces shall be sene. For I will avenge me of the & will shewe no mercy to the as, I do to other men sayeth oure redeemer, which is called p Lorde of hostes the holy one of Israel.

Syt syll, holde thy tynge, and get the in
to some darck corner (O daughter Chaldea)
for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kyng-domes. I was so wroth w my people, that I punished myne enheritaunce, and gaue them into thy power. * Neuertheles, y^e shewdest
the no mercy, but euen the very aged men of them, dydest thou oppresse ryght soze with thy yock, and thou thoughtest thus: I shall be lady for ever. And belyde all that, thou hast not regarded these thynges, nether remembered what was the ende of that cytie Jerusalem. Heare now therfore, thou wyllfull, that syttest so careles, and speakest thus in thyne herte: * I am alone, and without me is there none. I shall neuer be wydowe, ner desolate agayne. And yet both these thynges shall come to the vpon one daye in the twynclinge of an eye: & Namely, wyddowhead, and desolacyon. They shall myghtely fall vpon the,
for the multitude of thy wyches, and for the greate heape of thy confusers. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednes, and hast sayd,

* A man seyth me. Thyne awne wyldome and connyng hath deceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone and without me ther is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpon the, and thou shalt not knowe, from whence it shall aryle. Mytchese shall fall vpon the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. A so-dayne viter destruction, shall come vpon the oz euer thou be aware.

Nowe go to thy confusers, & to the multitude of thy wyches (with whom thou hast woried thy selfe fro thy youth) yf they maye helpe the, oz strengthen the. Thou hast hytherto had many counsellors of them, so let the heauen gasers and the beholders of starres and mone prophetes come on now and delyner the: yee, and lett the shewe, when these newe thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde, they shall be lyke strawe, which yf it be kyndled with fyre, no man maye ryde it for the vehemence of the flame. And yet it geueth no synders to warme a man by, ner cleare fyre to syt by. Thus are they with who thou hast weried thy selfe, and thus are thy mar-chauntes that haue bene with the from thy youth. Euery one hath taken his awne waye and shall none of them defende the.

The xlviii. Chapter.

The pcepte of the Actes is reposed. The Lorde alone wyde worshipped, which hath chosen vs, and which socoureth vs for his awne sake.

Behold, I will bring downe the daughter, y^e byrgyn Babylon) syt thou downe in the dust
syd vpon the grounde, & not in a throne (O thou mayden of Caldea.) Thou shalt no more be called tender & pleasant. Bring forth the quene, & grinde merle, vntill she thy brodded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare

Syt syll, holde thy tynge, and get the in
to some darck corner (O daughter Chaldea)
for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kyng-domes. I was so wroth w my people, that I punished myne enheritaunce, and gaue them
into thy power. * Neuertheles, y^e shewdest
the no mercy, but euen the very aged men of them, dydest thou oppresse ryght soze with thy yock, and thou thoughtest thus: I shall be lady for ever. And belyde all that, thou hast not regarded these thynges, nether remembered what was the ende of that cytie Jerusalem. Heare now therfore, thou wyllfull, that
syttest so careles, and speakest thus in thyne
herte: * I am alone, and without me is there

lacyon. They shall myghtely fall vpon the,
for the multitude of thy wyches, and for the greate heape of thy confusers. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednes, and hast sayd, Neuertheles, for my names sake, I will drawe my wrath: & it shall be for myne honours sake, yf I patiently forbeare the, and do not rote y out. Beholde, I haue poured the, yet not as siluer. * I haue chosen the in y^e fyre of affliction: and that onely for myne awne sake: yee, * eue for myne awne sake will I do this: oz els, what dishonour wolde they do to my name: herken vnto me, O Jacob, and Israel whom I haue called, I am he. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrst & the last.

My hande hath layde the foundatyon of the earth: and my right hande hath spaned ouer the heauens. Allone as I call them they are there. Gather you all together, and herken: which of ponder goddes hath declared this?
The Lorde hath a loue vnto him, and he shall perfourme hys wyl agaynst Babel, & declare hys power agaynst the Chaldees. I my selfe alone, euen I haue told you this before. Yee, I dyd call hym & bringe hym forth: and he shall geue a prosperous iorney. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken eny thing darkly, lense the begynnyng: when a thyng begynneth, I am there.

Wherfore, the Lorde God and hys sprete hath sent me. And thus sayth the Lorde God thy redeemer, the holy one of Israel: I am the Lorde thy God, which teach the * profitable thynges, and leade the the waye, that thou shuldest go. * That thou hadst regarded my commandementes, then had thy welthy-nes bene as the water streame: and thy ryghtousnes as the waues flowynge in the see: thy seede also had be like as the sande in the see, and the frute of thy body lyke y grauelle stones therof. His name shulde not be rote out: nor destroyed before me. * So awaye fro Babylon, fyre fro the Chaldees w a mery voyce speake of this, declare it abroad, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, saye: The Lorde hath redeemed hys seruaunt Jacob, that they suffred no thirst, he lead them thozow the wilderness, and caused y waters to flowe out vnto them fro out of the rocke.
* He claue the rocke a fonder, and the water gusshed out. * As for the vngodly, they haue no peace, sayth the Lorde.

The xlix. Chapter.

They shall gather together all weapons, be they neuer to farre of.

Ye people, herken vnto me, & take heede ye people from farre. The Lorde hath called me from my birth, and made me cyon of my name fro my mothers wombe: he hath made my mouth like a sharpe sword: vnder the shadowe of hys hade hath he defended me, and hyd me in hys quyer as a good arrowe, & sayd vnto me. Thou art my seruaunt Israel. * I will be honoured in the. When answerde I: I haue lost my laboure, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

Neuertheles, I will comyt my cause and my worke vnto the Lorde my God. And nowe as sayth the Lorde, euen he that hath yoned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruaunt, y^e I maye byng Jacob agayn vnto him: how best. Israel will not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose sight I am greate, which also is my Lorde, my God and my strength.
And he sayde: It is but a small thyng that y art my seruaunt, to sett vp the kynredde of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Israel. * For I haue made the the light of the Gentyls, that thou mayst be my healeth vnto the ende of the worlde.

Wherfore, thus sayth the Lorde the auger and holy one of Israel: because of the abhorringe and despyng amonge the Gentiles, concerning the seruaunt of all them that beare rule. Kynges and princes shall se, and arple and worshyp, because of the Lorde that is saythfull: & because of the holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the. And thus saith y^e Lorde: * In the tyme accepted haue I heard the, and in the daye of saluacion haue I helped the. * I will preserue the and make the to be the atonement of the people, that y mayst helpe vp the earth agayne: a possesse agayne the desolate heritages. * That thou mayest saye to the prisoners: go forth, and to them that are in darcknesse: come into the lyght, they shall fede in the hye wayes, and get their pasture in all hye places. * They shall neither hoer, ner thirst: heate nor sunne shall not hurte them. For he that saouret them, shall leade the, and geue them dyncke of the springe welles. I will make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shall be exalted. And beholde, they shall come fro far: lo, some from the north and west, some from the lande of Sinis, which is in the south.
* Reioyse ye heauens: & syng praples, thou earth. Talke of tope ye hylls, for God hath conforted hys people, and will haue mercye vpon his that be in trouble.

But Sion sayde: * God hath forsaken, & my Lorde hath forgotten me. Wyll a wyfe forget the childe of her wombe, and not pitie the sonne who she hath borne? And though, they do forget, yet will not I forget y. Be-holde, I haue written the vp vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my syght. * They make hast to buylde the vpon agayne. As for y^e those that ouerthrowe the, and made the wast, they shall departe from the. * Lyst vp thyne eyes, and loke about the: all these gather the together, & come to the. As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) thou shalt put them all vpon the, as an apparell, & gyde them to the as a byrd doth her ieweils. As for thy lād that lyeth desolate wasted and destroyed: it shall be to narowe for the that shall dwell in it. And they y wolde deuoure the, they shall be farre

farre awaye. Then the childe wold the baren shall bringe forth vnto y. shall saye in thyn care: thys place is to narrowe, gyue place y I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thyn-ke by thy selfe: who hath begotten me thes seinge I am baren and alone, a captiue and an out cast: And who hath noysshed the vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these?

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hande to y Gentylis, and set vp my token to the people.
They shall bring the thy sonnes in their lap-pes: and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shall be thy nur-syng fathers, and quenes shall be thy nursing mothers. They shall fall before the w they faces flatt vpon the earth: and lyche vpon the dust of the fete: that thou mayst knowe how that I am the Lorde. * And who so putterh his trust in me, shall not be confounded. Who spoyled the gyante of his praye: or who tak-eth the prisoner fro the myghtye? And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde. The prisoners shall be taken from the gyante, and the spoyle deliuered from the violence: for I will maynteyne thy cause agaynst thyn aduer-saries, and saue thy sonnes. And will fede thyn enemyes with theyr awne fleshe, and make them drynke of their awne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all flesh shall knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lorde thy sauour, thy noble redeemer.

The i. Chapter.

The Jewes are reproued, and also called.

Thus sayth y Lorde: * Where is y byll of your mothers deuorcement, that I sent her a waye: or who is y blurer, to who I solde you? * Be-holde, for your awne offences are ye solde, & because of youre transgression, is your mother forsake. For why wolde no mā receaue me, when I came: and when I called, no mā gaue me answer. * Is my hande shortened that it might not helpe: or haue I not power to deliuer: lo, * at a worde I drynke vpon the see: and of water floudes I make drye lāde: so that for want of water, the fyre corrupt and dye for thirst. * As for heauen, I clothe it with darchnesse, and put as it were a sack vpon it.

The Lorde God hath geue me a well lerned tonge, * so that I can comfort the which are troubled: yee, and that in due reason. He wakeneth myne eare vpon by tymes in y monyng: by tymes in the morninge, I saye, he will waken myne eare, that I myght heke as to y scole masters. * The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I nott saye, naye: ner withdraue my selfe: * but I offe my backe vnto the smyters, & my chekes to the nippers. * I turne not my face fro shame and spitting, & the Lorde God shall helpe me: therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face like a flint stone, for I am sure, y I shall not come to confusio. Ipe is at hād that iustifieth me, who will then go w me to lawe: Let vs stande one against another: yf there be any y will reason with me, let hym come here forth to me. * Beholde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he then y can condempne me: lo, * they shall be all like as an olde clothe, the more shall cate them vp.

Therfore, who so feareth the Lorde amōg you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruauit, Whoso walketh in darchnesse, and no lyght shyneth vpon him, lett hym put hys trust in the name of the Lorde, and holde him by his God. But take heed, & ye all kyndle a fyre of the wrath of God, and stee vpon the coales: walke on in the glistering of your awne fyre & in y coales y ye haue kindled. This cometh vnto you fro my hād, namely that ye shall sleepe in sorowe.

The ii. Chapter.

Consolacion & comfort is promysed vnto the saythfull.

Take vnto me, ye y holde of rightteousnes, & ye that seke the Lorde.
Take hebe vnto y stone, wherout ye are hewen, & to the graue wherout ye are dygged. Considre * Abrahā your father, & Sara y bare you: howe y I called him alone, & blest hym, and encreased him Therfore shall the Lorde comforte y, & repayre all her decaye: making her deserte as a paradise, & her wilderness as y garde of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye shall be founde there, thakelgeuings & voyce of prayse. Haue respect vnto me the, O my people both by ghe & lowe & lape thyn eare to me: * for a lawe & an ordinaunce shall go forth frome, to lyghte the Gentils. It is hard by, that my health & my righteousnes shall go forth, and the people shall be ordred with myne arme.

The plandes, y is the Gentils, shall hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lift vp your eyes toward heauen, and loke vpon the earth breneth. * For the heauens shall vanythe awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shall waxe olde lyke a cloth, & they y dwell therein shall perishe in lyche manner. But my saluacio shall endure for euer, and my righteousnes shall not cease. Herten vnto me, ye that haue pleasure in righteousness, y people y bearest my lawe in thyn heart. * Feare not the curse of men: be not afrayde of their blasphemys and reuyliges: * for wormes & mothes shall eate the vpon lyche cloth & woll. But my ryghteousnes shall endure for euer, & my sayyng health fro generacion to generacion. Make vp, wake vp: and be stronge. O thou arme of the Lorde, wake vp, lyke as in tyme past, euer and sence the worlde beganne.

Art

* Art not thou the same arme, that hast wounded the proude Egypt, and betwen the pagis in peeces: Art not y eue he, which hast dred vpon the depe of the see, which hast made mayne y see grounde, y the deliuered myght goe thowow: Therfore y redeemed of y Lorde shall turne agayne, & come wth ioye vnto Sio, there to endure for euer: * That myrth & gladnesse myght be with the: that sorowe and wo myght fle from them: * Yee I, I am euen he, that in all thynges geneth you consolacion. What art thou then, that fearest a mortall mā, the childe of mā, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure: And forgettest y Lorde that made the, that spred out the hea-uens, and layde the foundation of the earth But thou art euer afrayde for the syght of thyn oppressoure, which is ready to do har-me: Where is the wrath of the oppressoure?
The tyme cometh on faste whē the presoner shall be losened, and he shall not dye in the dongeon nor yet be consumed by fainyment. * I am the Lorde thy God (that make the see to be still, & to rage:) * whose name is the Lorde of hostes: I haue put my wordes in thy mouth, & haue defended the in the shadowe of my hande: that I maye plāte the heauens, & lepe the solidacy of the earth, and saue vnto Sion: thou art my people.

Awake, awake, and stande vp, O Jerusalem, thou that from the hād of the Lorde, hast dyronken out: the cuppe of hys wrath: thou that hast supped of, and sucked out the dregges of his deadly cuppe to the botome.
For amōg all the sonnes whō he hath begotten, there is not one y maye holde it vp: & not one to leade it by the hande, of all the sonnes that he hath noysshed. Both these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sorpy for it: yee, destructyon, wastynge, hunger and swerde: but who will comforte the? Thy son-nes lye comfortles at the heade of euery stre-te lyke a take venyson, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lorde, and punishment of thy God. And therfore thou miserable and dyronken (howbeit not wth wyne) heare this: Thus sayeth thy Lorde: thy Lorde and God, the defender of hys people. Beholde, I will take the slombryng cuppe out of thy hande, euen the cuppe wth the dregges of my wrath: that fro hēce forth thou shalt neuer drynke it more, but I will putt it into their hād y trouble y: whych haue spoken to thy soule: stoupe downe, y we maye go ouer the: & thou laydest thy body euen wth the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

The liij. Chapter.

Consolacion and comforte to the people of God.

Take vnto me, ye y holde of right-
teousnes, & ye that seke the Lorde.
Take hebe vnto y stone, wherout
ye are hewen, & to the graue wherout ye are dygged. Considre * Abrahā your father, & Sara y bare you: howe y I called him alone, & blest hym, and encreased him Therfore shall the Lorde comforte y, & repayre all her decaye: making her deserte as a paradise, & her wilderness as y garde of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye shall be founde there, thakelgeuings & voyce of prayse. Haue respect vnto me the, O my people both by ghe &

the Gentils. It is hard by, that my health &

ple shall be ordred with myne arme.

uncircumcised ner vncleane person come in y.
Shake the fro the dust, arys & stande vp, O Jerusalem. Plucke out thy neck fro the boode: O y captiue daughter Sio. For thus sayeth the Lorde: * ye are solde for naught, therfore shall ye be redeemed also without any mōy.

For thus sayeth y Lorde God: * My prople wente downe afore tyme into Egypte, there to be straungers, & and the kyng of the Assyriās oppressed them wthout anye cause. And now what profyt is it to me (sayth the Lorde) that my people is frely carped awaye, and brought in to heuynes by their rulers, * & my name euer still blasphemed: sayeth y Lorde: Therfore that my people maye knowe my name, therfore I say in that daye they shall knowe it, that I am he y do speake. I saye euen I. * O howe bewtifull are y fete of the Embassitoure, y bynyngeth y me-sage fro y mountayne, & pclameth peace: that bynyngeth the good tydynges, and preacheth health, and sayeth vnto Sio: Thy God is y kyng. Thy watchmen shall lyft vp theyr voyce: with lowde voyce shall they preach of hym: for they shall * se hym present, whē the Lorde shall conuerte Sion.

* Be glad, with thankes grynge. O y desolate Jerusalem, & reioyce together: for the Lorde hath comforted hys people, he hath de-liuered Jerusalem. The Lorde hath made bare hys holy arme, and shewed it forth in the syght of all the Gentiles, * & all the endes of the earth hath sene the sauinge health of our God. * A waye, a waye, get you out fro thence and touche no vncleane thyng. So oute from amonge soche. And be cleane, that beare the vessell of the Lorde. For ye shall not escape by rennyng: ner by flyge awaye: but
* the Lorde shall go before you, and the God of Israel shall gather you together.

Beholde, my seruauit shall deale wpsely, therfore shall he be magnified, exalted & greatly honoured. Lyke as the multitude shall wonder vpon hym, because hys face shall be so deformed & not as a mā face, hys * betwepe lyke no man: Euen so shall the multitude of the Gentyles loke vnto hym, & kynges shall put their mouthes before him. * For they y haue not bene tolde of hi, shall se hym, & they y herde nothyng of hym, shall beholde him.

The liij. Chapter.

The propherye of the pacyon of our Sauour Jesus Christ.

Behold who hath geuen credence vnto the thynges we haue hearde: O to whom is the arme of the Lorde knowne? For he dyd growe before the Lorde lyke as a ba-unche, & as a rote in a drye grounde, * he hath neither betwye nor sauoure. When we shall loke vpon hym, there shall be no saynesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. * He is despised & abhorred of men, he is soch a man as is full Of Eley.

of sorowe & as hath good experience of infirmities. We haue reckoned hym so vyle, that we hydd our faces from hym, y^e he was despised & therfore we regarded him not. Howbeit he only hath taken on hym all our infirmities, & borne our paynes. Yet we dyd iudge hym, as though he were plagued & cast downe of God: and punished * where as he (not wytthstanding) was wounded for our offences, and smitten for our wickednes. For y^e chastylement of our peace was layde vpon him, and wyth hys stryppes are we healed.

* As for vs, we haue gone all astraye (like shepe) every one hath turned his owne way.
But the Lorde hath heaped together vpon him the iniquitie of vs all. he suffered violence and was euell intreated, & dyd not yet open his mouth. * he shalbe led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shal he be as still as a labe before the shearer, and not open hys mouth. he was had awaye from prison hys cause not herde, and wythout eny iudgement: whose generacyon yet who maye nombze? he was cut of from the grounde of the lyvinge.
Whych punishment dyd go vpon hym, for the transgression of my people, whych in deade had deserued that punishment, * hys grauie was geue hym wyth the condemned, and wyth the ryche man at hys deeth. *
Where as he dyd neuer violence ner vnryght, neither hath there bene eny disceitfulnesse in hys mouth.

* Yet hath he pleased the Lorde thus to bryste hym wyth plagues, and to smyte hym wyth infirmities, that when he had made his soule an offering for synne, he myght se longe lastyng seide. And thus deuycce of the Lorde shal prosper in hys hande. With tranquyle & labour of hys soule, shal he obtayne frute, and he shal be satisfied * by the knowledge of hym whych is my ryghteous seruant he shal iustifie the multitude, for he shal beare awaye theyr synnes. Therfore wyll I geue hym the multitude for hys parte, and he shal deuyde the spoyles wyth the strongest because he geueth ouer hys soule to deeth, * and is reckened amonge the transgressours, whych neuertheles hath take awaye the syn-nes of the multitude, and made intercessyon for the mysdoers.

The liiiij. Chapter.

Of the grete dominion of Christ. The infirmities of God endureth but a short space, but hys mercy is euerylastyng.

Be glad now, * thou bar^e that bea-rest not, reioyce, synge and be mere. For thou that art not wyth chyldre: For y^e desolate hath moo chyldre, the mayed wyfe, sayeth y^e Lorde. Make thy fetters wyder, and sprede out the bagynges of thyne habitacyon: spare not, laye forth thy cordes, and make fast thy shooes: for y^e shalt be multiplied on the ryght syde & on the left, and thy seide shal haue the Gentyles in possession and dwell in the desolate cyties.

Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded: Be not ashamed, for thou shalt not come to confusion. For thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, & shalt not remembre the di-shonoure of thy widowhed. For he y^e made the, shal be thy Lorde * a husbande (whose name is the Lorde of hostes) and thy redemer.
Shal be euen the holy one of Israel, the Lorde of the whole worlde. For the Lorde hath called the, beyng as a desolate forowfull woman, & as a younge wyfe that hath broken her wedlocke: sayeth the Lorde.

* A lytle while haue I forsake the, but w^h grete mercyfullnesse shal I take the vpon me. Wh^h I was angry, I hydde my face fro y^e for a lytle season, but thow euerlastyng mercy haue I pardoned the, sayeth the Lorde thyne auenger. * And this is vnto me as the water of Noe: for lyke as I haue sworne y^e I wyll not bryng the water of Noe eny more vpon the worlde: * so haue I sworne that I wyll neuer be angry wyth the, ner reprove y^e.
The mountaynes shal remoue, and the hylles shal fall downe: but my louyng kyndnesse shal not moue, and the bonde of my peace shal not fall downe from the, sayeth the Lorde thy mercyfull Lorde. Beholde y^e pore, ouerwhelmed with trespasse & * wythout co-forte. I will make thy walles of precious stones, & thy foundacyon of Saphyres, thy wy-dowes of Chrystal, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, & all thy borders of pleasaunt stones.
* Thy chyldren shal all be taught of God, & I wyll geue the plectousnes of peace. In ry-ghteousnes shalt thou be grounded, & be far re from oppressors: for the whych thou nedest not be afrayed, neither for hynderance, for it shal not come nye the. Beholde, the aleunt that was farre from me, shal dwell wyth y^e: & he that loyneth batayle agens the shal perishe. Beholde, I make the smith that bloweth the coales in the fyre, & he maketh a wea-pen after hys hady worcke. I make also the waster to destroye: but all the weapons that are made agaynst the, shal not prosper. *
And as for all tinges, y^e shal respyte y^e in iud-gement, thou shalt overcome them, & cōdēne them. Chys is the heritage of the Lordes ser-uautes, and their ryghteousnes commeth of me, sayeth the Lorde.

The lv. Chapter.

Of consolacyon and comfote to the people. The frute and profit of the wordes of God.

Come to the waters all ye, y^e A be thursty, and ye that haue no money. Come, bye, y^e maye haue & cate. Come, bye wyne and mycke, wythout any money, or money worth. Wherfore do ye laye out

out your money, for the thyng that sedeth not, & spende your labour aboute y^e thyng that satisfieth you not. But hearken hearken rather vnto me, & ye shall eate of y^e best, and your soule shal haue her pleasure in plenteousnes. Encline your eares, and come vnto me, take hede (I saye) & your soule shal lyue.
* For I will make an euerylastyng couena-unt wyth you, eu^r y^e sure mercyes of Dauid.
Beholde, I gaue him for a wytnesse among the folke, for a wytnesse and captayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalt call an unknowne people: & a people that had not knowledge of the, shal runne vnto the: because of the Lorde thy God, and the holy one of Israel, whych glorifyeth y^e. Seke the Lorde, while he may be founde, and call vpon hym while he is
nye. * Let y^e vngodly man forsake his owne wayes, & the vnyghteous hys owne yma-gyne, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde: so shal he be mercyfull vnto hym: and to oure God, & for he is very ready to forgeue.
For thus sayeth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not your thoughtes, and your wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the hea-uens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my wayes excede yours, and my thoughtes yours. * And lyke as the rayne & snowe cōmeth downe from heauē, and returneth not thither agayne, but watereth y^e earth, ma-keth it frutefull and grene, that it maye ge-ue corne vnto the sower, and breade to hym that eateth. So the worde also that cometh out of my mouth shal not turne agayne bode vnto me, but shal accomplishe my wyll & prosper in y^e thyng wherto I sende it. And to shall ye goo forth w^h loye, & be led w^h peace.
The mountaynes & hylles shal synge wyth you for ioye, & all the trees of the felde shal clappe theyr hādes. For thornes, there shal growe fyre trees, & the thyrre tre in the strede of bycers. And thus shal be done to y^e praye of the Lorde, and for an euerylastyng token, that shal not be taken awaye.

The lvi. Chapter.

Of exhortacyon to iudgement and righteousness, & to the spiritual kepyng of the Sabbath. Agaynst shepherdes that deuoure theyr flock.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. * Repe-equite, and do ryght, for my sa-uyng health shal come shortly, & my ryghteousnes shal be opened. Blessed is y^e mā that doth thus, and the mans chyld whych kepeth the same. * he that taketh hede, that he vnha-lowe not the Sabbath (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe that he do no euil. Then shal not the stranger, which cleaueth to y^e Lorde, saye: * Alas, the Lorde hath shut me cleane out fro hys people. Nether shal the * gelded mā saye: lo, I am a drye tre. For thus sayeth the Lorde, vnto the gelded that kepeth my Sabbath: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thyng that please me, and kepeth my couenaunt: vnto them wyll I geue in my householde and wythin my walles, a better heritage & name, then yf they had bene called sonnes & daughters. * I will geue the an euerylastyng name, y^e shal not perishe. Agayne the strangers that stycke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue hys name: * and to be hys seruantes. And all they, whych kepe the selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namely, that they fulfyll my couena-unt: them wyll I beyng to my holy moutaine, and make them topfull in my house of prayer. Theyr burnt offrynges and sacrificy-ces shalbe accepted vpon myne altar. * For my house shalbe called an house of prayer for all people.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God whych ga-thereth together the scatred of Israel: I will beyng yet another congregacyon to hym.
Come all ye beastes of the felde, that ye may denoure, all y^e beastes of y^e wood. * For hys watchmē are all blynde, they haue all together no vnderstandyng, they are all domme dogges, not beyng able to barkke, they are slepy: slegys are they, and lye in sloupyng: they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer satisfied. The sheperdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandyng, * but every man turneth his awneway, every one after his aw-ne couetousnes w^h ail hys power. * Come (saye they) I wyll fetch wyne, so shal we fyll oure selues, that we maye be dronken.
And do to morowe, lyke as to daye, y^ece and moche more.

The lviij. Chapter.

Of the Jewes are rebuked for theyr inuysie done to Christ.

The * ryghteous perissheth, and no mā regardeth it in hys hert. Good godly people are take awaye, and no mā cospireth it. Namely, that the ryghteous is cō-uayed awaye from the wycked. he comme-the into peace, & godlye mē rest in their chābres, and before the godly man goeth peace.
Come hyther therfore ye charmers chyldren,
* ye sonnes of the aduouter and the whoze: Wherin take ye your pleasure? vpon who gase ye wyth your mouth, & bleare out your tongue? Are ye not chyldren of aduoutry, and a seide of dissimulacyon? * Ye make your fyre vnder the oaks, and vnder all grene trees, and ye offre chyldren in the valleys, and dennes of stone. Thy parte shalbe with the stony rockes by the riner: y^e these shal be thy parte. For there y^e hast poured meat & drinke offryng vnto them. Shulde I delite in that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vpryther, and there hast thou slayne sacrifices. * Behynde y^e dozes and postes, hast thou sett vp thy re-membraunce.

The prophete

When thou haddest dysconoured thy selfe to another then me, when thou wētest downe and made thy bed wyder, and wpth those Idols hast thou made a couenaunt, and lovedest theyr couches, where thou sawest the. Thou wentest streyght to kynges wpth oyle & byuerse opntmetes (that is) thou hast sent thy messaungers farre of, & yet art thou fallen into the pyt therby. Thou art wccry for the multitude of thyne awone wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I wyll leaue of. Thou hast had p lye p thy hades wrought, & therfore thou art carelesse. For when wylt thou be abashed of feare, seynge thou hast broken thy promyse, and remembrest not me, nether hast me in thyne hert. Thynkest thou, that I also wyll holde my peace (as a foze tyme) that thou fearest me not. Pee, verely I wyl declare thy goodnes and thy wozkes, but they shall not profyt the: when thou crepest, let thy chosen heape deliuer the. But the wynde shall blowe them fureh, and vante shall take the all away. Neuertheles, they that put their trust in me, shall inheret the lande, & haue my holy byll in possession. And therfore thus he sayeth: * Make playne, make playne, & clense the strete, take vp the stoblyng blocks out of the waye that ledeth to my people. For thus sayeth the hye & excellent, euen he that dwelleth in cuerlastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwell hye above and in the sanctuary, and wpth hym also, that is of a cōtrite and humble spete do I dwell. I maye heale a troubled mynde, and a cōtrite herte. * For I chp de not euer, & am not wroth wth out ende. But the blasfym goeth from me, and is included in the body, and I made the breath. I am wroth wth hym for his couctousnes, I synpte him, I hyde me, and am angrey, when he turneth him selfe, & foloweth the by waye of his awone hert. I haue seen his wayes and I heale hym. * I lede him and ressoze to hym cōfozte, and to those that were soz for him I make the frutes of thankesgeyng, that he maye saye. Peace peace * vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nye, sayth the Lorde, and I make hym whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragynge see, that canot rest, whose water someth wpth the myze & grauel. Eue so the wycked haue no peace, sayeth God.

The. lviij. Chapter.

The Lorde (by the mouth of the prophete) re- proueth the people for theyr saynges, whych were ful of hypocryse.

Rye * now, as loude as p cast. Leane not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trōpet, & shewe my people theyr offences, & the house of Jacob their synnes. For they se- ke me daylye, & wyll knowe my wayes, eue as it were a people that byd ryght, and had not forsake the statutes of the Lord. They argue wpth me concernynge ryght iudgement, and will be nye vnto God. * Wherefore fast we (saye they) and thou seest it not: we put our lynes to strytenes, and thou regardest it not.

* Beholde, whē ye fast, poure lust remaineth styll: for ye do no lesse violence to your detters: lo, ye fast to stryfe and debate, & to synpte wth your self without mercy. Now ye shall not fast thus that your voyce myght be heard aboute. * Thynke ye this fast please me, that a man shulde chasten him selfe for a daye, and to wythe his head aboute lyke an hoope, & to lye vpon the earth in an heary cloth: shulde that be called fastynge, or a daye that please the Lorde? Woth not this fastynge rather please me, that thou loose him out of bondage, that is in thy dānger: that thou breake the ooth of wycked bargaynes, that thou lett the oppressed go free, and take from the all maner of burthen: * to deale thy bread to the hongry, & bringe the poore wandryng, home into thy house, when thou seest the naked & thou couer him, and hyde not thy face from thy neyghboure (and bishope not chynne a wone fcaste.)

* Then shall thy lyght breake forth as the moonyng, & thy health floz the ryght moztly: thy righteounesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

* Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answer the: yf thou crepest, he shall saye: here I am. Pee, yf thou layest awaye fro the thy burthen, and holdest thy fingers, & cease from blasphemous talkinge, * yf thou hast cōpassyon vpon the hōgre, & refre shest the troubled soule: Then shall thy lyght spynge out in the darknesse, & thy darknesse shall be as p noone day. The Lorde shall euer be thy guyd, & satisfie the desyre of thyne herte in p tyme of droughe, & fyll thy bones w mary. Thou shalt be lyke a fresh waterd garden * & lyke the fountayne of water, p neuer leaueth rānyng. Then the places that haue euer bene waste, shall be builded of the: there shalt thou laye a foundaciō for many kynredes. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, & the buylder agayne of the waye of p Sabbath.

Pee, yf thou turne thy fete in the Sabbath, so that thou do not the thyng which please thy self in my holy daye: & thou call the pleasaunt, holy, and glorious Sabbath of the Lorde, and that thou gūe him the honoure: so that thou do not after thyne awone ymagination, nether seke thyne awone wyl, ner speake thyne awone wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lorde, and I wyl carpe the hye above the earth, and fede the wth the herptage of Jacob thy father: for p Lorde a wone mouth hath so promysed.

The

The. lix. Chapter.

The Lorde is myghty to saue, and ready to heare our requestes.

Behold * the Lorde's hande is not so shortened that it can not helpe, nether is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But * poure mysdedes haue separated you from poure God, & your synnes hyde his face fro you, that he heareth you not. For poure handes are defyled wth bloude, & poure fyngers w vnrightheousnesse: Pour lypes speake lesynges, and poure tonge setteth oute wyckednes. No man regardeth ryghteousnes, and no man iudgeth truly. Every man hopeth in wayne thynges, and ymagineth disceate * conceauneth weerynesse, and byngeth forth euell. They brede cockatrice egges, and weaue the spyders webb: who so eateth of these egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon the, there cometh vp a serpent. Theyr webb maketh no clothe, and they maye not couer them wth their labours. Their dedes are p dedes of wyckednes, and the worcke of robbery is in their handes. * Theyr fete rūne to euell, and they make haste to shed innocent bloude. Theyr counsels are wicked counsels, harme * and destruccyon are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In theyr goynges is no equyte: their wayes are so crooked, that whosoener goeth theryn, knoweth of no peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that righteousnes cometh not nye vs. * We loke for lyght, lo, it is darkenesse: for the moonyng hyde, se, we walcke in the darcke. * We grope lyke the blinde vpon the wall, we grope euen as one p hath none eyes. We stamble at the none daye, as though it were toward nyght: in the fallyn places, lyke me that are halfe deed. We roare all lyke Beers, and mourne styll lyke do- ues. We loke for equyte, but there is none: for health, but it is farre from vs. For oure offences are many before the, & oure synnes testifie agaynst vs. Pee, we must confesse p we offende, & knowlege that we do amysse: Namely, transgresse & dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall awaye from oure God: vlyng presumptuous and traytorous ymaginacions, and castinge false matters in oure herces. And therfore is equite gone a lyde, and ryghteousnes standeth farre of: * treuth is fallen downe in the strete, and the thyng that is playne and open, maye not be shewed. Pee, the treuth is taken awaye, and he that refrayneth him selfe from euell, must be spoyled.

Whē the Lord sawe thys, it displeased him for, p there was no equite. He sawe also, p there was no mā, ryghtwise, & he wōdered p ther was no man to helpe hym. Wherefore he helde hym by his awone power, and he stayned him by his awone righteousnes. * He put ryghteousnes vpo him for a brest plate, a set the helmet of health vpon his head, he put on wrath in steade of clothyng, & toke gelously about hym for a cloke: (lyke as whē a man goeth forth wrathfully to recompence his enemyes, & to be auēged of his aduersaryes.) Namely, p he myght recompence & rewarde the Ilādes, wher thozowe the name of the Lorde myght be feared, fro the synge of the Sunne: and his magesty, vnto the goyng downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violet waterstreame, whych the wynde of the Lorde hath mo- ued. * But vnto Sion there shall come a re- demer, and vnto the in Jacob that turne fro wyckednesse, sayeth the Lorde. I wyl make thys couenaunt wth them (sayth the Lorde:) My spete that is vpo the, and the wo- des which I haue put in thy mouth, shall ne- uer go out of thy mouth, nor out of p mouth of thy chylders chyldre, fro thys tyme forth for euer moze worlde wthout ende sayth p Lorde.

The. lx. Chapter.

A consolaciō and comfōrt to Ierusalem.

Et the vp by tymes, & be bryght, Ierusalem, for thy lyght cometh, & the glory of the Lorde is rylen vpo the. For lo, whyle the darknesse & cloude couereth the earth and the people, the Lorde shall shewe p lyght, & his glory shall be sene in p. * The Gentiles shall come to thy lyght, and kynges to the bryghtnes p spyngeth forth vpo the. * Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke rounde aboute the: All these gather the selues, & come to the. Thy Sonnes shall come vnto the fro farre, and thy daughters shall gather the selues to the on euery syde. Then thou shalt se thys: and be gloriouse, thou shalt maruell excedyngly, and thyne hert shall be opened: when the abundance of the see shall be con- uerted vnto the (that is) when the ryches of the Gentiles shall come vnto the. The mul- titude of Camels shall couer the, the drome- daries of Madian & Ephā * All they of Sa- ba shall come, byngynge golde & incense, & shewing the prayle of the Lord. * All the catell of Cedar shall be gathered vnto the, & rāmes of Nabaioth shall scrue p, to be offered acceptabyle vpo myne auter, * which I haue chosen, & in the house of my glory which I haue garnysed. But what are these, that sic here lyke the cloudes, & as the douds styng to the wyndowes?

The Iles also shall wayte for me, & special- ly the hyppes of Charis: that they maye byngne thy sonnes fro farre, & theyr syluer & their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holy one of Israel, that hath glorified the. * Strangers shall

by buyde

E buyde vpon thy walles, & they kynges shall do the scrupce. For when I was angrie, I smote the: and of my merce, I pardoned y: * Thy gates shall stand open (till both daye and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the booste of the Gentiles maye come, and that they kynges maye be brought vnto the. For euery people and kyngdome that serueth not y, shall perishe, & be destroyed wth utter destruction. The glory of libanus shall come vnto the. The fyre trees, Boxes and Cedres together, to garnyshe y place of my Sanctuary, for I will glorifye the place of my fete.

Moreover, those shall come kneeling vnto the, that haue veyed the: and all they that despyed the, shall fall downe at thy fete.

Thou shalt be called the cytie of the Lorde, Sion the cytie of the holy one of Israel. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated, so that noman wot thowowe the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and topful thowowe out all posterities: * Thou shalt sucke the mylk of the Gentiles, and kynges brestes shall fede the. And thou shalt know, that I the Lorde am thy Saupoure and redeemer, the myghty one of Jacob. For brasse, will I geue the golde, and for yron syluer: for wod brasse, & for stoncs yron. I will tozneyne thyne oppresyon into peace, & thyne exactions into ryghteousnes. Violence and robbery shall neuer be heard of in thy lande, neither barne and destruction wth in thy borders. Thy walles shall be called heath, and thy gates the prayse of God. * The Sunne shall neuer be thy daye lyght, and the lyght of the Moone shall neuer thyne vnto the: but the Lorde him selfe shall be thyne euerylastyng lyght, and thy God shall be thy glory.

* Thy Sunne shall neuer go downe, and thy Moone shall not be hydd, for the Lorde hym selfe shall be thy euerylastyng lyght, and thy sonowfull dayes shall be ended. Thy people shall be all ryghteous, and possesse the lande euer: the flour of my plantyng, the worke of my handes, wherof I will reioyce. Thy yongest and leest shall growe in to a thousande, and the spinplest in to a stronge people. I the Lorde shall shortly bringe this thinge to passe in his tyme.

The .lxij. Chapter.

The prophete that wherof shall be annointed and sent to preache.

I the spere of the Lorde God is vpon me, for the Lorde hath anoynted me, and sent me, to preache good tydings vnto the poore, that I myght bynde vpon the wounded hertes, * that I myght preache deliuerance to the captiue, and open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable peare of the Lorde, and the daye of the vengeance of oure God: * that I myght comforte all they that are in heuynesse, that I myght geue vnto them y mourne in Sion, that I myght geue I saye, bewty in the steade of ashes, topfull oymment for syghinge, pleasaunt raymet for an bey mynde: that they myght be called trees of ryghteousnesse, a plantyng of the Lorde for hym to reioyce in.

They shall buyde the longe rough wilderness, & sett vpon the olde deserte. They shall repayre the waste places, & soch as haue bene voyde thowowe out many generacions. Straungers shall stande and fede youre catel, and the Aleuantes shall be youre plowme & dyers of youre vynges. * But ye shall be named the priestes of the Lorde, and me shall call yon the seruautes of oure God. Ye shall enioye the goodes of the Gentiles, and triumphe in their substance. For youre greates reproche yon shall haue double loye, and for shame, shall they haue loye of their porcyon. For they shall haue double posselsion in their lande, and euerylastyng loye shall be wth the.

For I the Lorde, which loue ryght and hate robbery (though it were offered me) shall make theyr workes full of faythfulness & make an euerylastyng couenant wth them.

Their fede also and their generacion shall be knowen amonge the Gentiles, and amonge the people. All they that se the, shall knowe that they are the hye blessed fede of the Lorde. And therfore * I am ioyfull in the Lorde, & my soule reioysseth in my God. * For he hath put vpon me the garment of saluacion, & couered me wth the mantle of ryghteousnesse. * He shall decke me lyke a bydegrome, and as a hyde y hath hye apparell vpon her. For lyke as the groude byngeth forth frute, & as the garden sheweth forth fede: so shall the Lorde God cause ryghteousnesse, and prayse to God to flourish forth, before all the heathen.

The .lxij. Chapter.

A prophete of the commynge of Chyrt.

I as Iong as Iake therfore will I not holde my tunge, and for Jerusalem Iake I will not cease: vntill their ryghteousnesse breake forth as the thynnyng lyght, and their saluacion as a burnyng lampe. Then shall the Gentiles se thy ryghteousnesse, and all kynges thy glory. Thou shalt be named wth a newe name, which the mouth of y Lorde shall shewe. Thou shalt be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, and a glorious garlande in the hande of thy God. For thys tyme forth thou shalt neuer be called y forsaken, and thy lande shall nomore be called y wilderness. But y shalt be called: * My pleasure is in her, & thy lande shall be called: the maryed woman: for the Lorde loueth the, & thy lande shall be sowed in marriage. * And lyke as a yoge mā taketh a daughter to marriage, so shall thy sonnes be maryed vnto y.

I haue set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Jerusalem) which shall neither ceasse daye nor night to preache the Lorde. And ye also that remembre the Lorde ye shall not kepe him close, nor leaue to speake of him, vntill Jerusalem be sett vpon, & made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath sowne by his right hande & by his stronge arme, that from hence forth he will not geue thy corne to be meate for thyne enemyes, ner thy vyne (wherin y hast laboured) to be drinke for the straungers. But they that haue gathered in the corne, shall eat it, & geue thanks to the Lorde: & they y haue bozned in the vyne, shall drinke it in the court of my Sanctuary.

Go yon, go yon thowowe the gatis, make cleane the way, make playne, make playne y fote pathe, & take awaye y stones, out of y & set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lorde proclaimeth vnto y endes of y worlde: * tell the daughter Syon: se, thy saupour cometh, beholde, he bringeth his treasure wth him, & his workes go before him. For they whos y Lorde deliuereth, shall be called y holy people: & as for the: thou shalt be named y greatly occupied, & not the forsaken cytie.

The .lxij. Chapter.

What is he thys, y cometh fro Edom, wth redd coloured clothes of Bosta: (which is so costly cloth) & cometh in so myghty wth all his strength. I am he that teacheth ryghteousnesse, & am of power to helpe. Wherfore then is thy clothynge read, & thy raymet lyke his that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue trodden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people there is not one wth me. Thus will I treade downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacyon. And their bloude shall be sponge vpon my clothes, and so will I stayne all my rayment. * For the daye of vengeance is assigned in my hert, & the peare wth my people shall be deliuered, is come. I looked aboute me, and there was no man to shewe me any helpe, I maruayled y noman helde me by. Then I helde me by myne awne arme, & my seruethnesse susteyned me. And thus will I treade downe y people in my wrath, & bathe the in my displeasure: and vpon the earth will I laye their strength.

I will declare the goodnesse of y Lorde, & the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greates good y he hath done for Israel: which he hath gyuen them of his awne fauoure, & accordyng to y multitude of his lounge kindnesse. For he sayde: These no doute are my people, & no thynnyng chylde, and so he was their saupoure. In their troubles he was also troubled w them, and the angell y went forth from hye & presence, deliuered the: Of very loue & kyndnesse y he had vnto them, redeemed he the, y hath bozned them, and carped them by euer, sence y worlde beganne. But after they prouoked him to wrath & veyed his holy mynde he was their enemye, & fought agaynst them him selfe. Yet remembred Israel the olde tyme of Moses & his people. * Sayinge wher is he y brought the from y water of the see, wth the y feed his shepe: wher is he y bath geuen his holy spere amonge them? he ledde the by the ryght hnde of Moses wth his glorious arme: demyng y water before the (wherby he gat him selfe an euerylastyng name) he ledde the in the depe, as an hore is led in y playne, y they shulde not stoble, as a tame beast goeth in the felde: and the breath gyuen of God gyueth him rest.

Thus (O God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name wth all.

* Loke downe yon fro heauen, & beholde the dwellyng place of thy Sanctuary & thy glory: howe is it, y thy gelousy, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercyes & thy lounge kyndnesse, will not be entreated of vs? Pet art thou y our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquainted wth vs. But y Lorde art our father & redeemer, & thy name is euerylastyng. O Lorde, wherfore hast y led vs out of thy waye? * Wherfore hast thou hardened our hertes, y we feare the not? Be at one wth vs agayne, for thy seruantes sake and for the generacyon of thyne heritage. Thy people hath had but lyse of thy Sanctuary in posselsion, for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holy place. And we were thyne fro the begynnyng: when thou wast not their Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

When thou wroughtest wondrous straunge workes, we looked not for the. Thou camest downe and the hylls melt at thy presence. wayes. But lo, thou hast bene angrie, for we offended & haue bene euer in synne: * yet shall we be saued. We are all as an vncleane thyng, & all oure ryghteousnes are as the clothes steyned with floures of a woman: we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure synnes cary vs awaye lyke the wynde. There is no man that calleth vpon thy name, that standeth vp to take holde by the. Therefore hydest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs, because of oure synnes.

But nowe O Lorde, O father of oures: * we are the claye, & thou art oure potter, & we all are the worke of thy handes. * We not to soze dyspleased (O Lorde) & kepe not oure offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but confesse that we all are thy people. The cyties of thy Sanctuary lye waste. * Syon is a wyldernesse, and Jerusalem a desert. Dure holy house which is oure bewty, where oure fathers prayed the, is brent vp: ye, all oure comodities & pleasures are wasted awaye. Wylt thou not be intreated (Lorde) for all this? Wylt thou holde thy peace, and scourge vs so soze?

The lxxv. Chapter.

The seelyng of Jerusalem, and the callinge of the heathen.

I * I praye like me, that hitherto haue not asked for me: they fynde me, & hitherto haue not sought me. * I haue sayde I am here, I am here. I am founde of a people that neuer called vpon my name. For thus longe haue I euer holden out my handes to an vnfaithfull people, & go not the ryght waye, but after their a wone ymaginacions: To a people that is euer despyng me to my face. * They make their oblacions in gardens, and their smoke vpon: alters of byrche, they lurche amonge the graues, and lye in the dennes all nyght. * They eat swynes fleshe, & vncleane bryth is in their vessels. If I comest nye them, they saye touch me not, for I am holper then thou. All these men when I am angrie, shall be turned to smoke: & fyre, that shall burne for euer. Beholde it is wyrtten before my face, & shall not be forgotten, but recompensed. * I shall rewarde it them into their bosome: I meane poure myddes, and the myddes of poure fathers together (sayeth the Lorde) which haue made their smokes vpon ymountaynes, and blasphemed me vpon the hylls: therefore will I measure their olde dedes into their bosome againe. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde: * lyke as when one wolde gather holy grapes, men saye vnto hym: breahe it not of for it is holy: & euen so wyl I do also for my seruantes sakes, that I wyl not destroye them all. But I wyl take a sede out of Jacob, & out of Juda one, to take possession of my hyll. My chole shall possesse these thyn-ges, & my seruantes shall dwell there. Sars shall be a shepfolde, & * the valley of Achor shall gene & stallynge for the cattell of my people, & feare me. * But as for you, ye are they I haue forsaken the Lorde, and forgotten my holy hill. Ye haue set vp an altar vnto Jupiter, & geuen ryche byrche offerpuges vnto the planettes. Therefore wyl I noybre you with the swerde, & ye shall be destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me answer: when I spake, ye hearkened not vnto me, but dyd wyckednes before myne eyes, and chose the thyng I pleased me not.

Therefore thus sayeth O Lorde God: Beholde, my seruantes shall eate, but ye shall haue hunger: Beholde, my seruantes shall byrche, but ye shall suffer thurst. Beholde, my seruantes shall be mercy, but ye shall be confounded. Beholde, my seruantes shall reioyce for very quyetnesse of herte: But ye shall crye for sozow of hert, and complayne for verayty of mynde. Poure name shall you leaue accursed amonge my chosen, for God the Lorde shall slaye you, and call his seruantes by another name. * Who so reioyseth vpon earth, shall reioyce in O true God. And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall sweare in the true God. For y olde cuntye shall be forgotten, and taken awaye out of my syght. * For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, and a newe earth. And as for y olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, ner kepte in mynde: but O Lorde sayth he glad and euermore reioyce, for the thynges, that I shall do.

For why: Beholde, I shall make a topfull Jerusalem, and his people topfull, yee, I myselfe will reioyce wyth Jerusalem, & be glad w my people. * And the voyce of wepyng and waylyng shall not be herde in her from thence forth. There shall nether be chyldre nor olde mā, that haue not their full dayes. But when the chyldre cometh to an hōdgeth yeare olde, it shall dye. And yf he is an hundred yeare of age do wronge, he shall be curled. * They shall buyde houses, & dwell in the: they shall plante vnyerardes, & eate & frute of them. They shall not buyde, and another possesse: they shall not plant and another eate. * But the lyfe of my people shall be lyke a tre, and so shall the worke of their handes.

My chosen shall lye longe, they shall not labour in vayne, ner begitt wyth trouble: for they ate the hye blessed sede of the Lorde, and their frutes wyth them: And it shall be, that oz euer they call, I shall answer them. Whyle they are yet but thynkynge howe to speake, I shall heare them. * The wolfe and the lambe shall fede together, and the lyon shall eate haye lyke the bullock. * But earth shall be the serpent's meate. There shall no man hurte ner slaye another, in all my holy hyll, sayeth the Lorde.

The

The lxxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hands. He despyseth sacrifices done without me: he is a spych. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the chyrden, the Sabbath is conynall.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Heauen is my seate, & the earth is my fote stole. Where shall nowe y house stande, that ye wyl buyde vnto me? And where shall be the place, that I wyl dwell in? As for these thynges, my hande hath made them all, & they are all created, sayeth the Lorde. * Whych of them shall I then regarde? Euen him that is poze and of a lowly troubled spete, & standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me, doth me so greate dishonoure, as he that killeth a mā. He that killeth a shepe for me, kneteth a dogge. He that byngeth me meat offrynges, offereth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoypall of incense, prayseth y thyng that is vnyght. Yet take they soch wayes in hande, and their soule delecteth in these abhominacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in laughynge them to scorn, and y thyng that they feare, wyl I byryng vpon them. * For when I called, no man gaue answer: when I spake, they wolde not heare: But did wyckednesse before myne eyes, and chose y thynges I displease me. Heare the wordes of God all ye that feare the thyng which he speaketh. Poure brythren that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: The Lorde is haynoul against vs, but you shall se him in toye when they shall be confounded.

Then shall be heard agret noyse fro the cytle and the temple, the voyce of the Lorde, & wyl rewarde, & recompence his enemyes: lyke as when a wyfe byngeth forth a man chyld, oz euer she suffre the payne of y byrth & anguyse of y traunaple. Who euer hearde oz sawe soche thynges, doth the groude beare in one daye: oz are the people bozne all at once, as syon trauepled in chyldre byrth and bare her sonnes: For thus sayeth the Lorde.

Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not myselfe? Am I he that beareth and maketh baren: sayeth the God. Reioyce wyth Jerusalem, and be glad wyth her, all ye that loue her. * Be ioyfull wyth her, all ye y mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comforte out of her brestes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, and haue delyste in the pleasurable of her power. For thus sayeth O Lorde: beholde, I wyl lett peace into her, lyke a water floude, and the myght of the hyethen lyke a flowynge streame. The shall ye sucke, ye shall be bozne vpon her sydes, and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chyld is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. And whē ye se this, poure herte shall reioyce * and poure bones shall flozpe lyke an herbe.

Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge his seruantes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For behold, the Lorde shall come with fyre, & his charret shall be lyke a whoyle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeance in his warth and his indignacion wyth the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh wyth the fyre and wyth his swerde, and there shall be a greate nombze slayne of the Lorde. Soch as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardenes, & those y haue eaten swynes flesch, in yce, and other abhominacions, shall be taken awaye together, sayeth the Lorde. * For I wyl come to gather all people & tonges wyth their workes and ymaginacions: these shall come, and se my glozpe. Into them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that he deliuered) amonge the Gentiles: in to Cilicia, Assyria, and Lydia (where men can habde bowes) into Italye and also Greke lande.

The fles farte of, that haue not herde y spake of me, and haue not sene my glozpe, shall preache my prayse amonge the Gentiles, and shall byryng all poure brythren for an offryng vnto the Lorde, out of all the people, vpon horses, charrettes and horse lyters, vpon chylles and cartes to Jerusalem my holy hyll (sayeth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldre of Israel byryng the offryng in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.

And I shall take out certayne of them for to be prestes and leuites, sayeth O Lorde. For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe earth which I wyl make, shall be fast stablished by me: (sayeth O Lorde) So shall poure sede and poure name continue, and there shall be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabbath for the other, and all fleshe shall come to worshippe before me (sayeth O Lorde) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carions of them that haue transgressed agaynst me. * For their wormes shall not dye, nether shall their fyre be quenched, & all fleshe shall abhorre them.

The booke of Jeremye, and in what tyme he prophesied. He receyved hym selfe & wolde refuse the office of a prophete, because he is younge and his expert. He is taught of the Lorde, & becometh bold. God openeth vnto hym, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babylonians, is at hande. Jeremye is commaunded to speake the wordes of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

Here are the sermons of Jeremye the sonne of helkiah the prest, one of them that dwelt at Bethaniam in the lande of Beniamin: when the Lorde had fyrst spoken with him, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, in the xliij. yere of his reygne: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoahim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, & vntill the xi. yere of zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, even in the fyfth moneth. The wordes of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: * Before I fashioned y in thy mothers wombe, I dyd knowe the. And after thou wast borne, I sanctified y, and ordeyned y, to be a prophete vnto y people. Then sayde I: * O Lorde God, I canne not speake, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to younge: * For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, & whatsoeuer I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

* And with that, the Lorde stretched oute his hande, and touched my mouth, & y same lorde sayde vnto me. Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde thys daye do I set the ouer the people & kyngdomes: that thou mayest rote out, breake of, destroye, & make waste: and y thou mayest buylde vp & plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me sayinge: Jeremye, what seyst y? And I sayde: I se a rodde of an almond tree. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: thou hast sene right, for I wyll make haste speelde ypon my wordes, to perfourme it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I do se a leetynge pot, lokynge from out of the north.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: * Out of the north shall come a plage vpon all y dwellers of the lande. It is so. * I wyll call all the kindredes of y kyngdomes of y north (sayeth the Lorde). And they shall come, & euery one shall sett his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all their walles rounde aboute & in all cyties of Juda. And thozowe the shall I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wyckednesse of thole men y haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto straunge goddes, & worshipped the workes of their awne handes.

* And therfore gyde vpon thyn loynes, arys, and tell the all, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, lest I destroye the before the. * For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fenced towne, an yron pylle, and a brasen wall agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghty men of Juda, agaynst the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the: but they shall not be able to ouercome the for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

The iiij. Chapter.

God rebuketh his benefices done vnto the Jewes. Agayne Jeremye & the prophetes of yea chere y confesse & deppele God. The Jewes are destroyed because they forsooke God, & because they sinned whose hantynge after ydols.

Moreouer, the wordes of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: So thy wayes, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre y, for the kyndnesse of thy yowthe, and because of thy steadfast loue: at the tyme of thy desponsynge, in that thou folowdest me thozowe y wyldernes, in an vntylled lade. Israel was an hallowed thyng vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrst frutes. * All they y deuoure Israel shall offende: my fortune shall fall vpon the, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the wordes of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacyon of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde.

What vnfaithfulnesse founde poure fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye frome, fallynge to lightnesse, and beyng so wayne? They thought not in their hertes. Where haue we left the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte? that led vs thozowe the wyldernes, thozowe a deserte & rough lande, thozowe a drye and a dedly lande, yet, a lade that no man had gone thozowe, and wherin no man had dwelt. * And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt welbuylded lande, that ye myght enioye the frutes and all the commodities of the same: ye wēt forth and defyled my lade, & brought myne herptage to abhominacyon.

The prestes the selues sayde not: Where is the Lorde? They that had y lawe in their handes, knewe me not: & the shepherdes offended agaynst me. The prophetes dyd serupce vnto Baal, & folowed such thynges as shall bynge them no profyt.

Wherfore, I am constrained (sayeth the Lorde) to make my chylde vpon you, & vpon poure chylvers chylde: Go in to y fles of Cedar, take diligent hede: and se, whether such thynges be done there, whether the Gerys the selues deale deale so falsly and vntreuly w their goddes, (which yet are no goddes in dede) But my people hath geue ouer their hye honoure, for a thyng that maye not helpe them.

Beholden the (O ye heauens) be afrayde, & abashed at such a thyng, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath done two euels. They haue forsaken me the well of the water of lyfe, and dygged them pyttes, yee vyle and broken pyttes, that can holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruant, or one of the holdes? Why then is he so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpon him, as a lyon? They haue made his lande waste, & byscyties are so brent vp, y there is no man dwelling in them. Yee, the chylde of Noph and Taphnes haue despyled thy neck.

Cometh not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte: to drynke the water of Nilus? Ethe, what makest y in the waye of Assyria? To drynke water of the floude? Thyne awne wyckednesse shall repproue the, & thy turnynge awaye shall condemne the: y thou mayest knowe & vnderstande: howe euell and hurtfull a thyng it is, y thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, & not feared him, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes.

I haue euer broke thy yock of olde, & vnloosed thy bondes: yet sayest y, I wyll nomore offend, but (lyke an harlot) y runnest about vpon all hye hilles, & amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the as a noble vyne, & a good rote whose seed is all faithfull. * How art y turned then in to a bytter, vnfrutefull, & straunge grape? Yee, & that so fore: y though thou was the wylde myrtle & make thy selfe to fauoure with that swete smelling herbe of Bosyth: yet in my syght y art stayned with thy wyckednesse, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not now: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed Baal. * Loke vpon thyne awne wayes in y wooddes, valleyes and benes: so shalt thou knowe, what y hast done. Thou art lyke a swyft dyomedary, y goest casely his waye: and thy watonnes is lyke a wyld ass, that vseth the wyldernes, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that seke the shall not fayne, but fynde the in thyne awne vnclenes. Hepe thou thy fote from nakednes, and thy throte frō thyrtie, and without shame thou answerest. * So, for I haue loued straungers and them will I folowe.

Lyke as a thefe that is taken with y dede cometh to shame, even so is the house of Israel come to confusyon: the comen people, their kynges and rulers, their prestes & prophetes. * For they saye to a stocke, thou art my father, and to a stone: y hast begotten me. Yee, they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face. * But in the tyme of their trouble, when they saye. Stande vp, and helpe vs, I shall answer the: Where are nowe thy goddes, y thou hast made the lett the stode vp, & helpe the in the tyme of neede yf they be able. * For loke howe many cyties thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then will ye goo to lawe with me, saynge yee all are spynners agaynst me, sayeth the Lorde. It is but lost labour, that I smyte poure chylvers, for they receaue not my correccyon. * Poure a wne swerde destroye y your pyttes, lyke a deuouringe lyon. O ye people, loke vpon the wordes of the Lorde. Am I then become a wyldernes vnto the people of Israel? or a lande y hath no lyght? Wherfore sayeth my people the: we are Lorde, we will come no more vnto the. Doth a mayden forget her rayment, or a byde her stomacher? But as for my people they haue forget me, dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so hylic (to optayne fauoure there thozowe) when thou hast yet stayned the with blasphemys, and teachest thyne awne wayes.

Upon thy wynges is foude the bloude of poore and innocent people, & y not in corners & holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darrest y saye: I am (without synne & gyttlesse). With his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condemne the in iudgement, because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to and fro, to chaunge thy wayes? For thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egypte, as of the Assyrians: yee, thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy head. Because the Lorde doth abhorre y confydence and hope of thyne, and thou shalt not prosper with all.

The iiij. Chapter.

God bringe mercysfull callen vnto repallace his people, which he had forsaken for their who:rdome with ydols. He rebuketh Israel vnto repentance, yf they shal theu thephers that haue the true knowledge of God. The returns of Israel vnto God, confesse yf they offende.

Omenly, * when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she goeth frō him & marieth with another, then the questyon is: quilde he resorte vnto her any more after that? Is not this felde then despyled and vnclene? * But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyft vp thyne eyes vnto y hilanters & loke, yf thou be not despyled with who:rdome. Thou hast wayted for the in the stretes, and as a murderre in the wyldernes. Thozowe thy who:rdome & shamefull blasphemys, is the lande despyled.

* This is y cause, y therayne & eueninge dewe hath creased. Thou hast gotten the an who:res forehead, and wilt not be ashamed.

The prophete

Of Jeremie.

Col. lxxiii.

Elis woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, & led me from my pouth: Wylt thou then put me awaye, & cast me of for ever? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane from me? Heere theles, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doinge worse and worse.

Then those y be of y house of Iuda, shall go vnto y house of Israel: & they shall come together out of the North, into y same lande y I haue geuen your fathers. I haue the woe also, howe I toke the by byngte but a childe & gaue the a pleasaunt lande for thyme heritage, yee, & a goodly houle of the heathen, & howe I commaunded the, y thou shouldest call me father only, and not to bypnycke from me.

But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully sayeth her husbnde, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. And therfore the voyce of the chyldren of Israel was herde on hye, wepinge and waylinge: for they haue despyled their waye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

O ye disobedient chyldren, turne agayne (sayinge: lo, we are thyme, for yart the Lorde our God:) And so shall I heale your backturnynges. Truly saynly trusteth be for helth y lok eth for it in the hylls and in bayne is it sought in the multitude of the mountaynes, but the healeth of Israel shalderth only vpo God our Lorde.

Confusyon hath deuoured oure fathers laboure from oure youth vp: yee, their shepe and bullockes, their sonnes and daughters. So do we also slepe in oure confusyon, and shame couereth vs: for we & oure fathers fro oure youth vp vnto this daye haue spynned agaynst the Lorde our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

The. liij. Chapter.

The true repentance of returnage to God. Heere doth he to the circumcysion of y herte. The destruction of Iewys is prophesied, for the malice of their hertes.

Israel, yf y wylt turne the, then I turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. And yf y wylt put awaye thyme abhominacions out of my syde, y shalt not be moued: And shalt I swear: The Lorde lyueth: in truethe, in equitye and ryghteousnesse: and all people shall be fortunable & topyfull in him. For thus sayeth y Lorde, to all Iuda & Ierusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not amonge the thornes.

Be circumsyded in y Lorde, and cut awaye the foreskynne of your hertes, all yee of Iuda, and all the indwellers of Ierusalem: that my indignacyd breake not out lyke fyre and byndle, so y no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednes of your pynagynacions.

Preach in Iuda and Ierusalem, crye out and speake: blowe the trypettes in the lande, crye y enery mā maye heare gather together, & saye: Gather you together, and we will go in to stryde cyties. Set vp y token in Syon, spede you, and make no tarlyge: for I wyl bringe a greute plage, and a greute destruction from the north. For the spople of the Gentyles is broken vp from y place, as a lyb out of his denne, that he maye make the lande lande waste, and destroy the cyties, so that no man maye dwel therein. Wherfore, gyrd your selues aboute with sacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the fearful wraoth of the Lorde is not withdrawen from vs.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the prestes shall be astonysed, and the prophetes shall be sore afraied. Then sayd y Lorde God, hast thou then disceyued this people and Ierusalem, saying: y we shal haue peace, and nowe the swerde goeth thorowe the: lyues: Then shall it be sayde to the people & Ierusalem: y a stronge wynde in the hye places of the wyldernesse cometh thorow the waye of my people, but neyther to fan, nor to cleanse.

After that, shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde from those places, and then wyl I also gyue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a stormy wynde: y his horsemen are swifter then y egyle. Woe vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, y wylt thyme hert fro wyckednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How long shal thy noslon thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyl of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Remembre y heythen, and gyue Ierusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that watchers ouer her are comyng from far countreys. They haue cryed out agaynst y cyties of Iuda. And they haue beset her aboute in euery place lyke as the watchmen in the feld: for they haue prouoked me to wraoth, sayth the Lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, such is thyme owne wyckednesse and disobedience: and because it is a bytter thing, it hath striketh the to y hert. Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalt thou cry) how is my hert so sore, my hert pateth within me: I cannot be still, for I haue herde the crying of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

They crye: murder vpon murder, the hole lande shal perishe. Immediatlye, my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the twynkelyng of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Heere thelesse, this shall come vpon them, y because my people is become foolyshe, and hath not knowen me. They are the chyldren of foolyshe, and without any discretion. To doo euyl, they haue wylt prouoghe: but to doo well, they haue no wysdome. I haue looked vpon the cerry, and se: it was waste and voyde. I looked towarde beauchen, and it had no thyme.

I behelde the mountaynes, and lo, they trembled, and all the hylls were in a feare.

I looked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all they cyties were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wraoth.

For thus hath the Lorde sayd: The whole lande shalbe desolate, yet wyl I not then haue done. And therfore, shall the earth mourne, & the beauchen be soze aboute: for the thynge that I haue spoketh to the prophetes purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I wyl not go fro it. The hole lande shall lye, for the noyse of the horsemen and bowemen: they shal runne into tentes, into wooddes, and clyme vp the stonye rockes. All y cyties shall be voyde, and no man dwelling therein.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy selfe with scarlet, & deckest the w golde: y though thou payntest thy face with colours now, yet shalt thou trym thy selfe in bayne.

For those that hitherto haue bene thy greute fauourers, shall abhorre the, and goo about to slaye the. For I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauayllyng, or one in labouryng of her fyrst chyld: Eue the voyce of the daughter Syon, that casteth out her armes, and swooneth, saying: Ah woe is me, how sore vered and famit is my hert, for feare of the murderers.

The. v. Chapter.

In Jeremie is there no reprouous or saythfull man founde, cyther amonge the people or the rulers, for whos sake y Lorde shulde repare the cytie. Woe: for y wylt is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Like thowowe Ierusalem, beholde I and se: Seke thowowe her stretes also within, if ye can fynde one mā that doeth equal and ryght, or seker for the truthe, and I shall spare that cytie (sayeth the Lorde). For though they can saye: the Lorde lyueth, yet they sweare to discreue. Where as thou (O Lorde) lokest onely vpon sayth and truthe.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made theyr faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therfore I thought in my selfe: peradventure they are so simple and foolyshe, that they vnderstand nothing of the Lordes way, and iudgements of our God. Therfore, wyl I go vnto theyr heedes & rulers, & talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of y Lorde and the iudgements of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yacke, and burst the bondes in sondre.

Wherfore, a Lyon out of the woodde hath hurte them, and a wolfe in the eueryng shall destroye them. The Leopard doth lye lurking by theyr cyties, to teare in peces all them all them that come therout. For they offer-ces are multiplyed, and they departunge awaye is encreased. Shulde I then for al this haue mercy vpon the? They chyliden haue for-taken me, and I sworne by them that are no goddess. And albeit that I fed them to the ful pet they fall to aduoutre, and haunt barlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclely last they are become lyke the stoned houle: euery man nyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: Shulde I not correct this, sayth the Lorde?

Shulde I not be auenged of euery people, that is lyke vnto this? Tyne by vpon they walles, beate them downe, but destrope them not vterly, take away theyr foetrestes, by-cause they are not the Lodes: For vnsapthfully hath the house of Israel and Iuda forsak-ken me, sayth the Lorde: They haue denyed the Lorde, and sayde: it is not he that loketh vpon vs: Cuth, there shal no misfortune come vpon vs: we shal see nether swerde ner hunger. As for the warnyng of the Prophetes they take it but for wynde, yea, there is none of these whiche wyl tell them, that such thin-ges shal happen vnto them.

Wherfore, thus sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: bycause ye speake suche wordes, be-holde: The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wood, that the fyre maye consume them.

Lo, I wyl byng a people vpon you fro farre, O house of Israel (sayth the Lorde) a myghty people, an old people, a people whose speech thou knowest not, nether understan-dest what they saye. Theyr arrows are so-dayne death: yea, they them selues be verpe gpauntes. This people shal eate vpon thy frute & thy mente, yea, they shal deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters, thy shepe & thy bullockes.

They shal eate vpon thy grapes, & fynges.
As for thy strong & wel defended cyties, wher-in thou dydest trust, they shal byng to po-uertye, and that thowowe the swerde. Neerthelesse I wyl not then haue done with you, sayth the Lorde. But yf they saye: wherfore doth the Lorde our God all this vnto vs?

Then answer the: bycause, that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge god-des in your owne lande, euen so shal ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande.

Breache this vnto the house of Jacob, and crye it out in Iuda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou folish & vndiscret people) ye haue eyes but ye see not: cares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Heare ye not me, sayth the Lorde: Are ye not ashamed to loken me in the face? whiche bynde the see with the lande, so that it cannot passe his boundes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothyng, and though the waues therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

But this people hath a false and obstinate hert, they are departed and gone away fro me They thynke not in theyr hertes: O let vs feare the Lorde our God, that giueth vs rayne earlye and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euer still the harvest for vs vterly.

Neerthelesse, your mysdedes haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you hereof. For amonge my people are founde wicked persones, that priuily lay snares & wayte for men, to take them & destrope them. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are theyr houses ful of that whiche they haue gotten with falschod and discepte. Herof commeth theyr great substaunce and riches, her-of are they fat and welthy, and are more mischecuous then any other. They mynistre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause, yea, and they prosper: yet they iudge not the poore accordyng to equitye.

Shulde I not punish these thinges, sayth the Lorde: shulde I not be auenged of all suche people as these be? Horrible & greuous thyn-ges are done in the lande.

The prophetes teache falsely, and the pree-stes receyue gyftes, & my people hath pleasure therein: What wil come therof at the last?

The vi. Chapter.

The synnes for which Jerusalem is a sipe. Vncycled peccers. Conetoune. Discrete. The Lorde seeth the sacrifices of the Jewes. The compass of the Babylonians is prophesied agayne.

Come out of Ierusalem, ye stronge chyliden of Benjamin: blowe vpon the troppes ye. Ecuytes, set vpon a token vnto Bethsaran, for a plage and a greate mylerye appeareth out from the North.

I wyl lyken the daughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shal come the shepherdes with theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shal they pteche rounde about her, and euery one shal fede them that are vnder his hande.
Make battayle agaynst her (shall they saye) Neyse, let vs go by, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth away, and the night shadowes fall downe: Arise, let vs go by by nyght, & destrope her stronge holdes, for thus hath the Lorde of hoostes commaunded.

Heare downe her trees, and set vpon bulwo-kes agaynst Ierusalem, for the tyne is come that this cytie must be punished: for in her is all malicousnesse. Lyke as a codyte spouteth oute water, so she spouteth out her wickednesse. Robberye & vneightousnesse is verde in her: sorowe and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amend the (O Ierusalem) lest I with drawe my hert fro the, & make the desolate: & thy lād also, & nom I dwell in it. For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: The residue of Israel shal be gathered, as the remnant of grapes.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne vnto the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shal I speake, whom shal I warne that hemaye take heed? Their ea-res are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take the worde of God but for a scoone, & haue no lust therto. And therfore, I am so full of thynne indignacyon, (O Lorde) & I maye suffre no longer. But wede it out vpon thy chyliden & are without, and vpon all ponge men. Yea, the man must be taken prisoner with the wyfe, & the aged with the crepel. Theyr houses with theyr landes & wyues shal be turned vnto straw-gers, when I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitatours of this land, sayth the Lorde. For from the leest vnto the most, they hange all vpon couetousnesse, & from the prophete vnto prest, they go all aboute with falschod and lyes.

And helyde that, they heale the hurt of my people with swete wordes, sayeng: peace, peace, whē there is no peace at all. Were they ashamed when they hadd commytted abhomynacyon? Trulye nay they be past shame. And therfore they shal fall amō-ge slayne, & in the houre when I shal by-set them, they shal be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: go into the strea-tes, consydre & make inquisicyon for olde waye: and yf it be good and ryght waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they saye: we wyl not waleke therein, and I wyl sett watchmen ouer you, & therfore take hede vnto thy voyce of troppet. But they saye: we wyl not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gtyles, & thou cōgregacyon shal knowe, what I haue de-uyled for them. Heare ye earth also: behold, I wyl cause a plage to come vpon this people, euen of fente of their awne imaginacyōs.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes & to my lawe, but abhorred them.
Wherfore, byng ye me incense from Saba, & swete smellyng Calamus from farre countrees: Your burnt offerynges dysplease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrifices.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: behold, I wyl make this people fall, and there shal fall from among them the father & the chyliden, one neyghboure shal perthe with another.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, there shal come a people from the North, & a great people shal arise from the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shal they be weapened. It is a rough & fierce people, & an vnmerryfull people, theyr voyce rā-reth lyke the see, they ryde vpon horses well apoynted to battaill agaynst I, O daughter Sion. The crye of them haue we herde.
Our armes are feble, heynesse & sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with chylde. Let no man go forth into the felde, let no man come vpon the stre-te: for the swerde and feare of the enemy is on euery syde.

Wherfore, gyde a sack cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) spynke thy selfe w alshes, & mourne & wepe bitterly as vpon thy only beloued sonne. For the destroyer shal sodenly fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a stronge tower (O thou prophe-te) & a well fenced wall amonge my people, to seke out and to trye theyr wayes. For they are all stubberne apostates and fallen awaye, walkinge disceitfully, they are clea-ne blasphemers, for they hurt & destrope eu-ery man. The bellous are bēt in the fyre, & lea-de is not molten, & melter melteth in wayne for euell is not taken awaye from them.
Therfore do they call the naughty syluer, because the Lorde hath cast them out.

The vii. Chapter.

Jeremy is commaunded to shew vnto the people the worde of God, whiche trusteth in the outwarde securce of the temple. The euilles that shal happen to the Jewes for the despyllyng of theyr prophetes. Sacrifices doth not the Lorde chetely requyre of the Jewes, but the wylde opeyngs of theyr hertes.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremie: saye. Stande vnder the gate of the Lodes house, and crye out these wordes there is a loude voyce, and saye. Heare ye worde of the Lorde all ye of Iuda, that goin at this doore, to wor-shyppe the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel. Amēde your wayes & your counceils, and I wyl let you dwell in this place. Trust not in false lyge wordes, sayeng: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde.

But rather in deade amēde your wayes and counceils, & and iudge ryght betwixte a man and his neyghbour: oppresse not the strainger, & fatherles, & the wyddowe: the not innocent blond in thys place: cleue not to straunge goddes to your awne destruccō: then wyl I let you dwell in this place, yea, in the lād that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede: ye trust in lyngge tales, & begyle you & do you no good.
For when ye haue stolen, murdered, com-mytted aduoutre, & perjury. When ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge straunge & vknowne goddes shal ye be vnpunished.
Yet then come ye, & stande before me in this house, (which hath my name geuen vnto it) & saye. Cuth, we are absolved quite, though we haue done all these abhomynacyōs.

What thynke you this house? heareth my name, is a denne of theues? And yea I se what you thynke, sayeth the Lorde.

de. Go to my place in Siloh, * wherunto I gaue my name a fore tyme, and loke well * what I byd to y same place for the wyekednes of my people of Isracell. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (sayeth the Lorde) and I my self rose vp euer by tymes to warne you & to comen with you, yet wolde ye not heare me. * I called, ye wolde not answere. And therfore, * euen as I haue done vnto Siloh, so wyll I do to thys house, that my name is geuen vnto (that ye put youre trust in) ye vnto y place that I haue geuen to you and your fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my syght, * as I haue cast out all youre brythren the whole scede of Ephraim.
* Therfore, thou shalt not praye for thys people, thou shalt nether geue thackes, nor byd prayer for them: y shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wyse wyll I heare y. Sepst y not what they do in the cyties of Iuda, & in y streets of Ierusalem. * The chyldren gather stykes, the fathers kynde y pyre, y women kynde y dowgh, to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.
They poure out bynchoffrynges vnto strange goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. Howbeit they hurte not me (sayeth y lord) but rather confounde, & shame them selues.
And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: behold, my wrath & my indignacion shall be poured out vpo this place, vpo men & catell vpon y trees in y felde & frute of y lade, & it shall burne so y no man maye quench it.
* Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes y God of Isracell: heape vpyour * burnt offrynges wth your sacrificys, and eate y fleshe. * For when I brought youre fathers out of Egypt, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offrynges & sacrificys: but this I commaunded them, sayinge: * herken & obeye my voyce, and I shall be youre God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walcke in all the wayes, whych I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prosper.
* But they were not obediēt, they inclined not they eares there vnto, but wet after they a wne ymagynacions & after the morcyons of they a wne wycked herte, & so turned them selues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, fro the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypt, vnto thys daye.
* Neuertheles, I sent vnto you, all my seruantes y prophetes. I rose vpearly, & sent you worde, yet wolde they not herken, ner offere me they eares, but were obstynate, & worse then they fathers. And y shalt now speake al these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: y shalt crye vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore, shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the pro-

phc. y nether heareth the voyce of the Lorde they: God, ner receaueth bys correccion. * I saythfulnesse and treuth is cleane rote out of they mouth.
* Wherfore cut of thynne hearre y Ieru-salem, & cast it awaye, take vp a cōplaynte on hys, for y Lord hath cast awaye, and scatterd y people y he is displeased wthall. For the chyldren of Iuda haue done euell in my syght, sayeth the Lorde. * They haue set vp they abhominacyōs, in y house y hath my name, and haue despyled it. They haue also buylded an altier at y Copheth, which is in the valley of y chyldren of benom: that they myght burne they sonnes & daughters in pyre, which I neuer comaunded them, nether came it euer in my thought. And therfore beholde, y dayes shall come (sayeth the Lorde) y it shall nomore be called Copheth, or y valley of y chyldren of benom, but the valley of slaughter, * for in Copheth, they shall be buried, because they shall els haue no rowme. * Yee, the deed bodyes of this people shall be eaten vp of the foules of the ayre & wyld beasts of the erth, and no man shall fraye them awaye. * And as for y voyce of myrth & gladnes of y cyties of Iuda, & Ierusalem, the voyce of y bydegrome, and of the byde. I wyll make them scasse, for the lande shall be desolate.
* The viii. Chapter.
* The destruction of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amendement, reckenyng vpon they synnes. He reprehendeth the lying doctrine of the prophetes and prestes.
* The same tyme sayeth y Lorde, the bones of y kynges of Iuda, y bones of his prynces, the bones of y prestes & prophetes, yee, & the bones of the cytyens of Ierusalem, shall be brought out of they graues & layed agaynst the. * Sunne, the Moone & all y heauenly host: whom they loued, whom they serued, whom they ranne after, whom they sought and worshypped. They shall nether be gathered together ner buryed, but shall lye as doge vpon y earth, to they shame and despylunge.
* And all they y remayne of this wycked generation, shall despyre rather to dye the to lyue: wheresoeuer they remaine, and where as I scatter them, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. They shall saye vnto them also. * Thus sayeth the Lorde. Do men fall so, that they arysen not vpy agayne? D yf Isracell repent, wyll not god turne ageyn to them? Wherfore then is this people & Ierusalem gone so farre backe, that they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer the more obstinat, and wyll not be conuerted.
* For I haue looked, & cōsydered: but there is no man y speaketh a good word: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for bys synne, that wyll so moch as saye: wherfore, haue I haue I done thys? But euery man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth wyll, lyke a wyld horse in a battayll. The Storke in y ayer knoweth bys apoynted tyme, the Turtle doue the Swallow & the Crane cōsydere the tyme of they trauayll, * but my people wyll not knowe the tyme of the punishment of y Lorde. How darre ye saye then, we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Suerly in wayne hath he prepared his pēne, & vanyly haue the wyrters wyrtē it: therfore shall the wyse be confounded, they shall be afrayed & taken: for lo, * they haue cast out the worde of the Lorde: what wyldome can then be amonge them? Wherfore, I wyll geue they wyues vnto alcautes, and they felde to destroyers.
* For from the lowest vnto y hysst, they folowe all filthye lucre: & from y prophete vnto y prest, they deale all wlyes. * Neuer theles, they heale y hurte of my people verry slenderlye, sayenge: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all.
I fe for thame, how abhominable thyn-ges do they: and yet they be not ashamed, yee, they knowe of no shame.
* Wherfore, in the tyme of they visitacion, they shall fall amonge y deed bodyes, & be ouerthrowne sayeth the Lorde.
* Moreover, I wyll consume the in deade (sayeth the Lorde) so y there shall not be one graue vpon y vyne, nether one sygg vpon the fyge tre, and the leaues shall be plucke of. And the thynge y I haue geuen them shall be taken fro the: why prolonge we y tyme? Let vs gather oure selues together, and go into y stronge cytie, there shall we be in rest. For y Lorde oure God hath put vs to syllece, & geuen vs water myrte w gall, to bynchke: because we haue synned agaynst hym.
* We looked for peace, & we fare not the better, we waited for the tyme of health, & lo, here is no thynge but trouble.
The noyse of his horses is hearde from Dan, y whole lade is afrayed at y neyenge of his stronge horses: for they are come in, & haue deuoured y lade, w all y is in it: y cyties, and those y dwell therein. * Moreover, I wyll sende Cockatrice & serpētes amonge you (which wyll not be charmed) & they shall byte you, sayeth the Lorde.
* I wolde haue had cōforte agēst sorowe: but sorowe is come vpon me, and heynnes vexeth my hert: for lo, y voyce of y cryenge of my people is herde for feare of them, that come from a farre countre. Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not y byng, in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) w they ymages & foolys straunge fashyōs of a foreyne god? The hartest is gone, the Sōmer hath an ende, & we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of y hurte of my people. I am heuy & abashed, is ther no triacle at Silcad? Is ther no physycyon ther? Why then is not the helthe of my people recovered?

The ix. Chapter.
* The complaine and bewayping of the prophete, the malice of the people. In the knowledge of ydought we onely to reioyse. The bynchke of the hert.
* Who * wyll geue my head water y enough, and a wel of teares for myne eyes: y I maye wepe night and daye: for y slaughter of my people: Wolde God, that I had a cotage some where farre from folcke, y I myght leaue my people, and go fro the: for they be all aduouters & a thyn chynge sort. They hēde they tinges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. They wax stronge vpon erthe. As for y trouth, they maye no thynge awaye wthall in the world. For they go from one wyckednes to another, and wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.
* Yee, one must kepe hym selfe from another, no mā may safely trust his a wne byde: for * one brother vndermyndeth another, one neyghboure begyleth another. Yee one dissembleth w another, and they deale w no trouth. * They haue practysed they tinges to lye, & taken great paynes to do mischief. Thou syttest i y myddes of a dysceatfull people, which for very dissemblinge falshe, wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.
* Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: behold, I wyll melte them, and trye them, for what shall I els do to my people. * They tinges are lyke sharpe arrowes, to speake dysceate. Wth they mouth they speake peaceably to they neyghboure, but pryncely they laye waite for hym. * Shulde I not punysh the for these thynge, sayeth y Lorde? Shulde I not be auēged of any folcke people as thys? Upon y mountaynes will I take vp a lamentacion & a sorowful crye, & a mournige vpo y sayre playnes of y wilderness. Namely, how they are so bytē vpo, y no man goeth there any moore. Yee, a man shall not heare one beaste crye there.
Byrdes & catell are all gone from thece * I will make Ierusalem also an heape of stones, & a denne of venymous wormes. And I will make y cyties of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande thys? D y to whom hath y Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this, & saye. D y lande, why perishest thou so? Wherfore art y so bytē vpo, & lyke a wilderness, y no man goeth thowow? Yee, the Lorde hym selfe tolde y same vnto the, that forsoke bys lawe, & kepte not y thynge y he gaue them in cōmaundemēt, nether lyued thereafter: * but folowed the wickednes of they a wne hertes, & serued straunge Goddes, as they fathers taught them.
* Therfore

Etherfore, thus sayeth J^{h} Lord of hostes, the God of Israel. Beholde, I will fede this people with wormwood, & geue them gall to drynke. I will scatere the also among the heathen, whom nether they ner they fathers haue knowne: I will fede a wearde amoge them, to persecute them, untill I byng them to naught. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Beware of y^{e} vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and cal for mourning wyues, & sende for wyse women: that they come shortly, and synge a mourninge songe of you: that y^{e} teares may fall out of oure eyes, and y^{e} eye lyddes maye gush out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse hearde of Sion. H ow are we so sore destroyed? H ow are we so piteously confounded? We must forsake our awne naturall countre, & we are put out of oure awne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lord. O ye women, & let poure eares regarde the wordes of his mouth: y^{e} ye may lerne poure daugh- ters to mourne, & that euery one may teach her neyghboure, to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is clmyng up in at oure wyndowes, he is come into oure houses, to destroye the chylde before y^{e} doze, and the yonge man in the strete.

But tell thou plainly, thus sayeth the Lord. T he deed bodyes of men shall lye upon the ground, as y^{e} donge upon y^{e} felde, & as the hepe after y^{e} mowder, & ther shall be no man to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lord. Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wysdome, ner y^{e} strong man in his strength, nether the ryche man in his ryche: B ut who so will reioyse, let hym reioyse in this, that he understandeth, & knoweth me: for I am y^{e} Lord, which do mercy, equitye and ryghteousnesse upon y^{e} earth. T herfore, haue I pleasure in such thynges, sayeth the Lord. Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord) y^{e} I will vylet all them, whose fore skynne is vncircumcised. T he Egyptians, the Jewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, & and the Maues. M adianites, that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

The x. Chapter.

T he custodians of the Gatten are not to be feared. Of the weakenes of Idols, and of the power of God. Of euill curates.

Hear the worde of the Lord that he speaketh vnto the, O y^{e} house of Israel. Thus sayeth y^{e} Lord. Y^{e} shall not lerne after y^{e} maner of y^{e} heathen, & ye shall not be afrayed for y^{e} tokens of heauen: for y^{e} heathen are afrayed of such: yee, al y^{e} customes and lawes of the Gentiles are nothyng, but vanyte. T hey hewe downe a tree in y^{e} wod with y^{e} handes of y^{e} workeman, and tashyon it w t the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or siluer, they fasten it with nayles & hammers, that it mouenot. I t standeth as y^{e} palme tree, it can nether speake ner go one fote, but must be borne. W e not ye afrayed of such, for they can donether good ner euill. But there is none lyke vnto y^{e} , O Lord, & great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? O kyng of the Gentils for thyne is the domynion.

For amonge all y^{e} wyse men of the Gentiles, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none y^{e} maye be likened vnto y^{e} . They are all together vndered & vnyble in this one thyng. All theyr conynge is but vanyte: namely, wod, syluer, which is brought out of Charlis, & beaten to plates: and golde from y^{e} phir, a worcke y^{e} is made with the hnde of y^{e} craftesman & the calter, clothed w t yelowlyck & scarlet: euen so is the worcke of theyr wyse men all together. But y^{e} Lord is a true God, a luyng God, & an euerlastyng kyng. I f he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentiles maye not abyde his indygnacyon.

As for theyr goddes thus shall you saye to them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen ner earth therfore shall they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) h e made y^{e} earth w t his power, and with his wysdome doth he order y^{e} whole copasse of y^{e} worlde, with his discrecyon hath he spred out y^{e} heuens. At his voyce y^{e} waters gather toge- the in y^{e} paye, h e draweth vp y^{e} cloudes fro the uttermost partes of y^{e} earth: he turneth lychtenyng to rayne, & byngeth forth the wyndes out of their treasures. His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And confounded be all casters of ymages, for y^{e} they cast, is but a vayne thyng, & hath no lyfe. T he vayne craftesmen w t their workes, y^{e} they in their vanyte haue made, shall perishe w t another y^{e} tyme of vilitacyon. Neuertheles, Jacobs porcyon is no such: but it is he, y^{e} hath made all thynges, & Israel is y^{e} rodd of his inherytaunce. T he Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the land, y^{e} that art in y^{e} stryde place. For thus sayeth y^{e} Lord. Behold, I will now thowde as w t a stone uponge y^{e} inhabitants of this la- de: at this once, and I will byngne trouble vpon them, that they shall proue trewe the wordes y^{e} I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, how am I hurt. A las how payne- full are my scourges vnto me. For I con- fyde this lowe by my self, and I must suf- fre it. M y tabernacle is destroyed, and all my my coardes are broken. M y chyldezen are gone fro me, & can no where be fonde. Now haue I none to spede out my tent, or to set vp my habynges. For y^{e} herdmene haue done folysly, that they haue not sought y^{e} Lord. T herfore, haue they dealt vnwisely with theyr catell, & all are scatred abrode. Beholde, y^{e} noyse is harde at hand, & great sedicyon out of y^{e} north: to make the cyties of Iuda a wyldernes, & a dwellinge place for dragons. Now I knowe (O Lord) y^{e} it is not in mas power to ordre y^{e} awne wayes, or to rule his awne steppes & goynges. T herfore, chasten thou vs, O Lord, but with sauoure & not in thy wroth, byng vs not utterly to naught. P oure out thyne indygnacyon rather vpon the Gentiles, that knowe y^{e} not, & vpon the people y^{e} call not on thy name. A nd that because they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Ja- cob, and haue made his habytacyon wast.

The xi. Chapter.

T he curse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes promesse. T he people of Iuda following the steppes of theyr fathers, wyshperch strange goddes. T he Lord sayeth that he will not heare the Jewes, and forbyde- dech also Jeremy to praye for them.

Hys is another Sermon, whych the Lord comaunded Jeremy for to preach, saying: heare the wor- des of the couenant, & speake vnto y^{e} men of Iuda, & to all the that dwell at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto them. Thus sayeth y^{e} Lord God of Israel: C ur- se be euery one y^{e} is not obediēt vnto y^{e} wor- des of this couenant: whych I comaunded vnto poure fathers, what tyme as I bzou- ghte them out of Egypt, from y^{e} yron forna- ce, saying: W e obediēt vnto my voyce, & do acordyng to all y^{e} I comaunde you: so shall ye be my people, & I wilbe poure God, and will kepe my promyse, that I haue sworne vnto poure fathers. Namely, that I wolde geue them a lande which floweth w t mylke & hony: as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this day. T hen answered I , and sayd: Amen. L et it be euen so Lord, as thou sayest.

Then the Lord sayde vnto me agayne: Preache this in the cyties of Iuda & rōnde aboute Ierusalem, & saye. Heare y^{e} wordes of this couenant, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted poure fathers, euer sence y^{e} tyme that I brought them out of y^{e} land of Egypt, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, saying: herken vnto my voyce. N euertheles, they wolde not obeye me, nor incline theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wicked ymaginacions of theyr awne hertes. And therfore, I haue accursed the as transgressours of all y^{e} wor- des of this couenant, that I gaue them to kepe which they (notwithstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lord sayde vnto me. I t is fōd de out, that whole Israel and all these cite- zins of Ierusalem are gone backe. They ha- ue turned them selues to the blasphemys of theyr forefathers, which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lyke wyse haue the- se also folowed straunge goddes, and wor- shypped them. T he house of Israel & Ju- da haue broken my couenant, which I ma- de with theyr fathers.

Therfore, thus sayeth y^{e} Lord. Behold, I will sende a plage vpon the, which they shall not be able to escape: & though be they crye vnto me, I will not heare the. T hen shall the townes of Iuda & the citezins of Ierusalem go, & call vpon y^{e} goddes vnto whom they made theyr oblacys: but they shall not be able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. For as many cyties as y^{e} hast, O Iuda, so many goddes hast y^{e} had also. And loke how many stretes there be in y^{e} , (O Ierusalem) so many shamefull alters haue ye set vp, alters I sape to of- fre vpon the vnto Baal. T herfore, praye not y^{e} for this people, byd nether prayse ner prayer for the, for though they crye vnto me in theyr trouble, yet will I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my hou- se, sence he hath worked abominacion ser- uynge many goddes? T he holy fleash of fringes in the temple ar goone fro the O Ju- da, and thou when thou hast done euill ma- kest thy boast of ytt. T he Lord called y^{e} a grene olyue tre, a sayre one, a fructfull one, a goodly one: but with grete clamor hath the enemy sett fyre vpon it and the brāches of yt are destroyed. For the Lord of hostes that planted the, hath deuyled a plage for the (O thou house of Israel and Iuda) for y^{e} euill that ye haue done to pro- uoke hym to wroth, in that ye byd seruyce vnto Baal.

This (O Lord) haue I lerned of the, and vnderstād it, for thou hast shewed me theyr ymaginacions. B ut I am (as a meke lam be an ore) that is carped a waye to be slay- ne, not knowynge, y^{e} they had deuyled such a counsell agaynst me, sayeng: W e will destroye his meate with wod, & dryue him out of y^{e} land, of y^{e} luyng: y^{e} his name shall neuer be thought vpon. T herfore, I will beseeche the now (O Lord of hostes) thou ryghteous iudge, thou that trest y^{e} repnes & the hertes: lett me se the aneged of them, for vnto y^{e} haue I comitted my cause. T he Lord therfore spake thus of the cytyzins of Ierusalem, that sought to slaye me, say- ge: P reache not vnto vs in the name of y^{e} Lord, or els y^{e} shall dye of our hādes. T hus (I sape) spake y^{e} Lord of hostes. Behold, I will

I will vplet you. Your younge men shall perishe with sword, your sonnes & your daughters shall utterly dye of hunger, so y none shall remayne. For vpon the cytizing of Anathoth will I bring a plage, euen the peate of theyr vsytacyon.

The xii. Chapter.

The prophete maruelled greatly at the prosperite of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde, he speaketh agaynst curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threatneth destruction vnto the nacions that bordered vpon Jewes, which trou- bled and bereft it.

Lorde, thou art more ryghteous, then I shulde dispute w the. Ne- uertheless, lett me talke with the in thynges reasonable. * How hap- peneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? & that it goeth so well with them, whych (wytout any shame) offende & lyue in wickednes? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, & bynge forth frute. They boast moch of y, yet art y farre from ther repnes. But y Lorde (to whom I am well knowne) thou y hast sene, & pro- ued my herte, * take them awaye, lyke as a flock is carped to the slaughter house, and apointe them for the daye of slaughter.

How longe shall the lande mourne, * and all y herbes of y felde perishe, for y wycked- nes of them that dwell therein.

The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet say they tush, * God will not destroye vs utterly.

Seyng, thou art wecry in runnyng with y fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure lande y mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furpous wynde of Jordane? For thy brethren & thy kyured haue all together despyled the, and cryed out vpon y in thyne absence. * Sele- ue them not, though they speake saye wor- des to the. As for me (I saye) I haue forsaken myne awne dwelling place, & left my- ne heritage. My lyfe also y loue so wel, haue I geuen into the handes of myne ene- mies. * Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in y wood. It cryed out vpo me, therfore, haue I forsaken it. Myne herpta- ge is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse coloures is vpon it. Come, & ga- ther ye to geather al y beastes of the felde. Come that ye maye eate it vp.

* Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my y vineparde, and troden vpon my por- cyon. Of my pleasaunt porcyon, they haue made a wyldernes and desert. They haue layed it waste: & now y it is waste, it ligheth vnto me. Pee, the whole land lyeth waste, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for the sword of the Lorde doth consume from y one ende of the land to the other, & no flesch hath rest.

They haue sowen wheate, & reaped thornes. They haue taken herptage in posselpon, but it doth them no good. And y prophets were ashamed of your frutes, because of the great wrath of the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euell neyghbours, that lape haue on myne herptage, whych I haue posselled, euen my people of Israell. Beholde, I will plucke them (namely Israell) out of their lade, and put out y house of Iuda from among them.

* And when I haue rote them out, I will be at one with them agayne, & I will haue mercy vpon them: & bynge them agayne, euery man to his awne herptage, and into his lade. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) will lerne y wayes of them, to sweare by my name. The Lorde lyueth (ly- ke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be reckened among my people. * But yf they will not obeye, then will I rote out the same folke, & destroye them, sayth the Lorde.

The xiii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes is presigured, and their spactinge abyde, why Israell was rechaunged to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

Thus sayth y Lorde vnto me: go thy waye, & get me a linnen breeche, & gyde it aboute thy loynes, & let it not be wet. Then I got me a bree- che, accordyng to the comaundemēt of the Lorde, and put it aboute my loynes. After this y seconde tyme, the Lorde spake vnto me agayne. Take y breeche y thou hast pre- pared & put about the, & get y vp, & go vnto Euphrates & hyde it in a hole of y rock. So went I, & hydd it at Euphrates, as the Lorde comaunded me. And it happened longe after this, y the Lorde spake vnto me. Up, & get y to Euphrates, and fet y breeche from thence, which I comaunded y to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, & dygged vp, & toke y breeche from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde, the breeche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothyng.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Euen so will I corrupte y pynde of Iuda, & the hye mynde of Jerusa- lem. This people is a wicked people, * they will not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacyōs of their awne herte, & hange vpon straunge Goddes, then they serue & worshippe: & therfore they shalbe as this breeche, that serueth for nothyng. For as straptely as a breeche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straptely dyd I bynde the whole house of Israell, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayeth y Lorde: * yf they myght be my people: that they myght haue a glorious name: that they myght be in ho- nour: but they wold not obeye me. Then shalt y saye vnto them. Thus sayeth y Lorde: Behold, I shall fill all y inhabitours of thys lande w dronkennes, the hynges that lyt vpon Dauides stole, y prestes & prophetes, w all that dwell at Ierusalem. And I will sett them one agaynst another, ye, the fathers agaynst the sonnes, sayeth the Lorde.

I will not pardon them, I will not spa- re them, ner haue pytie vpon them: but de- stroye them. Be obedient, geue eare, take not disdain at it, for it is y Lorde him selfe that speaketh. Honour y Lorde your God here in, or he take ysght from you, & or euery pouer fete stumple in darknesse at the byll: lest when ye loke for the lyght, he tur- ne it into y shadowes & darknesse of death. But yf ye will not heare me, that geue you secreete warnyng, I will mourne from my whole hert for your stubburnes. * Wytte- ouly will I wepe, & y teares shal gush out of myne eyes. Tell the kyng & the quene: humble your selues, sett y ou downe lowe, for your dignyte shal be throwne downe & the crowne of your glo- ry shal fall from your head. Of the death that shal come in Jewes. The prayer of the people askyng mercy of the Lorde. The vngodly people are not heard of prayer, sa- yng, & of false prophetes that seduce the people.

The worde of y Lorde shewed vnto Jeremy, concernyng y death of y frutes. Iuda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: they are brou- ghte to heynesse euen vnto y groude, & the crye of Ierusalem goeth vp. The lordes sent theyr seruautes to fetch water, & whē they came to y welles, they dyd fynde no water, but caried their vessels home emptye. They be ashamed & cofounded, & couer theyr hea- des. * For the grounde is dyed vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plow- men also be ashamed, & couer theyr heades. The hynde also forsoke y ponge fatone, y he brought forth in the felde, because there was no grasse. Doutles oure awne wyckednes doth re- warde vs. But lorde do y accordyng to thy name, though oure transgressyōs & synnes be many, and agaynst the haue we synned. * For y art y confort & helpe of Israell in y tyme of trouble. Why wilt y be as a straunger in y lande, & as one y goeth ouer y felde, & cometh in only to remayne for a nyght? Why wilt y make thy selfe a coward, & as it were a gyant: y yet maye not helpe? For thou (O Lorde) art in the myddest of vs, & thy name is called vpon of vs: forsake vs not. Thus hath y Lorde sayd vnto this people: * Seyng they haue had suche a lust to wa- der abrode, & haue not refrayned theyr fete, & therfore displeased the Lorde: but he will now bringe agayne to remembraunce all their mysdedes, & pynthe all theyr synnes.

Pee, euen thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: * Thou shalt not praye to do thys people good. * For though they fast, I wil not hea- re their prayers, and though they offere burnt offerings & sacrifices, yet will not I acce- pte them. For I will destroye the with the sword, honger & pestilence. Then answered I: O Lorde God, * y prophetes saye vnto the: Cuth, ye shal ned to feare no sword, & no honger shal come vpo you, but y Lorde shal geue you cōtynual rest in this place.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The pro- phetes preach lyes in my name, wher as I haue not sent them, nether gaue I them chy charge, nether dyd I speake vnto them: yet they preach vnto you false visyōs, char- ming, vanite, & dysceatfulness of their awne herte. For thus wyll I poure wth theyr wickednesse vpon them. Thys shalt thou say also vnto the. * Wyne eyes shall wepe without ceasinge daye & nyght. For my people shall be destroyed wth greute harme, & shall perishe with a greute plague. For yf I go into the felde, lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men. If I come into the cytie, lo, they be all famished of honger.

¶ The .xvi. chapter.

They prophesie the mystery of the Trinitie. They teach that worshipping of Images & the contempt of Gods law, is the cause of their misery. They prophesie the captiuitie of Babylon, & their deliuersaunce from thence againe, & calling of Jewes.

Thus sayde the Lord vnto me. Thou shalt take þ no wyfe, ner beget chyldren in this place. For of the chyldren that are borne in this place, of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this lade thus sayeth the Lorde. They shall dye an horrible deeth, * no mā shall mourne for the ner bury them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earth. They shall perishe thorow the swearde and hōger, * and theyr bodys shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, ad beastes of þ earth. For thus saith þ Lorde: So not þ in vnto them nct come to mourne and wepe for them: for I haue takē my peace from thys people (sayeth the Lorde) yee my fauoure & my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall bewepe the, no man shall clyppe or haue him selfe for them.

There shal not one visite another, to mourne wth them for their deed, or to comforte them. One shal not offre another the cuppe of consolacyon, to forget theyr heuynesse for father and mother. * Thou shalt not go in to theyr feast house, to syt downe, to eate or drinke wth the. For thus sayeth y^e Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: * Beholde, I will take awaye out of this place, y^e voyce of myrrh and gladnesse, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the bypde: pee, and that in y^e dapes, that ye make seite.

Now when thou shevest this people all these wordes, & they saie vnto the. * Wher fore hath the Lorde deuyled all thys greate plage for vs? D; what is the offence & syn-ne, that we haue done agaynst þe Lorde our God? Then make thou them this answer:
* Because poure fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth the Lorde) and haue walked after straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshypped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kepte my lawe. * And ye with your shamefull blasphemyes, haue exceeded the wyckednes of poure fathers.
For euery one of you hath folowed the frowarde and euell ymaginacion of his awne herte, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therefore wpll I cast you oute of thys lande, into a lãde that ye and youre fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue straunge goddess daye and nyght, there wpll I thewe you no fauoure. * Beholde therefore (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall nomore be sayde: The Lorde lyueth, which brought the children of Israel out of ^{the} lande of Egypte: but, it shall be sayde, the Lorde lyueth, that brought the children of Israel from the North, and from all landes where he had scatted them. For I wyl brynge the agayne into the lande, that I gaue vnto theyr fathers.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) * I wyl sende out many fyshers to take them, and after þ wyl I sende out many hunters to hunte them out, from all mountaynes and hylls and out of þ caues of stone. For myne eyes beholde al theyꝝ wayes, and they cannot be hpd fro my face, nether can theyꝝ wyched de des be kepte close out of my syghte. But first wyl I sufficiently rewarde their shame full blasphemies and synnes, because they haue despyled my lande: Namely with theyꝝ stynking Idols & with the carayngs of their abominacions, wherewith they haue filled myne herytage. * O Lorde, my strenght, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto the frō the endes of the worlde, and saye: Merely our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, their Idols are but wayne & vnyprofitable. How can a mā make those his goddes, whych are not able to be goddes? And therfore I will once teach the, sayeth the Lorde, I wyl shewe them my hande & my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

The xvii. Chapter.

¶ The foreheade of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put their confidence in man, & those blessed that trust to God. Maynes here is wept. God is the searcher of hearts. The living waters are forsaken.
The halotweng of the Sabbath is commaunderd.

Youre synne (O ye of the trybe of Juda) is writte in the table of your her-tes, and grauen so vpon the edges of your alters with a penne of yre and wyth an adamant clawe: for as the fathers thyncke vpon their chyldre so thincke you also vpon your alters, woddes, thicke trees, hye hylles, mountaynes & felde. * Wherefore, I wil make my mounte standeth in the felde all your substance & treasure be spoyled, for the great synne that ye haue done vpon your hye places thowwe out all the coostes of your lande. Ye shall be cast out also fro your heritage, that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you vnder the heuy bondage of your enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue ministred fyre to my indignaciō, which shall burne euermore. Thus sayeth the Lord. * Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in mā, and that taketh helpe for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth from the Lorde: he shall be lyke the heath, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for that good thyng that is for to come to come, he shall not see it: but dwell in a drye place of the wilderness, in a salt and vndercupped lande. * Blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. * For he shall be as a tree, that is planted by the water syde: whyche sheddeth out the rote vnto mynstrell, whom the heate cannot harme, when it cometh, but his leaue shall be greene. And though there growe but lytle frute because of drought, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueh of to bynge forth frute. Amonge all thynges, man hath the most disceitfull and stubborne herte.

¶ The partriche maketh a nest of egges, whych she layde not. He cometh by ryche, but not by rycheousnes. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynde him, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose throne is most glorious, excellent and of most antiquite, which dwellest in the place of our holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israel. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: al they that departe from the, shall be wyrtren in earth: for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very conbyte of the waters of lyfe.

¶ Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be whole: saue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these me I saue vnto me. Where is the woide of the Lorde? Let it come now. Where as I neuertheles obediently folowed the as a sheperde, and haue not vncalled taken this office vpon me, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were ryght before the. Be not now terrible vnto me, O Lorde: for thou art he in whome I hope. When I am in perill: let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayed, and not me. Thou shalt byng vpon them the tyme of their plage, and shalt destroye them ryght so.

thers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neither hearkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubborne, & neither obeyed me: nor receaued my correccion. Neuertheles, yf ye will heare me (sayeth the Lorde) and beare no burthen into the cytie thozowe this gate vpon the Sabbath: yf ye will hallowe the Sabbath, so ye do no worke therein: then shall there go thozowe the gates of this cytie, kynges and prynces, that shall set vpon the throne of Dauid: They shall becarped vpon charrettes, & ryde vpon horses, both they and their prynces. Yee, whole Iuda & all the cytyens of Ierusalem shall goe here thozow, and this cytie shall neuer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also fro the cyties of Iuda, from about Ierusalem, and from the lande of Benjamin, from the playne felde, from the mountaynes & from the wilderness: which shall bynge burnt-offerynges, sacrifices, oblations, and incense, and offre vpon tharkelgeyng in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, to hallowe the Sabbath, so that ye will beare your burthens thozow the gates of Ierusalem vpon the Sabbath. Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem, and it shall burne vpon the houses of Ierusalem, and no man shall be able to quench it.

The xxiij. Chapter.

¶ God sheweth, by the example of a potters, that it is in his power to destroye the destroyers of his woide, and to helpe them againe when they amend. The conspuration of the Iewes against Jeremie, his prayer against the adulterers.

¶ This is another communication, that God had with Jeremie, saying: Arise, and goe downe into the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Now when I came to the Potters house, I founde hym makynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the Potter made of claye, brake amoge his handes: so he beganne a new, and made another vessel accordyng to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: * Wape not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande, cut as the claye in the Potters hande.

¶ When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye any people or kyngdome: yf that people (against whom I haue thus deuyled) conuerthe from theyr wyckednes: I repyte of the plage, that I deuyled to bynge vpon them. * Agayne, when I take in hande, to buyde, or to plante a people or a kyngdom: yf the same people do euell before me, and beare not my voyce: I repente of the good, that I deuyse to do for the. Speake now therfore vnto whole Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayeth sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuyling a plage for you, and am takynge a thing in hande against you.

¶ Therfore let euery man turne from his euell waye, take vpon you the thyng that is good, and do right. But they sayde, No more of this: we will folowe our auncient pynacions, and do euery man accordyng to the wyfulnesse of his auncient mynde.

¶ Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde. Aske amonge the heathen, yf any man hath herde such horryble thynges, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moysten the felde? Or maye the springes of waters be so graue awaye, that they rine nomore, geue moystnesse, ner make frute full? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacryfice vnto vayne goddesses. And they prophetes make them fals in theyr wayes fro the auncient pathes, ad to go into a fote waye not vled to betreden of iust men. Where thozowe they haue brought their lade into an euerylastyng wilderness & scozne. * So yf whosoener traunyleth thereby, shall be abashed, & wagge theyr heades. With an East wynde will I scatred the, before their enemye. And when their destruction cometh, I will turne my backe vpon the, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagin somthyng against this Jeremie. For the prestes shall not be destitute of prayse, neither shall the wyse men be destitute of counsell, ner the prophetes destitute of the woide of God. Come, and let vs smyte him with the tong, and let vs marke all his wordes. Conspyre me, O Lord, and heare the voyce of myne enemies: * Shall they recompence euell for good? for they haue digged a pit for my soule. * Remembre, howe that I stode before the, to speake good for them, & to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

¶ Therfore let their children dye of hunger, ad let them be oppressed wth the swearde. Let their wines be robbed of their children, and become wyddowes: let their husbandes be slayne, let their yonge men be kylled with the swearde in the felde. Lett the noyle be herde out of their houses, when the murderer cometh sodenly vpon them. * For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, & layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, I knowest all their counsell, that they haue deuyled, to slaye me. For geue not their wyckednes, and let not their sinne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the as the gyltie. This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

The xix. chapter.

¶ The prophete sheweth the destruction of Ierusalem, for the contempt and despayre of the woide of God.

¶ Thus sayde the Lorde: So thy waye I and bye the an earthen pytcher, and byng forth the Senators ad cheffe prestes into the valley of the chyldren of Beniamin, which lieth before the doze that is made of bypcke, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and saye thus vnto the. heare the woide of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and ye cytyens of Ierusalem. * Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde I will byng forth a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnhallowed this place, & haue offered in it vnto strange goddesses: whome neither they, they fathers, ner the kynges of Iuda haue knowne. They haue spyled this place also with the bloude of innocentes: for they haue sett vp an auter vnto Baal, to burne their chyldre for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I neuer commaunded, ner charged the, neither thought once there vpon.

¶ Beholde therfore the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that this place shall nomore be called Copheth, ner the valley of the chyldren of Beniamin, but the valley of slaughter: for in this place will I slaye the Senators of Iuda & Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of theyr enemies, ad of them that seke their lyues. And their deed carcases will I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. And I will make this cite so desolate and despyled: * that who so goeth ther by, shall be abashed and least vpon her, because of all her plagues.

¶ In Copheth shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus will I do vnto this place also, sayeth the Lorde, ad to them that dwell therein: yee, I will do to this cite as vnto Copheth. For the houses of Ierusalem and the houses of the kynges of Iuda shall be despyled, lyke as Copheth because of all the houses, in whose parlours they dyd sacryfice vnto all the hoolle of heauen and powred drinke offeringes vnto strange goddesses. And so Jeremie cam from Copheth, where the Lorde had sent him to prophete, and stode in the court of the house of the Lorde, ad spake to all the people: Thus sayeth

and viii. 6

saith the Lorde of hostes & God of Israel: Beholde, I will bypunge vpon this cite and vpon euery towne aboute it, all the plagues that I haue deuised against them: for they haue bene obstinate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges.

The xx. Chapter.

¶ Jeremie is smitten and cast into prison, for preasching of the worde of God. He propheseth the cap-turye of Babilon. He complayneth & he is a more kynge stroke for the worde of God. He is compelled by the sperte to preache the worde.

* Jer. vii. 6
Actu. xvi. 6

When Phasur & prestre, the sonne of Emer, chiefe in the house of & Lorde, herde Jeremie preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremie & put him in the stocks, that are by the hyegate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lorde. The nexte daye folowynge Phasur brought Jeremie out of & stocks agayne. Then sayd Jeremie vnto him. The Lorde shall call the nomore Phasur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearfull & afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will make the afrayed, euen thy selfe, & all that fauoure & which shall perishe with the swearde of their enemies, euen before thy face.

* Jer. lxx. 11
Jer. vii. 6
and viii. 6

And I will geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kynge of Babilon, which shall carie some vnto Babilon prisoners, & a slave some with the swearde. * Moreouer, all the substance of this lande, all their precious and gorgeous woorkes, all cosilynges, and all the treasure of the kynges of Iuda: will I geue into & handes of their enemies, which shall spoyle them, and carie them vnto Babilon. But as for the (Phasur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon with all thine household, & to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye, and be buried: thou and all thy fauourers, to who thou hast preached lyes. O Lorde, if I am disceaue, then hast thou disceaue me: thou hast dealt strongly, and hast preyntled, and makest me stronge agayne. * All the daye longe am I despised, & laughed to scoone of euery man: because I haue now preached longe agaynst malpicious & pyanny, and shewed them of destruction. * For the whyche cause they cast the word of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me cuer to the worst.

* Jer. lxx. 11

* Jer. lxx. 11

Wherfore, I thought fro hence forth, not to speake of him, ner to preache eny more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my hert and in my bones, whiche when I wolde haue stopped, I myght not. For why? I herde so many deuisions and blasphemies on euery syde of me: complayne vpon him, saye they, and we will tell his tale, yee euen of myne a done companions, and soch as were conuersant with me: went about to murder me, saying vnto him, we shall one waye or other begyle him and preyntle agaynst him, and he shal be slayned of hym.

But the Lorde stode by me, lyke a myghtie giuant: therfore my persecutors fell, & coulde do nothing. They shal be soze confounded, for they haue done vniuersally, they shal haue an euerlastinge shame. * And now, O Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous searcher (which knowest the reynes & the very heres: let me se them punished, for vnto the I commyete my cause.

Synge vnto the Lorde, and prayse him, for he hath deliuered the soale of the oppressed, from the hande of the violent. * Cursed be the daye, wherein I was borne, vnhappie be the daye, wherein my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father & tydings to make him glad, saying: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties which & Lorde turned vpon syde downe. Let him heare cryenge in & moynynge, and at none daye lame table howlyng. Why steepest thou not me, as lone as I cam out of my mothers wombe? O that my mother had bene my graue her self, that the byrth myghte not haue come out, but remayned still in her. * Wherfore cam I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of labour and sorowe, and to lead my lyfe with shame.

The xxi. Chapter.

¶ He propheseth that zedekiah shall be taken, and the cite burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie: * What tyme as kyng zedekiah sent vnto hi Phasur the sonne of Melchias, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasias prestre, sayinge. * Alie counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon beseegeth vs, yf the Lorde (peradventure) will deale with vs, accordynge to his maruelous power, & take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremie. Geue zedekias this answer. Thus sayeth & Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I wil turne backe the weapens that ye haue in youre handes, wherewith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babilon & the Chaldees, which beseege you round aboute & walles, and I will bringe the together into the myddest of this cytie, & I my selfe will fyght agaynst you, with an outstretched hande, & with a myghtie arme, in great displeasure and terrible wrath: & I will smyte the, that dwel in this cite: yee, both men & cattell shal dye of a great pestilence.

* And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shal deliuer zedekias the kynge of Iuda, and his seruantes, his people (and soch as are escaped in the cite, from the pestilence, swearde and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor nosor kynge of Babilon: yee, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into & handes of those that folowe vpon their lyues, which shall smyte them with the swearde, they shal not ppyte them, they shal not spare them, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people & shalt saye. Thus sayeth & Lorde: * beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe & deeth. * Who so abyde in this cytie, shall perishe: ether with & swearde, wyth hunger, or wyth pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that beseege it, he shall saue his lyfe & shall wyne his soule for a pray. * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the king of Babilon, and be byent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kyng of Iuda, saye thus: heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus saith & Lorde: * Minister ryghteousnes, & that soone, deliuer the oppressed from violent power: or cuer my terrible wrath breake out lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of youre ymaginations. * Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and feldes, and saye. * Cussy: who will make vs afrayed? or who will come into oure houses? For I will vylet you saith the Lorde because of the wickednes of your inuencions, and will kyndle soche a fyre in youre wood, as shall consume al that is aboute you.

The xxii. Chapter.

¶ He exhorte the kynge of Iuda to iudgement and ryghteousnes, whye Ierusalem is brought into cap-turye. The death of Selum the sonne of Josias is prophesed.

Thus sayde the Lorde, Go downe in to the house of the kyng of Iuda, & speake there these wordes, and saye: heare the worde of the Lorde, thou king of Iuda that syttest in the kyngly seat of Dauid: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and out at this gate. Thus the Lorde comaundeth: * kepe equyte and righteounesse, deliuer & oppressed fro the power of the violent: do not greue ner oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse ner the wyddow, and shed no innocent bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thynges saythfully then shal there come in at & doze of this house kynges, to sit vpon Dauids seate: they shal be caried in Charettes & ryde vpon horses both they and their seruantes, and theyr people. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, * I sweare by myne a done selfe (sayeth the Lorde) thy house shal be waste. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Iuda. Thou shal art vnto me the head of Libanus.

Shall I not make & so waste (as thy cyties also) that no man shall dwell therein? I wil prepare a destroyer with his weapens for & to heve downe thy speciall Cedre trees, ad to cast them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytie, shal speake one to another. * Wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytie? Then shal it be answered: * because they haue broken the conuait of & Lorde theyr God, and haue worshypped & serued straunge goddes. * Mourne not ouer the deede, ad be not wo for the, but be soze for hym that departeth a waye: for he cometh not agayne, and seeth his natue countre no more.

For thus sayeth the Lorde, as touchynge Selum the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda, which raygned after his father, ad is carried out of this place, he shal neuer come hyther agayne, for he shal dye in & place, wher vnto he is led captiue, ad shal se this lande nomore. * Wo worth hi, that buyldeth his house with vnrightheousnes, ad his parlours with the good & he hath gotten by vpolce: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours laboure, ner payeth him his hyre. He thyncketh in him selfe. I will buyde me a wyde house, & gorgeous parlours. He causeth windowes to be betwen therein, and the spynges and ioyntes maketh he of Cedre, and payneth the with Synapce. Thynkest thou to raygne, now & thou prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Wyd not thy father eate and drinke, and prospre well, as longe as he dealt w equite and righteounesse? Yee, when he helped the oppressed and pooze to their right, the prospered he well.

From whence came thys, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde? Neuertheles, as for thynne eyes and thynne herte, they loke vpon coueteousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge & violence. * And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Jehoahim, & sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda. They shal not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster. Ne ther shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble price. But as an Alie shal he be buryed, corrupte and be cast without the gates of Ierusalem.

Clynie vpon the hyll of Libanus (O thou daughter Zion) lyft vpon thy voyce vpon Ba-san, crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou saydest: I will not heare. And this maner hast thou vled fro thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmē shal be dym with the wynde, and thy derlynges shal be caried awaye into captiuite. Then shalt thou be brought to shame & confusion because because of al thy wickednes: þ that dwellest vpon Libanus, & makest thy nest in þ Cedre trees. * How litle shalt þ be regarded whe thy sorowes & pangues come vpon the, as a woman traunclyng with chyldre.

* As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde:) Though Conaniah the sonne of Iehoaikim kyng of Iuda were the sygnet of my right hande, yet will I plucke him of. And I will geue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou fearest: into the power of Nabuchodo-nosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of the Caldees. Moreover, I wyll sende the, & thy mother that bare the into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desire to retorne vnto, ye shal neuer come at it agayne. This man Conanias shall be lyke an ymage robbed & towe in peces, whiche pleaseth noman, for all his apparell. Wherfore both he & his sode shal be sent awaye, & cast out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare þ worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth þ Lorde: Whyte this man amonge the outlawes, for no pro-phete shall this man haue all his lyfe loge.
Neither shall any of his sode be so happye, as to lye vpon the seat of Dauid, and to beare rule in Iuda.

The xxiii. chapter.

Be speaketh agaynst euery Curates that make hauock of þ flocke of þ Lorde. Of the conuersion of þ remnant of the Iewes to the faith. The commynge of the true shepherde Christ to prophete. Agaynst false prophetetes, when a prophete preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myseacles of false prophetes.

Whe * vnto the shepherdes, that despoyle, and scatre my flocke, sayeth þ Lorde. Wherfore this is the comaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre & thrust out my flocke, & loke not vpon the. Therfore now wyll I byset the wickednes of poure ymagynacions, sayeth the Lorde. And wyll gather together þ remnant of my flocke, from all landes that I had dyscuen the vnto, and will bypunge them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe & increafe. I wyll set shepherdes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They shall nomoze feare and drede, for there shall none of them be lost, saith the Lorde. * Be-holde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, þ I wyll rayse vp the * ryghteous braunche of Dauid, * which kyng shall beare rule, & he shall prosper with wysedome, & shall set vpequite & righteousness agayne in þ erth.
In this tyme shall Iuda be saued, & * Israell shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shal call him: * euen the Lorde oure ryghteousnesse. * And therfore beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde that it shall nomoze be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, & led the sode of the house of Israel, out of the North lan-de, and from all countrees where I had sca-tered the, and they shall dwell in their a wne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, al my bones shake: I am become lyke a broncken man (that by þ reason of wyne can take no rest) for verpe fea e of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Because the lande is full of aduouterers & thorowelwering it mourneth * & the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dyed by.
Pee, the waye that men take, is wicked, and they: gouernance is nothyng lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For prophetes and þ prestes them selues are polluted w pocrities, and they: wyckednes haue I founde in my house, saith þ Lorde. Wherfore, their way shall be slipperry in the darknesse, where in they maye sticke & fall. For I wyll bypunge a plage vpon them, euen the peare of they: visitacio saith the Lorde. I haue sent folp amonge the Prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and disceaue my people of Israell.

I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes of Ierusalem foule aduoutry, & þ clumpteous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, flatteringe them, so þ they cannot retorne from they: wyckednes. All these w their cytelus are vntome, as So-dome, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Therfore thus sayeth þ Lorde of hostes concernynge the prophetes: * Beholde, I will fede them with wormwood, and make the drynke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is ypocrisie come into all the lande.

And therfore the Lorde of hostes geueth you this warninge. * Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and disceaue you: surely they teache you vanp-te for they speake the meanyng of their a wne herte, & not out of the mouth of the Lorde.
* They saye vnto the that despyle me: The Lorde hath spokt it: Cuth: ye shal prospere ryght well. And vnto all the, that walcke after the lust of they: a wne hert, they saye: Cuth, there shall no misfortune happen you.
For whobath sytten in the counsell of the Lorde, þ he hath herde & vnderstande, what he is aboute to do: Who hath marcht tps deupre, and herde it: * Beholde, the stormy wether of þ Lorde (that is, his indignacio) shall go forth, and a vyolent whirlywynde shall fall downe vpon þ heade of þ yngodly.
And

And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, vntill he persourme and fulfyll the thought of hys herte. * And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanyng.

I haue not sent these prophetes (saith þ Lorde) & yet they ranne. * I haue not spoke to the, and yet they preached: But yf they had continued in my counsell they had opened to my people my wordes & they had turned my people fro their euell wayes & wycked ymagynacions. * Am I then God that seyth but the thinge, whiche is nye at han-de, & not that is farre of: sayeth the Lorde.
* Maye any man hyde hym self so; þ I shall not se hym: sayeth the Lorde. * Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth: sayeth the Lorde.
I haue herde well ynough, what þ prophetes saye þ preache lyes in my name, sayeng: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How lon-ge wyll this continue in the prophetes hert to tell lyes, & to preache the crafty sotylte of their a wne hert: Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as they: foresathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame let hym tell it: & he that vnderstandeth my worde, let hym shewe it saythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together: sayeth þ Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde, and lyke an hammer, þ breaketh the harde stone. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the prophetes, that steale my worde pryncely fro euery man: Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst the prophetes, that make tunges tender to speake, & saye: The Lorde hath sayd it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst those prophetes, þ darre prophecy lyeinge dreames, and disceaue my people with their vanyties, & myacles, whom I neuer sent, ner comaun-ded them. They shall do this people greute harme, sayeth the Lorde.

Yf this people, ether any prophet or preste aske the and saye: what is the burthe of the Lorde: Thou shalt saye vnto the: what burthen. Therfore wyll I cast you frome, (sayeth þ Lorde) because ye poure selues are a burthen. And the prophet, preste or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of þ Lode) hym wyll I viset, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another, & euery man to his brother. * What answere hath þ Lord geuen: or what is the Lordes comaundement: And as for þ burthen of the Lorde, ye shal speake nomoze of it: for euery man a wne worde is his burthe because ye haue altered the wordes of þ lyuynge God the Lorde of hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the Prophetes: what answer hath the Lorde geue the: Or, what sayth the Lorde: And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus saith the Lorde. For somoche as ye haue vset this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) where as I notwithstandinge sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore, I wyll repute you as a burthen, and will cast you out of my presence: pee, and the citie also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and will bypunge you to an euclastynge confusion, and into soch a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

The xxiiii. Chapter.

The byson of the two panners of fygges. The spirit byson synneth that parte of þ people shuld be brought agayne from captiuite. The second that zedekias & the rest of the people shulde be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a bysion: Be-holde, there stode two maundes of fygges before the temple of the Lode, after that * Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had led awaye captiue Iehoias the sonne of Iehoaikim kyng of Iuda, þ myghtie men also of Iuda, with the work-masters, and conynge men of Ierusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen lyke as those þ be first rype. In þ other maunde were very naughty fygges, which might not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seyst thou Ieremy: I sayde * fygges, wherof some be very good, & some so euell, that no man maye cate them.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus saith the Lode the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good figges, so shall I knowe þ men led awaye, whom I haue sent out of this place into the lande of the Caldees, for they: pro-fyte: and I will set myne eyes vpon the for the best, for I wyll bypunge the agayne into this lande: I wyll buyde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plante them, & not rote them out. * And I wyll geue them an herte, to knowe how that I am the Lode. They shal be my people, & I will be their God, for they shall retorne vnto me with their whole herte.

* And lyke as thou knowest the naugh-tie figges, which maye not be cate, they are so euell: Euen so wyll I (sayeth the Lorde) let zedekias the kyng of Iuda, (ye and all his princes, & the residue of Ierusalem that remayne ouer in thys lande, and them also that dwell in Egypte) to be vexed and pla-ged in all kyngdomes and lades. And wyll make them to be a * reppose, a comen by wo-de, a laughyngge stocke and shame, in all the places, where I shall scatre them. I wil sende the swerde, hunger & pestilence amonge them, vntill I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them ad they fathers.

The xxv. Chapter.

Jeremy propheseth that they shall be in captiue vnto the yre. yee, because they contemned and despised the word of God. He sheweth that after xlii. yeres the Babylonians shalbe destroyed. The destruction of all nations is prophesied. The mouth of the yre shall be the nations to warpinge.

A sermon that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Iuda. In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda that was in the fyrst yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. Which sermon, Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Iuda, and to all the inhabitours of Ierusalem, on this maner.

From the thirtiene yere of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Iuda, vnto this present daye (that is c. xlii. yere) the worde of the Lorde hath bene committed vnto me. * And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rylen vnto you, I haue geuen you warninge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. * Though the Lorde hath sent his seruantes, all the prophetes vnto you in season. Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not encline your eares to heare.

He sayde * turne agayne euery man from his euell waye, and from your wicked ymaginacions, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promised you & your forefathers. And go not after strange goddes, serue them not, worship them not, and angre me not with the workes of your handes: then wyl not I punish you. Neuertheless ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue defied me with the workes of your handes, to your awne greute harme.

Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Because ye haue not hearkened vnto my worde, lo, I wyl sende out, & call for all the people, that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lorde, and will prepayre Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruant, and will bynne the vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therein, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, and wyl utterly rote them oute. I will make of the a wilderness, a mockage, and a continuall deserte.

* Moreover, I wyl take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bydegrome and the byde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the cressettes: and this whole lande shall become a wilderness, and these nations shall serue the kynge of Babylon, thre score yeres and ten. * When the lxx. yeres are expired, I wyl visit also the wickednesse of the kynge of Babylon and his people sayeth the Lorde: yee, and the lande of the Caldees, and wyl make it a perpetuall wilderness, and wyl fulfill all my wordes vpon that lande; which I haue deuised agaynst it: yee, all that is writte in this booke, which Jeremy hath prophesied of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto diuers nations & great kynges. * For I wyl recompense them, accordyng to theyr dedes and workes of theyr awne handes.

For thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cuppe of indignacion from my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whom I send the, for to dryncke of it: that when they haue dryncken therof, they maye be mad, & out of their wittes, when the swearde cometh, that I wyl sende amonge them. Then take I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all people to dryncke therof, vnto whome the Lorde had sent me.

But first the cytie of Ierusalem, & all the cyties of Iuda, their kynges ad prynces, to make them desolate, wast, despyled, ad hyfled at, and cursed, accordyng as it is come to passe this daye. Yee, and Pharaos kynge of Egypte, his seruantes, his prynces and his people all together one with another & all kynges of the lande of hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron and remnant of Asdod, & Edomites, the Moabites and the Ammonites al kynges of Tyre & Sidon: the kinges of the Isles that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Tema, Buz & all the dwel in the uttermost partes of the worlde: all the kinges of Araby and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the deserte: al the kinges of Hamir, al kynges of Elam, all the kinges of the Medes, all kynges toward the North, whether they be satre or nye, euery one agaynst his neyghbours: Yee, and all the kyngdomes that are vpon the whole earth. The kynge of Babilon sayde he shall dryncke with them also.

Therfore saye thou vnto them: This is the commaundment of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Dryncke and be dryncked, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse, and that thowwe the swearde, whych I wyl sende amonge you. But yf they will not receaue the cuppe of thy hande, and dryncke it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of hostes threaten you: dryncke it ye shall, and that shortly. For lo, I begynne to plage the cytie, that my name is geue vnto: thinke ye then that I wyl leaue you unpunished? Ye shal not go quyte, for why, I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabitours of the earth, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes and saye vnto them. * The Lorde shall crye from above, and let his voyce be heard from his holy habytacion. With a great noyse shall he crye of Jeremy.

Jo. lxxiiij.

he crye from his court regall. He shall geue a great voyce, lyke the grape gatherers, and the sounde ther of shalbe heard vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, & will holde his court of iustice with all flesh, and punish the vngodly, sayth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Beholde, a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another, and a greute stormy water shall drye fro all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde him selfe slepe them, from one ende of the earth to another. There shall no mone be made for eny of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon the grounde.

Wourne, O ye shepherdes, and crye: spynkle youre selues with ashes, O ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of youre slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slepe one another, and you shalbe scatred, and ye shall fall lyke vessels conyngly made.

The shepherdes shall haue no waye to fle, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horribly, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed their pasture, and theyr best felde: lyke deede because of the horrible wrath of the Lorde. They haue forsaken theyr foldes lyke as a lyon. For theyr lande is waste, because of his furiose crueltye, and of his fearfull indignation.

The xxvj. Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendment. He is take of the prophetes and prestes, and brought to iudgment. Uriah the prophete is kyled of Babilon, contrary to the will of God.

In the begynninge of the raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda, came this worde fro the Lorde, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them which (oute of the cyties of Iuda) come to do worshipp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. * Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf peradventure they wyl herken, and turne euery man from his wycked waye: * that I maye also repente of the plage, which I haue determyned to bynne vpon them, because of theyr wicked inuycions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: yf ye will not obey me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes, who I sent vnto you, rylngge vp tyme, and still sendyngge. If ye wyl not folowe them (I saye) then I wyl do to this house, & as I dyd vnto Siloh, and wyl make this cytie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the prestes, the prophetes and all the prople hearde Jeremy preache these wordes, in the house of the Lorde.

Nowe when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lorde commaunded him to preache vnto the people, then the prestes, the prophetes and all the people toke holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde, it shall happen to this house as it dyd vnto Siloh: and this cytie shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therein?

And when all the people were gathered about Jeremy in the house of the Lorde, the prynces of Iuda hearde of this rumour, and they came soone out of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde: and sat the downe before the newe doore of the Lorde. Then spake the prestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people, these wordes: * This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cytie, as ye your selues haue hearde with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytie all the wordes ye haue heard. Therfore amende your wayes, and youre aduysementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God: so shall the Lorde repente of the plage, that he hath deuised agaynst you. Nowe as for me: I am in your handes, do with me, as ye thynke expedient and good. But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, ye shall make your selues, this cytie and all the inhabitours therof, guiltye of innocent bloude. For this is of a trouth that the Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the prestes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde our God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayde thus vnto all the people: Michah the Mozaabite, which was a prophet vnder Ezechiah kynge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Upon shalbe plowed lyke a felde, Ierusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wod. Yd Ezechiah the kynge of Iuda, and the people of Iuda put hym to death for this: No verely: but rather feared the Lorde, and made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuised agaynst thm. Shulde we then do such a shamefull dede agaynst our soules? There was a prophete also, that preached styfly in the name of the Lorde, called Uriah the sonne of Semetiah of Gath: this man preached also agaynst this cytie and agaynst this lande, accordyng

The prophecy

* III. re. rrl. b * Jehoahim the kinge with all the estates & princes had hearde hys wordes, the kynge went about to slaye hym. * III. re. rrl. a When Ariah perceaued that, he was afrayed, and fledd, and departed into Egypte.

Then Iehoaſhim the kinge ſent ſeruauntes into the lande of Egypt, namely Elnaſhan the ſonne of Achboz, and certayne men with hym into Egypt, which fetched Uriah out of Egypt, and brought him vnto kynge Iehoaſhim, that ſlewe him with the ſword, and caſt hyſ deed bodie into the comen peoples graue. But Abiham the ſonne of Saphan helped Ieremye, that he came not into the handes of the people to be ſlayne.

The xxvth Chapter.

At Jeremp, at the commaundment of the Roide, sent deth bondes to the Pringe of Iuda, and to the oother kings that were ney, wherby they are moughed to become subiectes unto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and y^e kinges and rulers, that they be-lieue not false p^rophetes.

In the begynninge of the reygne of Ichoalum the sone of Josiah kyng of Iuda, came this word vnto Jeremy from the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and chap-nes, and put them about thy necke, and send them to the kyng of Edom, to the kyng of Moab, to the kyng of Ammon, to the king of Tyrus, and to the kyng of Sidon: and that by the messengers, which shall come to Ierusalem vnto Iedekiah the kyng of Juda: and byd them saye vnto theyr masters: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made the earth, the men and the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my great power and outstretched arme, and haue geuen it vnto whō it pleased me. * And now will I deliuer all these landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon my seruauent. The beastes also of the felde shall I geue hym to do hym seruyce.

* And all people shall serue hym, & hys sonne, and his childers childzen, vntill the tyme of the same lade become alio: yee, many people and great kinges shall serue him.

Whereouer, that people and kyngdome, which wyl not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyl not putt theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babilon: the same people wyl I vyset with the swearde, with hunger, with pestilence, vntyll I haue consumed them in hys handes, sayeth the Lorde.

* And therfore, folowe not your prophetes, ſothelapſers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches: which ſaye vnto you: ye ſhall not ſerue the kyng of Babylon. Ifoz they preache you lyes: to bypnye you farre from your lande, and that I might caſt you out, and deſtroye you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yock of the king of Babylon, and serue hym, those I will let remayne still in their owne lands, sayeth the Lorde, and they shall occupie it; and dwell therin.

All these thynges tolde I zedekiah the king of Iuda, and sayde: * But your necken vnder the yocke of the king of Babilon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylt thou and thy people perishe with the swerde, with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuyd for all people, that wyl not serue the kynge of Babilon: * Therefore, geue no care vnto those mo-phets, that tell you: ye shall not serue the king of Babylon: for they preache you lies: neither haue I sente them, sayeth the Lorde.

Howbeit they are bolde, falsely to prophesy in my name: that I myght the sooner dryue you out, and that ye myght perishe with yo preachers. I spake to the prestes also, and to all the people. Thus sayth the Lorde: heare not the wordes of those prophetes, & preache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, * the vessels of the Lordes house shall shortly be brought hyther agayne from Babylon. For they prophesye lyen vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon, that remayne lyue. Wherefore wyl ye make this cite to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in very dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be committed vnto them, then let them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnant of the ornamentes (which are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Iuda and at Ierusalem) be not caried to Babylon also: For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concerninge the pylers, the lawer, the feate and the resydue of the ornamentes that yet remayne in this cite, which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, * when he caried awaye Iechoniah the sonne of Iehoaquim king of Iuda with all the power of Iuda and Ierusalem, from Ierusalem vnto Babylon, captiue.

See, thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchynge the residue of the ornaments of the Lorges house, of the kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem. * They shalbe caried vnto Babilon, and there they shall remayne vntyll I byset them, saith the Lorde. * Then will I bringe them hyther agayne. And thys was done in the same yere, euen in the begynnyng of the reygne of zedekiah kynge of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ The false prophete of Hananiah the prophete.
Jeremie sheweth that the prophete of Hananiah is false, by example of the other prophetes. He bringe inprised of the Lord, reproveth Hananiah, prophesyinge his death.

But

of Jeremye,

Fe. lxxiii.

3 But in the .liij. yeare of the raygne of zedekiah kinge of Iuda, in the
v. moneth, it happened þ Hana-niah the sonne of Aflur þ prophet of Siloth, spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the ptesence of the prestes, & of all the people, and sayde: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yocke of the kinge of Babilon, * & after two yeare will I brynge agayne into this place: all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon caried awaye from this place vnto Babilon.
Yee, I will brynge agayne Iechoniah the sonne of Iehoakim þ kinge of Iuda hym selfe, with all the presoners of Iuda (that ar caried vnto Babilon) euene into thys place, sayth the Lorde: for I will breake the yocke of the kinge of Babilon.

Then the prophet Jeremy came and were Brought to the prophet Hananiah, before the presents and before all the people that were present in the house of the Lord. * And the pro-phete Jeremy sayde: Amen, the Lord do y, and graunte the thyng which thou hast prophesied: that he maye bypnyng agayne all the oznamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the prisoners from Babylon into this place. Neuerthelesse, hearken thou also, what I wyll saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme past, which pphesied of war-re, oz trouble, oz pestilence, ether of peace, by many nacyns and great kingdomes, were proued by thys (yf God had sende the in very dede) * when the thyng came to passe, which that prophete tolde befoze.

And Hananiah the prophet toke y chayne from the prophete Jeremys necke, and brake it, and with that sayde Hananiah, y all the people might heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake y yoke of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, from the neck of all nations: yee, and that within this two yere. And so the prophet Jeremy went his waye. Nowe after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophete Jeremys necke, and broke it. The worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophete Jeremy, sayeng: Go, and tell Hananiah the wordes. Thus sayth the Lorde. Thou hast broken the chayne of wodd: but in steade of wodd thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: I wyll put a yoke of yron vpo the neck of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon: yre, and so shall they do. And I wyll geue hym the bestes in the felde. Then sayde the prophete Jeremy vnto the prophete Hananiah: * heare me Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sent y, but thou bringest this people into a false be-lese. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde : be-holde, I will sende the out of the lande, and within a yeare thou shalt dye, because thou hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Hananiah the prophete dyed the same yeare in the seventh moneth.

THE XXIX. CHAPTER.

The pistle of Hierem, sent unto them that were in captiuitie in Babilon. He propheseth they: returne from captiuitie after .lxx. yeares. He propheseth the destruction of the kinge and of the people that re- mayned in Ierusalem. He threatneth two prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiab the Iehelamite is prophesed.

These are the wordes of the booke, that Jeremy the prophet sent fro Jerusalem vnto the prisoners, & senatoures, prestres, prophetes, & all the people, who Nabuchodonosoꝝ had led vnto Babilon: after that time that king Iechoniah and his quene, his chā-berlaynes, the princes of Iuda and Jerusalem, the worckemasters of Ierusalem were departed thither: Which booke Elasah the sonne of Saphan, and Gamariah the sonne of helkiah dyd beare, who zedekiah kyng of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosoꝝ the kinge of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes booke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spake vnto all the prisoners, that were led from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: *
buyde you houses to dwel therein: plate you gardens, that ye maye entoye the frutes ther-of: * take you wyues, to beare you sonnes & daughters, proupe wyues for your sonnes and husbādes for your daughters that they maye get sonnes and daughters, and that ye maye multiplie there. Laboure not to be fe-we, but seke after peace and prosperite of y citye, wherein ye be prisoners, * & praye vnto God for it. For in y peace thereof, shall y peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Let not these prophetes and sothslayers y be among you disceane you: & beleue not your awne dreames. For why?
* they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sent them, sayth the Lorde.

But thus sayth the Lorde: * Whe ye hane fulfilled lxx. yeares at Babylon, I will brynge you home, & of myne awne goodnes I will carpe you hyther agayne into thys place. For I know what I haue deuised for you, sayth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (which I geue you all ready, and that ye myght haue hope againe. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you.
+ Ye shall seke me and fynde me. Yee, yf so be that ye seke me with your whole hert, I wil be founde of you, sayth the Lorde, and will deliuer you oute of prison, and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherin I haue scatered you, sayeth the Lorde, and will bring you againe to the same place, from whence I caused you to be carried away captive. But where as ye saye, & God hath raised you up prophetes at Babylon. Thus hath the Lord spoken to the kinge that sitteth in the throne of David, and to all the people that dwell in this cite, youe brethren * that are not gone with you into captivitye. Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lord of hostes: Beholde, * I will sende a sworde, hunger and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vnto vntimely fygges, & maye not be eaten for bitterness. And I will persecute them with the sworde, with hunger, and pestilence.

I will deliuer them up to be heried of all kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorn, and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whom I haue scattered the: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes, sayth the Lord, which I sente vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes. * I stode up early, and sent vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lord. Heare therfore the worde of the Lord, all ye prisoners, whom I sente from Ierusalem vnto Babylon. Thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Iah the sonne of Colaiab, and of zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, which prophete I pes vnto you in my name. Beholde, I will deliuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And all the prisoners of Iuda, that are in Babylon shall take vpon this terme of cursynge, and saye: Nowe God do vnto the, as he byd vnto zedekiah and Iah, whom the king of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israel.

For they haue not onely defiled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyngge wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. This I testifie, and assure, sayth the Lord. But as for Semeiah the Rehelamite thou shalt speake vnto hym. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto all people that is at Ierusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preste: yee, & sent them to all the prestes: wherein thou wyrttest thus vnto hym: The Lord hath ordeyned the to be preste in the head of * Jehoiada the preste: that thou shuldest be the chiefe in the house of the Lord aboue all prophetes, and preachers, and p mightest set them vpon the piller, or in the stocks. Howe happeneth it then, that p haue not reproued Jeremie of Anathoth, which neuer leaueth of his propheteinge. And besyde all this, he hath sent vs worde * vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therein: & to plante vs gardens that we maye enioye the frutes thereof. Which lettre Sophoniah the preste redde, and let Jeremie the prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Sende worde to all them that be in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lord spoken concerning Semeiah the Rehelamite: * Because that Semeiah hath propheted vnto you without my commaundement, & brought you into a fals hope, therfore thus the Lord dothe certifie you: Beholde, I will viset Semeiah the Rehelamite, and his seede: so that none of his shall remaine amonge this people, and none of the shall see the good, that I will do for this people, sayth the Lord. For he hath preached falsely of the Lord.

The xxx. Chapter.

The retourne of the people from Babylon. God by his charyng sheweth that the people is synfull. The destruction of the enemies of Israel.

These are the wordes, that the Lord sheweth vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke. For so, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lord, that I will bring agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel and Iuda, sayth the Lord. For I will restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to theyr fathers, & they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord, concerning Israel and Iuda: Thus sayth the Lord: We haue hearde a terrible crye, feare and disquietnes. For what elles do this signyfye, that I se: Namely, that all stronge men smyte, euery man his hande vpon his loynes, * as a womā in the paine of her trauayle. Who euer sawe a man trauayle with childe: Enquyre thereafter, and se. Yee, all their faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dredefull that none maye be likened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from which he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye, sayth the Lord, I will take his pocke from of thy neck, & breake thy bondes: And strangers shall nomore serue hym: but they shall do seruice vnto God theyr Lord, and to * David theyr kyng, whom I will rapse vp vnto them: * And as for the, O my seruant Jacob, feare not, sayth the Lord, and be not afraid, O Israel. For so, I will helpe the also from farre, and thy seed from the lande of their captiuitie.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, & no man shall make him afraied. For I am with the to helpe the, sayth the Lord. * And though I shall

I shall destroye all the people, amonge whom I haue scattered the, yet will I not destroye the, but correcte the, * and that with discretion: For I knowe that thou art in no wyse * without faute. Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Thy bysinges are peryllous, & thy woundes ready to cast p in to sickness. Ther is no man to medle with thy cause, or to lay plaster vpon the, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgottē the, and care not hyngge for the. For I haue geuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdoes: for thy synnes haue had the ouer bande. Why makest thou mone for thy harme in dede, thou art sore wounded & in leopardeye: * but for the multitude of thy mysdoes and synnes, I haue done this vnto the.

And therfore, all they that deuoure the, shall be deuoured: and all thyne enemies shall be led into captiuitie. All they that make the roast, shall be wasted them selues, & all those that robbe the, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy health agayne and make thy woundes whole, sayth the Lord: because they reupled the, as one cast awaye and despised, Syon (sayde they) is she whom no man regardeth.

For thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, * I will bring agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs tentes, and defende his dwelling place. The cite shall be buylde in her olde estate, and p houses shall haue their ryght foundation, And out of them shall go shepheardes, and the voyce of ioye.

I will multiplie them, and they shall not be fewe. I shall endue them with honoure, & no man shall subdue them. Theyr chyldren shall be as a foze tyme, and their cōgregacion shall continue in my syght. And all those that bere them, will I byset.

A captayne also shall come of them: and a pryncce shall sprynge out from the myddest of them: hym will I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. * For what is he, p geueth ouer his hert to come vnto me: sayth the Lord. * Ye shall be my people also, and I will be youre God. * Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrath of the Lord breake out as a stormy water as a mighty whyle winde: and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the Lord shall not leaue of, but p he haue done, and performed the intent of his herte, * which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lord, shall I be the God of all the generatyons of Israel, and they shall be my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The prophete that the people of Israel shalbe restored agayne vnto theyr prosperitie. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Christ is propheted. All the wycked shall dye in theyr wyckednes. The new testamēt and couenante is propheted. The chyrtian are taught and instructed of the Lord. Oure synnes shall be remitted, that they not ones be thought on. God promyseth, that he will cast of the Jewes. The buyllynge agayne of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * The people of Israel, which escaped in the wilderness from the sworde, founde grace to come into the p rest. Que so shall the Lord now also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: * I loue the with an euerlasting loue, therefore, by my mercye I haue drawen the to me. I will repayre the agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, p thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, and go forth with them, that leade the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon p hylls of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and communly eate of it.

For the dayes shall come when the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye: * aryse, let vs go vp vnto Sion to our Lord God, for thus sayth the Lord: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentils: speake out, syng, and saye: O Lord saue thy people, the remnant of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great with chylde, and soch as be also deliuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greete.

They shall come weping and with mercysfull pitye will I bring the hyther agayne. I will leade them to the ryuers of water in a straght waye, where they shall not thombe. * For I am Israels father, & Ephraim is my fyrst borne.

Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye Gentiles, preach in the ples, that Ipe farre of, and saye: he that hath scattered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, & shall kepe hym as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the violent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, which the Lord shall geue the. Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, poge shepe & calves. And theyr cōscience shall be as a well watted garden, for they shall nomore be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yee, both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and will conforzte them from theyr sorowes and make them ioyfull. I will powre plenteousnesse vpon the bertes of the prestes, and my people people shalbe satisfied with my goodnesse, sayth the Lorde

Thus sayth the Lorde: * The voyce of heynnes, weping and lamentatiō was heard on hye: euen of Rachel mournyng for her chyldren, and wolde not be comforted, because they were awaye.

But nowe, sayth the Lorde, leaue off thy wepyng and cryenge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy laboure shalbe rewarded, sayth the Lorde. And they shal come agayne out of the lande of their enemies: yee, euen thy posterite shal haue consolatiō in this, sayth the Lorde, & thy chyldren shal come agayne into their awne lande.

Moreover, I heard Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, cōplaine on this maner: * Lorde, thou hast correct me, & thy chastenynge haue I receaved, as an vntamed calfe: * Conuerter thou me, and I shalbe conuerted: for thou art my Lorde God: yee, as thou turnest me, I shal resourme my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shal smyte vpon my thighe. For verely I haue committed shamefull thinges. For I haue bozne the reproche and cōfusiō of my prynces.

Upon this complaynte, I thought thus by my selfe: * Is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sens the tyme I first cōmenced with hym, I haue him euer in remembrance: therfore, my very hart dyspucth me vnto hym, gladly and lounge I wyll I haue mercy vpon hym, sayth the Lorde. Set the watchmen, prouyde teachers for y, set thyne hart vpon the ryght waye, & thou shuldest walke, and turne agayn, O y daughter of Israel, turne agayne to these cittyes of thyne: howe longe wilt thou go astraye, O thou spynging daughter? For the Lorde wyll worke a newe thing vpon earth. A woman shal compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I wyll come therto, & when I haue brought Iuda out of captiuite, these wordes shalbe heard in the lande and in hye cittyes. The Lorde, which is the fayre & bydegrome of ryghteousnes, make y frutefull, O thou holy hill. And there shal dwell Iuda, and all her cittyes, & shepherdes, and husbandemen. For I shal fede the hongry soule, and refresh all faynte hertes. When I hearde thys, I came agayne to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I had bene waked oute of a sweete slepe.

Beholde, sayth the Lorde, the dayes come, that I wyll lowe the house of Israel, & the house of Iuda, with men and with cattell. * Yee, it shal come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote the out, to scatte them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chasten them. Euen so wyll I also go diligently aboute, to buylde them vp agayne, & to plante them, sayth the Lorde. * Then shal it nomore be sayde: the fathers haue eatē a sower grape, and the chyldrens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shal dye for his awne mylde, so y who so eateth a sower grape, his teeth shalbe set on edge. * Beholde, the dayes come, sayth the Lorde, that I wyll make a newe cōuenant w the house of Israel, and w the house of Iuda: not after the cōuenant that I made w their fathers, when I toke the by y hande: and led the out of the lande of Egypt: which cōuenant they brake: yee, euen when I as an husbunde had cule ouer them, sayth the Lorde. * But this shalbe the cōuenant that I wyll make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayth the Lorde. * I wyll plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in their hertes, & wyll be their God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thens forth, shal no mā teach his neyghbour or his brother, & saye: knowe the Lorde. But they shal all knowe me fro the lowest vnto the hiest, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll forgue their mylde, and wyll neuer remembre their synnes any more. Thus sayth the Lorde, which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and starres to shyne in the night: which moueth the see, so that the floudes thereof waxe fere: his name is the Lorde of hostes. Like as this ordinaunce shal neuer be taken oute of my lyght, sayth the Lorde. So shal the sede of Israel neuer cease, but all waye be a people before me.

Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, & as the foundaciō of the earth beneth maye not be sought out. * So wyll I also not cast out the whole sede of Israel, for that they haue committed, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the dayes come, sayth the Lorde, that the cite of the Lorde shalbe enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of y corner wall: from thens shal the ryght measure be takē before her vnto the hill toppe of Gath. & shal come about Gath, and the whole valley of the deeflarkales, and of the atres, ad all the felde vnto the broke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the hogate towarde the east, where as the sanctuary of the Lorde also shalbe set. And when it is nowe buylde, and set vp of thys fasthyon, it shal neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.

These

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jerem, in the x. yere of zedekiah king of Iuda: which was the xviij. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kynge of Babylon lons boost layed seage vnto Ierusalem. But Jerem the prophet laye boude in the courte of the pison, which was in the king of Iudas house: where zedekiah the kynge of Iuda caused hym to be layed, because he had propheryed of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, I wyll deliuer this cite into the handes of the kynge of Babilō, which shal take it. As for zedekiah the kynge of Iuda: he shal not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shal come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon: which shal speake w him mouth to mouth: and one of the shal loke another in y face. And zedekiah shalbe carped vnto Babylon, and there shal he be, vntill the tyme that I viset hym, sayth the Lorde. But yf y takest in hande to fpyght agaynst y Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jerem sayde: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Behold, Hananeel the sonne of Selum thyne vnckles sonne, shal come vnto the, and requyre the to redeeme the lāde that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of kynred it is thy right to redeeme it, and to bye it out.

And Hananeel myne vnckles sonne came to me in the court of the pison, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande, I praye the, that lieth in Anathoth in the contrey of Benjamin: for by heritage thou hast ryght to looke it oute for thy selfe, therfore redeeme it. Then I perceaued that thys was the commaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lāde from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vnckles sonne, and weied him there the moneye: euen seuen syckles and ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make me a writing and to seale it: and called recorde therby, and weyed hym there the moneye vpon the waygbtes. So I toke the euidence with the cōpye, when it was orderlye sealed and redde ouer, and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Meriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hananeel my vnckles sonne, and in the presence of the witnesses, that he named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the pison.

I charged Baruch also before them sayinge: The Lord of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take thys sealed euidence with the copie: and to laye it in an earthen vessel, that it maye longe continue.

For the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel hath determynd that houses, felde, and vyneyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch y sonne of Meriah, I besought the Lorde, sayinge: O Lord God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hie arme, and there is no thyng hyd from the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recōpencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the chyldren that come after them.

Thou art the greate and myghtye God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greate in counsell, and excellent in worke. Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to reward euery one after his waye: & accordyng to the frutes of his inuencions.

* Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte, as w: sc thys daye, vpon the people of Israel and vpon thole men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel oute of y land of Egypt, with tokens, with wonders, with a myghtye hande, with a stretched out arme and w greate terribleness: and hast geuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers. Namely, that thou woldest geue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye.

* Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walcked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plagges vpon them.

Beholde, there are bullworckes made now agaynst the cite, to take it: and it shal be wonne of the Chaldees that besege it, with swerde, with hunger and death, and looke what thou hast spokē, that same shal come vpon them.

For lo, all thynges are present vnto the. * Yet (saist thou vnto me, O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shal loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cite is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all fleshe, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore thus saith the Lorde: * Beholde, I shal deliuer thys cite into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shal take it in. For the Chaldees shal come, and wyne thys cite, and sett spere vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeouse houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drynckofferynges vnto straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For sayng the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Iuda haue wrought wickednes before before me ever fro the youth up, what have they done, but provoked me wth w^ords of their own handes: sayth the Lorde.

¶ What hath this cite bene elles but a prouoking of my w^orath, ever since the daye that they builded it, vnto this houre wherein I cast it out of my sight, because of the great blasphemies of the children of Israel & Juda, which they haue done to provoke me: yee, they, their kynges, their prynces, their prestes, their prophetes, the men of Juda, and the cytyens of Ierusalem.

¶ When I stode vp early, and taught the and instructed them, they turned their backs to me, and not theyr faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correct: but set their ydols in y^r house, that is halowed vnto my name, to despyle it. They haue builded hye places for Baal in the valley of the children of Hennom, to dowe theyr sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commaunded them: neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda synne with such abhominatyon.

¶ And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which as ye your selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the hande of the kyng of Babylon, when it is wonne with the sword, with honger and with pestilence. ¶ Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wher in I haue scatered them in my w^orath in my fearfull and great displeasure: and will bring them agayne vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

¶ And I will geue the one hert and one waye, that they maye feare me all the daies of their lyfe, that they and their children after them maye prospere. ¶ And I will sett vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with the, namelye, that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their hertes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me. ¶ Yee, I will haue a lust and pleasure to do the good, and saythfully to plaite them in this lande with my whole hert and with all my soule.

¶ For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so will I also bring vpon them all y^r good, that I haue promised the. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, wherof ye sape now, that it shall neuer be inhabited of people ner of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shall be bought for money, & euideces made thereupon, and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Benjamin, and rounde aboute Ierusalem, in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth: yee, and in y^r cities that are in the south. For I will buyng the prisoners hither agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

The prophete is monished of the Lorde, to praye for the deliuerance of the people, which the Lorde promyseth. God forgiveth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for theyr awne renouance. Of the birth of Christ. The kyngdome of Christ in y^r church shall neuer be ended.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie on this maner. ¶ When he was yet bound in the court of y^r prison. Thus sayth the Lorde, which fulfilleth the thing that he speaketh: the Lorde which perfourmeth the thing that he taketh in hand: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: crye vnto me, & I will answere, and shewe the great and hye thinges, which were unknown vnto the.

¶ Thus (I sape) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concerninge the houses of this cite, and the houses of the kynges of Juda, y^r they are broken thorow the ordinaunce and the sword. Because the inhabitours of this cite haue come to fight against the Chaldees: and they are fylled with the deed carcases of men, whom I haue slepe in my w^orath and displeasure: when I turned my face fro this cite, because of all her wickednes. Behold, sayth the Lorde, I will repayre & heale these woundes, and make the whole: I will open them the large treasure of peace and trueth.

¶ And I will returne the captiuitie of Juda and Israel: and will set them vp agayne as they were afore. ¶ From all mysdedes, wher in they haue offended agest me, I will cleanse the. And all their blasphemies which they haue done agaynst me, wher they regarded me not, I will forgue them.

¶ And this shall get me a name, a prayse, & honoure among all the people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I will shewe vnto them: yee, they shall be afrayed and astonied at all the good dedes and benesytes that I will do for them. ¶ Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde: ¶ In this place, wherof ye sape that it shall be a wyldernes, wher in neither people ner catell shall dwell in like maner in the cities of Juda & without Ierusalem (which also shall be so voyde, that neither people ner catell shall dwell there) shall y^r voyce of gladnes be heard agayne, the voyce of the bydegrome & of the byde, the voyce of them that shall singe: ¶ Prayse the Lorde of hostes, for he is louynge and his mercy endureth for euer: and the voyce of them that shall offer vp giftes in the house of the Lorde. ¶ For I will restore the captiuitie of this lande, as it was afore, sayth the Lorde. ¶ Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: It shall come yet therto, that in this lande, which is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cities of the lande, there shall be set up shepherdes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountaymountayne: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the southe.

¶ In the lande of Beniamin, in the feldest of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Juda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder y^r hande of hym, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde. ¶ Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, that I will perfourme that good thyng, which I haue promised vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at y^r same tyme, I will bring forth vnto Dauid, the brannche of ryghtuousnes, & he shall do equytie & righteousnes in the lande. In those dayes shall Juda be helpe, & Ierusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her is eue God oure ryghteousnes. ¶ For thus the Lorde promyseth: ¶ Dauid shall neuer want one, to syt vpon the throne of the house of Israel: ¶ neither shall the prestes and Leuites wat one to offe all waye before me burnt offerings, to kyndle the meat offeringes, and to prepare the sacrificys.

¶ And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie after this maner. Thus sayeth y^r Lorde: make the couenaunt which I haue made wth dauid and nyght be broken, that there shulde not be dauid and nyght in due season: ¶ Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made wth Dauid my seruante, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his throne. ¶ So shall also y^r prestes & Leuites neuer sape, but serue me. ¶ For lyke as y^r starres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the sande of y^r see measured: so will I multiplie y^r sede of Dauid my seruante, & the Leuites my ministers.

¶ Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, saying: Consydrest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynnedes (saie they) had the Lorde chosen, & those same two hath he cast awaye. ¶ For so they haue despyed my people & they reputed the as though they were no people. ¶ Therfore thus saith y^r Lorde: ¶ If I haue made no couenaunt with dauid & nyght, & geue no statute vnto heauē & earth: the will I also cast awaye the sede of Jacob & Dauid my seruante: so y^r I will take no price out of his sede, to rule y^r posteritie of Abraham, Isaac & Jacob. ¶ But yet I wil turne agayne their captiuitie, & be mercyfull vnto them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Behethreateneth that the cite, and the kyngedede: shall also, shall be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Babylon. He rebuketh them that broughte soche of theyr brethren into captiuitie, as were pardoned to go at theyr libertie.

These are the wordes which y^r Lorde spake vnto Jeremie: ¶ what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, & all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes y^r were vnder his power) & all his people, fought agaynst Ierusalem and all the cyties therof. ¶ Thus sayeth y^r Lorde God of Israel: ¶ So, & spake to zedekiah the kyng of Juda, and tell hym. The Lorde sendeth the this worde: ¶ Beholde, ¶ I will deliuer this cite into the hande of the kyng of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, & deliuered into his power. ¶ Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babylon in the face, and he shall speake with the, mouth to mouth and then shalt thou goo to Babylon. ¶ Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, ¶ zedekiah thou kyng of Juda: ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the. ¶ Thou shalt not be slayne with y^r sword, but shalt dye in peace. ¶ Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were bente: so shalt thou be bent also, and in thy mourninge they shall sape: oh Lorde. ¶ For thus haue I determined, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Then spake Jeremie the prophete all these wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Juda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kyng of Babylonys hostes beseged Ierusalem, and the remnant of the cyties, namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remayned of y^r stronge defended cyties of Juda.

¶ These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed ¶ a libertie: so that euery mā shuld let his seruante & handmayde go free, Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. ¶ Nowe as they had consented, all the princes and all the people which had gathered vnto this agrement that euery mā shuld let at libertie his bode seruante and bonde woman and no longer to holde them bonde euen so they were obediēt, & let them go free. ¶ But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruantes and handmaydens, whom they had lett go free, and so made the bode agayne.

¶ For the which cause the worde of y^r Lorde came vnto Jeremie fro the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: ¶ Thus sayeth y^r Lorde God of Israel: ¶ I made a couenaunt with your fathers, wher I brought the out of Egypt: (that they shulde no more be bondmen) sayinge. When seue yeares are oute, euery man shall let his bought seruante an Hebrue go free, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeares. ¶ But your fathers obeyed me not & hearkened not vnto me. ¶ As for you, ye were nowe turned, & did right before me, in that ye proclaimed, euery mā to let his neighbour go free, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the temple that beareth my name. ¶ But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. ¶ In this, y^r euery man hath requyred his seruante & handmayde agayne, wher ye had lett go quyte and free, & compelled the to serue you agayne, and to be your bode men, and bondwomen. ¶ And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclame fre-

come vnto his brother & neyghbour: wherfore, & I will call you vnto a freedom, sayeth the Lord: euen vnto the swearde, to p[er]sillence, & to hunger, & will make you to be plagued in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Pee, those men y^e haue broken my couenaunt, & not kept the wordes of the appoyntment, which they made before me: * & when they hewed the calfe in two, & when there wente thozowe the two halves therof: The Prynces of Iuda, the Prynces of Ierusalem, the gilded men, the prestes and all the people of the lande, which wente thozowe the two sydes of the calfe. Those men will I geue into the power of theyr enemies, & into the handes of them that folowe vpon theyr lynys.

* And their deed bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, & brastles of the felde. As for zedeiah the kyng of Iuda and hys Prynces, I will deliuer the into the power of their enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babylons hoste * which now is departed from you: But thozow my commaundement (sayeth the Lord) they shal come agayne before thys cytye, they shal fight agaynst it, wyne it, and burne it: & moreover, I will laye the cyties of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabites, and thereby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites, the threatenynge punishment vnto the rebellious Jewes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for theyr obedience vnto theyr father.

In the wordes whiche the Lord spake vnto Jeremie, in y^e raygne of Jehoa- kim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, are these: So vnto the house of * the Rechabites, & call them out, and brynge them to the house of the Lord into some commodious place, and geue them wyne to dryncke. Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremie the sonne of Habaziniab, and his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole household of y^e Rechabites: and brought them to the house of the Lord into the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: which was by the closet of the Prynces that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sone of Selum, which is y^e treasurer. And before the sonnes of the hundred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, & sayde vnto them: Dryncke wyne. But they sayde: we will dryncke no wyne for Ionadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs, saying: ye and poure sonnes shall neuer dryncke wyne * buylde no houses, sowe no seide, plante no vynges, yee, ye shal haue no vineyardes: but for all poure tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in y^e lande wherin ye be strangers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechab oure father in all that he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, our sonnes and oure daughters. Neither builde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs nether vineyardes, ne cornelands to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accordyng vnto all, that Ionadab oure father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon came vnto y^e lande, we sayde, come, lett vs go to Ierusalem, that we maye escape the hooste of the Caldees and the Assyrians: and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came y^e worde of y^e Lord vnto Jeremie saying. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell y^e me of Iuda and y^e inhabitours of Ierusalem: Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes sayeth y^e Lord: The wordes which Ionadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, y^e they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto thys daye they dryncke no wyne, but obeye their fathers commaundement. But as for me, * I haue stand by early, I haue spokē vnto you, & geuen you earnest warnynge: & yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me. Pee, I haue sent my seruantes, all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vpearly, & sent you worde, sayinge: Turne you, nowe euery mā frō his wycked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyppe the: that ye maye continue in the lande, which I haue geuen vnto you & poure fathers, but ye wolde nether heare me, ne folowe me.

The chyldren of Ionadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaundement, y^e he gaue the, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will brynge vpon Iuda & vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble y^e I haue deuysed agaynst the. * For I haue spokē vnto them, but they wold not folowe. I haue called vnto them, neuertheles they wold geue me no answer. Jeremie also spake vnto the household of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: For so moche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab poure father, and kepte all hys preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all that he hath byddē you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, y^e God of Israel: * Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke to stande alwaye before me.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wyrteth (as Jeremie enuyeteth) the boke of the curtes agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent with y^e boke vnto the people, and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, & readeth it before the also. The rulers thewe vnto the kyng the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a p[er]cell of it, and after collecteth it in the fyre. There is another wyrtten, at the commaundement of the Lord.

In the

In the fourth yere of Jehoa- kim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremie, sayinge. * Take a boke, and wyrteth therein all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, agaynst Israel agaynst Iuda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme y^e I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto thys daye. That when y^e house of Iuda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuysed for them, they maye peraduenture * turne, euery man frō hys wycked waye, that I maye forgyue theyr offences and synnes.

Then byd Jeremie call Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * and Baruch wyrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremie, all the wordes of y^e Lord, which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremie commaunded Baruch, sayinge: I am in prison, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lord: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast wyrtten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lord and reade them in the Lordes house vpon the fastynge daye, that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out of the cities, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye mekely before the face of the Lord, & turne euery one from hys wycked waye. For greates is the wrath and displeasure, that y^e Lord hath taken agaynst this people:

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah byd, accordyng vnto all that Jeremie the Prophete commaunded him, readinge the wordes of the Lord out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in y^e xij. yere of Jehoa- kim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, in y^e ix. moneth * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shulde fast before the Lord, and they also that were come from the cyties of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then reade Baruch the wordes of Jeremie out of the boke with in the house of the Lord out of the treasury of Samariah the sonne of Sapha the Scribe, which is besyde the hyer losse of the * newe doze of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Nowe whē Micheah y^e sonne of Samariah the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of y^e Lord out of the boke, he wote downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chambres, for there all the Prynces were set. Elpsama the Scribe, Dalaiab the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achboz, Samariah the sone of Saphan, zedeiah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the Prynces. And Micheah tolde the all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch reade out of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, saying. Take in thynne hande the boke, wherout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hande, & came vnto the. And they sayd vnto him. Syt downe, & reade the boke y^e we maye heare also. So Baruch reade that they might heare. Nowe whē they had hearde all y^e wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, & ad sayde vnto Baruch. We will certifie y^e kyng of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs, howe dydest y^e wyrtte all these wordes out of hys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I wyrote them in the boke.

Then sayde y^e princes vnto Baruch: So thy waye, & hyde y^e with Jeremie, so that no mā knowe where ye be. And they went into the kyng to the courte. But they kept y^e boke in the chambze of Elisama the Scribe, & tolde the kyng all the wordes y^e he myght heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fetch him y^e boke which he brought out of Elpsama the Scribes chambze. And Jehudi red in it, that the kyng and all y^e prynces, which were aboute him, myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ix. Moneth & there was a fyre before him. And when Jehudi had redde thze or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and * cast it into the fyre vpon the harth, vntill y^e boke was all breste in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente y^e his clothes: nether the kyng hym selfe, ne his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathā, Dalaiab, & Samariah besought the kyng, y^e he wolde not burne the boke: not withstandynge the kyng wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiab y^e sonne of Eziel & Selamiah y^e sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremie the Prophete: but the Lord kepte the out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had bent the boke, & the sermons which Baruch wyrote at the mouth of Jeremie: The worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremie, sayinge. Take another boke, and wyrtte in it all y^e forsayde sermons: that were wyrtte in the fyrst boke, which Jehoa- kim the kyng of Iuda hath brente.

And tell Jehoa- kim y^e kyng of Iuda: thus sayeth the Lord: thou hast breste the boke, & thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou wyrtten therein, that the kyng of Babylon shall come, and make thys lande waste: so y^e he shall make both people & catell to be out of it: Therfore thus the Lord sayeth of Jehoa- kim y^e kyng of Iuda. * There shall none of hys generacyon lyt vpon the thzone of Dauid. Hys deed corse shalbe cast oute, that the heate of the daye, and the frost of the nyght maye come vpon hym. And I will byset the wyckednes wyckednes of hym, of his dede, & of his seruantes. Moreover, all the euell that I haue promysed them (though they herde me not) will I bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabytours of Ierusalem, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremy another booke, and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremy: all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Iehoaquin the kyng of Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many more sermons, then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Jeremiah succeeded Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremy to praye for hym. Jeremy goynge into the lande of Beniamin, is taken. He is beaten, and put in prison. He is deliuered by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah * which was made kynge thowowe Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, reigned in the lade of Iuda, in the strende of Cononiah the sonne of Iehoaquin. But neither he, ner his seruantes, ner the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the prophet Jeremy. * Neuerthelesse, zedekiah the kyng sent Iehucal the sonne of Selemiah & Sopboniah the sonne of Naasiah the priest to the prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde oure God for vs. Nowe Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Wharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte: which whē the Caldees that beleged Ierusalem perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy the prophet, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, thys answer shall ye geue to the kyng of Iuda, that sent you vnto me for counsell: * Beholde, Wharaos hoste which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte into his awne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, and fyghte agaynst thys cytie, wyne it; and sett fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lorde, disceane not poure a wne myndes, thynkinge on this maner: thus, the Caldees go now their waye from vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees, that belege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tente, yet shulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon thys cyte. Now when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptian armie, Jeremy went out of Ierusalem toward the lande of Beniamin, to get hym from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Beniamyns porte, there was a porter, called Neriah, the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of * Hananiah, which fell vpon him, and toke him sayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuer-theless, Neriah wolde not beleue hym, but brought Jeremy bounde before the princes. Wherefore the princes were angrie with Jeremy, and smote him, and layed hym in prison in the house of Ionathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into the donge and prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Then zedekiah the kyng sent for him, and called him, and asked hym quyetly in his awne house, sayinge: thynkest thou this bulnes (that now is in hande) cometh of the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yee, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jeremy sayde vnto kynge zedekiah. What haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue put me in prison? * Where are poure prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, & sayde, that the kynge of Babylons shulde not come agaynst you & this lade? And therfore heare now, O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me nomore into the house of Ionathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entrie of the prison, and dayly to be geuen hym a cake of bread out of the bakers strete vntyll all the bread in the cytie was eatē vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entrie in the prison.

By the motion of the rulers Jeremy is put into a dongeon. At the request of Abedmelech the Chaldeian, the kyng commaundeth Jeremy to be broughte forth of the dongeon. Jeremy sheweth the kyng howe he myght escape death.

Saphatiah the sonne of Nathan, & Godoliah the sonne of Shaphur, Iucal the sonne of Semeliah, and Whasur the sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on thys maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Who so remayneth in thys cytie, shall perishe, ether with the sword, with hunger or with the pestylence. But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape winnyng his soule for a praye, & shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: Thys cytie (no doute) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he also shall wyne it. Then sayde the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseeche you let thys mā be put to death. For thus he discomfyteth the handes of the souldiers that be in thys cytie, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh soche wordes vnto them. This mā verely labourereth not for peace of the people, but myscheffe. zedekiah the kyng answered & sayde: lo, he is in poure handes, for the kyng maye denye you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast hym into the dongeon of Melchiah Melchiah the sonne of Hamlech, that dwelt in the fore entrie of the prison. And they lett downe Jeremy with coardes into a donge, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stak fast in the myre. Now when Abedmelech the Moorian beyng a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstode, that they had cast Jeremy into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to a kynge, (which then sat vnder the porte of Beniamin) these wordes: My Lorde the kynge, where as these men medle with Jeremy the prophet, they do hym wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of hunger, for there is no more bread in the cytie. Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Moorian and sayde: Take from hence xxx. mē whom thou wilt, & drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men w him, and went to the house of the kynge, and there vnder the tresour he gatt older ragges & woine cloutes, and lett them downe by a coarde, into the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abedmelech the Moorian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremy: O, put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyn arme holes, betwixte them and the coardes: & Jeremy dyd so. So they drew vp Jeremy with coardes & toke him out of the donge, & he remayned in the fore entrie of the prison. Then * zedekiah the kyng sent & caused Jeremy the prophete to be called vnto him, into the thyrde entrie, that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I will aske the some-what but hyde nothyng frome. Then Jeremy answered zedekiah: If I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me to suffer death: If I geue the counsell, thou wilt not folowe me. So the king swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremy, sayinge. As truly as the Lorde lyueth that made vs these soules, I will not slaye the, ner geue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto zedekiah. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. * If case be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and thys cytie shalt not be vtter yce, both thou and thy household shall escape with poure lynes. But if thou wilt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons princes, the shall thys cytie be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees, which shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape the. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremy. I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derisyon.

But Jeremy answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) which I speake vnto, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me this playnely: Beholde, all the women that are left in the kynge of Iudaes house, shall be led forth out to the kynge of Babylons princes. And they shall saye, thou art disceaued: and that they whō thou didest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, & sett thy feet fast in the myre, and gone their waye fro the. Therefore all thy wyues with their chyldren shall they leade forth vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kyng of Babylons prisoner, & this cytie shalt thou cause to be bzēt. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But if the princes perceaue, & I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the king to the: hyde it not fro vs, & we will not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayde the kyng to the? So thou geue them thys answer: I haue humbly besought the kyng, that he wyllett me lye no more in Iehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kyng had bid him. Then they helde theyr peace, and let hym alone for they perceaued nothinge. * So Jeremy abode still in the fore entrie of the prison, vntyll the daye that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor belegeth Ierusalem. zedekiah flieth. He is taken of the Caldees. His sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremy is prouided for. Abedmelech is deliuered from captiuitie, because of the confidence that he hath in God.

Nowe * when the cytie of Ierusalem was taken (for in the ix. yere of zedekiah kynge of Iuda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon & all his hoste, and beleged Ierusalem & foughte agaynst it. And in the xi. yere of zedekiah in the fourth Moneth y. ix. daye of the Moneth, he brake into the cytie.) Then all the princes of the kyng of Babylon, came in, & sat them downe vnder the porte: Seregel, Sarczer, Samgarnebo, Sarfachim, Rabaris, Neregel, Sarczer, Rabmag, & all the other princes of the kyng of Babylon. * And when zedekiah the kyng of Iuda with his souldiers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the cytie by nyght thowowe the kynges garden, & thowowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente toward the wyldernesse.

But the Caldees hoste folowed faste after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought hym prisoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Riblah, that lyeth in the land of Hemath where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the kyng of Babylon caused the chyldre of zedekiah and all the all the nobles of Iuda be slayne, before his face at Reblach. And made zedekias eyes to be put out, and bounde him with two chaynes, and sent him to Babylon.

C * Moreover, the Caldees brent by the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in the cite, and such as were come to helpe the (whatlocure was left of y come for te) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne carped the to Babylon. But Nabuzarada the chefe captayne let the rascall people (& those that had nothinge) dwell still in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes & cozne felde at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kyng of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge, concerninge Jeremy, sayinge: take and cherish hym, and make moche of him: se thou do hym no harme, but intreate him after his awne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabuzazban Rablars, Nergal Sarezzer Rabmag and all the kyng of Babylons Lordes sent for Jeremy * and caused hym to be fet out of the foze entrie of the prison, & comitted him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carie him home, * and so he dwelt amonge the people. Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the foze entrie of the prison, y worde of the Lord came vnto him, sayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Moztan: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for this cite, will I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I will deliuer y (sayeth the Lord) and thou shalt not come in y handes of those men, whom thou fearest. For doubtles I will saue the, so that thou shalt not perishe in the swerde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, ad that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lord.

The xl. Chapter.

C Jeremy hath licence to go whether he wyl. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jerusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Iohanan propheseth death vnto Godoliah.

A Lys is the worde that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy, * when Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had let him go fre from Ramah, whyther he had led him bounde amonge all the prisoners, that were carped from Jerusalem and Iuda vnto Babylon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremy, and sayde vnto hym. The Lord thy God spake myghtely before of the mysery vpon this place: Nowe the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he had promysed. For ye haue spynned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I nowe the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf y wilt nowe go with me vnto Babylon, yf then: for I will se to the, & prouyde for the. But yf thou wylt not go with me to Babylon, the remayne here. * Beholde, all the lande is at thy wyl, loke wher thou thynkest couenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe againe to Godoliah therfore he sayde to him: Go backe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: * whos the kyng of Babylon hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Iuda, & dwell with hym amonge the people, or remayne wher soeuer it please the. So the chefe Captayne gaue him his expenses with a rewarde, and let him go. * The wente Jeremy vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Mizpa, and dwelt there with hym amonge the people that were left in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the Hoste of Iuda (which is their felowes were scattede abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that y kyng of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam gouernoure in the land, and y man, wyfe and childe, yee, and y poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) shulde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, Iohanan and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the sonne of Tanhumeth, the sonnes of Ophai the Netophathite, Zesaniah y sonne of Maachati, with theyr companyos. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan, iwoze vnto them and theyr felowes in this maner: * We not afrayed to serue the Caldees, dwell in the lande, and do the kyng of Babylon seruice, so shall ye prouyde. Beholde, I dwell at Mizpa to be an officer in the Caldees be halfe, and to satisfye soche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, cozne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your cyties that ye haue in keepynge.

Yee, all the Jewes also y dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in all the countreys, when they herde, that y kyng of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon the y were left in Iuda. All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, & gathered wyne & other frutes, & that very moche. Moreover, Iohanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the Hoste, that were scattede on euery syde in the lade, cam to Godoliah in Mizpa, & sayde vnto him. knowest thou not that Baalis kyng of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, to slaye the: But Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam beleued them not. Then sayde Iohanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa in Mizpa these wordes secretly: Let me go, I praye the, and I will slaye Ismael y sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shall knowe it. Therfore will he kyll the, that all the Jewes which resorte vnto the, might be scattede and the remnant in Iuda perishe. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam sayde to Iohanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyces, that thou sayest, of Ismael.

The xli. Chapter.

C Ismael killeth Godoliah secretly, & many other with hym. Iohanan followeth after Ismael.

In the seventh Moneth it happened, y Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloude) came with them that were greatest aboute the kyng, & ten men y were swozne with him: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Mizpa, & they dyd eate together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that were swozne to him, starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan with the swerde, and slewe him, whom the kyng of Babylon had made gouernoure of the lande. Ismael also slewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytyng vpon hym and those that were able to fyght they slewe with hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet unknowne) & there came certayn men from Sich, from Siloh and Samaria, to the nombre of lxxx. which had shauen theyr beardes, rent theyr clothes, and were all heuie, bringynge meat offringes, & incense in their handes to offere it in the house of the Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mizpa * wepyng, to mete the. Nowe when he met the, he sayde: Go your waye to Godoliah y sonne of Ahikam. And when they came in the myddest of the cite, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with the that were swozne vnto him) slewe them, euery at the myddest of the pyt. Amonge these lxxx. men there were ten, that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh slaye vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in y felde, of wheate barley, oyle and honny. So he spared them, & slewe them not with theyr brechren. Nowe the * pyt wherin Ismael dyd cast y deed bodies of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had kyng Aia caused to be made, for feare of Baala the kyng of Israel, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyl with slayne men. As for the remnant of the people, y kynges daughters and all the people that were yet left at Mizpa, vpon whom * Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam gouernoure: Ismael y sonne of Nathaniah carped them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Iohana the sonne of Careah & all they which had bene captaynes ouer the kynges Hoste with hym, herde of all the wyckednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done: * they toke theyr companions, & went out for to fyght w Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and soude him by the grete waters that are in Gibeon. Nowe when all the people, who Ismael led captiue, sawe Iohana the sonne of Careah and all the other Captaynes of the Hoste, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had carped awaye from Mizpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Iohanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Iohana with dyeght of his swozne companions, & wente to the Ammonites. Then Iohanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of y Hoste that were with him, toke all the remnant of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led awaye. (When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam) whom they also had rescued from hym: fyghtinge men, women & chyldren, & gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gibeon: and wente fro thence, & sat the downe at Geruth Camaam, whiche lyeth besyde Bethlechem * that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Caldees: of whome they were afrayed, because y Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahikams sonne * whom y kyng of Babylon had made gouernoure in the lade.

C The Captaynes aske counsell of Jeremye what they ought to do. Jeremye moueth the remnant of the people not to go into Egypte.

All the captaynes, & Iohanan y sonne of Careah, Jezaniah y sonne of Elayah came with all the people fro the leest vnto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremy the prophete. * O heare our petition, that thou mayest praye for vs vnto the Lord thy God, namely, for all the remnant, wher of there be very fewe of vs left of many, as y seest vs: y the Lord, thy God may shew vs a waye to go in, & tell vs, what we shulde do. Then Jeremy y prophet sayde vnto them: I haue herde you. Behold I will praye vnto God your Lord as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answer the Lord geneth you, I shall certifie you therof, and kepe nothyng backe fro you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy. * The Lord of truth & faithfulness be our recorde, that we wyl do all y the Lord thy God commaundeth vs, wher ther it be good or euell. We wyl herke vnto y voyce of our Lord God to who we sende the, that we maye prospere, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lord our God.

The Prophecye

The xliii. Chapter.

¶ Johanan carryeth the remnant of the people into Egypte, contrary to the comend of Jeremie. Jeremie propheseth the destruction of Egypte.

NOWE when Jeremie had ended all the wordes of the Lord his God vnto the people which to declare & to lorde they: God had sent hym to them, (euen all thes wordes I saie) Azariah the sonne of Osaiab, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah with all the stubborne personnes, sayde vnto Jeremie: * Thou lpest, the Lorde oure God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shoulde not go into Egypte, and dwell there: * But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght byynge vs in to the captiuite of the Caldees: & they might slaye vs, and carye vs awaye prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely, to dwell in the lande of Iuda. But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, caried awaye all the remnant in Iuda, * that were come together agayne from all the heythel (among whom they had bene scatted) to dwell in the lande of Iuda: Men, women, chyliden, the kynge's daughters, all those that Nabuzardan the chere captayne had left with Gedoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan. They caried awaye also the prophete Jeremie, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obeyed, vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Eaphnis.

And in Eaphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremie, saying: Take great stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the byck wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Eaphnis, that all the men of Iuda maye see, and saie vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruante, and will sett his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shall sprede his tente ouer them.

And when he cometh, he shall smyte the lande of Egypte, some with slaughter, some with prisonment, and some with swearde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddesses, and burne them vp, & take the selues prisoners. Moreover, he shall araye him selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the Sunne this in Egypte: shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddesses.

of Jeremie,

The xliii. Chapter.

¶ Jeremie prayeth the people for their ydolatrie. They that see light by the thetynge of a Lorde are chastened. The destruction of Egypte and the Jewes therein is prophesied.

IHS IS the worde that was shewed to Jeremie, concerning all the Jewes: which dwell in Egypte: at Migdol, at Taphnis, at Moph, & in the lande of Patures. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye haue sene all the misery, that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon the ctytes of Iuda: so that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therein: and that because of the greate blasphemies which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifice and worship vnto straunge goddesses: whom nether ye, ner poure fathers haue knowne. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes all the prophetes. * I rose vpearly, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. * Do no soche abominable thynges, & thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ner herken, to turne from their wickednes, & to do nomore sacrifices vnto straunge goddesses.

Wherefore myne indignation and wrath was kyndled, and it brente vpon the ctytes of Iuda, the felde with the stretes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Nowe therefore, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it, that ye do so greate euill vnto poure awne soules: thus to destroye the men and women, chyliden and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of poure awne handes: when ye offer vnto straunge goddesses in the lade of Egypt, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myght utterly perishe, and that ye myght be reupled and shamefully intreated of all natyons. * Ye haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kinges of Iuda and their wyues, the wyckednes that ye poure selues and poure wyues haue done in the lande of Iuda, in the ctye and in the lande of Ierusalem.

Yet are ye not sorry vnto this daye, ye feare not, nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and poure forefathers.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determynd to punyshe you, & to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnant of Iuda, that purposly wente into Egypte, ther to dwell, I will take them, * and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypt shall they perishe, beynge consumed with the swearde and with hunger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perishe with the swearde and with hunger. Moreover, they shalbe reupled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will viset them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue visyted Ierusalem, with the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence. So that none of the remnant of Iuda, which are gone to dwell in Egypte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda all though they thynke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come agayne, but such as are fledd awaye.

Then all the me which kne we that their wyues had offered vnto straunge goddesses, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yee, and all the people that dwell there in Egypte in the ctye of Patures, answered Jeremie, and sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lorde, we will in no wyle heare them: but whatsoever goeth out of oure awne mouth, that we will do. We will do sacrifice and offer oblatyons vnto the quene of heauen, * lyke as we and our forefathers, oure kynge and oure heades haue done in the ctye of Iuda, and in the stretes and felde of Ierusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vitayles, then were we in prosperyte, and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

* But sens we left to burne incense, and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perishe with the swearde and hunger. Last of all, when we women dyd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and poure vnto her drinck offerings, eue to that ymage dyd we sacrifice and seruite, without oure husbandes wylles.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke, which had geuen him that answer: Dyd not the Lorde remember the sacrifices that ye, poure forefathers, poure kynge and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the ctyes of Iuda, in the stretes and lade of Ierusalem: and hath he not considered thys in his mynde? In somoch that the Lorde might no longer suffer the wyckednes of poure inuencions, and the abhominable thynges, which ye dyd? * Is not poure lande desolate and voyde: yee, abhorred and accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein any moze, as it is come to passe thys daye?

* Dyd not all thys happen vnto you, because ye made soch sacrifices to ydols, and synned agaynst the Lorde. * Ye haue not folowed hys voyce, to walke in hys lawe, in his ordynaunces and statutes.

Yee, this is the cause, that all misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreover, Jeremie spake vnto all the people and to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lorde all Iuda, ye that be in the lande of Egypt. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Ye and your wyues have spoken with youre awne mouth, & thinge that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

* Jer. xliij. c. * Pee, thus haue ye sayde: We wyll nott sayle, but perfourme the bowes that we haue bowed, we will do sacrificy & powze out drinck offerings to the quene of beane. But wyll ye let vp your awne meanynges and perfourme your bowes. And therfore, heare the wordes of the Lord, all Iuda, ye that dwell in the lande of Egypte.

* Gen. xxi. a. * Beholde, * I haue sware by my greate name, sayth the Lord: that my name shall not be rehearsed thowre any mans mouth of Iuda, in all the lande of Egypte, to saye: The Lord God lyueth, for I wyll wathe, to plage them, and not for theyr wealthe.

* Jer. xli. c. * And all the men of Iuda that be in the lande of Egypte shall perpe with the swerde, and with hunger, vntill they be utterly destroyed. Neuertheles, those that fledd awaye for the swerde, shall come agayne into the lande of Iuda: but there shall be very fewe of them. And all the remnaunt of Iuda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shall be founde true: theys or myne. Take thys for a token that I wyll viset you in this place, sayth the Lord: and that ye maye knowe that I (without doubte) will perfourme my purpose vpon you to punishe you. Beholde, sayth the Lord, I wyll deliuer Pharaos hophrea kyng of Egypte into the handes of his enemyes that seke after his lyfe: * euen as I gaue zedekias the king of Iuda, into the handes of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hys enemye which sought after his lyfe.

The xlv. Chapter.

* Baruch is reproued of Jeremie.

* Jer. xlv. a. * These are the wordes that Jeremie the prophete spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nechiah. * after that he had wrytten these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jeremie: In the fourth yere of Iehoaquin the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda, sayinge. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch: In somer as thou thoughtest thus, whē thou wast wrytting, Moys me, the Lord hath geue me sorowe vpon sorowe. I haue wepyed my selfe with syghing, and haue founde no rest.

* Jer. xli. b. * Therefore tell hym, O Jeremie, that the Lord sayth thus: Beholde, the thinge that I haue bylded, wyll I breake downe agayne and rote out the thinge that I haue planted: yee, this whole lande. And sekest thou yet promotio? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wyll byynge a miserable plage vpon all flethe, sayeth the Lord. * But thy lyfe wyll I geue the for a praye in all places, whereloeuer thou goest.

The xlvj. Chapter.

* The prophete Jeremie the destruction of Egypte: where vnto is promysed to Israel.

* Jer. xlvj. a. * These are the wordes of the Lord to the prophete Jeremie, which he spake agaynst all the Gentyles. These wordes folowing preached he to the Egipcians concerninge the hoost of Pharaos Necho kyng of Egypte: * when he was in Charanis, besyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon sawe him, in the fourth yere of Iehoaquin the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda:

* Jer. xlvj. b. * Make ready buckler and shylde, and go forth to fyght: harness your horses, and set your selues vpon them: set your salettes fast on, byng forth speares, scour your swerdes, and put on your best plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, & I se you so afrayde? why shynke ye backe? Theyr worthyes are slayne. Pee, they runne so fast awaye, that none of them looketh behynde hym. Fearfulnes is fallen vpon euerychone of them, sayth the Lord. The lightest of foete shall not fle awaye, and the worthies shall not escape.

* Jer. xlvj. c. * Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they dyd stöble and fall. But what is he this, & swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe and ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egypte that ryleth vp lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters with so greate noyse.

And he sayde: I will go, and wyll couer the earth, I will destroye the cite with the that are therein. Gett you vp ye horses, rolle forth ye charettes, come forth worthies: ye Moziars, ye Libeans with your bucklers, ye Libeans with your bowes. This daye of the Lord God of hostes, is a daye of vengeance, that he maye auenge hym of hys enemyes. The swerde shall deuoure, it shall be satisfied, and bathed in theyr bloude. For the Lord God of hostes shall haue a slayne offeringe toward the north, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Gilead, and bynne triacle vnto the daughter of Egypt. But in daye shalt thou go to surgery: for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The hepten haue hearde of thy shame, and the lande is full of thy confusion: for one stronge man dyd stömble vpon another, and they are fallen both together.

* Jer. xlvj. d. * These are the wordes of the Lord spake to the prophete Jeremie concerninge the cominge of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, which was sent to destroye the lande of Egypt. Preach out thowre the lande of Egypt: & cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Hoph and

of Jeremie.

The xlvij. Chapter.

* The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Philistines.

* Jer. xlvij. a. * These are the wordes, that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharaos smote the cite of Azah. Thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, there shall waters arysse out of the north: & shall growe to a greate floude, runnyng ouer and couerynge the lande, the cyties, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stampinge of theyr stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of theyr charettes and at the rombyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their chyldren, so feable and wep shall their handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make waste both Tirus, Sidon, and all other that are sware vnto them.

For the Lord wyll destroye the Philistines, the remnaunt of the ple of Caphtor. Baldenelle is come vpon Azah, Acalo with her other valleyes shall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wilt thou slaye, O swerde of the Lord? When wilt thou cease? Turne agayne into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But howe can it cease, when the Lord hym selfe hath geuen him a charge agaynst Acalon, and rayled it vp agaynst the cyties of the see coast?

The xlvij. Chapter.

* The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Moabites.

* Jer. xlvij. b. * Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: wo be to the cite of Rebo: for it is layed wast, brought to confusion: and Ariathia: rim taken, Misgab is brought to shame and afrayed: Moab can boast nomore of Hesebo: for they haue drupled agaynst it. Come, shall they saye, let vs rote them out, & they maye be nomore amonge the number of the Gentiles, and that thou Madmen maye nomore be thought vpon: and the swerde shall persecute the. A voyce shall crye fro Hozanaim: With greate wastynge and destruccyon is Moab made desolate.

Chyldren coulde tell of the crye therof. For at the goynge vp vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentation and mournynge, and downe toward Hozanaim, they heard a cruell and a deedly crye. Set you awaye, saue your lyues, and be lyke vnto the heeth in the wilderness. * For because thou hast trusted in thine owne workes and treasure, thou shalt be takē: Chamos with his prestes and princes shall go awaye into captiuite. The destroyer shall come vpon all cyties and Taphnis, and saye: Stande still, make the ready, for the swerde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it, & thy myghte worthies are fallen: why stode they not fast? Euen because the Lord thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer still vpon another. One cryed vpon another. Up, let vs go agayne to oure awne people, and to oure awne naturall contrey from the cruell swerde.

* Jer. xlvij. c. * They dyd crye euē there, O Pharaos kyng of Egypt thou troublous kyng: the tyme will byng sedition. As truly as I lyue, sayth the king, * whose name is the Lord of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus yf it stode in the see. O daughter of Egypte make ready thy geer to flye. For Hoph shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The lande of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe: but destruccyon shall come out of the north I saye it cometh. Her waged souldyers that ben with her, are like fat calves. They also shall fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye of theyr slaughter, and the tyme of their visytation shall come vpon them.

The crye of them shall make a noyse, as if the blast of a trompette. For they shall enter in with their hostes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wodde. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayth the Lord. They shall be innumerable: for they shall be mo in number then the grethoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypte is confounded, and deliuered in to the handes of the people of the north.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wyll viset that restles people of Alexandria, Pharaos and Egypte: pee, bothe theyr goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharaos, and all them that putt theyr trust in hym. Pee, I wyll deliuer them into the handes of thole, that seke after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, and into the power of hys seruantes. And after all these thynges it shall be inhabited as afore tyme, sayth the Lord.

* Jer. xlvij. d. * But be not thou afrayed (O my seruante Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wyll helpe the from farre, and thy seede from the lande of theyr captiuite. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in rest: he shall prospeere and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruante) sayth the Lord, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nationys, amonge whom I haue scatered the. Neuertheles, I wyll not consume the: but chasten the and correcte the: pee, and that is discrecyon: neither will I spare the as one that were faultlesse.

The prophery

none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed, and the feldes shall be layed waste, lyke as the Lorde hath spoken.

Ecce wpynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye speedily: for her cyties shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that keepeth backe his swearde from sheddingde of bloude.

Moab hath euer bene ryche and carelesse from her yowth vp, she hath sytten and take her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into another (that is) she neuer wente awaye into captiuitie, therfore her taste remaineth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lord, that I shall sende her trusters to truste her vp: which shall remoue her from her dwellinge: and to emptye her vessels, and breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her trust. Therfore do ye thinke thus: we are myghty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed, and her cyties bent vp: her chosen yonge men be slayne, sayth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on apace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name shall saye, O howe happeneth it, that the stronge state and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe fro thy glory, & sit in thyrte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holde.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get thee to the strete, and loke aboute the: aske them that are fledde and escaped, and saye: what thinge is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and overcome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, for Moab is destroyed. For iudgment shall come vpon the playne lande: namely, vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephath and Dibon, vpon Rabo and the house of Meblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and vpon house Samul, vpon the house Maon and Carioth vpon Bozrah and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The borne of Moab is smytten downe and her arme broken, sayth the Lorde. Make her dronken, for she magnified her selfe aboue the Lorde, that she maye clappe theyr handes at her vomyte, and that she also maye be laughed to scozne. O Israel, shalte thou not laugh him to scozne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yee, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynst hym, thou shalt be dysruen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cyties, and dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke doues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue heard of it: she is verie hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnes, her boastynge, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomack, sayth the Lorde. I knowe (sayeth the Lorde) her indignacyon, she doth not ryght, her wordes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therfore shall ther mourning be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shall be made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer and for the, O thou vineyarde of Sabama. Thy vyne bzaunches shall come ouer the see, and the bzaunches of Jazer but vnto the see: & destroyer shall breake into thy harvest and grape gathering: myrrh and cheare shall be taken awaye from the tymbre felde, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the vine shall haue no stomacke to crye yee, ther shall be none to crye vnto him: which afore tyme were heard fro Hesebon to Eleale and Jahaz, which lifted vp their voyce fro zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of the yere olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Memrim shall be dyed vp. Moreover, I will make Moab cease, sayeth the Lorde, from the offerings and censling that she hath made vnto her goddess in her places. Therfore my hert mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mennes sake of the byrche wall my herte mourneth also: enen as a pyper that ppyeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very feawe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beeddes clipped of: all handes boide, and loynes girded about with sackcloth. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, ther shall be lamentable mourning. For I will breake Moab lyke an vnproffable vessell, sayth the Lorde. O howe is she destroyed? O howe mourneth she? O howe doeth Moab hange downe her brade, & is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughing stocke: & had in derision of all the people rounde aboute her. For thus sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the enemye shall come flyinge as an eagle: & spede hys wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, & wyne the strongholdes. Then myghty mens hertes in Moab shall be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with chylde.

And Moab shall be made so desolate: that she shall nomore be a people, because she hath sett vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde. For feare, pytte & snare shall come vpon the, O Moab, sayeth the Lorde. Whoso escape th the feare, shall fall in the pytte: and who so getteth out of Jeremye.

Jo. lxxiii.

out of the pytte, shall be taken in the snare. For I will bring a yere of visitation vpon Moab, sayth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon. For there shall go a fier out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vpon that proude people of Moab, and the toppe of those sedytious chyliden.

Go vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt peryshe. Yee, thy sonnes and daughters shall be leade awaye captiue. Yet at the laste wyll I brynge Moab out of captiuite agayne, sayeth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

The xlii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonites, agaynst Rabba, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

Concerning the Ammonites, thus the Lorde sayth: hath Israel no childe, or is he with out an heire? Why hath poure king then take Gad in? Wherefore doth his people dwell in his cyties? Beholde therfore, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, & I will bring a noyse of warre into Rabab of the Ammonites: and it shall be layed on a desolate heape: and her cyties bent vp: & the Israelites shall be lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayeth the Lorde. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shall be roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde.

The cyties of Rabab shall crye out, and cryde the selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, & runne about the walles: for they king shall be led awaye prisoner: yee, his prestes and princes with hym.

Wherefore trustest thou in the valley: thy valleie hath flowed awaye, O thou fearece daughter, & thinkest thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shall come to the? Beholde, I will brynge a feare vpon the, sayth the Lorde God of hostes, from all those that be about the: so that ye shall be scattered euery man from another, and a man shall gather them together agayne & be fled. But after that, I will bring the Ammonites also out of captiuite agayne.

Vpon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on this maner: Is there no moze wysdome in Chemā? Is there nomore good counsell amonge his people? Is theyr wysdome then turned cleue to naught? Gett you hence, turne poure backs, cripe downe into the deppe, O ye citelyngs of Medan.

For I will bring destruction vpon Esau: yee, and the dape of hys visitacyon. If the grapegatherers came vpon the, wulde they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, wulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

But I will make Esau bare, and discover his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. hys sede shall be wasted awaye: yee, hys brethren and hys neyghbours, and he hym selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse children behynde the, and I wyll kepe them, and thy wyddowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. Behold, they that me thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrst: and thynekest thou then to be fre?

No, no, thou shalt nether be quite nor fre: but thou must drinke also. For why? I haue sworn by my selfe, sayth the Lorde, & Bozrah shall become a wyldernes, an open shame, a laughing stocke and cursynge: and all her cyties shall be a continuall deserte.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lorde that he hath sent a messager alledy vnto the heythens. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battaylle: for lo, I will make the but small amonge the heythens, and lytell regarded amonge men.

Thy herte stomacke and the pryde of thy herte haue disceaued the, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles, though thy neste were as hye as the eagles, yet wyll I cast the downe, sayeth the Lorde. Moreover, Idumea shall be a wilderness: whoso goth by it, shall be abashed, and wonder at all her myserable plages. Lyke as Sodome, Gomoze, and the cyties y laye ther about were turned vp side downe, sayth the Lorde, so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitation there. Behold, lyke as the lpon, so shall a destroyer come vp fro the pleasaunt meadowes of Jordan vnto the stronge dwelling place: & whē I haue made him quiet, I will make him to fle from her: and all chosen men, wyll I set in araye agaynst her. Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that will stryue with me? What shepherde maye stande in my handes?

Therfore, heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and hys purpose & he hath deuyled vpon the citelyngs of Chemā. The leest of the flocke shall teare them in peces, & loke what saye thinge they haue, they shall make it waste, & them selues also. At the noyse of their fall, the earth shall quake & crye of their voyce shall be heard vnto the redd see. Beholde, the enemye shall come and fle vpon hys, lyke as it were an eagle, & spede hys wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the hert of a woman trauelyng of chylde.

Vpon Damascus, Chemā and Arphad shall come confusid: for they shall heare euell tydings: they shall be tolled to and fro lyke the see that cannot stande still. Damascus shall be soze afrayed, and shall see, tremble come vpon her. Sorowe & payne shall ouertake her as a woman traueylinge of chylde.

But howe shuld so worchipfull & glorious a citie be forsake? Heare therfore: her yonge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her me of warre shall be taken awaye in þe tyme, sayth the Lorde of hostes. I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

* Jer. lxxi.

* As for Cedar and the kingdom of Hazor, who Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Apele, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people towardes þe castle. Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take awaye: yee, their hangynges and their vessels. Their camels also shall they ca-rye awaye with the. They shall crye to the:
Feare is on euery syde.

¶ He, get you lone awaye, escape into ca-ues, that ye maye dwell there, O ye inhabiters of Hazor, saith the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath holden a counsell concernyng you: and concluded his deuylce agaynst you. Apele, and get you vp agaynst yonder ryche and careless people (sayth the Lorde) which haue nether gates nor doore barres, but dwell alone. Their camels shall be stolen, and the droues of theyr catell dryuen awaye.

Moreover, those wyll I scatter towarde all the wyndes: and bringe them to destruccyon: yee, and that thowowe their awne familys, sayth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwelling for dragons, and an euerlasting wildernes: so that no body shall dwell there:
and no man shall haue there his habitation.

¶ These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremy, concerning * Elam, in the begynninge of the raygne of zedekiah kyng of Iuda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyll bringe the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and will scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes.
And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall fle vnto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afraied of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyll bringe vpon them the indygnation of my wrath, sayth the Lorde. And I wyll persecute them with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to naught.
I wyll sett my throne in Elam, I wyll de-stroye both the kyng and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wyll bringe Elam out of captiuitie agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The .i. Chapter.

The prophete Jeremy the destruction of Babylon, and the despoyntment of Israel, which was in captiuitie.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremy, concernyng Babylon, and the lande of þe Chaldees: * Breache amonge the Gentyles, let your voyce be heard, make a token, crye out, kepe no silēce, but saye: Babylon is wonne. * Bel is confounded, and Merodach is overcome.

* Yee, their goddes be brought to shame: and their ymages burst in peces. For out of the north there doth come a people agaynst her: which make her lāde so waste, that no body dwell therein, nether man nor beast: for theyr sye and departe from thence. * In those dayes and at that tyme, sayth þe Lorde: the chylidren of Israel shall come, they and the chylidren of Iuda, wepinge and making haste, and shall seke the Lorde their God.
They shall aske the waye to Sion, thither shall they turne their faces, sayinge: Come and we wyll cleaue to the Lorde, in a couenant that neuer shall be broken.

¶ My people hath bene a losse * flocke, for my shepherdes haue discaued the, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylls.
They haue gone frome the mountayne to the hyll, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and theyr enemyes sayde: We haue made no faute agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yee, euen the Lorde, which is the bewtife of theyr ryghteousnesse & that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye fle from Babylon, and departe out of the lande of the Chaldees, and be ye as the rammes that goo before the flocke. * For loo, I wyll wake vp an hooste of people from the northzen lande, and bringe them vpon Babylon: these shall laye sege to it, and wyne it. Theyr arrows shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shuteb not wronge.

And the Chaldees shall be spoyled, and all they that spoyl them, shall be satisfied, sayth the Lorde. * although ye were so chearfull and gladd, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse, and triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorie.
Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame.
She shall be the least sett by amonge the nations, voyde, wasted and dryed vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shall be whole desolate. * All they that go by Babylon, shall stande still, and be abashed, and shall wondre at all her plages.

So forth in your araye agaynst Babylon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes: shute at her, spare no arrows: for she hath spyned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde about: she shall

shall yelde her selfe, her foundatōs shall fall and her walles shall come downe: for it shall be the vengeance of the Lorde. * Yee, vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye with her. Note out þe sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the speckle in haruest. For feare of the swearde of the enemye, euery man shall gett him to his awne people: and euery man shall flee to his awne lande. Israel is a scattered flocke, the lyons haue disperfed them. * First the king of the Assirians deuoured them, * last of all this Nabuchodonosor king of Babilō hath brosed all their bones.

¶ Therefore, thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will viset the kyng of Babylon and his kingdom as * I haue visited the kyng of the Assirians, and wyll bringe Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Chamel and Bafan, and be satisfied vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galad. * In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, shall the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be founde. ¶ Men enquire for the syn-ne of Iuda, there shall be none: for I wyll be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffice to re-mayne ouer.

Go downe, O thou auenger, into the ene-myes lande, and viset them that dwell therin: downe with the, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordyng to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone about the lande a crye of a slaughter and great murther, namely on this maner. How happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder?
Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wilderness amonge the hepten on this maner? My selfe haue layed wayte for the,
and thou art takē vna warre: art thou trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto anger. The Lorde hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapens of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

¶ Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: breake vp her chestes: the she her as ye the corne: destroye her, that nothing shall be left.
Slaye all their myghtye souldyers, and put them to death. ¶ Alas be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their visitation is at han-de. We thynke I heare allready a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lāde of Babylon, which the we in Sion the vengeance of the Lorde our God, the vengeance of his temple: yee, a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitche your tentes rounde about her, that none escape. * Recō-pence her, as she hath deserued: and accor-dyng as she hath done, so deale with her a-gayne, for she hath * set vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde, agaynst the holie one of Israel.

¶ Therefore shall her yonge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be coted out in that daye, sayth the Lorde. Be-holde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitation.
And the proude shall stumble and fall and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyll burne vp his cityes with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

¶ Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The chylidren of Israel and Iuda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuities, kept them fast, and wyl not let the go, but their auenger and redemer is myghtye, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shall mainteyne their cause, he shall make the lāde shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another. The swearde shall come vpon the Chaldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their prynces, and vpon their wyse men. The swearde vpon their souldyers, as for those, they shall be come foolcs. The swearde vpon their wysethies, so that they shall stande in feare. The swearde vpon their hoymen and charcters, and vpon all the conion people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become ly-ke women. The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stolē awaye. I brought vpon their waters, so that they shall be dryed vp. For the lande wyll hyppeth ymages, and depyteth in straunge wondrefull thynges.
¶ Therefore shall wyde beastes, lamia & catte of mountaynes, and streches dwell therein, for there shall neuer man dwell there, nether shall eny man haue his habitation there for euermore. Like as God destroyed * Sodom and Gomorre, with the cityes that laye ther about, sayth the Lorde. So shall no man dwell there also, nether shall eny man haue there his habitatyon. * Beholde, there shall come a people from the north with a greate bonde of men, and many kynges shall stan-de vp from the endes of the earthe. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruell are they and vnmecyfull.

¶ Their voyce roareth like the raging see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weapened to fyght agaynst the, O Babylon. A soone as the king of Babylon heareth tell of them, his handes shall waxe feeble. Sorowe and heugnes shall come vpon him, as a woman traueylinge with chylde. Beholde, * lyke as the lyon cometh vp from the pleasaunt me-dowes of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Echan, so wyll I dryue them forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shall I chose out: & ordeyne to such a thyng?

lyr waste for euer: and when thou hast redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye, Euen thus shall Babylon syncke, & be thrust dow-ne with the burthen of trouble, that I will brynge vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremy.

* And in the fourth moneth, the. ix. daye of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the cytie: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the soldiers brake awaye, and fled oute of the cytie by nyght thozowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wot these men their waye towarde the wyldernes.

And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jericho, when his hoost was runne fro hym: So they caried the kyng awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kyng of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgemēt vpon hym.

The kynge of Babylon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne befoze his face, yee and put all the prynces of Iuda to death at Reblath. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bounde with two cheynes, to be caried vnto Babylon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in ynynth yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Nabufaradan the chiefe captay-ne and the kynge of Babylons seruantes came vnto Ierusalem, and brent vp the house of the Lorde. He bzient by also the kynges pa lace, all shonles and all the gorgeous buyl dynges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoost of the Chalders that were with the chefe ca ptayne, brake downe all the walles of Jeru salem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and such folke as yet was left in the cytie: which also were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried the awaye prisoners. But the poore people of the countre, byd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupye the byncardes and feldes. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pylers that were in the house of the Lorde, yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in y^e house of the Lorde: and carped all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Canidjans, spouels, sickehookes, spyngklers, spoues, and all the brasen vessell that was occupied in the seruyce: with the basens, colepannes, spyngklers, pottes, candellspikes, spoues, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe capitaine toke also the two pillars, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate * which kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lord: and all the vessell conteyned so moche metall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery pillar was eyghtene cubytes hye: and y^e rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubytes, & foure fyggers thicke and rounde. Nowe vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, ad euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whorpes, and poingranates rounde about of cleane brasse:

After this manner were both the pylers fashyoned with the pōgranates, wherof there were an hundred and. xcvi. which hanged vpon the whoopes rounde about: The chefe captaine also toke Sariah the hie preste, and Sophoniah that was chefe nexte hym, and the thre keepers of the tresurp. He toke out of the cytie a chāberlayne which was a captayne of the souldyers, and ten men that were the kynges seruantes, which were founde in the cytie: and Sephera captayne that vsed to muster the men of warre, with threescore men of the countre that were taken in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kyng of Babylon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Iuda was ledde a waye captiue, oute of hys awne lande. This is the name of the people, who Nabuchodonosor ledde a waye captiue. ¶

The lamentacions
of Jeremy,

The first Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into captiuſite, and Ieruſalem deſtroyed, that Ieremie the pro-phete ſate weeping, and ſorrowfully bewailed Ieruſalem and ſeyghinge and howlinge with an heur and woollull heere, ſayde,

Alas, howe spyteth the cytie so desolate, y^e somtyme was full of people? howe is she become lyke a wedowe,
* which was y^e lady of all na cyons: howe is she brought vnder trybute, & that ru led all landes. She wepeth soze in y^e nyght so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that geueth her eny comforte: * y^e her nexte fren des traſsgresse agens^t her, and are become her enemyes. Iuda is taken prelsoner, becau se she was despyled: and for seruyng^e so many straunge goddes, she dwelleth nowe amonge the heythens. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, in strapte places wher she coulde not escape. The streets of Sion mourne, because no man cometh no more to the sollepne feastes. All her gates are desolat, her prestes make lamentaciō, her may des are carefull: & she her selfe is in great heuynesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered: because the Lorde hath chastened her for her greate wickednes: * her chyldren are ledde awaye * Jerre. 16. 9. captiue before theyr enemye. All the bewetie of the daughter of Sion is awaye, her princes are become lyke hertes that fynde no pasture. They are daryed awaye before theyr enemie, so that they haue nomore power.

Howe both Ierusalem remember the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yee, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past seyinge her people is brought downe thowow the power of theyr enemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her enemyes stande lo-kyng at her, and laugh her Sabbath dayes to scozne. Ierusalem hath spinned euer, more and more, therfore is she come in de-scape. All they that had her in honour despyse her: for they haue sene her fyllthyness. Yee, she sygheth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

¶ Her sayntes are despyed, the remembered not what wolde folowe: therfore is her fall so wonderfull, and there is no man to co-forte her. O Lorde, consyde my trouble, for myne enemy hath the vpperhande. The enemy hath put hys hāde to all the precious thynges that she had, yee, euē befoze her eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctua-vyle I am become. haue ye no regarde all ye that go fore by, be holde and se, yf there arfull wraath. From aboue hath he sent Downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruellie: he hath layed a net for my fete me desolate, so that I must euer be mournyn-ge. The yocke of my transgressyon is come at the last, with hys hāde hath he taken it by, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the Lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, wherout I cannot quyte my claymed a feast, to slaughter all my best no man to comfort her. The Lord hath laid the enemies rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become a lamentacyon in the myddel of them. * The Lord is righteous, for I have provoked his countenance unto anger. Take heed all ye people, and consider my heavynesse. My maydens and my yonge men are led away into captivite.

I called for my lovers (but they begyled me) for my prestes and counsellors, but they perished: even whyle they sought for meate, to save theyr lyves. * Consydre (O Lord) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my hert turneth about in me, and I am full of heavynesse because I rebelled against the Lord. The swerde hurteth me withoute, & within I am like unto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that will comfort me. All myne enemies have heard of my trouble and are glad therof, because thou hast done it and thou hast brought forth thy tyme which thou calledst, when they also shall be like unto me.

For the shall come all their adversitie thou shalt plucke the awaye eue as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wickednes. For my sorowe is very grete, & my hert is heuy.

The ii. Chapter.

As, * howe hath the Lord darkened the daughter of Syon so sore in his wrath. As for the honour of Israel he hath cast it downe from heauen unto the earth. Howe happeneth it, that he remembred not his awne * sote stole when he was angry?

The Lord hath cast downe all the habitacions of Jacob without any fauour: all the stronge places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacyon he hath broke all the horne of Israel: he hath drawen his right hande from the enemy: yee, a flame of fyre is kindled in Jacob, and hath consumed up all rounde aboute. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemy, he hath fastened his right hand as an adversary: and euery thyng that was pleasant to se, he hath smytten it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

The Lord is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and all his palaces: yee, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the daughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heavynesse.

* Her tabernacle (which was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he put downe. The Lord hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solempne feastes and Sabbathes in Zion, are cleane forgotten. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the kyng and prestes to be despised.

The Lord hath forsaken his awne sanctuary, and hath abhorred his awne Sanctuare, and hath geuen the walles of the temple into the handes of the enemy. They enemies made a noise in the house of the Lord, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

The Lord thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Zion, he spred out his lyne, and drew not in his hande, tyll he had destroyed them: Therefore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together.

Her gates are sonke downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder. * her kyng & princes are caried awaye to the Gentyls. They haue nether lawe nor prophetes, ner yet any visyon from the Lord.

The senatours of the daughter Zion sate vpon the grounde in silence: they haue strawed ashes vpon theyr heades, and gyrded them selues with sack cloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heades to the grounde.

Myne eyes begyne to faile me, thowowe wepyng, * my body is disquieted, my liuer is poured vpo the earth, for y greate hurte of my people, seynge the chyldren and babes dyd sowe in the stretes of the cite.

Even when they speake to theyr mothers: where is meate and drynke? for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cite, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou daughter Jerusalem, to whom shall I lyken the? To whom shall I compare the. O daughter Zion, to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who maye heale the?

* Thy prophetes haue looked out vayne and folieth chynge for the, they haue not thewed the of thy wickednes, to kepe the from captivite: but haue overladen the, and thowow falsly scattered the a boode. All they that go by the, clappe their handes at the: whynge and wagginge their heades vpo the daughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cite that men call so fayre: wherin the whole lande reioyleth? All thyne enemies gape vpon y: whylperinge and bytinge their teth, saying: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The Lord hath fulfilled the thinge, that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had deuised longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thine adversarye triumphe ouer the, and set vpo the horne of thyne enemye.

* Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lord, O thou cite of the daughter Zion: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer daye and nyght, rest not, and let not the aple of thyne eye leaue of. Stande vp and make thy prayer in the fyrst watch of the nyght, poure oute thyne hert lyke water before the Lord. lyft vpo thyne handes, for the lyues lyues of thy yonge chyldren, that dye of hunger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lord, and consydre, why hast thou gathered me vpo so cleane? Shall y women then eate their awne frute, euen chyldre of a spanne longe? Shall the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuary of the Lord? Yonge and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the swerde: whom thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yee, euen thou hast put them to death, & not spared them. My neyghbours that are rounde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast daye: so y in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, nether was any left behynde. Those that I haue brought & noryshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The iiii. Chapter.

In the mornynge, that (thowowe the rodd of his wrath) haue experience of misery. He droue me forth, and led me: yee, into darkenesse, but not into lyght. Agaynst me onely he turneth his hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My flethe and my skynne hath he made olde, & my bones hath he brused. He hath buylded rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall and trauayle. He hath sett me in darkenesse, as they that be deed for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I cannot get out, and hath layed heuy lynches vpon me. Though I crye and call pytously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vpo my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, and broke me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether. He hath bent his bowe, & made me as it were a march to shut at: The arrowes of his quyer hath he shot euen into myne eyes.

* I am laughed to scorn of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me with bitternes, and geuen me wormwood to drynke. He hath smitten my teth in peces with stones, and rolled me in dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lord. Remember yet my misery and my trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

Yee, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consydre these thynges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercyes that we are not, utterly consumed. For trulpe his pytefull compassion hath not ceased. As we mercyes shall the Lord therewe vpon the, eue, yee in the daye sprynge, (O Lord) greates thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lord is my porteyon, sayeth my soule, therefore wyll I hope in him. O how good is the Lord vnto them, that put theyr trust in hym, and to y soule that seeketh after hym. The good man with stylnes and patience tarieth, for the health of the Lord.

O howe good is it for a man, to take the pock vpon him from his youth vp. He lyteth alone, he holdeth hym still, and dwelleth quyetly vpo him selfe. He laicth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope. He offreth his cheke to the smyter, he wyll be content with reproues.

For the Lord wyll not forsake for euer, * but though he punyssh hym: yet according to the multitude of his mercyes, he receaueth to grace agayne. For he doth not plage, & cast out the children of men from his herte.

To treade all the prisoners of the earth vnder his fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the most hyghest.

To condempne a man in his cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in soche thynges.

What is he then that saith: there shulde somthyng be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hyghest goeth not euell and good.

Wherfore then murmureth the luyng man: let him murmur at his awne spynne.

* Let vs loke, well vpo our awne wayes and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lord. Let vs lyfte vpo oure hertes with oure handes vnto the Lord that is in heauen. We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intreated?

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauour. * Thou hast byd thy selfe in a cloude, y oure prayer shuld not go thowowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despyed amonge the people. All oure enemies gape vpon vs.

Feare and pyttie is come vpon vs, yee, deceyte and destruction. * Whole ryuers of water gush oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

Myne eyes runne, and cannot cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and consydre?

Myne eye breaketh my herte: because of all the daughters of my cite. Myne enemies hunted me out sharply, lyke a byrde, yee, and that without a cause. They haue put downe my life into a pytt, & they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O Lord, out of y depe pytt. Thou hast herde my voyce: and hast not turned awaye thyne eares from my syghthyng and cryenge. Thou hast enclyned thy selfe vnto me. when I called upon the, and haste sayde: scarce not. Thou (O Lord) hast maintened the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe. O Lord, thou hast sene my blasphemers, take thou my cause upon the. Thou hast well considered howe they go aboute to do me harme, & that all their counsels are agaynst me. Thou hast heard their despytefull wordes (O Lord) yee, and all theyr ymaginacions agaynst me. The lyppes of myne enemyes, and theyr deuices that they take agaynst me, all I daye lōge. Thou seyst also theyr syttinge bowne, and theyr rylinge vp: they make theyr songes of nothyng but of me. Rewarde them (O Lord) accordyng to the worches of theyr handes. Geue them an obstinate herte: euen thy curse. Persecute them (O Lord) with thine indignacion, and rote the out from vnder the heauen.

The iij. Chapter.

How is the golde become so dymme: howe is the goodly colour of it so sore chaunged: and the stones of the Sanctuary thus scatred in the corner of euery strete. The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honoure, and clothed with the most precious golde: howe are they now become lyke the crthen vessels which be made with the potters hande. The dragons geue theyr pong ones such with bare brestes: but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylderne lyke the Estriches. The tonges of the suckynge chyldren, cleue to the rofe of theyr mouthes for very thyrst. The ponge chyldren aske bread, but there is no mā that geueth it the. So that the blynde men wente stomblyng in the streates, and stayned them selues with bloude. They wolde in no wyle touche there garments. The place of Jerem.

All to remembraunce (O Lord) what we haue suffered, consyde, and se our confusion. Our enheritaunce is turned to the straungers and our houses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherles, and our mothers are as the wyddowes. We are sayne to drynke our awne water for money, and our awne wod must we bye with money. Our sayne is as it had bene bzent in an ouen, for very sore hunger. The wyues are rancelled in Syon, and the maydens in the cyties of Iuda. The princes are hanged vpon the handes of the enemies, they haue not spared the olde sagemen, they haue take ponge mennes lquestrom the, & the boyes are hanged vpon trees. Wherfore, our herte is full of heynnes, & our eyes dymme: because of the byll of Sidon, that is destroyed. In so moche, that the foxes runne vpon it. But thou, O Lord, that remainest for euermore, and thy seate wolde without ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lord, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shall we be turned. Renue our dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banysed vs now longe ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs.

The booke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme wherein Ezechiel prophesied, and in what place. His offpyng and offpce. The byson of the four beasts. The byson of the wheles. The byson of the throne, and of the ymage about the throne.

In chaunged in .xxx. ycare, the fyfthe daye of the fourth moneth, that I was among the prisoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a byson of God. Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth made out the fyfth ycare of kyng Joachins captiuite. At the same tyme came the word of the Lord vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preste, in the lande of the Chaldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lord came vpon hym.

And I lokyd, and beholde a stormy wynde came out of the North with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with bys glyste lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in the midst of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an angell, and as it were the lyknes of four beasts, and thys was there lykenesse. They were fashyoned lyke a man: faupnge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Theyr legges were streight, but theyr fete were lyke bullockes fete, and theyr glystered, as it had bene sayre scoured metall. Under theyr wynges, vpon all the foure corners they had mens handes. Theyr faces and theyr wynges were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched another. When they went, they turned them not aboute: but eche one went streight forwarde.

Furthermoze thys was the symilitude of theyr faces. * Vpon the ryght syde of these foure, theyr faces were lyke the face of a mā, and the face of a lyon: But vpon the lefte syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Eagle. Theyr faces also and theyr wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, & with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it wente, it wente streight forwarde. Where as the sprete led them, thither they wente, * and turned not aboute in theyr goynge.

The fashyon and countenance of the beastes was lyke boate coales of fyre, euen as though burning cressettes had bene among the beastes: * (thys was the byson) and the fyre gaue a glyste, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde & backward, one wold haue thoughte it had lyghtened. Now when I had well considered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also nye vnto the beastes.

The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke yee. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned the not about in theyr goynge. They were large greate and horrible to loke vpo. Theyr backes were full of eyes rounde about them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles wente also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whither soener the sprete wente, thither went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the sprete of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes wente forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues from the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the bryeth of lyfe was in the wheles.

The Prophecie

Of Ezechiel.

No. lxxxix.

About, ouer the heades of the beastes there was a fyrmament, which was fashyoned as it had bene of the most pure Chrystall, and that was spred oute a boue vpon theyr heades: vnder the same fyrmament were theyr wynges layed abrode, one towarde another and two wynges couered y body of euery beaste. And when they wente forth, I heard the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke y noyse of greete waters; as it had bene the voyce of the greete God, and a rushynge together as it were of an host of men. And when they stode still, they let downe theyr wynges. Nowe when they stode still, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in the fyrmament that was about theyr heades. About the fyrmament that was ouer theyr heades, there was the fashyn of a seate, as it had bene made of Sapphyr. vpon the seate there satt one lyke a mā. * I behelde hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vppwarde.

And beneth, when I looked vpon him vnder y loynes, me thought he was lyke a wyngynge fyre, that geueyth lyght on euery syde. Yee, the thyne and glyste that lyghtened rounde about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherin the glozpe of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and hearkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake:

The prophete is comen to call the people from theyr error.

And then sayd he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (O y sonne of mā) and I will talke with the. * And as he was comynge to me, the sprete came into me, and sett me vp vpon my fete: so that I marched the thyng, y he sayd vnto me. And he sayd Behold, thou sonne of man: I will sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye from me: * both they and theyr foze fathers vnto this daye.

Yee, I will sende the vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiffe stomakes: vnto whō thou shalt saye on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde household) they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a Propheete amonge them.

* Therefore (thou sonne of man) feare the not, neither be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prouokers and thoznes are with the. Yee, thou dost dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not theyr wordes, be not abashed at theyr looks, for it is a frowarde household.

So that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate. Therefore, thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styfnecked, lyke as they are a styfnecked household. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hāde, wherin was closed a booke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was wyrtten within and without full of carefull mournynge: alas, and woo.

The iii. Chapter

The prophete berynge ledde with the wynde of God and with the constant boldenes of the sprete, is sent vnto the people that were in captiuite. The punishment of a curate that sheweth not the people theyr synnes.

After this, sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yee * eate that booke, and go thy waye, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel. So I opened my mouth, ad he gaue me the booke for to eate, and sayde vnto me. Thou sonne of man, thy bely shall eate, and thy bowels shall be fylled with y booke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate the boke, * and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, * get y soone vnto the house of Israel, and shewe the the wordes, that I comaunde the for I sende the not to the people that hath a strange, vnkowne, or hard speache, but vnto the house of Israel. Not to many nacyns, which haue dyuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou understādest not: * Neuerthelesse, yf I sent the to those people, they wolde folowe the. But the house of Israel wyll not folowe y, for they wyll not folowe me: yee, all the house of Israel haue stifte foreheades & harde hertes. * Beholde therefore, I will make thy face pzeuaple agaynst their faces, and harde thy foreheade agaynst their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shall be harder then an adamant or slynt stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayed of the, for they are a frowarde household.

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thyne eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the fasten them in thyne herte: and go to the pzeloners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the sprete toke me vp. And I heard the noyse of a greete rushynge and remouynge of the most blessed glozpe of the Lorde out of his place.

I heard also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushyd one agaynst another, that, yet, and the eatynge of the wheles, that were by them, whych rushynge and noyse was very greaue.

* Nowe when the sprete toke me vp, and carped me awaye, I wente wyth an heuy & a sorrowfull mynde, but the hāde of the Lorde comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnyng of the moneth Abib, I came to the pzeloners, * that dwelt by the water of Cobar, & remayned in y place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, beyng very soz.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchmā vnto the house of Israel: therefore take good hede to the wordes of my mouth, & geue the warnynge at my commaundement.

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man, that (wythout doute) he must dye, and thou geuest hym not warnynge, ne speakest vnto hym, that he may turne from his euell waye, and so to lye: Then shall y same vngodly mā dye in his awone vnygh-teousnes: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hand. Neuertheles, yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynesse: then shall he dye in his awone wyckednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Nowe yf a ryghteous man go from y his ryghteousnesse, and do the thyng y is euell: I will laye a stomblynge blocke before him, and he shall dye because thou hast not geuen hym warnynge: yee, dye shall he in his awone synne, so that the vertue, whych he dyd before, shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuerthelesse, yf thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, & so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lye, because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came y hāde of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke wyth the.

So when I had rysen vp, and gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glozpe of the Lorde stode there, * lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar.

* Then fell I downe vpon my face, & the sprete came into me, whych set me vp vpon my fete, & sayd thus vnto me: So thy waye, and sparre thy self in thyne house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the wythall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyll make thy tynge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme, & not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obstinate household.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth y Lorde God: who so heareth, let hym heare: who so wyll not let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate household.

The iiiij. Chapter

The belege of the cite of Iherusalem is signified. The longe contynuaunce of the captiuite of Iherusalem. An longer is prophesied to come in the captiuite.

Thou sonne of man: take a tyle stolle, & laye it before the, and describe vpon it the cite of Iherusalem, howe it is beleged, howe bulwarkes and stronge wythes are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an host of men rounde aboute it, wyth engynes of warre.

Mozeouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixte the and the cite, in steade of an yron wall. Then set thy face toward it, belege it, and laye ordinaunce agaynst it, to wythstande it. Thus shall be a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes. * Neuerthelesse, I will appoynte the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) & the nombze of the dayes: Three hundred and .xx. dayes must thou beare the wyckednesse of the house of Israel. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryght syde. xl. dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Iuda.

* A daye for a peare, a daye (I saye) for a peare, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therefore set nowe thy face agaynst that beleged Iherusalem, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophesye agaynst it.

Beholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

Wherefore, take vnto the wheate, barley beanes, growell scde, Millin and fytyches: & put these together in a vessel, and make the loaves of bread therof, accordynge to the nombze of the dayes that thou shalt lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for the hundred and .xx. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twenty fytyes euery daye. Thus appoynted meats shalt thou eate daylye, fro the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt dzyneke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the fytt parte of an hin shalt thou dzyneke dayly fro the begynnyng vnto the ende. Barly cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fytt toke them at a fyte made with mans doge, that they maye leste. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate their despyled bread in the myddest of the Gentiles, amonge whom I wyll leasse them.

May Then

D Then sayde I: Oh Lord God. Beholde my soule was yet neuer clapped: for from my yowthe vnto this houre, I dyd neuer eate of a deyd carcase, or of that which was slayne of wyld beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane fleshe in my mouth.

Wher vnto he answered me, and sayde: Well shal I wyll graunte þe to take cowes donge for the donge of a ma, and to tolke the bread wyth all befoze them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyll mynyshe all the prouisiõ of bread in Ierusalem, so that they shall wepe their bred: and eate it wyth scarcenelle. But as for water, they shall haue a very lytle measure therof, to drynke. And when they haue nomore bread ner water, one shall be destroyed wyth another, ad samplly awaye for the wretchednesse.

C The. v. Chapter.

The epoule of the heare, by which is signified the destruction of the people. The cause of the anger of God towards the people.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasoure. Take that, and shawe the heare of thy head and beerd: Then take the scales and the wayght, & deuyde the heare a linder. And after thou hast accomplished þe dayes of the wege: burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cytie, & cut the other thyrde parte in peeces wyth a knyfe. * As for þe thyrde parte þe remayneth, cast it in the wynde and I wyll drawe out þe swerde after them.

Yet afterwarde, take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtely of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre: & burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there growe a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel. * Moreover, thus sayde the Lord God: Thys same is Ierusalem. I sette her in the myddest of the heathen & nacions that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despised my iudgements moze then the Gentiles them selues, and broke my commaundementes moze then þe nacions, that lye rounde aboute her: for they haue cast out myne ordinaunces, and not walched in my lawes.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: * For so much as ye haue bene moze augmented in nombre of people then the heathen, & dwelld rounde aboute you: and ye haue not walched in my lawes, neither haue ye kepte myne ordinaunces, and ye haue not lyued so ryght-wyllens as the heathen that are rounde aboute you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyll also come vpon the, I my selfe I saye, for in the myddest of the wyll I syt in iudgment, in the syght of the heathen, & wyll handle the of such a fashyon, as I neuer dyd befoze, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forth, and that because of all thynne abho-minacions. For in the fathers shall be sayne to eate their awne sonnes, and the sonnes their awne fathers. Such a courtte wyll I kepe in the, and the whole remnant of the wyll I scatere in to all the wyndes.

Wherefore, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) I syng thou hast despyled my sanctuary, wyth all maner of abhominacions & wyll thy shamefull offences: for thys cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neither wyll I spare the.

* One thyrde parte wythin the, shall dye of the pestilence & of hunger: Another thyrde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the wyth þe swerde: The other thyrde parte þe remayneth, wyll I scatere abroad towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I wyll perfourme my indignaciõ, & let my wrath agaynst them, and I will calfe my selfe. So that whẽ I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lord, which wyth a feruent gelously haue spoken it. * Moreover, I wyll make the waste and abhorred, befoze all the heathen that dwell aboute the, & in the sight of all them, that go by the: so that whẽ I punish the in my wrath, in myne anger, & wyth þe plage of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a galyng & wondryng stroke, amonge the heathen that lye aboute the. * And I the Lord haue spokẽ it, and it shall come to passe, when I shute amonge them the perious darter of hunger, which shall be but death: yee, therefore shall I shute them, because I will destroye you: * I wyll encrease hunger, and mynyshe all the prouisiõ of bread amonge you.

Plages & misery wyll I sende you, yee, & wyld beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudsheddinge shall come vpon you, & the swerde wyll I bringe ouer you. * Euen I the Lord, haue sayde it.

C The. vi. Chapter.

He sheweth that the people shall be plagued for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophesieth the repentance of the remnant of the people, and the destruction of the remnant of the heathen.

Ad the worde of the Lord came vnto I me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest propheticke vnto them, and saye: heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylls, valleys and dales.

Beholde I, I my selfe I saye, wyll bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe youre altars, and breake downe youre ymages. Your slayne men wyll I laye befoze youre goddes, and the deyd carcasses of the chyl-dren of Israel wyll I cast befoze they: Idoles, youre bones wyll I destroye rounde aboute aboute youre altars, and dwelling places. The cyties shall be desolate, & hyllchapelis layd waste: youre altars destroyed, & broken: youre goddes cast downe, and taken awaye, your temples layde eue wyth the grounde, your awne woiches cleane rote oute.

Your slaynemen shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lord. Those þe amonge you & haue escaped the swerde, wyll I scaue amonge the Gentiles, for I wyll scatere you amonge the nacions. And they that escape of you, shall thinke vpon me amonge the heathen, where they shall be in captiuitie.

As for that whozyl and vnfaithfull herete of theys, wherewith they runne awaye frome, I wyll breake it: pee, & put oute the eyes of theirs, that comyette fornicacyon wyth they: Idols.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased wyth their selues, for the wretchednesse and abhominacions, which they haue done: and shall learne to knowe, þe I am the Lord, howe that it is not in vayne, that I þe Lord spake, to bringe such misery vpon them.

The Lord sayde moreover vnto me: Sympte thynne handes together, and stampe wyth thy fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wretchednesse of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe wyth the swerde, wyth hunger and wyth pestilence. Who so is farr of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perishe wyth the swerde: and the other that remayne & þe are beleged, shall dye of hunger.

Thus wyll I satysfy my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when youre slayne men lye amonge youre Idols, and aboute youre altars: vpon all hye hylls and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: eue in the places, where they dyd sacrifice to all they: Idols. I wyll stretch myne hande oute vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: So þe it shall lye desolate and vopde, fro the wilderness of Edemoth forth, thowowe all their habitaciõs: to learne the for, to knowe, that I am the Lord.

C The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shall be desolate. The cause of the destruction thereof. The prophete is commaunded to shewe the summe of the ruines that are at hande.

Ad the worde of the Lord came vnto me, thus sayeth the Lord God: The ende cometh, vpon the lande of Israel yee, verely the ende cometh vpon all the four corners of þe lande. But now shall þe ende come vpon the for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, & will punish the: accordyng to thy wayes, & rewar-de the after all thynne abhominaciõs. * Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neither wyll I spare the: but rewarde þe, accordyng to thy wayes, and declare thynne abhominaciõs. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, one misery and plage shall come after another. þe ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for þe, beholde it is come all ready, thy destruction is eue come agaynst the, þe dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sediciõ is harde by, & the crye shall not be as the soundyng agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore, I wyll shortly pour out my soze displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

* Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neither wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, & thynne abhominacions shall be punished in the myddes of the, to learne you for to knowe, howe that I am the Lord þe smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here the daye is come, þe houre is rûne out, the rodde flourisheth, þe wareth grene, malicious violence is growne vp, and the vngodly warre to a stat. None of the shall remayne ouer, none of their riches, not one of the seede, and no lametaciõ shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye: * Who so byeth, lett him not reioyce: he that selleth, lett hym not be soz: for why. * Trouble shall come in the myddest of them all: so þe seller shall not come agayne to the thinge he solde, all though they lye be yet wyth þe lyuynge. * For whẽ the prophecie was preached vnto all the people, none returned from ther synne, and noman toke strengthe to him agest his wretchednesse, to saue his awne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe, & make you all ready, but no ma shall goo to þe battell, for I am wroth wyth all þe whole multitude.

The swerde shall be without, pestilence and hunger wythin: so that whoso is in the felde, shall be slayne wyth the swerde: and he that is in the cytie shall perishe wyth hunger and pestilence.

And soch as escape and fle from amonge them, shall be vpon the hylls, lyke as the doues in þe felde: euerie one shall be stayed, because of his awne wretchednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, & all knees shall be wrake as the water: they shall crye them selues wyth sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon them. They shall be confounded, * and they shall beades balde: they shall shal they call forth in the stretes, & their golde shall be despyled: * yee, they shall shal they maye not deliuer the, in the daye of þe full wrath of the Lord.

W 1 They

The propherye

They shall not satysfye their hongry soules, neither fyll their empty bellies therw: For it is become their awne decaye thozow their wickednes: And ther bewtyfull costlye ornamente that God had ordeyned to be their great glozpe, in it they haue sett vp abominacyōs vnto ther Idols. For this cause wpll I make them and it to be abhoired. Moreover, I wpll geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, ad they shall destroye it. My face wpll I turne fro them, my treasurye shall be defiled: for the threues shall go in to it, and suspende it. Make a cheyne, for the lande is whole defyled wpth vnyrghteous iudgement of innocent bloude, and the ctye is full of violent opprellsion. Wherefore, I wpll bringe the most cruell tpyauntes from amonge the heathen, to take theyr houses in possession. I wpll make the pompe of the proude to ceasse, and ther sanctuarye shall be defyled. When thys trouble cometh, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One myschefe and sorowe shall folowe another, and one rumoure shall come after another: * Then shall they seke visyons in vayne at their Prophetes. The lawe shall be gone from the prestes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the Prynces shall be clothed with heynesse, and the hādes of the people in the lāde shall tremble for feare. I wpll do vnto them after theyr awne wayes, accordyng to their awne iudgements wpll I iudge them: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The viij. Chapter.

In appearance of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Ierusalem in the spere. The Lorde with the Prophetes the Idolatryes of the house of Israel, and the cheafes of the Idoles.

It happened, that in the fyrte yere of the fyrth daye of the fyrte moneth. I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the councell of Iuda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euē there vpon me. And as I looked vp, * I sawe as it were a lickenesse of fyre from hys loynes downe warde and fro hys loynes vwarde it shyned maruclous cleare & lyke an angell to loke vpon. * This similitude stretched out an hande, and toke me by the hearepe lockes of my head, and the spere lyft me vp betwixte heauē and earth: and brought me in a visyon to Ierusalem, into the entrie of y inner porte that lyeth toward the north: there stode an ymage, with whō he that hath all thynges in hys power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glory of the God of Israel was in the same place: euē * as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, Dlyft vp thyn eyes, and loke toward the north. Then lyft I vp myne eyes toward the north, & beholde:

beynde the porte northwarde, there was an auter made vnto the ymage of prouocacyō in the very entryng in. And he sayde further: more vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greates abominacyōs that the house of Israel comytte in thys place to dryue me fro my sanctuerye? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacyōs. And wpth that brought he me to the court gate: * wher I looked, beholde, there was an hole in y wall. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, dygge thozow the wall. And whē I dygged thozow the wall, beholde, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me: So thy waye in, and loke what wycked abominacyōs they do here. So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idoles and abominacyōs of the house of Israel paynted euery one rosēd about the wall. Ther stode also before the ymages. * Ixx. Lordes of the councell of the house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Jaazanih the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of thē had a censoure in hys hāde, and out of the incense, there went a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sonne of mā, hast thou sene what the Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in hys chambrye? * For they saye: Cuth, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayd vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacyōs y they do. And wpth that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house, toward the north. And beholde, there sat women mournyng for Chamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene thys, thou sonne of mā? Turne y aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacyōs then these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: and beholde at y porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entrye ad the auter, there were fyue and twety men, that turned their backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces toward the east, and these wycked the sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of mā? Thynketh the house of Iuda, that it is but a trifle, to do these abominacyōs here? Shulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and vnder take to prouoke me vnto anger? Pee, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me? Therfore wpll I also do some thyng in my wrothfull displeasure, so y myne eye shall not ouerse thē, neither wpll I spare them. * Pee, and though they crye in myne eares wpth loude voyce, yet wpll I not heare them.

The ix. Chapter.

The

Of Ezechiel.

No. xci.

The destruction of Idolatrye, and the conuersacion of the reghimes. They that shalbe saved are marked. They that are vnnarked are slayne. A complaunte of the Prophet for the destruction of the people.

I crept also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come, here ye rulers of the ctye, euery man wpth his weapened hande to the slaughter. Then came there fyue me out of the strete of the vpper porte toward the north, and euery man a weapē in hys hāde to y slaughter. There was one amongest them, that had on hym a linnen rayment, & a wyrters pnykhorne by hys syde.

These wente in, & stode beynde the brasen auter: for the glory of the Lorde was gone awaye from the Cherub whych was vpon him, & was come downe to the thersholde of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters pnykhorne by hys syde, and the Lorde sayde vnto hym: So thy waye thozowe the ctye of Ierusalem, and set a marke vpon the foreheades of them, that mourne and are sorp for all the abominacyōs, that be done therein. And to the other, he sayde that I myght heare: * So ye after hym thozowe the ctye, slaye, ouerse none, spare none: kyll and destroye both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren, and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marke vpon them: se that ye touch thē not, * and begyne at my Sanctuary. Then they began at the elders, whych were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto thē: When ye haue defyled the temple, and fylled the court wpth the slayne, thē go your waye forth. So they wente out, & slewe downe thozowe the ctye. Nowe when they had done the slaughter, & I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, & crept, sayinge: O Lorde, wylt thou then destroye all y resydue of Israel, in thy soze displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel and Iuda is very greateso y the lande is full of bloude, and the cite full of vnfaithfulnesse: For they saye: * Cuth the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therfore wpll I vpo them, * myne eye shall not ouerse thē, neither wpll I spare thē, but wpll recompense theyr wyckednesse vpon theyr heades. And beholde, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters pnykhorne by hys syde: tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

The x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke whete burninge coles oute of the temple of the wheles & of the Cherubyns, in token of the burninge of Ierusalem. A rebekall of the visyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

As I looked, beholde, in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphyr vpon them: * Then sayde he that sat therein, to him that had the lynnē rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thyne hāde full of hoate coales out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer y ctye. And he crepte in, that I myght se.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpo the ryght syde of the house, when the man wente in, & the cloude fylled the inner court. * But the glory of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the thersholde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the court was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Pee, and the solide of the Cherubyns wynges was hearde into the fore court, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almyghty God, when he speaketh. Nowe when he had byden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hoate coales from the myddest of the wheles, whych were vnder the Cherubyns: he wēt & stode beynde the wheles. Then y one Cherub reached forth hys hande from vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linnen rayment in his hande: which toke it, & went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lycknesse of a mans hāde: I sawe also foure wheles beynde the Cherubyns, so y by euery cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the pzeuous stōne of Charys: yet (vnto the syght) they were all. iij. of one fashyon, as yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all foure together, not turnyng aboute in their goyng: But where the fyre wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goyng. Their whole bodies, their backs, theyr handes & wynges, pee, and the wheles also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles. * Euery one of thē had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, & they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beast, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe whē the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente wpth them, and when the Cherubyns shoke theyr wynges to lyft thē selues vwarde, y wheles remayned not behynde, but were wpth them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also. And when they were lyft vp, the wheles were lyft vp also with them, for the spere of lyfe was in the wheles.

* Then the glory of the Lorde was lyft up from the threholde of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns flackred wyth theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues vp from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheles wth them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the gloze of the Lorde was vpon the. Chys is the beast p^r I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces, & euery one foure wynges, and vnder theyr wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the figure of theyr faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of the. Euery one in hys goinge wete straght forwarde.

The prophceye

The .xj. Chapter.

¶ And the thre holde that seduced the people of Israel. Agaynst these he propheseth, shewing them howe they shalbe dyspayned abroad. The renuynge of p^r here is a synne of God, otherwyse can we not walche in hys commaundementes. He threatneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsellors.

Moreouer, the sprete of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And beholde, there were xxv. men vnder the doze amoge whos I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Wheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men ymagyn myschefe, and a wycked counsell take they in thys cyte, sayinge: tush, there is no destruccyon at hande, let vs buyde houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe. Therefore shalt thou prophceye vnto them, yee, prophceye shalt thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And wyth that fell the sprete of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayeth the Lorde: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) & I knowe the ymaginacions of youre hertes. Many one haue yemurthured in this cyte, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this cyte, are the fleshe, and thys cyte is the cauldron: * But I wyll byynge you out of it & ye haue feared the swerde, & I wyll byynge a swerde ouer you, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll byynge you out of thys cyte and deliuer you into youre enemyes hande, and will condemne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the coastes of Israel, I wyll be auenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thys cyte shal not be youre cauldron, neether shal ye be p^r fleshe theryn: but in the coastes of Israel wyll I punyssh you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walched, nee stones of the heathen, that lye rounde aboute you.

Nowe when I preached, Wheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed wyth a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wyle thou then utterlye destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on thys maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynskolke, & the whole house of Iuda, which dwell at Ierusalem, saye. Wythdrowe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lade is geue vs in possession. Therefore tell the, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you farre of amonge the Gentiles, and skatre you amoge the nacyns, & I wyll halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell the also, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyns, and byynge you from the countrees where ye be scatted, and wyll geue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shal comine thither, And they shal take awaye all ther Idols & all ther abhominacions from thence.

* And I wyll geue you one herte, and I wyll plante a newe sprete wythin your bowels. That stony herte will I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshy herte: that ye maye walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinaunces, and do them: p^r ye maye be my people, & I youre God. But loke whose hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abhominacions and wycked lyuinges: those mens dedes wyll I byynge vpon theyr awne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. After thys dyd the Cherubyns lyfte vp theyr wynges, and the wheles wente wyth them, and the gloze of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the gloze of the Lorde wente vp fro the myddest of the cyte, and stode vpon the mount of the cyte toward the east: * But the wynde toke me vp, and in a visyon (whych came by the sprete of God) he brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the presoners. Then the visyon that I had sene vanyshed awaye from me. So I spake vnto the presoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, whych he had shewed me.

The .xj. Chapter.

¶ The parable of the better of the captiuitie. The expoyson of the parable, by whych the takinge of bryngedebiah is signified. Another parable wher by the byrdes of honger and thys is signified.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, I sayinge: Thou sonne of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde household: * whych haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate household. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere redy to flye, and go forth by saye dawe lyght, that they maye se. Yee, euen in theyr syght shalt thou go from thy place to another place: p^r paradventure they wyll confyde, & they be an vnobediēt household: Thy gere p^r shalt made redy to flye wythall, shalt thou beare out by saye dawe lyght that they maye se: ad thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euē in theyr syght, as a mā doth when he flytteth. Wygge thowowe the wall, that they maye se & beare thowow it the same thynge, that thou tokest vp in theyr syght. In ther syght p^r shalt p^r beare vpo thy shulders, & carye p^r forth in the darcke. Wyde thy face p^r thou se not the earth, for I haue made the a shewtoken vnto the house of Israel. Nowe as the Lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: the geare p^r I had made readie brought I out by dawe. At euē I brake downe an hole thowow the wall wyth my hande: and when it was darcke, I toke the gere vpon my shulders, and bare them out in theyr syght.

C And in the moynynge, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, p^r Israel that frowarde household aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell the: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thys punysshment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am youre shewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shal it happen vnto you: Flyt shal ye also, and go into captiuitie. * The chiefe that is amoge you, shal lade hys shulders in the darcke, & get hym awaye. He shal breake downe the wall, to carye stuffe therthowow: he shal couer his face, that he se not the ground, with his eyes. * Wylyne wyll I sprede out vpon hym, and catch him in my net, and carye hym to Babylon, in the lade of p^r Caldees: which he shal not se, and yet shal he dye there. As for all hys helpers, & all hys hostes, that be about hym, I wyll scatere them toward all the wyndes, and drawe out a swerde after them. * So when I haue scatred them amonge the heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde. But, I wyll leaue a lytle nobre of them fro the swerde, hunger and pestilence: to tell all ther abhominacions amonge the heathen, where they come: p^r they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: wyth a fearfull tremblynge shalt p^r heate thy bread, wyth carefulnesse & sorowe shalt thou dryncke thy water. And vnto the people of the lade, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shal eate poure bread wyth sorowe, and dryncke poure water wyth heynnesse: Yee, the lande wyth the fulnesse therof shalbe layde waste, for the wyckednesse of them that dwell the-rin. And the cyties p^r now be well occupied, shal be voyde, and the lade desolate: that ye may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, whych ye vse in p^r lade of Israel, sayinge: Tush, * seyng that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the visyons are of none effecte: Tell them therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll make that byworde to cease, so that it shal no more be commonly v^red in Israel.

But saye thys vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thynge whych hath bene prophced, shalbe fulfilled. There shal no visyō be in vayne, neether eny prophcie saye le amonge the chyldren of Israel: for it is I the Lorde, that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the Lorde speake, it shal be perfourmed, and not be slacke in commynge.

Yee, euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde household) will I deuyse some thynge, and byynge it to passe, sayeth the Lorde God. And p^r worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel sayeth on thys maner: Tush, as for p^r visyon that he hath sene, it wyl be many a dawe or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thynge that he prophced. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: All my wordes shal nomore be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

The .xiiij. Chapter.

¶ The worde of p^r Lorde agaynst false prophetes, whych teach the people & counsellors of thys awne hertes.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā. Speake, prophceye agaynst those pphetes, that preach in Israel: & saye thou vnto them that prophceye out of theyr awne hertes: heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Wo be vnto those folysch prophetes, p^r folowe theyr awne sprete and speake where they se nothyng. O Israel, thy prophetes are lyke the fotes vpon the dawe feld: for they stande not in the gappes, neether make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battell in the dawe of the Lorde. Mayne thynge they se, and tell yees, to * mayntaine their preachynges wythall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, whan in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Mayne visyons haue ye sene, and spokē false prophces, wher ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Becausē youre wordes be vayne, and ye sche out yees: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Wyne hades shal come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thinges, and preach lyes: they shall not be in the councell of my people, nor wyttten in the booke of the house of Israel, neither shall they come in the lande of Israel: yf ye maye knowe, howe I am the Lorde God. And that for by cause: they haue dysceined my people, * and tolde the of peace, where no peace was. One setteth up a wall, and they dawbe it with lowe clape. Therefore tell them whych dawbe it with vntempered moxter, that it shall fall: * For there shall come a great shower of rayne greates hyle stones shall fall vpon it, & a soze storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be I? vnto you: where is nowe the moxter, that ye dawbed it wth all? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll breake out in my wrothfull displeasure wth a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a myghty shower of rayne, & hyle stones in my wroth, to destroye withall.

As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed wth vntempered moxter, I wyll breake it downe, make it cuen wth the ground: so y the foundepon therof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yee, and ye poure selues shall perishe in the myddest therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus wyll I perfourme my wroth vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it wth vntempered moxter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are a waye. These are the prophetes of Israel, which prophete vnto the cytie of Ierusalem, and loke out visyons of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore (O thou sonne of mā) sett thy face agaynst the daughters of thy people, which prophete out of their awne hertes: and speake thou prophete agaynst the, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, that some pylowes vnder all arme boles, ad bolsters vnder the heades both of ydge and olde, to catch soules wth all. * For whan ye haue gotten the soules of my people in poure captiuite, ye promysse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for an hadfull of barley, and for a pece of bread: whan ye kyll the soules of the, that dye not, and promysse lyfe to them, that lyue not: Thus ye dissemble wth my people, that beleuech poure lyes.

Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll also vpon the pylowes, wher wth ye catch the soules in sypenge: the wyll I take from poure armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in sypenge. Poure bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and deliuer my people out of poure had: so that they shall come nomoze in poure handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Seing that with poure lyes ye discomforthe the her-te of the ryghteous, whom I haue not discomforthe: Agayne: For so moch * as ye coage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not turne from his wicked waye, and lyue: therefore shall ye syppe out nomoze vanitie, nor prophete poure awne gessynges: for I wyll deliuer my people out of poure hande, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The xliij. Chapter.

The Lorde deapeth by word to the people for their synnes sake: The dyspenses of the word both the Lorde sometyme decaue by false prophetes. A comferte of the that fledde into Babilon.

Here resorted * vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sat downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayeg: Thou sonne of mā, these men beare their vncleannes in theyr hertes, and go purposly vpon the strompyng blocke of theyr awne wyckednesse: Gylde I then answer at their request: Therefore speake vnto them, & saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Every man of the house of Israel that beareth bys vncleane Idols in bys herte, purposynge to stromble in bys awne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquire eny thinge at me by him: vnto that mā wyll I the Lorde my selfe geue answer, accordynge to the multitude of bys Idols: that the house of Israel maye be shamed in their awne hertes, because they be clyene gone from me, for their abhominacions sake.

Wherefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: * We conuerted, for sake poure Idols, and turne poure wyues from poure fylthynesse, and turne poure faces fro all poure abhominacions. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, yf soeourneth in Israel) whych departeth from me, and carperth Idols in bys herte, purposynge to go styll strompyng in bys awne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to aske counsell at me thozow hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde geue answer, by myne awne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynst that man, and wyll make hym to be an example for other, yee, and a comen byworde: and wyll rote him out of my people, that he may knowe, how that I am the Lorde. * And yf that prophete be disceined, wher he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lorde my selfe haue disceined that prophet, and wyll stretch forth myne hande vpon hym, to rote hym out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for theyr wyckednes. Accordynge to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomoze from the thozowe erreure, and be no moze dyspled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, & I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, & goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretch out myne hande vpon it, & destroye all the prouyls of theyr byed, and sende death vpon them, to destroye man & best in the lande. * And though Noe, Daniel & Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shall they in their ryghteousnesse deliuer but their awne soules, sayeth the Lorde God. If I byynge noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, & it be so desolate, that no man may go therein for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as trulys I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall saue nether sonnes ner daughters, but be onely deliuered them selues: and as for the lade, it shall be waste.

O yf I byynge a swearde into the lade, & charge it to go thozowe the lade: so that I slaye downe man & best in it, & yf these thre men were therein: As trulys I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer nether sonnes ner daughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestilence into the lande, & poure out my soze indignacyon vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and best. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therein: as trulys I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer nether sonnes ner daughters, but saue their awne soules in their ryghteousnes. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Moche moze when I sende my * foure troublous plagues vpon Ierusalem: the swearde hunger, perious beastes & pestilence, to destroye mā and best out of it. Beholde they shall be a remnant saued therein, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be comforted, as touchinge all the places that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, howe that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I byd, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xv. Chapter.

As the byprouysable wood of y byne tree is cast in to the fyre, so sayeth he that Ierusalem shall be brynt.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: What cometh of the byne amonge all other trees? of the wyde byne stock amonge all other tymbre of the grove: Women take wood of it, to make any worke with all: I maye there a nayle be made of it, to hauege any thynge vpon: Beholde, it is cast in fyre to be brynt, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brynt to allwes. As it mete then for any worke: No, seynge then, that it was mete for no worke, bringe whole: moch lesse maye there any thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed & brynt it. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Lyke as I cast y byne into fyre for to be brynt, as other trees of y wodd: Euen so wyll I do with them that dwell in Ierusalem, & set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, & yet the fyre shall consume them. * The shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynst the, & make y lande waste: because they haue so soze offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xvi. Chapter.

The prophete entrepynge to speake of the abhominacions of Ierusalem: both first thow the bryntes of God towards it. Ierusalem is reproued of vniuersenes, for her fornicacyon with Idols. He iustifyeth the wickednes of other people in comparison of the synnes of Ierusalem. The cause of the abhominacions in to which the Sodomyers fell. Mercy is promysed to the repentant.

Sayne, the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, we the cytie of Ierusalem their abhominacions, & saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto Ierusalem: Thy progeny and bynted came out of the lade of Canaan * thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethyte, thus was the maner of thy byrth. In y daye of thy byrth when thou wast bozne, y stringe of thy nanell was not cut of: y wast not bashed in water to make the clyene: Thou wast nether rubbed w salt, ner swabbed in cloutys: No mā regarded y so moch, as to do any of these thinges for the, or to thewe the soch fauoure, but y wast vterly cast out vpon y felde, yee, despyed wast y in y daye of thy byrth. Then came I by the, and saue y fro den downe in thyne awne bloude, & sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be despyed in thyne awne bloude, yee, euen I (I tell the) sayde vnto y lyue, although thou be despyed in thyne awne bloude. * So I plated y, as y blossome of the felde: y art growe vp, & wast greates: y hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt ventie, thy breastes are come vp, thy hearre is goodly growe, where as y wast naked & bare afore.

Howe whan I wele by the, & looked vpon the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yee, eue the tyme to wowe the. Then spied I my clothes ouer y, to couer thy dishonestye: yee, I made an othe vnto the, * & married my selfe with the (sayeth the Lorde God) and so thou becomest myne awne. Then washed I the with water, and pouged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the thues of Carus letther: I gyrded y aboute with white sylke I clothed the with kercheffes, I decked the wth costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore heade, rare rynges vpon thyne eares, and set a be wittfull crowne vpon thyne head. Thus wast thou decked with syluer & golde, & thy rayment was of fyne white sylke.

of noble worke & of diuerse coloures.

Thou dydest eate norþinge but symnels, bonny & ople: maruelous goodly wast thou & beutyfull, yee euen a very quene wast thou so moch, that thy beuty was spoken of amonge the heythen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty, which I put vpo the sayeth the Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne awne beuty, & played the harlot, whē thou haddest gotten the name. Thou hast committed whordome, with all that went by the, & hast fulfilled their desyres: yee, thou hast taken thy garmentes of diuerse coloures, & deckte thyne aultres therwith, where vpo myghtest fulfill thyne whordome, & of soch a fashyō, as neuer was done, ner shalbe. The goodly ornaments & Jewels which I gaue the of myne awne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mesprynges therof, & committed whordome withall.

Thy garmentes of diuerse coloures hast thou taken, and deckte them therwith: myne ople & incense hast thou set before them. My meate which I gaue the, as symnels, ople & hony: (to fede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And thus came also to passe, sayeth the Lorde God:

* Thou hast take thine awne sones & daughters, who thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vnto the, to be their meate. Is this but a small whordome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou sayest my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be bent vnto the? And yet in all thy abhominacions and whordome, thou hast not remēbred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked & bare thou wast at y tyme, and troden downe in thyne awne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

* (thou hadst dypted thy stemes and byddell houses in euery place) Thou hast buylte hye places, yee at y head of euery strete hast thou buylded y an aultre. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, y hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, & multiplied thyne whoredome.

* Thou hast committed fornicacyon w the Egypciens thy neyghbours, which had moch flethe: and thus hast thou increased thine whordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I dyd stretch out myne hande ouer the, & dyd * minishe thy stoute of fode, and deluyce the ouer into the wylls of the Philistines thine enemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. * Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: yee, thou hast (I saye with the played the harlot, & yett haddest thou not ynough. Thus hast thou forthermore committed thy fornicacyon fro the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, & yett thy lust not satisfied. Howe obstinate is thine herte (sayeth the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these workes of an errant whore: buyldinge thy stemes at y head of euery strete, & thy byddell houses in all places: Thou hast not bene as an other whore, y holdeth scoone of a small rewarde, but a wise y breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in strade of her husbode. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores, but y geuest rewarde vnto all thy louers: & offrest them gyftes, to come vnto y out of all places, & to comytte fornicacyon w the. It is come to passe w the in thy whordomes contrary to the vse of other women: yee, there hath no soch fornicacyon bene committed after y, seynge that thou profrest gyftes vnto other, and norewarde is geuen the: this is a contrary thinge.

Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde. O thou harlot: thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moch as y hast sett forth thy pouthe to whordome, & discovered thy shame, thou rowe thy whordome w all thy louers, and with all y Idols of thy abhominacions in y bloude of thy chyldren, * who thou hast geue them: Beholde therfore, I will gather together all thy louers, vnto who thou hast made thy selfe come: yee, and all them who thou fauourest, & euery one y thou hatest: I will (I saye) gather the together rounde aboute the, and * will discover thy shame before the, that they maye se all thy fylthynges.

* Moreover, I will iudge y as a breaker of wedlocke and a murderer, and redpence y thine awne bloude in wrath and gelousy. I will geue y ouer in to their power, y shall breake downe thy sties, & destroye thy byddell houses: they shall strype y out of thy clothes, all thy fayre & beutyfull Jewels shall they take fro y, & so let the syt naked & bare: * yee: they shall bringe y come people vpo y, which shall stonethe, & slaye y downe w their sweardes. * They shall burne y thy houses, & punyssh the in y sight of many women. Thus will I make thy whordome to cease, so y thou shalt geue out no more rewarde.

Shulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelousy from the, be content, & no more to be displeased: seynge thou remēbredest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Beholde therfore I will bringe thine awne wayes vpo thyne heade, sayeth the Lorde God: howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordynge to thy wyckednesse & all thy abhominacions. Beholde, all they that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse thys prouerbe also agaynst the: soche a mother, soch a daughter.

Thou art eue thy mothers awne daughter, y hath cast of hyr housbande & hyr chyldren: yee, thou art the syster of thy sisters, which forsoke their husbodes & their chyldren. * Your mother is a Cethyte, and your father an Amorite. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell vpon

But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy ryght hande, is Sodoma & her daughters. Yett hast thou not walked after their wayes, ner done after their abhominacions: but y stodest a lyttell & very small tyme, and in all thy wayes y hast bene moze corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth y Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster w her daughters, hath not done so euell, as y and thy daughters. Beholde, * the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce & Idyllnesse: these thynges had she & her daughters. Besydes y, they reached not their hande to the poore and neby, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thynges before me: therfore I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done half of thy synnes, * yee, thou hast exceeded them in wickednesse. In so moch that in comparyson of all y abhominacions which y hast done, y hast made thy sisters good women. Therfore thou (which dydest condempne thy syster) heare thine awne shame, for thine awne offenses, that y hast committed, moze abhominable then they dyd, which in dead ar moze ryghteous, then y art, be thou (I seye) ashamed, and beare thy shamfull rebuke. seynge y thou hast proued thy sisters in coparyson of the ryght wyse.

As for their captiuyte, namely y captiuyte of Sodoma, & her daughters: y captiuyte of Samaria & her daughters: I will bringe the agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captiuyte amonge them: y mayest take thine awne confusyon vpon y, & be ashamed of all y thou hast done, & to coforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma & her daughters: Samaria and her daughters, w thy selfe, & thy daughters, shalbe brought agayne to poure olde estate. When y wast in thy pryde, & before thy wyckednesse came to lyght: thou woldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntill the tyme y the Syrians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye rounde aboute the, brought the to shame & confusyon: y mayest beare thine awne fylthynges & abhominacions, sayeth y Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shulde (by right) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyed the oth, and broken the couenaunte. Neuerthelesse, I will remēbre y couenaunte that I made with the in thy youth in so moch that it shalbe an euerlastinge couenaunte: so that y also remēbre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yonger sisters, who I will make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunt. * And so will I renue my couenaunt with y, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde: that thou mayest thincke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thine awne confusyon no more: when I haue forgiuen the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xviij. Chapter.

The parable of the two Regies.

The worde of y Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: put forth y a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto y house of Israel, & saye: Thus sayeth y Lorde God: There came a great * Regie w greate wynges, yee, with a myghty longe bodye, & full of fethers of dyuerse coloures, vpo the mount of Libanus, & toke the hyest bryanch fro a Cedre tree, & brake of y toppe of his twygge, & carped it into y lade of Canaan, & set it in a cyte of marchantes. He toke also of the seade of the lande, & planted it in a feutefull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a wyllowe tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate bynestocke, but lowe by the grounde whose bryanches turned in to it selfe, and y rotes of it, were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, & spred out bryanches. But there was another Regie, a great one, which had greate wynges & many fethers: and beholde, y rotes of thys vyne had an hūger after him, & spred out his bryanches toward him, y he myght watce her with the orchard y he had planted. Neuertheles, it was planted vpo a good ground besyde greate waters: so y (by reason) it shulde haue brought out bryanches & frute, & haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake y therfore, thus sayeth y Lorde God: Shall this vyne prosper? Shall not his rotes be plucked oute, his frute be broken of, his grene bryanches, wither & fade awaye yee, without ether stryde arme of many people, shall it be plucked vpo y yrotes. Beholde, it was plated: shall it pspere therfore? Shall it not be dyed vpo y withered, yee, euen in y quynge out of his blossomes, as soone as y cast wide bloweth? Moreover, y worde of y Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Speake to y fro warde householde: knowe ye not, what these thynges do signifye? Tell the: Beholde, * y kynge of Babilon came to Ierusalem, & toke y kynge and his prynces, and ledde them to Babilon.

He toke of the kynges seide, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of him: The Prynces of the lande toke he with him also, that the lande myght be holden in subieccyon, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfill it. But he fell from him, & sent his Embassytours into Egypte y he myght haue horses and moche people. Shulde that prosper? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth soch thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God: He shall dye at Babilon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth, y made hym kynge: whose of he hath despyed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharaoh with his greates host & multitude of people, maynteyne him in the warre: when they cast up dyches, and set up bulwokes to destroye moche people. Forseyng he hath despyed p othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his hande ther vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

¶ Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, I wyll byng myne othe p he hath despyed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his awne head. * I wyll cast my net aboute him, and catch him in my parne. To Babylon will I carie him, there will I punte him, because of the greates offence that he made me. As for those that fle from him out of the host, they shall be slayne with the swerde. The residue shall be scattered towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll also take a brynche from an hye Cedre tree, and will set it, & take p vppermost twygge, p yet is but tendre, and plante it vpo an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon will I plante it: p it maye bringe forth twygges, & geue frute, and be a greates Cedre tree: so p all maner of foules maye bylde in it, & make their nestes vnder p shadow of his brynches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe p hye tree, and set the lowe tree vp: p I haue dyed by the grene tree, and made the drye tree to flozpye: Such I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The xviij. Chapter.

¶ The Lorde sayeth to every man that beareth his awne spynne. To him that amendeth, is saluacion promysed. Deeth is prophesied to the ryghtwylle, which turneth backe from the ryghtwylle.

¶ The worde of p Lorde came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by this comen prouerbe, p ye vse in the lade of Israel, sayinge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & p chyldres teth are set on edge: As truly as I lyue, sayeth p Lorde God, ye shall vse this byworde nomore in Israel.

¶ Beholde * all soules are myne. Lyke as p father is myne, so is p sonne myne also. The soule p spinneth, shall dye. * If a man be godly, & do the thinge p is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpo the hylls: he lyfeth not bys eyes vpo p foule Idols of Israel: he despyeth not his neyghbours wyfe: he medleth w no menstruous woman: he greueth no holp: he geueth his better his pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: * he parteth his mete w the hongry: he clotheb the naked: * he lendeth nothyng vpo vsury: he taketh nothyng ouer: he wythdraweth his hande from doynge wronge: he dealeth saythfully betwixte man & man: & walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & perfourmeth the saythfully: * This * xviij. a. is a ryghtuous man, he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ If he nowe gett a sonne, that is a murderer, a shedder of bloude: p he do one of these thynges * (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hylls: he despyeth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore & neddy: he robbeth & spoyleth: he geueth not p better his pledge agayne, he lyfeth vpo his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh more ouer. Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seynge he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, his bloude shall be vpon him.

¶ Nowe p this man gett a sonne also, that seeth all bys fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nether doth loch lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mostaynes: he lyfeth not bys eyes vpo p Idols of Israel: he despyeth not his neyghbours wyfe: he beareth no mā: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, ner robbeth eny mā: he dealeth his meate w the hongry: he clotheb p naked: he oppresleth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, ner any thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, & walketh in my commaundementes. This mā shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppresled & spoyled bys brother, and byd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is deed in his awne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherefore then shalde not this lone beare his fathers synne? Therefore: because p sonne hath done equyte & ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, & done them: therefore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that spinneth, shall dye. * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nether shall the father beare p sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of p ryghtuous shall be vpo him, & the wickednes of p wicked shall be vpo him self also. * But p ryghtwylly wyll turne awaye fro all his synnes p he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thinge p is equall and ryght: doubtles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes p he byd before, they shall not be thought vpo: but in his righteounes p he hath done, he shall lyue. * For haue I eny pleasure in p death of a synner, sayeth p Lorde God, but rather p he couerte, and lyue? Agayne: p p ryghtuous turne awaye fro his ryghtuousnes, and do iniquyte, accordyng to all p abhominacions, p the wicked mā doth: shall he lyue? All the ryghtuousnes p he hath done, shall not be thought vpo: but in p faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

¶ And yet ye saye: Cuth * p waye of p Lorde is not indifferent. Heare therefore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye ryght? Or, are not poure

Of Ezechiel

Ho. xlv.

¶ poure wayes rather wicked: * Wht a ryghtuous man turneth awaye from bys ryghtuousnesse, and medleth wyth vngodlynes: he must dye therin: pee, for the vngodlynes that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne: * when the wycked mā turneth awaye fro his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thinge which is equall and ryght: he shall saue his soule alpye. For in so moch as he remembreth him selfe, & turneth him from all the vngodlynes that he hath vled, he shall lyue and not dye.

¶ And yet sayeth the house of Israel: Cuth, the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vngodly? O ye house of Israel: Are not poure wayes rather vngodly? As for me, I wyll iudge euery man, accordyng to his wayes, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. * Wherefore, be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all your wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye fro you all poure vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: * make you new hertes and a newe spete. Wherefore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israel: seynge I haue no pleasure in the death of him p dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

¶ The captiuite of Iacobabaz & of Jehoachin is signified by the yrons whelkes, & by the yron. He setteth out p prosperite of the cite of Ierusalem that is past, & the myschance therof that is present.

¶ But thou sonne of man moune p for the princes of Israel, & saye. Wherefore laye thy mother p lyonnesse amonge the lyons, & norshed her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyd. It learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The brathen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

¶ Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and coforte was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him: which wente amonge the lyons, & became a scarce lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cyties waste. In so moch that p whole lande & euery thinge therin, were vtterly desolate, thow p very voyce of his roaringe.

¶ Then came the heathen together on euery syde oute of all countrees agaynst hym, layed their nettes for hym, and toke hym in their pytte. * So they bolde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kyng of Babylon: which put him in pison, that his voyce shulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy bloude, planted by the watersyde: her frutes and brynches are growe out of many waters, her stalkes were so stroge, that me myght haue made staues therof for officers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

¶ So when men sawe that she exceeded the byrgth & multitude of her brynches, she was rote out in displeasure, and cast downe to p grounde. The East wynde dyed by her frute, her stronge stalkes were broke of, withered and bent in the fyze. But now she is plated in the wyldernes, in a drye & thurstye ground. And there is a fyze gone out of her stalkes, which hath bent by her brynches and her frute: so that she hath no mo stroge stalkes, to be staues for officers. This is a pyteous and miserable thinge.

The xx. Chapter.

¶ The Lorde denyth that he will answer them when they praye, for the offence of vngodlynes which he hath oblected. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captiuite, w the wood that shal be bent is signified the burnynge of Ierusalem.

¶ The viij. yeare the x. daye of the x. month, * it happend, p certayne of p elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, & sat them downe by me.

¶ Then came p worde of p Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of mā: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Are ye come hyther to aske eny thyng at me? As truly as I lyue (sayeth p Lorde) I will geue you no answer. Wilt p not reprove the (thou sonne of mā) wilt thou not reprove them? Shewe them p abhominacions of their fore fathers, & tell them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hande vpon the seide of the house of Jacob, & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Pee, when I lyfte vpo myne hande ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde poure God, euen in the dape p lyfte vpo myne hande ouer the, to bringe them out of the lande of Egypte, into a lande p I had prouyded for the, which floweth with mylke & honny, & is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other. Then sayde I vnto them: * Cast awaye euery mā the abhominacions that he hath before him, and despye not poure selues with the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde poure God.

¶ But they rebelled agaynst me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast awaye euery man the abhominacions of bys eyes, and to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure myne indignacyon ouer them, & to satisfie my wrath vpon them: pee, euen in the nyddest of p lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnglowed before p heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whō I shewed my selfe vnto them, & I wolde bringe them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe whē I had carryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernes: I gaue them them my commaundementes, & shewed them my lawes, * which whoso kepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixt me & them, & therby to knowe, that I am the Lorde, which halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernesse, they wolde not walke in my commaundementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes (which whoso kepeth shalde lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indignacion vpon the, & to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heathen, from the whych I had carryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse, that I wolde not brynge them in to the lande, which I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and honny, & is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walcked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their herte was gone after their ydoles. Neuerthelesse, myne eye spared them, so that I wolde not utterly slaye the, and consume them in the wyldernesse. Wherefore, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statutes of youre fore fathers, kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not your selues with their ydoles, for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbothes: * for they are a token betwixt me & you, & ye maye knowe howe I am the Lorde your God. Notwithstandynge, their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walcked not in my statutes they kepte not my lawes to fulfyll the (which he & doth shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vpon the in the wyldernesse. Neuerthelesse, I withdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the heathen, before whome I had brought the forth. I left vpon myne hande ouer the also in the wyldernesse, & I wolde scatere them amonge the nacions, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and left vpon their eyes to their fathers ydoles. Wherefore I gaue the also commaundementes not good, & lawes thowowe the whych they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed the in their awne giftes: (wher I appointed for my selfe all their fyrr bozne) to make the desolate: & they myght knowe, howe I am the Lorde.

Therefore (thou sonne of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God) Welyde all thys, youre fore fathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to geue the, when they sawe euery hye hyll & all the thicke trees: they made there their offspriges, & prouoked me with their oblacions, makinge swete sanoures there, and powred out their drinckoffspriges. Then I asked the what is this hyll altare & ye go to it? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto this daye. Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vncleane as poure soze fathers & comynge whoredome also with their abhominacions. In all youre ydoles, where vnto ye brynge your oblacions, & and to whose honoure ye burne your chyldren: ye, defyle your selues, euen vnto this daye: howe darre ye the come, and aske any questyon at me? O ye householde of Israel: As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) ye get no answer of me: and as for the thynge that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we will be as the heathen, & do as other people in the lande, wood and stone will we worshippe.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I myselfe will rule you with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme, & with indignacion powred out ouer you: and will brynge you out of the nacions and landes, wherin ye are scatred, and gather you together with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme & with indignacion poured out vpon you: and will brynge you in to the wyldernesse of the people, & there I will reason with you face to face. Lyke as I punished youre fore fathers in the wyldernesse, so will I punyche you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I will brynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenante. The forsakers also and the transgressours will I take from amonge you, & brynge them out of the lande of your habitacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in it: & you maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

So to nowe then (sayeth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel * Every one of you folowe your ydoles, and serue them, seynge yereful to obeye me. And my holy name shall ye nomore vnhalowe with your offspriges and ydoles. For vpon my holy hyll, when vpon the hye hyll of Israel sayth the Lorde God, shall all the house of Israel and all that is in the lande, worshippe me: * and in the same place will I fauoure the, and there will I requyre your deane offspriges and the fyrrspriges of your oblacions, with all youre holy thynge.

I will accepte youre swete sauour, wher I brynge you from the nacions, and gather you together out of the landes, wherin ye be scatred: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that that I am the Lorde, which haue brought you in to the lande of Israel: yee, in to the same lande, that I swore to geue vnto youre fore fathers: There shall ye call to remembraunce your awne wayes & all your ynaginacions, wherin ye haue bene despyled: * and ye shall iudge youre selues worthy to be destroyed, for all youre wickednes, & ye haue done. And ye shall knowe, & I am the Lorde: wher I entreate you after my name, not after youre wicked wayes, nor accordinge to youre corrupte workes: O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward the south, & speake to the south wynde, & saye to the wood toward the south: heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will kindle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shall be able to quench this flame, but all that loke from the south to the north, shall be brennt therein: & all flesh shall see, that I the Lorde haue kindled it, so that no man maye quenche it. Then sayde I: O Lorde, they will saye of me: * Cuth, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The xxi. Chapter.

The thirtieth the wordes, & is to saye, deduce: upon to the city of Iherusalem. He sheweth the fall of Iherusalem, & the destruction of the chydren of Ammon. After the slaughter of the, at the last the Lorde threatneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor, bynt selfe.

The worde of the Lorde came to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Iherusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophete agaynst the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I will vpon the, & will drawe my swerde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghteous & the wycked. Seynge then & I will rote out of the both the ryghteous and wycked, therefore shall my swerde go out of his sheath agaynst all flesh fro the north to the south: & all flesh maye knowe howe I the Lorde haue drawen my swerde out of the sheath, & it shall not be put in againe.

Wherefore (thou sonne of man) & thy loynes crack withall, ye mourne bitterly for the their presence. And yf they saye, wherfore mournest thou? Then tell the: for the tidynge that cometh, at the whych all hertes shall melt, all handes shall be latten downe, all stomaches shall faynte, & all knees shall ware feble. Beholde, it cometh & shall be fulfilled, sayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophete, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: speake. The swerde, the swerde is sharpened & well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured that it maye be bryght. Shall we then make myghte? Agest & tribe.

of my sonne it is gone for the destroyinge all trees. He hath putt his swerde to the dryghtynge, & good holde maye be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened & dryght, that it maye be geuen in to the hande of the manslayer.

Crye (thou sonne of man, & howle, for this swerde shall smyte my people, & all the culers in Israel) my people shall be fearede thowowe this swerde. Smyte therefore thou vpon thy ryghte, for it is gone for the to make a sepall. And what a tryall shall this be, wher eue my scepter shall be repproued? It shall not be sayeth the Lorde God. Prophecy & sonne of man, & smyte thynne handes together: make the swerde two edged, & ye make it the edged, that manslayers swerde, & swerde of the greafe slaughter, wher shall smyte the; euen in their preuychambres: to make them abashed & saynt at the hertes, & in all gared to make some of them fall. I haue geue that fearfull swerde. O howe bryght and sharpe is it, howe well dryght & mete for the slaughter. Set the some place alone, ether vpon the ryght hande or on the lefte, wherther so eue thy face turneth. I will smyte my handes together also & satisfye my wrathfull indignacion: Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne sayinge. Thou sonne of man, make & two stretes, & the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of one kynges lande. And chole & a place, at the heade of the strete chole out a corner. Make & a strete, & the swerde maye come toward the habith of the Ammonites, & to the stronge cytie of Iherusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turnynge of the waye, at the head of the two stretes: * to aske counsell at the sothe sayers, castinge the lottes w his arrowes, to aske counsell at the ydole, and to loke in the lyner. But & so the sayinge shall poynte to the ryght syde vpon Iherusalem, & he maye set men of warre, to smyte it w a greafe noyse, to crye out Alar!, to sett batell rammes agaynst the gates, to graue vpon dyches, & to make bulworkes.

Neuertheles, as for the sothe sayinge, they shall holde it but for vanite. And came the as those to whome they haue often sworn. Notwithstandynge he shall remembre their wyckednesse, so that by ryght they must be taken & wonne. Therefore sayeth the Lorde God. For so much as ye poure selues thewe your offence, and haue opened youre wickednesse, so that in all youre workes men maye see your synnes: therefore as ye come to remembrance, and ye shall be taken by violence.

Thou shamefull wycked guyde of Israel whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the garland, & put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is ble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Puny the, puny the, yee, puny the the will I, & bestrope them: and that shall not be fulfilled vntill he come, to whom the iudgement be- longeth, & to whom I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophete, & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to schyld of Am- mon, & to their blasphemy, speake thou: The swerde, & swerde, is drawen forthall redy to the slaughter, & scoured to consume that it glistereth (because thou hast looked out va- nities, and propheted lies) & it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vn- godly, whych be slayne: whose daye came, whan their wyckednesse was full.

Shulde I put it by agayne? Naye I wyll puny the, in p lade where thou wast noyshed & bozne, and poure my indignacyd vpo the and wyll blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and delouer p vnto cruel peo- ple, which are lerned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy bloude shall be shed in p lande, that thou mayest be put out of reme- braunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

The xxij. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem the man slaughterer, & denier of his honour vnto their fathers & mothers, & other wyckednesse. Of the wycked doctrine of the false prophetes & priests, & of their vnfaceable couetousnes. The example of rulers. The wyckednesse of the people.

M Discover, the worde of p Lorde came vnto me, & sayde: thou sonne of man, wyll thou not reprove thys bloud- thursty cyster? Shew them their abhomi- nacyons, and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O thou cyster, that sheddest bloude in p myddest of p, that thy tyne maye come also: & makest the Idoles to desyle the wythall. Thou hast made thy selfe gylty, in p bloude & thou hast shed: and desyled the in the Idoles, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, & made the tyne of thy peaces to come. Therefore wyll I make the to be confounded amonde the heathen, & to be despyled in all the lades, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laugh the to scozne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, & art full of myschefe. Beholde, the ru- lers of Israel haue brought euery man hys power, to shed bloude in the. * In the haue they despyled father & mother, in p haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they ve- red the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyled my Sanctuary, and vnhalo- wred my Sabbath. Murthurers are there in the, that shedde bloude, & ate vpo the hylls, and in the they vse abhominacyon.

* In p haue they discovered their fathers shame, in the haue they vexed wem in their sickness. Euery man hath deale shamefully with his neyghbours wyfe, & abhominably desyled hys daughter in lawe. In the hath euery man forced his awne syster, euen his fathers daughter: yee, * gyftes haue bene re- ceaued in the, to thede bloude: * Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppres- sed thy neyghbours by extorcyon, and for- gotten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I haue smyten my handes vpon thy coue- tousnesse, that thou hast used, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene shed in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy handes de- fende the selues, in the tyne p I shall byynge vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll byynge it also to passe. * I wyll scat- tle the amoge the heathen, & strowe the aboute in the landes, & wyll cause thy fylthynesse to ceasse out of the yee, and thou shalt be thyne awne inheritaunce & not myne in the syghe of the heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israel is turned to dross. All they p shul- de be brasse, tyne, yron, & leat & are in p fyre become dross. Therefore, thus sayeth p Lorde God, for so moche as ye all are turned in to dross, beholde: I wyll byynge pou together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as spluer, brasse, yron, tyne and leade are put together in the for- nace, and the fyre blowe there vnder to melt them. Euen so wyll I gather pou, put pou in together, and melt pou in my wrath & indi- gnacyon. I wyll byynge pou together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder pou, that ye maye be melted therein.

Lyke as the spluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therein: that ye maye knowe, howe that I the Lorde haue powred my wrath vpon pou.

And the worde of p Lorde came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vnclene lande, which is not rayned vpo in the daye of p cruell wrath: * thy pro- phetes that are in the, are swozne together to deuoure soules, lyke as a roatynge Lyon, p luyeth by his praye. They creeue ryches and good, & make many wyddowes in the. Thy prestes breake my lawe, and desyle my Sanctuary. * They put no differene betwene the holpe & vnholpe, nether discerne betwene p cleane & vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my sabbathes, & I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauynge wolues, to shed bloude, and to destroye sou- les, for their awne couetous lucre. * As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempe- red claye, they se vanytyes, and prophete lyes vnto the, sayinge: p Lorde God sayeth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken. The people in the lande vse wycked extorcyon & robbery. They were the pooze & nedye and * oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght. And I sought in the lande for a man, that wolde make by the hedg, and set him selfe in the gappe gappe before me in the landes behalfe, & p shulde not be corrupted: but I could fynde none. Therefore, I will poure out my cruell dyspleasure vpo the, & burne the in the fyre of my wrath: they a wne wayes wyll I re- copece vpo the: heades saith p Lorde God.

The xxiii. Chapter.

Of the conuersion, that is to saye, of the Idolatrye of Samaria and Jerusalem, vnder the names of Whor- lach & Wholbah. In comparayson of Samaria he shew- eth p fornication of Jerusalem to p slyther, the de- struction of Jerusalem is propheted. The aduertyse of harte whorlch is founde oute. The destruction.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayenge: Thou sonne of ma, the re were two wem, & had one mo- ther. These (whē they were yoge) begane to playe p harlottes * in Egypt. There were they: brestes brosed, & pappes of they: maydenhead did p Egi- ptias destroye. The eldest of them was cal- led Wholah & her yogest syster Wholbah. These two were my wyues, & bare sonnes & daughters. They names were Samaria, & p wne Wholah: & Jerusalem, & was Whol- bah. As for Wholah she begane to go a who- ring, whē I had take her to me. * She was sett on fyre vpon her louers p Alirians as her neyghours which had to do w her: euen p prices & Lordes p were deckte i costly arape fayre ponge men, lusty ryders of hoxses.

Thus thorow her whordome, she cleued vnto all the ponge men of Aliria. Yee, she was madd vpo the, & desyled her selfe w all they: Idols. Nether ceased she fro p forni- cacyon, p she vscd w the Egyptians: for in her youth they laye w her, they brosed the brestes of her maydenhead, & poured they: whordome vpo her. Wherefore, * I delouer- red her to the handes of her louers, eue the Alirians, whom she so loued. These disco- uered her shame, toke her sonnes & daugh- ters, & slewe her w p swerd: An euil name gat she of all people, and they punished her.

* Her syster Wholbah sawe this, and de- stroyed her selfe w inordynate loue, more then she, & exceded her syster in whordome. * She loued p Alirians (which also laye w her) namely, p prices & greute lordes, & we- re clothed w al maner of gorgeous apparell all lusty hoxme & fayre ponge perlonnes.

Then I sawe, that they both were desy- led a lyke. But she increased spyl i whordo- me, for when she sawe me paynted vpo the wall, p ymages of the Caldees sett forth w fresh coulours, w fayre gyddes about the & goodly bonettes vpo they: heades, lokyn- ge all lyke pynces (after the maner of the Babylonys and Chaldees in they: awne lande) where they be bozne) immediatly, as soone as she sawe the, she bent in loue vpo them, and sente messanngers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Now when the Babylonys came to her, they laye with her and desyled her with they: whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from the, * her whordome and shame was discovered and sene: then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Where thelesse, she vscd her whor- dome euer the longer the more, and remem- bred the dayes of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot i the lande of Egypt: * she bent in lust vpon them, whose fleshe was lyke the fleshe of Asses, and they: seide lyke the seide of hoxses. Thus thou hast renned p fylthynesse of the youth, when thy louers brosed thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egypte.

Therefore (O Wholbah) thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will rayse vp thy louers (w whom thou hast satysfied thy lust) agayst the, and gather them together roude about the: namely the Babylonys, and all the Chaldees, rulers, mightye me & tyrautes, w all the Alirias: all ponge & fayre louers: pynces and Lordes, knyghtes and gentel- men, which be all good hoxme. These shall come vpon the with hoxses, charrettes, and a greute multitude of people: which shall be harnessed aboute the on euery syde, w brest- plates, shyldes & helmettes. I wyll punish the before them, yee, they them selues shall puny the, accordynge to they: awne iud- gemēt. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall thorow the swer- de. They shall cary awaye thy sonnes and daughters, and the resydue shall be bent in the fyre. They shall strype the out of thy clothes, and cary thy costly Jewels awaye with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fyl- thynesse and whordome, which thou hast brought oute of the lade of Egypt: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes nomore after them, and cast thy mynde nomore vpon Egypte. For thus sayeth p Lorde beholde I will delouer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest, yee, euen into the han- des of them, with whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust, whych shall deale cruelly wyth the. All thy labour shall they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthype whordome shall come to lyght. All these thynges shall happē vnto the, because of thy whordome which thou hast used amonge the Gentylls wyth whole Idols thou hast desyled thy self. Thou hast walcked in the waye of thy syster, therefore wyll I geue p her cup- pe in thy hande.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalt be druncke of

The prophecy

Dryncke of thy systers cuppe, both depe and farre so euer it be to þe botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derisyon, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkenness and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cuppe of destruc-cion and wastynge: the same shalt thou dryncke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges, yet, thou shalt eat by the broken peces of it, & so teare thynne a wyne brestes: For euē I haue spoken it sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ Therefore, thus sayeth ¶ Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast forgotten me, ad cast me aside behinde the, so beare now thyne a wne fylthines and whoredome. The Lorde sayde mozeouer vnto me: Thou sone of ma wilt ¶ not reprove Wholah ad Wholihah?
Shewe them theyr abominacions: namely that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, & slayned theyr handes w bloude: yee, euen w theyr ydoles haue they cōmytted aduoutry * and offered them by the fyre theyr alowne children (to be deuoured) who they had hozne vnto me. Yee, & thys haue they done vnto me also: they haue despyled my Sanctua-ry i that same dape, & haue unhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne theyr children for theyr Idols, they came the same dape into my Sanctuary to despile it.
Lo, thys haue they done in my house: Wescy-de all thys, thou hast sent thy messaungers for men out of farre countrees: & when they came, thou hast bathed & paynted thyne eyes w colours, trymmed & set forth thy self of ¶ best faillon: thou sattest vpo a goodly bed and a table spred before the: wherupo thou hast set myne * incense and myne oyle.

Then was there great chere with her to optayne peace, and though with those men many inē came, yet were ther also brought, men of Sabba from the wilderness: which gaue the bracelettes vpon theyr handes, & set glorious crowones vpon theyr heades: and I sayde vnto her: that seynge she was strpht in age in her whoredomes: now shall her fornycatiōs come to an end w her. And they wente into her as vnto a comē harlot Eue so wēt they. (I say) to Wholah & Who libah those fylthy women. W all ye floue vertue & ryghteousnes, iudge the, punishe the: * as aduoutrers & murderers ought to be iudged & punished. For they are breas-thers of wedlocke, & the bloude is i theyr hādes. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde God I wil brige a greate multitude of people vpō the, & make the be scatred & spoyled: these shall stone the, & gore the w theyr swear-des. They shall slaye theyr sonnes & daughters, and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

Thus wpll I destrope all soch fylthyness out of the land : that all women maye learne, not to do after your vncleennes.

And so they shall laye your febleynes vpon youre owne selues, and ye shall be punished for the synnes that ye haue comytted with your Idols: and ye shall knowe þ I am the Lorde God.

The. xliiii. Chapter.
 The proude the spyngge of Iherusalem by a parable of a selyngge poete. The parable of the chylde wyfe being deed, which he after expoundeth.

In the nyenth peare, i þ tenth mo-neth, the tenth daye of the mo-neth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayenge. O thou sonne of mā, wypte vp the name of thys daye, pec, euen the houre of this present daye: when the kynge of Babylon sett hym selfe agāst Jerusalem. Shew that obstinate houthol-de * a parable, and speake vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lorde God; Gett the a * potte, sett it on, and powze water into it: put all þ peces together in it, all the good peces: the loyn & the shulder, and fyl it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, & an hea-pe of bones withall: let it boyle well, & lett the bones sethe well therein. With that sayde the Lorde God on thys maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy ctyle of the pot, wherupon the rustynes hāgeth, & is not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there neede not lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Vpon a playne dyce stone hath the powzed it, & not vpon the grounde, þ it myght be covered w dust. And therfore haue I letten her powze her bloude vpon a playne dyce stony rocke, because it shulde not be hyd, and þ I myght bynge my wrothfull indignacyon & vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherefore, thus sayth the Lord God: M wo be vnto þe bloud thurstye cyte, for who euen I my selfe will make a grett fyre and sett moche woode, and kyndell the fyre and seath the flcashe, and spice the pott, so that the very bones shall be bzent. Moreover I will sett the pott empty vpon the coles, so þe his metall shall be bzent & molten also for heate, & þe fylthyness of yt shall be molten in yt, & þe drossle of yt shall be consumed. Thou to liest great payne thyse to despyle thy selfe.
And yt will not be purged fro þe exceddinge drossle in yt: but thorow fyre shall þe drossle of yt be purged. In thy fylthyness euen in thy myscheuous dedes, þe dost cōtinue & because thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I haue clensted the, but thou art not clensted.
Thou shalt not be poured fro thyne vncle-nesse, tyll I haue powred my wrothful dygnacio vpo þe. Que I þe Lord haue so deny-ed. See, it is come therto all redy, þe I wyll do it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be treated: but accordige to thy wayes & ymaginaciōs, þe shalt be punished, sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord

the Lord came vnto me, sayēg: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take a waue p^{le}ca-ture of thine eyes wth a plague: yet shalt thou neither mourne, ner wepe, ner waite thy chekes therfore: I mayest mourne by thy self alone, but vse no deadly lamentaciō. holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes v^{pp} thy feete, couer not thy face, & eat no mourners bread. So I spake vnto þ people by times in þ moornyng, & at euē my wyfe dyed: then v^{pp} þ next morowe, I dyd as I was coma-unded. And þ people sayd vnto me, wilt þ not tell vs what thys signifyeth towarde vs, for this þ doest for our sake. I answered them, þ worde of þ Lorde came vnto me sayēg: Tell þ house of Israell, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I will suspēde my sanctuary: euen the glory of your power, þ pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eat no mourners bread: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpo your heabes, & shoes vpo your fete. Ye shall nether mourne ner wepe, but, i your synnes ye shall be sorowfull, & one re- pēte with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shew token. For loke as he hath done, so (whē this cometh) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, y I am y Lorde God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr power, theyr lope & honour, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr lyfes: namelp, theyr sonnes and daughters, shall not this be knowen? Then shall there one escape, and come vnto y, for to shew the. In y daye shall thy mouth be opened to him, which is escaped, y thou mayest speake, and be nomore dōmic. Yec, and thou shalt be theyr shew tokē that they maye knowe, howe that I am y Lord.

The. xxv. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lord vpon the Countes of Ammon, which reformed at the fall of Iherusalem. Agaynst Ammon with Syria, Agaynst Idumea. Agaynst the Idhyritynes.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst the* Ammonytes, pro-phete vpon them, and saye vnto the Am-monytes: heare the worde of y^e Lord God.
Thus sayeth y^e Lord God: For somoch as thou speakest ouer my sanctuary. A, ha, I trowe it be nowe suspended: & ouer the land of Israel, I trowe it be nowe desolat, yee, & ouer y^e house of Iuda, I trowe they be now led awaye prelsonners: Behold, I will deli-uer the to the people of y^e east, y^e they maye haue y^e in possession: these shall set they^r castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, & dypncke wth thy milcke. As for Ra-bath, I will make of it a stall for camels, and of Ammon a shepesholde: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth Y Lord God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, & stamped with thy fete, yee, reioysed i thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despite:
beholde, I will stretch out myne hāde ouer the also, ad delpyuer the, to be spoyled of the heathen, and rote the out from amonge the people, and cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes: yee, I will make the to be layed waste, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus saith the Lord God: For so much as * Moab & Seir do saye: As for y^e house of Iuda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be: Therefore beholde, I will open y^e syde of Moab, & take awaye theyr strength, their cy-ties & these coastes of theyr lāde, which are y^e pleasures of y^e cōtre. As namely. Bethielimumoth, Baalimeon & Cariathaim: the se will I open vnto the of the east, & they maye fall vpon y^e Ammonites: & will geue it the in possession: so y^e the Ammonites shall nomore be had in remembraunce amonge y^e heathen Ent thus will I punish Moab also, that they maye know, how y^e I am the Lorde.

Reuerent, thus sayeth the Lord God: Because that * EDOM hath auenged and called hym selfe vpon the house of Iuda, ad haue done great offence & auenged hi selfe vpo the therfore, thus sayeth the Lord: I will reach out myne hande vpon EDOM, & take a waye man & beast out of it. From Theman vnto Deda will I make it desolate, they shall be slayne w the swerde. * Therefore my people of Israel will I auenge me agayne vpo Edo they shall haue him, accordig to my wrath and indignacyon, so that they shall knowe my vengeance, sayeth the Lord God.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so much as the *Philistines haue done this: namely taken vengeance with despytfull stomac hes, and of an olde euill will set them selues to destrope. Therefore, thus sayeth y^e Lord God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hand ouer y^e Philistynes, & destrope y^e destroyer, and cause all the remnaüt of the see coast, to perishe. A great vengeaunce wyll I take vp^{on} the, and punishe them cruelly: y^e they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord, which haue auenged me of them.

* because that Tyre hath spoken vnto Ieru-salem: A ha, now I trowe the portes of the people be broken, and we turned vnto me, for now the isle is destroyed I shall be killed.
Pee, therefore, sayeth the Lord God: Beholde I, Tyre, I will vnto the, I will bringe a great multitude of people agaynst the, lyke as when the see aryseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towres: I will scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: pee, as the dyenge place, where the fysshers haue by theyr nettes by the see syde. But I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God. The Gerys shall spoyle her: her daughters vnto the felde shall perishe in the swearde, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I will bringe hither Nabuchodonosor (which is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynge) fro the North vpon Tyre: with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a great multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lād, shall be slaye with the sweard: but agaynst the, he shall make bullworke and grauel vnto the aboute the, and lyft vp his shilde agaynst the. His synners and batelrāmes shall be prepared for thy walles, and his weapons breake downe thy towres.
The dust of his horses shall couer the, they shall be so many: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen, charettes and wheles when he cometh to thy portes, as men do into an open cytie. With the bowes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe all thy streets.

He shall slaye the people with the sweard, and breake downe the pylers of thy strength.
They shall waste awaye thy ryches, and spoyl thy marchaundise. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymber and foundacions shall they cast in the water.

* Thus will I bringe the melody of thy son-ges, and the voyce of thy minstrelly to an ende, so that they shall nomore be herde. I will make a bare stone of the, pee, a dyenge place for nettes, and thou shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God: thus hath the Lord God spoken concerning Tyre. The fles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the crye of the slayng, thou shalt be murdered in the. All kynge of the see shall come downe from theyr seates regall: they shall laye awaye theyr robes, and put of theyr costly clothyng. Pee, with trembling shall they be clothed, they shall lyt vpon the ground: they shall be afrayd at thy foden fall, and be abashed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: * O thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom all men stood in feare.

How arte thou nowe so utterly destroyed?
Now at the tyme of thy fall thou shalt be of the fles, pee, and the fles them selues, shall stand in feare at thy ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: when I make the a desolate citty (as other ctyties be, that no mā dwelle in) and when I bringe the depe vpon the, that greate waters maye couer the. Then will I cast the downe vnto the, that descende into the pitte: vnto a people that hath bene longe dead, and set the in a lande that is beneth, ly-ke the olde wilderness, with them which go downe to theyr graues, so that no mā shall dwell more in the. And I will make the to be nomore in honour, in the lande of the lyninge. I will make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore, sayeth the Lord God.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The prophete is moued to bewaile the desolacion of Tyre. He setteth out the pryde of Tyre for the haunte of marchaundes there.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayenge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte vnto Tyre, * Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, which art a porte of the see, thou occupiest with moche people, and many fles: thus speaketh the Lord God: O Tyre, thou hast sayd: what, I am a noble cytie thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of cypres trees of the mount Sanyr, and Libanus haue they take Cedre trees, to make the malkes:
and the Okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy boordes haue they made of puerp, and of costly wood out of the yle of Cethim.
Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle worke out of the lād of Egypt, to hange vnto thy mast: and thy bagges of yelow splyke purple, out of the fles of Elisah. They of Sydon and Arvad were thy maryners, and they of Tyre were thy shippmasters. The eldest and wyfdest at Gebal were they, and meded and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see with theyr shypmen occupied theyr marchaundies in the. The Perses, Lydians and phutēs were in thyne host, and helped the to fght: these hanged by theyr shildes and helmettes with the, these sett forth theyr bewty. They of Arvad were with thyne hoost rounde aboute thy walles, and the Pigmenias were thy watchmen vnto thy towres, these hanged by theyr quivers rounde aboute thy walles, and made the maruelous goodly.

Charlis occupied with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne and lead, and made thy markett greate. Iauan, Tubal, and Mesek were thy marchaundes, which brought the me, and ornaments of metall for thy occupieng. They of the house of Thogarima brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marke, horse, horsemen and mules: They of * Dedan were thy marchaundes: and many other fles that occupied with the, brought the weathers, Elephāt bones and Peacocks for a present. The Siriās occupied with the, because of thy diuerse worches, and increased thy marchaundies, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worcke, with whyte lynen cloth, with splycke, and with crystall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, brought vnto thy markettes, wheat, of Ginnith and panag, balme, hony, oyle, and trypacle. Damascus also bled marchaundes with the, in the best wyne of Helbon and wolle: because thy occupieng was so greate, and thy wares so many, Dan, Iauan and Menfall haue brought vnto thy markettes, yronredy made, with Cassia and Calam, accordyng to thyne occupieng. Dedan occupied with the in sayre sayestre worcke and culshyns.

Arabia and al the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers and goates.

The marchaundes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the, in all costly spy-ces, in all pprecious stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy markettes. Harā, Chene and Eden, the marchaundes of Saba, Aliria, and Chelmad, were all doers with the, and occupied with the. In costly ray-ment, of yelow splycke and nedle worcke (very pprecious, and therefore packte and bounde together with ropes,) Pee, and in Cedre woodde, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Charlis were the chefe of thy occupieng.

Thus thou art full, and in greate wo-ship, euen in the myddest of the see. Thy robbers shall bringe the into grett waters, and caste winde shall ouerbear the into the myd-dest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaundies, thy ryches, thy maryners, thy shippmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupiers (that brought the thy-nges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: pee, and all thy coyns shall perishe in the myddest of the see: in the dape of thy fall.
The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of thy shypmen. All whyp men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr boates, and set the selues vpon the lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce because of the and make a lamentable cry. They shall cast dust vnto theyr heades, and lye downe in the alfies. They shall haue them selues, and put lacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorrow, and heuy lamentacion, pee, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is: When thy wares and marchaundies came fro the sees, yganest al people ynough. The kinges of the earth hast thou made ryche, thou the multitude of thy wares and occupieng.

But thou art now cast downe in to the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell in the fles are abashed at the, and all theyr kynge are afrayed, pee, theyr faces haue chaunged coulour.
The marchaundes of the nacrons wondre at the. In that thou art so cleane brought to naught, and comest nomore vp.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God agaynst the kynge of Tyre for his pryde. Daniel the prophete is moued to bewaile the lyp of Tyre. The worde of the Lord agaynst Sydon. The Lord promyseth that he will gather together the children of Israel.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayenge: thou sonne of mā, tell the prince of Tyre: Thus sayeth the Lord God, because thou hast a proude hert and hast sayd: * I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see lyke a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet standest in thy-ne a wone conceyte, that thou arte God: Be-holde, I thynkest thy selfe a wyser then * Daniel, that there is no secretes hydden from the. With thy wysdome and thy vnderstandyng, thou hast gotten the great wel-thynges, and gathered treasure of syluer and golde. With thy greate wysdome and occupyeng, hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate ryche, thy herte is proude.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God:
For so moch as thou hast lyft vp thyne hert as though thou were God: Beholde, I will bringe ennemyes vnto the, euen the tyrantes of the heathē: these shall drawe out their swardes vpon thy bewty and wysdome, and shal despyle thy glory. They shall cast the do-we to the pitte, so that thou shalt dye in the myddest of the see, as they that be slayne.
Let se, yf thou wilt saye then (before them that slaye the) I am God: where as thou art but a man and not God, in the hādes of the that slaye the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcised in the handes of the enemyes for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of mā, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell hym: Thus sayeth the Lord God: thou art a scale of a lyknesse, full of wysdome and excellēt bewty. Thou hast bene ckte with al maner of pprecious stones: with Ruby, Topas, Crystall, Jacynth, Onix,

Moreouer, it happened in the eleventh yeare, the first daye of the thirde moneth, & the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaos the kynge of Egypte, and to al his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatnesse? Beholde, I was like a Cedre tre vpon the mount of Lyba-nus with sayre braunches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hye. His toppe reached vnto the clowdes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rounde aboute the rotes of hym rane there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therefore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thow the multitude of waters & he sent from him, he optayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gedyed all the bestes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Sayre & beutiful was he in his greynes & in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode by the great waters. No Cedre tre myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunt garde of God, there was no fyre tre lyke his braunches, & play-ne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.
All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto him in his beuty, so fayre and goodly had I made hym w the multitude of his braunches. In so moch that all the trees in the pleasaunt garde of God had enuy at hym. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: for so moch as he hath lyft vp him selfe so hye, and stretched his toppe into the clowdes, and seinge his hert is proude in his hyghnesse. I wyll deliuer hym into the handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, which shall rote him out. Accordynge to his wyckednesse wyll I cast hy awaye, & enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghty men of the heathen shall so scatce him that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in all valleyes: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thow out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, ad forsake hym.
When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall flyt vpon hym, and all wyld beastes of the felde shall go aboute. Amonge his braunches: so that from hence forth, no tre in the water shall attayne to his highnesse, nor reach his toppe vnto the clowdes, nether shall any tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I will cause a lamentacion to be made, I will couer the depe vpon him, I will stanch his floudes, ad the great waters shall be restrayned. I shall cause Lybanus to be sorowfull for his sake, ad all the trees of the felde shall be smytte. I will make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fall, when I cast him downe to hell with them that de-scende into the pytte. All the trees of Eden, with all the cholen and best trees of Lyba-nus, yee, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitacyons: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slay-ne with the swearde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To who shall thou be lykened, that art so gloryous and greace, among the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircumcised, w them & be slayne w the swearde. Euen thus is it w Pharao & all his people, sayeth the Lord God.

The xxxii. Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to bewaile Pharaos the kynge of Egypt. He prophesyeth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt thow the kynge of Babylion.

In the eleventh yeare, & first daye of the twelue month, & the word of the Lord came vnto me sayeng: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacyon vpon Pharaos king of Egypt, & saye vnto him: thou art reputed as a lyon of the heathen, & as a whal-fynge. Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete and stapest in theyr floudes. Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyll sprede my net ouer the, namely, a greace multitude of people: these shall drye & ito my parne, for I wyll cast the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye flyt vpon the. I will geue all the bestes of the felde prouche of the. Thy flesh wyll I cast vpon the hylls, and fyll the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lade with the aboundance of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the ryuers shall be full of thy bloude. When thou art put out, I will couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will sprede a cloude ouer the sunne, ad the moone shall not geue her light. All the lightes of heauē wyll I put out ouer the, & byg dar-kenes vpon thy lade, sayeth the Lord God.
I will trouble the hertes of many people, when I byng thy destruccio among the heathen & countrees, whom I knowest not. Yet, I will make many people w theyr kinges so afrayed thow the, & theyr heare shall stande vp, when I shake my sweard at theyr faces. Sodenly shall they be astonied, eue-ry man in hym selfe, at the daye of thy fall.
For

For thus sayeth the Lord God, the king of Babylons swearde shall come vpon the,
with the swerdes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty amonge the Gentyles shall waste the proude pompe of Egypte, & byng downe all her people. All the catell also of Egypte wyll I destroye, & they shall come nomore vpon the waters: so that nether mas fore ne beastes clawe, shall sterc the any more. The wyll I make their waters depe, & cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayeth the Lord God. When I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countre with all that is therein, shall be layde waste, & when I smyte all them which dwell in it, that they may knowe, that I am the Lord. This is my mounyng, that the daughters of the heathen shall make: yee, a sorow & lamentacion shall they take vp, vpon Egypte, and all her people, sayeth the Lord God.

In the xii. yeare, the xv. daye of the mo-neth, came the word of the Lord vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man, take vp a la-mentacion vpon the people of Egypte, & cast the downe, yee, them I saye, & the myghty people of the heathen also, euen with the that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe into the graue. Downe (how sayre so euer be) & laye the with the vncircumcised. Amonge those & be slayne with the swearde, shall they lye. To the swerde is the all redy deliuered: therefore pluck downe to the grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghty worthyes shall speake to him out of hell & to his helpers, & be gone downe & lye vncircumcised and w them that be slayne with the swearde.

Asur is there also with his company, & their graues rounde aboute, which were slay-ne and fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde him in the lowe pytte. His co-mens are buried rounde aboute his graue, all together wounded and slayne with the swearde, which afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lyunge.

There is Elam also with all his people, and their graues rounde aboute: which all beyng wounded & slayne with the swear-de, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, which neuertheles somtime brought feare into the lande of the lyunge: for the which they beare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Their burial is geuen them and all their people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are rounde aboute al them, whych be vncircumcised, & with the that be slayne tho-row the swearde: for seying that in times past they made the lande of the lyunge afrayed they must now beare their awne shame, w them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Mesek also and Tubal, and their people, & their graues rounde aboute.
These all are among the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyunge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge the worthyes, & vncircumcised & pautes: which with their weapons are gone downe to hell whose swerdes are layed vnder their hea-des, whose wyckednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyunge yee, amonge the vncircumcised shall thou be destroyed, & slepe with them, that perished thow the swearde.

There is the lande of Edom with her kynge and princes also, which with theyr strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yee, amonge the vncircu-mised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreover, there be all the prynces of the north, with all the Sidonys, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare and strength they are come to confusio, and lye there vncircumcised, among those that be slayne with the swe-arde: and beare their awne shame, with the that be gone downe to the pytte. Now whan Pharaos seyth this, he shall be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swe-arde: both Pharaos and all his host, sayeth the Lord God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the lyunge. But Pharaos and all his people shall lye among the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde sayeth the Lord God.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

He setteth out the office of a curate that precherh the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that dyspayre, and boldeneth them with the promys of mercy. The word of the Lord agaynst the remnant of the people, & agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

Agayne, the word of the Lord came vnto me: sayeng. Thou sonne of man, speke to the children of thy people, and tell the: Whan I sende a swearde vpon a lande, & the people of the lande take a mā of their countre, & set hym to be their watchman, the same man, whan he seyth the swe-arde come vpon the lande, shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the tropet & wyll not be warned, and the swearde come: and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his awne head: for he herde the sound of the trompet, & wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he will receaue warninge, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne

Agayne, of the watchman se þ ſwearde com, and ſweve it not with the troget, ſo that the people is not warned: of the ſwearde come then, & take eny man from among the: the ſame ſhall be taken awaye in his awne ſpynne, but his bloude wyll I requize of the watchmans hande.

*Eze. iiii.

*And now (O thou ſonne of man) I have made the a watchman unto the houſe of Iſrael: that where as thou heareſt eny thinge out of my mouth, thou mayeſt warne the on my behalfe. If I ſaye unto the wycked thou wycked, thou ſhalt ſurely dye, & thou gyeſt him not warnynge, that he maye be warre of his vngodly waye: then ſhall the wycked dye in his awne ſpynne, but his bloude wyll I requize of thy hãde. Acuerthelſe, of thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, the ſhal he dye becauſe of his ſpynne, but thou haſt deliuered thy ſoule.

Therefore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake unto þ houſe of Iſrael. Ye ſaye thus: Wre offendes and ſpynnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how ſhulde we then be reſtored unto lyfe? Tell them: * As truly as I lye ſaith the Lord God, I have no pleaſure in þ death of the wycked, but moche rather þ the wycked turne fro his waye, & lyue. Turne you, turne you fro your vngodly wayes, O ye of the houſe of Iſrael. Oh wherfore wyll ye dye?

*Eze. iiii.

O thou ſonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: * The righteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhal not ſaue him, whanſoever he turneth awaye unfaithfully. Agayne, the wickedneſſe of the wycked ſhall not hurt hym, whan ſoever he conuerteth from hys vngodlyneſſe.

*Eze. iiii.

And the ryghteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhall not ſaue his lyfe, whanſoever he ſpyneth. If I ſaye unto the ryghteous, that he ſhal ſurely lyue, and ſo he truſt to his awne ryghteouſneſſe, and do ſpynne, then ſhall hys righteouſneſſe be nomore thought vpon, but in the wyckedneſſe that he hath done he ſhal dye. * Agayne, of I ſaye unto the wycked: thou ſhalt ſurely dye: and ſo he turne from his ſpynnes, and do þ thinge that is lawfull and right: In ſo moche that the ſame wycked man geueth þ pledge agayne, reſtoreth that he had taken awaye by robbry, walkeſh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and both not wyonge. Then ſhall he ſurely lyue, and not dye. Yee, the ſpynnes that he hath done, ſhall neuer be thought vpon. For in ſo moche as he doth now the thinge that is lawfull & ryght, he ſhall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people ſaye: Cuſh: the waye of þ Lord is not ryght, but they lye, where as their awne waye is rather vnrigh.

*Eze. iiii.

When þ ryghteous turneth fro his ryghteouſneſſe and doth the thinge that is wycked he ſhall dye therfore. But of the wycked turne from his wickedneſſe, doing the thinge þ is lawfull and right, he ſhall lyue therfore. Yet ye ſaye: * the waye of the Lord is not equall. O ye houſe of Iſrael: I will iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

*Eze. iiii.

In the xii. yere, the v. daye of þ tenth moneth of oure captiuite, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierulã, came vnto me, and ſayd: the cite is deſtroyed. Now þ hande of þ Lord had bene vpon me the evening afore this mã (which was eſcaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntill þ morning þ he came to me: yee, he opened my mouth, ſo þ I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of þ Lord vnto me, & ſayd. Thou ſonne of man, theſe þ dwell in þ waſted lãde of Iſrael, ſaye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in poſſeſſion: now are we many & the lande is geuen vs to poſſeſſe alſo. And therfore tell them. * Thus ſayeth the Lord: * In the blood haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idoles, & and haue ſhed blood: ſhall ye then haue the lande in poſſeſſion?

*Eze. iiii.

Ye leane vpon your ſwearde, ye worcke abhominaciõs, euery one deſileth his neygbour with wife: and ſhall ye the poſſeſſe the lande? Saye þ theſe wordes vnto them. Thus ſaith the Lord God. As truly as I lye all ye þ dwell in thys wylderneſſe, ſhall be ſlayne with þ ſwearde: whatſoever is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beaſtes to be deuoured: thoſe that be in ſtrong holdes & denes, ſhall dye of the peſtilence. For I wyll make the lande ſo deſolate and waſte, & the pompe of her ſtrength ſhal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Iſrael ſhall be ſo waſte that no man ſhall trauaile therby.

*Eze. iiii.

*Then ſhall they lerne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when I make the lande waſte & deſolate, becauſe of all their abhominaciõs, that they haue wrought. And thou ſonne of man, the chyldren of thy people that talcke of the, by the walles and in the doores of their houſes, ſayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lord. Theſe come vnto the, after þ manner of a greate people: yee, as who ſayth they were my people, they lyt downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter: for in their mouthes they make a feſte of them, and they herte goeth after theyr awne couetous lucre. And as a balet that hath a ſwete tune, and is pleaſant to ſynge, ſo ſhalt þ be vnto them: thy wordes ſhall they heare, but they will not do thereafter. Whã this cometh to paſſe (for ſo, it cometh in dede) then ſhall they knowe, þ there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Agayne wyſdommes and curates that deſpyte the flock of Chriſt, & ſeale their awne. The Lord ſaith that he wyll byſet his diſperſed flocke, and gather them together. He reſpoueth the malice of certen of the flocke. He promyſeth the true ſhepherd Chriſt, and wiſh hym peace.

And the worde of þ Lord came vnto me, ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man, prophecie agaynſt the ſhepherdes of Iſrael, prophecie and ſpeake vnto them. Thus ſayeth the Lord God. * Who be vnto the ſhepherdes of Iſrael, that fede them ſelues? ſhulde not the ſhepherdes ſede þ flockes? Ye haue eatẽ by the ſatt, ye haue clothed you with the woll: þ beſt fedde haue ye ſlayne, but the flocke haue ye not nouriſhed. The weake haue ye not holden vpon: the ſicke haue ye not healed: þ broken haue ye not bounde together, þ out caſtes haue ye not brought agayne: þ loſt haue ye not ſought, but * churliſhly & cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus are they ſcattered here & there without a ſhepherd: yee, all þ beaſtes of the felde deuoure the, and they go aſtraye.

My ſhepe go wandring vpon all mountaynes and vpon euery hye hyll. Yee, they be ſcattered abrode in all felde, and there is no man, that careth for the, or ſeketh after the. Therefore, O ye ſhepherdes, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus ſayeth þ Lord God: As truly as I lye, for ſo moche as my ſhepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beaſtes of the felde, haunynge no ſhepherd: and ſeing that my ſhepherdes take no regarde of my ſhepe, but fede them ſelues onely, and not my ſhepe. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lord (O ye ſhepherdes) Thus ſayeth þ Lord God: Beholde, I my ſelfe wyll vpon the ſhepherdes: and requyre my ſhepe from their handes, and make them ceaſe from feedinge of my ſhepe: yee, the ſhepherdes ſhall fede the ſelues nomore. For I wyll deliuer my ſhepe out of their mouthes, ſo that they ſhall not deuoure them after this. For thus ſayeth the Lord God: * Beholde, I wyll loke to my ſhepe my ſelfe, and ſeke them. Like as a ſhepherd among þ flocke ſeketh after the ſhepe that are ſcattered abroade, euen ſo wil I ſeke after my ſhepe, & gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene ſcattered in the cloudy and darcke daye. I will bringe them out from all people, and gather the together out of all lãdes. I will bringe them into their awne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I will fede them in ryght good paſtures and vpon the hye mountaynes of Iſrael ſhall there foldes be. There ſhall they lye in a good folde, and in a fat paſture ſhall they fede: euen

Agayne, I wyll make a couenaunt of peace with them and dyne al euell beaſtes out of the lande: ſo that they maye dwell ſafely in the wylderneſſe, and ſleepe in the woddes. * Soch as be loſt, will I ſeke: ſoch as go aſtraye: will I bring agayne: ſoch as be wounded, will I bynde vpon: ſoch as be weake, will I make ſtrong: ſoch as be fat & ſtronger, the ſe will I rote oute, and fede them with the thinge that is lawfull. And as for you (O my ſhepe) ſayeth the Lord God. * I wyll put a difference amonge the ſhepe, amonge the weathers & the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to cate vpon þ good paſture, but ye muſt treade downe þ reſidue of your paſture w your fete alſo? *Mat. xxi. b.

Thus my ſhepe muſt be ſayne to cate the thinge, that ye haue troden downe w your fete, and to dryncke it, that ye with your fete haue defiled. Therefore, thus ſayeth þ Lord God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll ſeuer the ſatt ſhepe from the leane: for ſo moche as ye haue ſhot the weake ſhepe vpon the ſpides & ſhoulders, and runne vpon them with your hornes, ſo lãge tyll ye haue vtterly ſcattered them abrode. I will helpe my ſhepe, ſo that they ſhall nomore be ſpoyled: yee, I will diſcerne one ſhepe from another. I wyll rayſe vpon vnto them one onely ſhepherd, euen I my ſeruaunt * David, he ſhall fede the and he ſhall be their ſhepherd. Thus ſhall they vnderſtande, that I the Lord theye God am with them, and that they (euen the houſe of Iſrael) are my people ſaith þ Lord God. Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying. Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mount. * Sey, prophete vpon it, & saye vnto it. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde (O mount Sey) I wyll vpon the, I wyll reach out myne hande ouer the, yee, waste and desolate wil I make the. Thy cities wil I breake downe, & thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, how I am the Lord. * For so moche as thou bearest an olde enemye agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and hast drawne the chylderne of Israel vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne: Therefore, as truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I will prepare the vnto bloude, yee, bloude shall folow vpon the: * seinge I layest wayte for bloude, therefore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wil I make the mount seir desolate and waste, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man goo thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fyll with his slayne men: thy hilles, valleys and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I will make the a perpetuall wilderness, so that thy cities shall not returne to their former estate yee maye knowe, how that I am the Lord.

And because I haue sayde: what, both these nations and both these landes must be myne, & I will haue the in possession: where as the Lord was there. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I will handle the accordinge to thy wrath and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly wth them, that I maye be knowen among the, how I haue punished the. Yee, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord haue herde al thy despyte ful wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and geue vs to denoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boast agaynst me, yee, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue herde altogether. Where vnto, thus sayeth the Lord God: to the iope of all the worlde wil I make the waste. * And lyke as I (O mount Sey) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyll I do vnto the also, & thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

The promise of deliverance from the Gentiles vnto Israel. The benefites done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto their desertinges. God reneweth our hertes & we may walke in his commandementes.

Thou sonne of man, prophete vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speake: * Heare the worde of the Lord. O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Because your enemye hath sayde vpon you: A, ha, the hye euerslastynge places are now become ours, prophete therfore, & speake: thus sayeth the Lord God. Seynge ye be wasted and trode downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles, which haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wilderness and desolate cities, which are spoyled, & had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the heathen. Yee, eue thus sayeth the Lord God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyce, agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, & agaynst all Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioyled fro their whole hert with a despytefull stomache, to waste it, and to spoyl it.

Prophete therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes & hilles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lord God. Behold, this haue I deuilled in my gelousy & terrible wrath. For so moche as ye haue suffered reprove of the heathen, therefore thus saith the Lord God. I haue sworn, that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shall beare their confusion the selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out your braunches, and bringe forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is hard by, that it will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I turne me, & ye maye be tyld and sowne.

I wyll sende you moche people, which shall be all of the house of Israel, the cities shall be inhabited, & the decayed places shall be repaired agayne, I wil prouide you with moche people and cattell, which shall increase and bringe frute, I wyll restore you also to your olde estate & shewe you moche kyndnes the euer ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord. Yee, people wyll I send vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue the in possession, & thou shalt be their inheritance, so that thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God. For so moche as they saye vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therefore thou shalt eate no more men, ne ther destroye thy people any more, sayeth the Lord God. And I will not suffer the, for to heare thine awne confusion amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reprove of the nations, ne cast out cast out thyn awne people any more, saith the Lord God.

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying. O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their awne ground, they defiled the selues wth their awne wayes & ymaginations: so that in my sight their waye was lyke the uncleannesse of a menstruous womā. Wherefore, I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, & because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, & because of their Idols, wherwith they had defiled the selues. I scatred the also amonge the heathen, so that they were strawed aboute in the landes. Accordinge to their wayes & after theyr awne inuencions, so dyd I punishe them.

Now, when they were gone vnto the heathen, & come in amonge the, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, & must go out of their awne land? The spared I my holy name, which the house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therefore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, whych ye dishonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therefore, I wyll halowe my grete name agayne, which amonge the Gentiles is euell spoken of: for ye pour selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayeth the Lord God.

As for you, I will take you from amonge the heathen, and gather you together out of all countres, and bringe you agayne into your awne lande. * Then wil I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yee, from all your uncleannesse and from all your Idols shall I cleanse you. A new herte also wil I geue you, and a new sprete wil I put into you. As for that stony herte, I will take it out of your body, & geue you a fleshy herte. I will geue my sprete amonge you, & cause you to walke in my commandementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the land, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wil be your God. I will helpe you out of all your uncleannes. I will call for the corne, and will increase it, & let you haue no hunger. I will multiplye the frutes of the trees and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare no more reprove of hunger, amonge the heathen. Then shall ye remember your awne wicked wayes, & your ymaginations, which were not good: so that ye shall thinke ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacions.

But I wyll not do this for your sakes (saith the Lord God) ye be sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus saith the Lord God: what tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and will repaire the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shall be builded agayne, which afore tyme laye waste in the sight of all them that were by. Then shall it be sayde: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cities are now strong, & defended agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lord, which repaire that was broken downe, and plante agayne, & was made waste. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and will do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyll yet once be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and do this for them: * I shall increate them as a flocke of me. Lyke as the holy flocke & the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wilde wasted cities be filled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lord.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

The prophete sheweth the bringinge agayne of the people beyng in captiuite. He sheweth the bygyn of the ten tribes with the two.

The hande of the Lord came vpon me, and caried me out in the sprete of the Lord, and let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and maruelous dyde also. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered the Lord God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me. Prophete thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them. Yee dyde bones, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyll put bryth into you, that ye maye lyue: I will geue you synowes, and make the growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: and so geue you bryth, that ye maye lyue, & knowe, that I am the Lord.

So I propheted, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophetinge, there came a noyse & a great mocyon, so that the bones rane euery one to another. Now when I had looked, beholde, they had synowes, & the grewe vpon them: and aboute they were couered with skynne, but there was no bryth in them. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophete thou toward the synowde: prophete and speake to the synowde. Thus sayeth the Lord God. Come (O thou ayre) from the four wyndes, & blowe vpon these sayne that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me: then came the byeth into them, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greete sozte.

Moreover, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones dried vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therefore prophesie thou, and speake vnto them: thus saith the Lord God. Beholde, I will open your graues (O my people), and take you out of your sepulchres, & hyngge you into the lande of Israel againe. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your graues, and bringe you out of them. My sperte also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will set you agayne in your awne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke & wyte vpon it. Vnto Iuda and to the chyldren of Israel his companions. Then take another stycke, and wyte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stock of Ephraim, & to all the householde of Israel his companions. And than, take both these together in thyne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Now ys the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not thewe vs, what thou meanest by this? Then geue them this answer: thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, * I will take the stock of Joseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them to the stock of Iuda, and make them one stock, and they shall be one in my hande. And yf two stickes where vpon thou wytest, shalt thou haue in thyne hand, that they maye se, and shalt saye vnto them.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I will take awaye the chyldre of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and will gather them together on euery pte, and bringe them agayne into theyr awne lande: yee, I will make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples fro hence forth, nether be deuided into two kyngdomes: they shall also desyre the felues nomore with theyr abhominacions, Idoles, & all their wycked doinges. I will helpe the out of all their dwellinge places, wherein they haue synned: and wil so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

David my seruaunt shall be their kyng, & they shall haue one shepherde onely. They shall walke in my lawes, & my commaundementes shall they both kepe and fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yee, euery in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, & their chylders chyldren dwell for euermore, & my seruaunt David shall be their euermore prince. Moreover, I wil make vnto them a boode of peace wth them, which shall be vnto them an euermore councelaunt. I wil seele them also, & multiply them, my Sanctuary wil I set amonge them for euermore. * My dwellinge shall be with them: yee, I will be their God, & they shall be my people. Thus the heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lord am the holy maker of Israel: when my Sanctuary shall be amonge them for euermore.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The prophesie that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed hoste into the lande of promys. Their intent. He reherceth the cominge of Gog wth his hoste, as prophesied of the prophetes. The destruccyon of hym.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the lande of Magog, which is yf chefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophesie agaynst hym, & saye. Thus sayeth the Lord God. * O Gog yf chefe prince of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I will vpon the, & will turne the aboute and put a bytt in thy chaunces: I will bringe the forth and all thine hoste, both horse and horsmen, which be all weapened of the best fashion: a great people, & handle altogether speares, shildes, & swordes: the Perses, Morians and with them the Libians, which all beare shildes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hostes: the house of Chogorma out of the north quarters, and all his hostes, yee, and moch people with the.

Therefore prepare yf, set thy selfe in aray with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in yf latter yeres thou shalt come into the lande that hath bene destroyed with the swerde, & now is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpon yf mountaynes of Israel, which haue longe lye waste. Yee, they be brought out of the nations, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vpon like a storme wether, to couer the lande, & as it were a darck cloude, thou wilt all thine hostes, and a greate multitude of people with the.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myscheffe, and saye: I wyll by to yonder playne lande, seinge they lyt at ease, & dwell so safely for they: for they dwell all without any walles they haue nether barres nor doores to spoylle the, to robbe the, to laye hnde vpon their so well shabited wyldernes: agaynst that people, yf is gathered together from amonge the heathen, which haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchantes of Charlis with all their worthies saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoylle to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye catell and good, and to haue a greate praye?

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, yf shalt prophesie, and saye vnto Gog. Thus saith the Lord God. In yf daye thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place out of the north partes, thou & moch people with the which ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a greate multitude and an innumerable sozte. Yee, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. They shall come to passe in yf latter dayes: I will bringe the vpon my lande, & the heathen maye knowe me, wher I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before their eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruautes yf prophetes of Israel, which prophesied in those dayes and yeres, that I shuld bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog cometh vpon the land of Israel (saith the Lord God) shall my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gclousy and hote displeasure I haue deuysed that there shall be a greate trouble in the lande of Israel at yf tyme. The very fishes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the bestes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

The hilles also shall be turned vpon side downe, the stappes of stone shall fall, and all walles shall syncke to the grounde. I will cal for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes sayeth the Lord God: so that euery mans swerde shall be vpon another. With pestylence and bloude will I punishe him: storme rayne and hyle stones, fyre and brimstone will I cause to rayne vpon him and all his heape, yee, and vpon all that greate people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnified, honoured, & knowne amonge the heathen: that they maye be sure, howe that I am the Lord.

The xxxix. Chapter.

The sheweth the destruccyon of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoste. He prophesie that Gog & his company shall be deuoured of byrdes and bestes, wherfore yf house of Israel is wastred. Theyr bringinge agayne to captiuitie is promysed.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, prophesie agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, * I will vpon the, and I will punishe the with fyre plagues, & leade the from the north partes, and bringe the vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I will smyte it out of thy left hnde, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy ryght hnde. Thou wilt all thine heape, and all the people that is wth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I geue the vnto foules and wilde bestes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euery yf the Lord haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Vnto Magog, and among those that lyt wth so carelesse in the fles: will I send a fyre, & they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, I will make also yf name of my holynesse to be knowne among my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euil spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lord God. This is the daye wherof I haue spok. They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapes, and burne them: shildes and speeres, bowes and arrowes, bylles & clubbes: leue yeres shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall els bryge no stickes fro yf felde, nether haue nede to beue downe any out of yf wodde. For they shall haue weapes knowe to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, & spoylle those that spoyled them sayeth the Lord God. At the same tyme wil I geue vnto God, a place to be buried in Israel, euery the valley, wher thou men go from the east to the see warde. Those yf trauayle therby, shall stoppe their noses for stench. There shall Gog & all his people be buried: and it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burpunge of the that they maye clense the lande. Yee, all the people of the lande shall burie them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I gett me that honoure, saith yf Lord God. They shall ordeyne me also to be deed buriers, euery gongne thow the lande, & appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which remaine vpon the felde, & the lande maye be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke, & that seuen monethes longe. Now those yf go thow yf lande, wher they se a mans bone, they shall set vpon a toke by it, tyll yf deed buriers haue buried it also, in yf valley of the people of Gog. And yf name of the cite shall be called, hamonah (yf is a multitude): Thus shall they make the lande clene.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayeth the Lord

* Apo. xij. d.

Lord God. Speake vnto all the foules and every byrde, yee, and to all the wilde beastes of the felde, heape you together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: cut a greete slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell: eat of the flesh and drinke bloude. Ye shall cate the flesh of the worthies, & drinke the blood of the princes of the lande: of the iudges, of the lames, of the goates, and of the oxen: ye shall be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your belly full, and drinke bloude, till ye be drunken of the slaughter, which I haue slayne vnto you. Kill you at my table with horses and stronge horsemens: with captaynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lord God.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heathen maye see my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hand which I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israell maye knowe, how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israell were led into captiuite: it was for their wyckednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemies, that they might all be slaine with the sword. Accordyng to their uncle nesse & vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Now will I bringe agayne the captiues of Jacob & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and begetous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me shall be taken awaye: & so safelye shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afraied. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered the together out of their enemies landes, & am pray sed in them before many heathen: then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord their God which suffred the to be led into captiuite amonge the heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne into their owne lade, and not left one of them ponde.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore from the: but will poure out my spere vpon the house of Israell, sayeth the Lord God.

The xl. Chapter.

The reuoluyng of the cyties and of the temple: that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the xxv. yere of oure captiuite, in the begynnyng of the yere, the .x. daye of the moneth: that is the .xliii. yere, after that the cyte was smytten downe: the same daye came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Israell brought he me in the visyons of God: & set me downe vpon a maruelous hye mountayne, wher vpon there was a buyldyng (as it had bene of a cyte) toward the north.

Thyther he caried me, and beholde, there was a ma, whose similitude was like bras se, which had a threde of flax in his hande, & a meterode also. He stode in the doze, and sayd vnto me: marcke well with thine eyes, hearken to with thine eares, and fasten it in thine hert, whatsoeuer I shal thewe the, for to that intent that they myght be shewed the therfore art thou brought thyther. And whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certeyne the house of Israell therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the south syde of the house: the meterode that he had in his hande, was sixe cubytes long & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldyng, which was a meterode, and the heygth also a meterode. Then came he vnto the east doze, & wente vpon the steares, & measured the postes of the doze, wherof euery one was a meterode thicke. Euery chābre was a meterode longe & brode: betwene the chābers were fyue cubytes. The poste of the doze within the porche, was one meterode. He measured also the porche of the pinnermer doze, which conteyned a meterode. Then measured he the entree of the doze, that conteyned eyght cubytes, & his pylers two cubytes: and this entree stode inwarde.

The chābers of the doze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pylers also that stode of both the sydes were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, which was .x. cubytes, & the heygth of the doze .xii. cubytes. The edge before the chambers was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambers six cubytes wyde of eyther syde. He measured the doze from the rydge of one chābre to another, whose wydenesse was .xxv. cubytes, & one doze stode agaynst another. He made pylers also .lx. cubytes hye, rounde about the court doze. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entree of the pinnermer doze, were .l. cubytes. The chambers and their pylers within, rounde about vnto the doze, had syde wyndowes. So had the fore entrees also, whose wyndowes were rounde about within. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore court: where as were chambers & paued woorkes, made in the fore court rounde aboute .xxx. chambers vpon one paued woork. Now the paued woork was a longe helyde the dozes & the lower paued woork. After this he measured the bredth fro the lower doze, vnto the pinnermer court of the outsyde, which had an .C. cubytes vpon the east & the north part. And the doze in the uttermoste court toward the north, measured he after the length and bredth: hye the chambers also on either syde with his pylers and foztreyes: which had euen the measure of the first doze. His heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes, hye wyndowes & porches with hye date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze toward the east: there were .viij. steppes to go vpon, and their porche before them. Nowe the doze of the pinnermer court stode streyght ouer agaynst the doze, & was toward the northeast. Fro one doze to another he measured .C. cubytes.

After that, he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a doze toward the south: whose pylers and porches he measured, these had the fyrst measure, and with their porches they had wyndowes rounde about, like the fyrst wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. with steppes to go vpon: hye porche stode before with hye pylers and date trees on either syde. And the doze of the pinnermer court stode toward the south, and he measured from one doze to another an .C. cubytes. So he brought me into the pinnermer court, thowowe the doze of the south syde, which he measured: and it had the measure as forsyde. In lyke manner, hye chābres, pylers and foztreyes, had euen the forsyde measure also. And he had with hye porches rounde about wyndowes of fifty cubytes heygth, and .xxv. cubytes brode. The porches rounde about were .xxv. cubytes longe, and .v. cubytes broad: and his porche reached vnto the uttermost court, vpon his pylers, there were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vpon.

He brought me also into the pinnermost court vpon the east syde, and measured the doze, accordyng to the measure as forsyde. His chambers, pylers and porches had euen the same measure, as the fyrst had: and with hye porches, he had wyndowes rounde about. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes: hye porche reached vnto the uttermost court: his pylers also had date trees on either syde, & .viij. steppes to go vpon. And he brought me to the north doze & measured it: which also had the forsyde measure. His chābres, pylers & porches had wyndowes rounde about: whose heygth was .l. cubytes, and the bredth .xxv. hye pylers stode toward the vtmmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and .viij. steppes to go vpon. Ther stode a chābre also, whose inraunce was at the doze pylers, and there the burnt offerings were washed.

In the doze porche, there stode on eyther syde two tables for the slaughtinge: to slepe the burnt offerings, synofferynges and trespassofferynges ther vpon. And on the outside as men go forth to the north doze, ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether side of the doze, that is .viij. tables: wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewe stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite and a halfe longe and brode, and one cubite hye: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornaments, which were vnto the burnt and slayne offerings: whā they were slaughted. And within, there were hokes foure fingers brode, fastened rounde about, to hange flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offerynges. On the out syde of the innermer doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde court helyde the north doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, helyde the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chābre on the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytatyon: and this toward the north, is the prestes that wayte vpon the altar: which be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruike before the Lord in stede of the chyldren of Levi. So he measured the fore court, which had in length an .C. cubytes, and asmoche in bredth by the foure corners. Now the altar stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entree of the house, and measured the walles by the fozt doze: which were .v. cubytes longe on eyther syde. The thynknes also of the doze on eyther syde was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes, the bredth .xi. cubytes, and vpon steppes went men vpon to it: by the walles also were pylers on eyther syde one.

The xli. Chapter.

The disposition and druce of buyldyng agayne the temple, & of the other thinges thereto belonng.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes, which were of both sydes fyue cubytes thicke, accordyng to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was .x. cubytes, & the walles of the doze on eyther syde .v. cubytes. He measured the length therof, which conteyned .xl. cubytes, & the bredth .xx. Then went he in & measured the doze postes: which were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it selfe was fyue cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was .viij. cubytes. He measured the length and bredth therof, which were euery one .xx. cubytes, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holiest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was .vi. cubytes. The chābres that stode rounde about the house, were euery one .iij. cubytes wyde: and one stode harde vpon another, wherof ther were .xxiiij. ther stode postes beneath by the walles rounde about the house, to beare the vp: but in the wall of the house, they were not fastened. The syde cham-chambres were, & hyer & wyder, & had steppes thozowe them rounde about the house.

Thus was it wyder aboue, & fro the lowest men myght go to the hyest by & mydd chābres. I sawe also & the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundatyon of the syde chābres was a meterodde, & is. vi. cubites broade. The thiknes of the syde wall without, contened. v. cubites, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Between the chambres was the wyde-nes. xx. cubites rounde about the house. The chambre dozes stode ouer agaynst the out-wall, the one doze was toward & north, the other toward the south: and the thynknesse of the out wall was. v. cubites rounde about Nowe the buylding that was separated to-warde the west, was. lxx. cubites wyde: the wall of the buylding was. v. cubytes thicke rounde about, and the length foure scoze cu-bites & ten. So he measured the house which was an. C. cubytes longe, and the separated buylding with the wall were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenes before the house, and of it that was separated toward the east, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buylding before and behynde with the chambres vpon both the sydes: and it contened an. C. cubytes. The pinnermer temple, the porch of the fore court, the syde postes, theiche the had syde wyndowes and pylers rounde about oueragaynst the postes, fro the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes the sel-ues were spied ouer with bozdes: and thus was it aboue & doze vnto the ynnmost house: and without also. Pee, the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was si-led ouer with great bozdes. There were che-rubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixte to cherubyns.
One cherub had two faces, the face of a mā lokyng alpe toward the date tree, & a lions face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde about in all the house. Pee, the cherubyns and date trees were made from the grounde vpon the doze, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The bypostes of the temple were fouresquared, and the fashyon of the sanctuary was * eue as it appeared vnto me afore in & visio. * The table was of wodde. iij. cubites hye and. ij. cubytes longe: hys corners, the length & the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shall stande before the Lozde. The temple and the holpest of all had eyther of them two dozes: and euery doze had. ij. lytle wyckettes which were foldē in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple, they were made cherubins and date trees, like as vpon the walles: and a greate thynke balke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. vpon both the sydes of the walles of the porch, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, haupng beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

The. xliij. Chapter.

Of the chambres of the temple for the pinner, and the holpe chenges.

Then carped he me out into & fore court toward the north, & brought me into the chambre & stode ouer agaynst the back buyldinge north ward, which had the length of an. C. cubytes: whose doze turned toward the north. The wydenes contened. l. cuby-tes: oueragaynst the. xx. cubytes of the p-innermer court, and agaynst the paueid worke that was in the court, besyde all these thre, ther stode pillers, one oueragaynst another:
And before thys chambre there was a walkyng place of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde ad their dores toward the north. Thus the hyest chābres were alwaye narrower then the lowest and myddelmost of the buyldynge: for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon another, not haupng pillers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest to reken from the grounde vppwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chābres toward the ynnmost court vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was. l. cubytes longe: for the length of the ynnmost chambres in the fore court was. l. cubytes also: but the length therof before the temple was an. C. cubytes.
These chambres had vnder them an intrau-ce of the east syde, wherby a man myght go in to them out of the fore court, thozowe the thicke wall of the fore court toward & east, ryght oueragaynst the separated buylding.
Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde, there were chambres also which had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambre on the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

They intraunce, fashyn and dozes were also of the same maner. Pee, euen lyke as the other chambre dozes were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye to-warde the syngers steyppes on the east syde, there stode a doze to go inat. Then sayde he vnto me: The chābrers toward the north & the south which stode before the backe buyldyng: those be holy habytatyns, wherem the prestes that do seruyce before the Lozde, must eate & most holy offeringes: and there must they laye & most holy offeringes, meat offerynge, synne offerynge, and trespace offerynge: for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore court: but (sepyng they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministration,

eyon, and put on other garmettes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe whē he had measured all the pinner-mer house, he brought me forth thozowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with & me-terode, which rounde about contened. v. C. meteroddes: And the north syde measured he which contened rounde about eue so much.
The other two sydes also toward the south and the west, which he measured, contened ether of them. v. C. meteroddes. So he measured all the foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde aboute. v. C. meteroddes lōge, and as broade also which separated the holy from the vnholp.

The. xliij. Chapter.

He seeth the gloze of God going into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He menconerth the ydolatre of the children of Israel, for which they were consumed and brought to naught. He is comma-ded to call them agayne to repentance.

He brought me to the doze & turneth toward the east. Behold, then came the gloze of the God of Israel fro out of & east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his gloze. His syght to loke vpon was * lyke the fyrst, that I sawe when I went in, what tyme as & cyrie shuld haue bene destroyed: * and like the visyon & I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the gloze of the Lozde came into the house, thozowe the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me into the pinnermer court: and beholde, the house was full of the gloze of the Lozde.

I hearde one speaking vnto me out of the house: and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, * this row-me is my seate, & the place of my foorsteyppes, where as I wyl dwell amonge the children of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall nomoze defyle my holy name: neither they, ner their kynge thozowe they whozdome, thozowe their hye places, & tho-rowe the deed bodyes of their kinges: which haue builded their threholdes i maner hard vpon my threholdes, & their postes almost at my postes: & a wall betwixte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name w their abominations, & they haue comytted. Wherfore, I haue destroyed them in my wyath. But now they shal put a waye their whozdome & the deed bodyes of their kinges out of my syght, & I maye dwell among the for euermore. * Therfore, O thou sonne of mā, shewe thou the howsholde of Israel a tēple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednes, & measure the selues an exāple therat.

And when they be ashamed of all they wozkes, then shewe them the fourme & fa-shyon of the temple, the comming in, the goynge out, all the maner and descripcō ther-of: pee, all the vses & ordinaunces of it, that they maye kepe and fulfyll all the fashyons and customes therof.

This is the descripcō of & house. A bone, & vpon the mount rounde about all the corners, it shal be & holpest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcō and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the aultar, after the true cubite: which is a spāne longer then another cubite, his botome in the myddest was a cu-bite longe and wyde, and the ledge that wēt rounde about it, was a spāne broade. This is the heygth of the aultar. From the ground to the lower steyppes, the length is two cubi-tes: and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower steyppes to the hygher, are foure cu-bites, and the bredth but one cubite.

* The aultar was. iij. cubytes hye, and from the aultar vppwarde stode. iij. hornes, and it was. xij. cubytes lōge and. xij. cubites broade, vpon the foure corners: the couering of the aultar was. xij. cubites lōge & broad vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that went rounde about had halfe a cubite, and & botome therof rounde about one cubite: hys steyppes stode toward the east. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayeth the Lozde God: these are the ordynaunces and lawes of the aultar: in the daye, whan it is made to offer burntofferings, and to sprenckle bloude therupon. To the prestes, to the leuites that be of the seide of * Sadoch, and treade before me to do me seruyce, sayeth the Lozde God. Vnto these geue thou a ponge bullocke for a synoffering: & take the bloude of hym, and sprenckle his foure hornes with all: and the foure corners of the aultar cou-ring, with the ledge that goeth rounde about, herwith shalt thou clesse it, and reconcle it.
* Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the synoffering, and burne him in a leucall place without the sanctuary.

The next daye, take a goatbucke, wout blemph for a synofferynge, to reconcle the aultar withall, lyke as it was reconcleid w the bullocke. Nowe whan thou hast made it cleane, then offre a ponge bullocke * without blemph, and a rāme out of the flocke without blemph also. Offer the before the Lozde: and let & preste cast * salt therupō, and geue them so vnto the Lozde for a burntofferynge.
Seven dayes shalt thou bynge euery daye a goatbuck. A ponge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke, both without blemph, shall they offre. Seven dayes shall they reconcle and clesse the aultar, and offre vpon it. Whē these dayes are expyred, then vpon the eight daye and so forth, the prestes shall offre their burntofferings and healthofferings vpon the aultar: so will I be mercyfull vnto you, sayeth the Lozde God.

DD ij The ¶ De sheweth what doze of the temple is that. He is commaunded to vphayd the people with their offences. The bunderumfised in here and in the fleshe. Who are to be admitted to the seruice of the temple: who are to be refused. The sheweth what prestes he wold haue admitted into the holy place, and also the office.

After this, he brought me againe to the outwarde doze of the sanctuary on the east syde, and that was shut. The sayd y Lord vnto me: This doze shall be still shut: & not opened for any man to go thowowe it: but only for y Lord God of Israel: yee, he shall go thowowe it, els shall it be shut still. The prince hym selfe shall come thowowe it, that he maye eate bread before the Lord. At the porche shall he come in, and there shall he go out againe. Then brought he me to the doze vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde, * the glory of the Lord fylled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: O y sonne of man, fasten thys to thynne herte: beholde, and take diligent hede to all y I wyll saye vnto the, concerning all the ordynances of the Lord, & all his lawes: ponde well with thynne herte the comynge in of the house and the goynge forth of the sanctuary: & tell that obspynate household of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe don ynough withall your abhominacions, seynge that ye haue brought in to my sanctuary strangers, haupng vncircumcysed hertes and fleshe, where thowowe my sanctuary is defyled, when ye offre me bread, farr, and bloude.

¶ Thus with all your abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordynances of my sanctuary: but seite keepers of my sanctuary, euen after your awne mynde. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: Of all the strangers that dwell among the chyldren of Israel, no stranger (whole herte and fleshe is not circumcysed) shall come within my sanctuary. No, ner the leuites that ben gone backe fro me: and haue discaued the people of Israel with all erreours, goynge after theyr ydoles: therefore shall they beare their awne wyckednes. Shulde they be set and ordeined to minstre vnder the dozes of the house of my sanctuary? And to do scrupce in the house: to slaye burntofferpynges and sacrifices for the people: to stande before the, and to serue them, seynge the scrupce that they do them, is before theyr ydoles, and cause the house of Israel to stumbe thowowe theyr wyckednes: * For the which cause I haue plucked oute myne hande ouer them, sayth the Lord, so y nowe they must beare theyr awne iniquitie, and not to come nye me, to serue me with theyr presthode, in my sanctuary, and moost holyst of all: that they maye beare theyr awne shame and ab-hominacions, which they haue done. Shulde I use them to be porters of the house, and to all the scrupce that is done therein? But the prestes, the leuites, the sonne of * Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordynances of my sanctuary, when the chyldren of Israel were gone from me, shall come to me, to do me scrupce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, sayth the Lord God.

¶ They shall go into my sanctuary, and treade before my table: to do me scrupce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynances. Nowe when they go in at y dozes of the ynnner court: they shall put on linnen clothes, so that no wollpne come vpon them while they do seruice vnder the dozes of y inner court, and within. They shall haue sayze linnen bonettes vpon their heades, and linnen breeches vpon their loynes, which in their labour they shall not put about them. And when they go forth to the people into the outwarde court, they shall put of the clothes wherein they haue ministered, and laye them in the habitatio of the sanctuary, and put on other apparell, lest they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes.

* They shall not shawe theyr heades, ner ff noyph the bulke of theyr heare, but rounde theyr heades onely. * All the prestes that go into the inmost court, shall dryncke no wyne. * They shall mary no wedowe, nether one that is put fro her husbade: but a mayde of the seede of the house of Israel, or a wedowe that hath had a preste before.

* They shall shewe my people the difference betwene the holy and vnholy, betwixt the cleane and vncleane. If any discorde arise, they shall discerne it: & geue sentence after my iudgements. My solempne feastes, my lawes and ordynances shall they kepe, and halowe my sabbathes. * They shall come at no deed persone to defyle them selues, except it be father or mother, sone or daughter, brother or syster, that hath had yet no husbade, in soch maye they be defyled.

¶ And when he is cleynted, ther shall be rekened vnto him. vij. dayes: and yf he go into y sanctuary agayn to do seruice, he shall bring a synofferpyng, sayth the Lord God. * They shall haue an heritage: yee, I my selfe wyll be their heritage: els shall ye geue the no possession in Israel, for I am their possessor. The meatofferpynges, synofferpyng and trespassofferpynges shall they eate, & euer dedicate thynge in Israel, shall be theirs. The fyrstlings of all the fyrst frutes, and all fre-wyll offerpynges shall be the prestes.

¶ Ye shall geue vnto the preste also all the fyrst frute of your first bozne, all I say, & all that is separated vnto God, all your here offerpynges (I saye) shall be the prestes, & also y fyrstlings of your dough, y God maye p-spere the residue. * But no deed caryon shall the prest eate, ner soch as is deuoured of wilde beastes, foules or catell.

The xlv. Chapter.

¶ Out of all the labe of pomes at ther separate. fift. portions, of which the first is geue to the prestes and to the temple, the seconde to the leuites: the thyrde to the cite: the fourth to the pynce. An exhortation to the heares of Israel. Of labe weyghtes and measures. Of fyrst frutes, &c.

When ye deuynde the labe by the lot, ye shall put asyde one * parte for the Lord, to be holy from other landes: namely. xxv. ft. meter od-des loge, and. x. ft. broade. This shall be holy, as wyde as it is rounde about. O thys parte there shall belonge vnto the sanctuary v. ft. meter od-des in all the foure corners, & i. cubites wyde rounde about to the suburbs. And from this measure, namely of. xxv. ft. meter od-des loge, & x. ft. broade, thou shalt measure, wherein the sanctuary and the holyst of all maye stande.

¶ The residue of that holy ground shall be the prestes, which do scrupce in the sanctuary of the Lord, and go in before the Lord to serue hym, that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

¶ As for the sanctuary, it shall stande for it selfe: and to the leuites that serue in the house, there shall be geuen. xx. habitacions, of the xxv. ft. lenth and. x. ft. bredth: ye shall geue also vnto the cite a possession of. v. ft. meter od-des brode, and. xxv. ft. loge, beside the parte of the sanctuary: that shall be for the whole house of Israel. * Upon both the sydes of the sanctuaryes parte, and by the cytie, there shall be geuen vnto the pynce, what soeuer lyeth oueragaynst the cytie, as farre as reacheth westwarde & eastwarde: which shall be as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

¶ This shall be hys awne lande in Israel, y my pynces be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And soch as remaineth yet ouer in y lande, shall be geuen to the house of Israel according to theyr tribes. Thus sayth y Lord God: O ye pynces, ye haue nowe oppressed and destroyed ynough: nowe leaue of, handle nowe according to the thinge y is equall and lawfull: & thrust out my people nomore sayth the Lord God. * Ye shall haue a true weyght, a true ephah, and a true bath. The ephah and the bath shall be a lyke. One bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an homer, and so shall one ephah do: their measure shall be after the homer. * One shekle maketh. xx. sheles. So twenty sheles, and. xxv. and. xv. sheles make a ponde. Thys is the heaucofferpyng, that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely, the. xv. parte of an ephah, out of an homer of wheate, and the. xv. parte of an ephah, out of an homer of barley. The oyle shall be measured with the bath: euen the teth

¶ Ten bathes make one homer: for one homer fylleth ten bathes. And one lambe from two hundred shepe out of the pasture of Israel: for a meatofferpyng, burntofferpyng, and healthofferpyng, to reconyle them, sayth the Lord God. All the people of the lande shall geue thys heaucofferpyng with a fre wyll. Agayne, it shall be the pynces parte to offre burntofferpynges, meatofferpynges & drynck-offerpynges vnto the Lord, in the holy dayes, newe moones, sabbathes, and in all the hys feastes of the house of Israel. The synofferpyng, meatofferpyng, burntofferpyng & healthofferpyng shall be geue to reconyle the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord God: The fyrst daye of the first moneth thou shalt take a yonge bullocke without blemyshe, and cise the sanctuary. So the preste shall take of the bloude of the synofferpyng, and sprynckle it vnto y postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the altar, with the doze postes of the ynnner court. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daye of the moneth * (for soch as haue synned of ignorance, or beyng discaued) to reconyle the house w-

¶ Upon the same daye shall the pynce geue for hym selfe & all the people of the lande, a bullocke for a synofferpyng. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shall offre euer daye a bullocke and a ram, yare without blemyshe, for a burntofferpyng vnto y Lord: and an he-goate daylye for a synofferpyng. For y meat-offerpynges he shall geue euer an ephah to a bullocke, an ephah to a ram, and an hyu of oyle to an ephah. Upon the fyftenth daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes: w the synofferpyng, burnt-offerpyng, meatofferpyng, and with the oyle.

The xlvj. Chapter.

¶ The sacrifices of the Sabbath and of the newe moone. Thowowe which dozes they must go in, or come out of the temple, &c.

Thus sayth the Lord God: y doze of the inner court toward y east shall be shut the. vij. working dayes: but in the sabbath and in the daye of the newe moone, it shall be opened. Then shall y pynce come vnder the doze porche, and stande still wout by the doze cheke. So the prestes shall offre vpon his burnt and healthofferpynges. And he shall worchyp at the doze poste, and go hys waye forth agayne: but the doze shall nomore be shut tyll the enynge.

newe moones. This is now the burnt offering, & the prince shall bring unto the Lord upon the sabboth: seven lambs without blemish, a ram without blemish, & an ephah for a meat offering, with the ram. As for the lambs, he maye geue as many meat offerings to them as he will: and an hynde of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shall be a yonge bullocke without blemish, seven lambs and a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shall geue an ephah, & with the ram an ephah also for a meat offering: but to the lambs, what he maye come by. And euen an hynde of oyle to an ephah.

¶ Upon the solempne and hye feaste dayes this shall be the meat offering. An epha to a bullocke and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs, as many as he will: but euen an hynde of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the prince bringeth a burnt offering or a health offering with a fre wyl into the Lord, & east doze shall be opened unto hym, that he maye do with his burnt and health offerings, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goth forth, the doze shall be shut after him agayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a lamb of a yere olde without blemish for a burnt offering: this shall he do euery morning.

¶ And for a meat offering, he shall geue the syete parte of an epha, and the thyrde part of an hynde of oyle, to myngle with the cakes, euery morning. See, this shall be a dayly meat offering vnto the Lord: for an euering ordinance: and thus shall the lamb meat offering and oyle be geuen euery morning, for a dayly burnt offering.

¶ Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: If the prince geue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But if he wyl geue one of his seruantes, some of his heritage, it shall be his to the free yere, and then to returne agayne vnto the prince: for his heritage shall be his sonnes onely. * The prince also shall take none of the peoples inheritance, ner put them from their possession: but to his awne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that euery man maye haue his a wone.

¶ And he brought me thowowe the entrance at the syde of the doze to the habitacul of the sanctuary, that belongeth to the prestes and stode toward the north, and beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me. This is the place where the prestes shall dryght the trespass and syn offeringes, and bake meat offerings, & they nede not beare them into the outwarde court: and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost court, rounde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the court, there was yet a litle court. See in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a litle court of .xl. cubites lōge, & .xxx. cubites broad: these foure litle courttes were of one like measure: and there went a ridge wall rounde about them all foure, vnder the which there were hartes made rounde about. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the hechin where the ministers of the house shall dryght the flayne offeringes of the people.

The .xlviij. Chapter.

The vision of the waters that came out of the temple. The coastes of the lande of promise, and the diuision thereof by trybes.

¶ After this, he brought me agayne befoze the doze of the house: and beholde, there gushed out waters from vnder the postes of the house eastwarde, for the house stode toward the east, that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the southwarde. Then caryed he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vtmost doze that turneth eastwarde. * Beholde, there came forth the water vnder the right syde. Nowe whā the man that had the meter odde in his hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a .ij. cubites, and then he brought me thowowe the water, eue to the angles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thowowe the water agayne vnto the lynes: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thowowe the water vnto the lynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it socha ryuer, that I myght not wade thowowe it. The water was so depe, that it was nedeful to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, O thou sonne of man, and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

recouer. * And where this water cometh, there shall be much fysh. For all that cometh to this water, shall be lusty and whole. * By this ryuer shall the fyshers stande from Engaddi vnto En Glatim, & there shall spread out their nettes: for there shall be great heapes of fysh, lyke as in the mayne see. As for his claye and pyttes, they shall not be whole, for why? it shall be occupied for salt.

¶ This is the border of the lande vpon the northsyde, from the mayne see, as men go to zabada: namely hemath, Berotba, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and hemath vnto hazar Tichon, and lyeth vpon the coastes of haucran. Thus the borders fro the see forth, shall be hazar Euan the border of Damascus, the north and the borders of hemath, that is the north parte.

¶ The east syde shall ye measure from haucran and Damascus, from Galead and the lande of Israel by Iordane and so forth, fro the see coast, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

¶ The southsyde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of stryfe vnto Cadis the ryuer to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

¶ The west parte: namely the greatesee fro the borders thereof, tyll a man come vnto hemath: this is the west parte.

¶ This lande shall ye parte among you, according to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heritage for you, & and for the straungers that dwell amonge you, and beget children. For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of your awne household and contrey, and they shall haue heritage w you amonge the chyldren of Israel.

¶ Like in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye geue hym his heritage, sayth the Lord God.

The .xlviij. Chapter.

The lottes of the .xii. trybes. The partes of the possession of the prestes and of the temple, of the leuites, of the clype, of the prince are rehearsed. The lottes of the other trybes. The gates of the cite.

¶ These are the names of the trybes that lyeth vpon the northsyde, by the waye of helion, tyll thou comest vnto he-math and hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus toward the north besyde hemath: Dan shall haue his porcyon from the east quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan from the east syde vnto the west, shall Aser haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Aser from the east parte vnto the west shall Nephtaly haue his porcyon.

¶ Vpon the borders of Nephtaly from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto the west, shall Ruben haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Iuda haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Iuda fro the east part vnto the west, ye shall set asyde one porcyon of .xxv. myle odde longe and broad, lyke as an another porcyon fro the east syde vnto the west, wherin the sanctuary shall stande.

¶ As for the porcyon that ye shall separate, out for the Lord, it shall be .xxv. myle longe & .x. myle broad. Which separated holy porcyon shall belonge vnto these: namely to the prestes, toward the north .xxv. myle, and toward the west .x. myle broad, toward the east .x. myle broad also, & toward the south .xxv. myle longe, wherin the sanctuary of the Lord shall stande. See, this same place shall be the prestes, that are of the chyldren of Sadoch, and haue kept my holy ordinance: which went not astraye in the erreure of the chyldren of Israel, lyke as the leuites are gone astraye: and this separated pece that they haue of lande, shall be the most holy, harde vnto the borders of the leuites. And next vnto the prestes shall the leuites haue .xxv. myle longe, and .x. myle broad. This shall be on euery syde .xxv. myle longe, and .x. myle broad. Of this porcyon they shall sell nothing, ner make any permutatiō thereof, lest the chefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord.

¶ The other .v. myle after the breadth lyeth by the .xxv. myle, shall be comē: it shall belonge to the cite and to the suburbs for habitations, and the cite shall stande in the myddest thereof. Let this be the measure: toward the north parte .v. myle, & .iiij. myle, toward the south parte .v. myle, & .iiij. myle, toward the east part .v. myle, & .iiij. myle, toward the west parte .v. myle, & .iiij. myle.

¶ The suburbs harde vpon the cite, shall haue toward the north .i. and .ij. myle toward the south .i. and .ij. myle, toward the east .i. and .ij. myle, toward the west also .i. and .ij. myle. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the separated holy groude: namely .x. myle toward the east, and .x. myle toward the west, nexte vnto the holy porcyon: it and the increase thereof shall serue for their meat: that that labour in the cite. They that labour for the wealth of the cite. Shall mainteyne thys also, out of what trybe soever they be in Israel.

All that is separated of the xxv. & lxx. lxxv. & lxxx. vnde on the four partes, that shall ye put asyde for the separated porcyon of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the cite. The residue vpon both the sides of the sanctuary and possession of the cite, shall belonge to the pynce, before the place of the
xxv. & lxx. vnto the eastende, & before the place of the xxv. & lxx. westwarde vnto the borders of the cite: this shalbe the pynces porcyon.
Thys shalbe the holy place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stande in the myddest.
Moreover, from the leuytes and the cities possession, that lye in the myddest of the princes parte: loke what remaineth betwixt the border of Juda and the border of Benjamin, it shalbe the pynces.

Nowe of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west, shall Benjamin haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Benjamin from the eastsyde vnto the west, shall Simeon haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Simeon from the east parte vnto the west, shall Issakar haue his porcyon.
Vpon the borders of Issakar from the east syde vnto the west, shall Zabulon haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Zabulon from the east parte vnto the west, shall Gad haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Gad southward, the coastes shall reach from Chamar forth vnto the waters of Syrie to Cabes, & to the floude, euen vnto the mayne see.

The ende of the Prophecie of Ezechiel.

In the thyrde yere of the rayne of Iehoaikim king of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon vnto Jerusalem, & beleged it: * and the Lorde deliuered Iehoa-ikim the kyng of Juda into hys hande, with certayne ornaments of the house of God, which he caried away vnto the lande of Senar, to the house of his God, and there he brought them into hys goddes treasury. And the kyng spake vnto Aspha-naz the chefe chamberlayne, that he shulde brynge hym certayne of the chyldren of Israel, that were come of the kynges sede and of pynces, yonge surynгалdes without eny blemph, but saye and weltaured, instruct in all wysedome, conynge and understandyng: which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldehysh.

Vnto these the kyng appoynted a certaine porcyon of his awne meate, and of the wyne, which he dranke hym selfe, so to noursh them thre yere: that afterwarde they myght stande before the kyng. Amonge these now were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias. Vnto these, the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias, Sidrach, Misael, & Misach: and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynt with hym selfe, * that he wolde not be defyled thowhe the kynges meate, ner the wyne which he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberlayn, lest he shuld defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fa-uoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayn that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kyng, which hath appoynted you your meate and dryncke: lest he spye your faces to be worse lykynge then the other syn-галdes of your age, and so ye shall make me lose my head vnto the kyng.

Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, and sayd: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, and let vs haue potage to eate, & water to drin-ke: then loke vpon oure faces, & theys that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seest, so deale

to deale with thy seruantes. So he consented to them in thys matter, & proued them. x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, theys faces were better lykynge and fatter, then all the yonge synгалdes, which dyd eate of the kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore.
God gaue nowe these four synгалdes conyng and lernynge in all scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandynge of all visyons and dreames.
Nowe when the tyme was corypyed, that the kyng had appoynted to brynge in these yonge synгалdes vnto hym: the chefe chamberlay-ne brought the before Nabuchodonosor, and the kyng communed with them. But among them all were founde none soche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kyng which in all wysdome and matters of vnderstandynge, that he enquired of them, founde them ten tymes better, then all the sothsayers and charmers, p were in all his realme. And Daniel abode till, vnto the fyrst yere of kyng Cyrus.

The ii. Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyeth of the both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answered that they cannot seie it. The kyng commaunded all the wyle men of Babilon to be slayne. Daniel requyeth tyme to solute the questyon. The Lorde openeth the mystry vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kyng, & with hym hys dreame and the interpreta-cion therof. Of the eueryllynge kyngdome of the wrld.

* Job. viij. b.
Daniel. iij. a.
and. b. a.

In the secnde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thorow his sprete was vered, and his slepe broke from hym. Then the kyng commaunded to call to gether all the sothsayers, charmers, witches and caldres, for to shewe the kyng hys dreame. So they came, and stode before the kyng. And the kyng sayde vnto the: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my sprete was so troubled therewith, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this the Caldres answered the kyng & in the Synians speache: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruantes the drea-me, and we shal shewe the, what it meaneth.
The kyng gaue the Caldres theys answer and sayde: It is gone frome. If ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacyon therof, ye shal lye, and poure houses shalbe pylled. But if ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shal haue of me gyftes, rewarde and greate honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signifycacyon of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kyng must shewe his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kyng answered, saying: I perceaue of a tructh, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so moche as ye se, that the thynge is gone frome. Therfore ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye saye & dissemble w haynewordes, which ye speake before me, to put off the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, & so shall I knowe, if ye can shewe me, what it meaneth. Vpon this, the Caldres gaue answre before the kyng, and sayde: there is no mā vpon earth, that can tell the thynge, which the kyng speaketh of: yee, there is nether kynge, prince ner Lorde, that euer asked soche thynges at a sothlayer, charmer or Caldre: for it is a very harde matter, & the kyng re-quyeth. Nether is there any, that can certifie the kyng therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellynge is not amonge the creatures.

For the which cause the kyng was wroth with greate indignation, and commaunded to destroie all the wyle men at Babilon: & the proclamacyon wente forth, and the wyle mē were slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired of Arioch the kynges stewart, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth alredy to kyll soch as were wyle at Babilō.
He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beyng then the kynges debyte, Why hath the kyng proclaimed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Vpon this, wente Daniel vp, and desyred the kyng, that he myght haue leysoure, to shewe the kyng the interpretacyon, & then came he home agayne & shewed the thynge vnto Ananias, Misael & Azarias his companions: & they shulde be-seche the God of heauē for grace in thys secret, that Daniel & hys felowes with other soche as were wyle in Babilō, perished not. The was the mystry shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Daniel prayled the God of heauē. Daniel also cried loude, & sayde: O that the name of God myght be prayled for euer and euer, for wysdome and strength are hys awne: * he chaungeth the tymes and ages: * he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: * he geueth wysdome vnto the wyle, & vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darcknesse: for the lyght dwellith with hym. I thanke the, & prayse (O thou God of my fathers) & thou hast lent me wysdome & strength, & hast shewed me the thynge, that we desyred of the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Vpon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kyng had ordered to destroie the wyle at Babilō: he went vnto him, & sayde: destroie not soche as are wyle in Babilon, but brynge me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shewe the kyng the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel into the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue founde a man

a man amonge the prisoners of Iuda, that shall shewe the kyng the interpretacion. The answered the kyng, & sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. Art thou he that cast shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, & the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face, & sayde: As for this secreete, for the which the kyng maketh inquisicon: it is nether the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer ner the deuell conlurer, that ca certifie the kyng of it. * Only God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

* Math. xii. c.

¶ Thy dreame, & that which thou hast sene in thyn head vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng thou dydest cast in thyn mynde, what shulde come hereafter. So be that is opener of mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secreete is not shewed me, for eny wysdome that I haue, more then eny other lyuinge: but onely by myght shewe I kyng the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe I thoughtes of his awne herte. Thou kyng sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a greate Image, whose fygure was maruelous greate, and hys visage grymme. The Image heade was of fyne golde, hys brest & armes of siluer, his body and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, hys fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Math. xxi. c. Luke. xxi. b.

* This thou sawest tpyll, the tyme I, with out eny handes, there was heuen of, a stone which smote the Image vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer floozes, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greate mountayne, which fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now we wyll we shewe before the kyng, what it meaneth.

* Dan. ii. b.

* O kyng, thou art a kyng of kynges: for the God of heauē hath geue the a kyngdome, ryche, strength and maiesty: & hath deliuered the all thynges, that are amonge the children of men, the bestes of the felde, & the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer the all. Thou art that golden head. After I there shall arys another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thyn. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, & haue dominacyon in all lades. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: yee, euen as yron beatech euery thyng downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

¶ Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whiche neuer theles shall haue some of the yron grounde mixt with it for to moche as thou hast sene the yron mixt with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, signifieth: that it shall be a kyngdome partely stronge and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxt with claye: they shall myngle them selues with the fete of simple people, & yet not cōtynue one with another, lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a pottherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall I God of heauen set vp an euerlasting kyngdome whiche shall not perishe, & his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: yee, the same shall breake & destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

* Dan. ii. c.

And where as thou sawest, that without eny handes there was cut out of I mounte a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, & earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng, what wyll come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure.

* Dan. ii. c.

¶ Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, & bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shuld offre meat offeringes and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answered Daniel, and sayde: yee, of a trouth poure God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mysterie. So the kyng made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many & greate gyftes.

* Dan. ii. c.

* He made him ruler of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated I kyng for Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hym selfe remainyd still in the courte by the kyng.

* Gen. xli. c.

The iii. Chapter.

The kyng setteth by a golden Image, which he commaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they dyspysed the kynges commaundment. They are brought vnto the kyng and commaunded to worshippe the Image. They refuse to do it and are put into a burninge ouen. By belefe in God they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden Image to be made, whiche was lx. cubytes hie, and lyxe cubytes thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Bura in the land of Babylon & sent oute to gather together the dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the debtyes and shreues: with all the rulers of the land: that they myght come to I dedicacyon of the Image which Nabuchodonosor nosor the kyng had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debtyes and shreues with all I rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycacyon of the Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

¶ Nowe whē they stode before the Image, which Nabuchodonosor set vp, I bedel cried out with all his might: O ye people, kynges, dukes and tinges, to you be it sayde: that whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, which shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all maner of musick: ye fall downe and worshippe I golde Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe & boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast into an hote burninge ouen. Therefore, when all the folke herde the noyse of I trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies ad all kynde of Melody, then all I people, kynges and nacyons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golde Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

¶ Nowe were there certayne men of the Caldees, that wente euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer, Thou beynge kyng hast geuen a commaundment, that all men whē they heare I noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: shall fall downe and bowe them selues toward the golden Image: whoso then fell not downe & worshipped not that, he shulde be cast into an hote burninge ouen. Nowe are there certayne Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the officers of the lande of Babylon: namely, Sidrach, Misach and Abednago. These men (O kyng) regarde not thy commaundment, yee, they wyll not serue thy goddes, ner bowe them selues to I golden Image, that thou hast set vp.

* Dan. ii. g.

¶ Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach and Abednago shulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before I kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, & sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, wyll not ye serue my goddes: nor bowe poure selues to the golden Image, that I haue set vp. Well, be redy hereafter, whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshippe the Image which I haue made. But yf ye worshippe it not, ye shall be cast immediatly in to an hote burninge ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes: Sidrach, Misach and Abednago answered the kyng, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whō we serue, * is able to kepe vs fro the hote burninge ouen (O kyng) and can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wyll not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we will not serue thy goddes, ner do reuerce to I Image, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacyon, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shuld be made leue tymes hotter, then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest workmen that were in his hote, for to bynde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burninge ouen.

* Dan. xvi. g.

¶ So these men were bounde in their robes hosen, shues with their other garmentes, & cast into the hote burninge ouen. for the kynges commaundment was so stryct, and the ouen was exceeding hote. As for the me that put in Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, I flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre me Sidrach, Misach & Abednago fell downe in the hote burninge ouen, beynge faste bounde. The Nabuchodonosor I kyng marueled, and stode vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: dyd not ye cast these thre me bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kyng: yee, O kyng. He answered, and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure me going lowse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte: and the fourth is I lyke I sone of God to loke vnto.

* Dan. ii. d.

¶ Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burninge ouen: he spake also, and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, ye seruantes of the hye God, go forth, & come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach & Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes & nobles, & the kynges counsell came together to se these me, * vpo whō the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In somoch I the very here of their heed was not burnt, & theyr clothes vntchaunged: yee, there was no smell of fier felt vpo them.

* Dan. iii. a.

¶ Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde, Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach and Abednago: * which hath sent his angell, ad defended his seruantes, I put theyr trust in him: that haue altered the kynges commaundment: and leoperde their bodies ther vpo: rather then they wolde serue oz worshippe eny other God, excepte their atone God onely. ¶ Therefore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynges and tinges, which speake any blasphemy agaynst I God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shall be pyyled: Because, * there is no God that maye saue, as this. So the kyng promoted Abuchodonosor kyng vnto all people, kynredes and tinges that dwell vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplied amog you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous worke, y the hys God hath wrought vpon me. O, howe great are his tokens, and howe myghtie are his wonders: * his kyngdome is an euerlasting kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

* Dan. ii. a.

I Abuchodonosor being at rest in myne house, and flozthyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afayred: & the thoughtes that I had vpo my bedd, with the visions of myne head, troubled me. * Then sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babilon shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and conurers of deuils: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coude not shewe me: tyll at last, there came one Daniel (other wyse called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) which hath the sperte of y holy goddes in him, to whom I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthazar, thou prince of Sothelayers: for so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the sperte of the holy Goddes and no secrete is hy: from the, tell me therfore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue seene) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and behold, there stode a tre vpon the grounde, which was very hye, greete and myghty: the heygth reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were sayre, he had very moche frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the howes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a vision vpo my bed: & behold, a watcher & the holy one came downe fro heauen, & cryed myghtely, saying. Hewe downe y tree, bryake of his bzaunches, make of his leaues, and scatere his frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye fro vnder him, and the foules from his bzaunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of hys rote still in the earth, & bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, & he shall haue hys parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wyld beastes.

That mans herte of his shall betake from hym, and a beastes herte shall be geuen hym, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone vpo him.

This erande of the watcher, is a comaundment grounded and fought out in the counsell of him, that is most holy: to learne me for to vnderstande, that the best hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, & geueth them, to whom it lyketh him, and bringeth the very out castes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kyng Abuchodonosor haue seene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so moche as all y wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the sperte of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) helde hys peace by the space of an houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kyng spake, & sayde: O Balthazar, lett nether the dreame nether the interpretacyon thereof feare the. Balthazar answered, saying: O my Lorde, this dreame happeth to thyne enemies, and the interpretacyon to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great & myghty, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and hys bredth into all the world: whose leaues were sayre, and y frute moche: vnder the which the beastes of y felde had theyr habitacyon and vpo whose bzaunches the foules of the ayre dyd sit.

Then thou (O kyng) art the tre, greete and stronge. Thy greatnes increaseth, & reacheth vnto the heauē, so doth thy power to y endes of the earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, y came downe from heauē, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron & stele: he shall be wet with the dewe of heauē, and hys parte shall be with y beastes of the felde, tyll seuen yeares become and gone vpo hym: This (O kyng) is the interpretacyon, yee, it is the very deuyce of hym, that is best of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwellinge shall be with the beastes of y felde: with grashe shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with y dewe of the heauen: yee, seuen yeares shall come, & go vpon the, tyll thou knowe, * y the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & geueth the to whom he lyketh. Moreover, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tree shulde be left still in the grounde: it betokeneth, y thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that y power cometh from heauen. Wherefore, O kyng, be cōtent with my counsell, that thou mayest redeme thy synnes with almyse: * and thyne offences with mercy to pooze people: for thyng shall be an helynge of thyne erreure.

So after xii. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde. This is the greete cye of Babylon, which I my selfe with my power and strength haue made a kynges court, for the honour of my mayestye. While these wordes were yet in y kynges mouth there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Abuchodonosor, to the be it spokē: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mēs company: thy dwellinge shall be with the beastes of y felde, so y thou shalt eate grashe lyke as an oxe, tyll seuen yeares become and gone ouer the. euen vntill thou knowest, that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he may geue them, vnto whom it please him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Abuchodonosor. so y he was cast out of mēys company, and dyd eate grashe lyke an oxe. hys body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll hys heares were as great as Eagles fethers, and hys nayles lyke byrdes claws.

When this tyme was past, I Abuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauē, and myne vnderstandinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thackes vnto the hyghest. I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euer more, * whose power endureth alwaye, and hys kyngdome from one generation to another: in comparyson of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

My great estates and Princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyppe.

Then dyd I Abuchodonosor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauē: for all his workes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As for those that go on proude, he is able to byngne them downe.

The. v. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon, abusynge the beastes of the temple, trech an hande wyntinge in the wall. The sothelayers called of the kyng, cannot expounde the wyntinge. Daniel is called, which readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar begynne to praye, and is restored into his realme.

Kyng Balthazar made a great banquet to his thousand Lodes: with all these thousande he made great feare, and when he was droncken with wyne commaunded to byng hym the golden and syluer vessels: * which hys father Abuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his Lodes with his quene and concubynes myght drinke therout.

* i. pa. xxxvi. c.

So they brought the golden vessell, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lodes house at Jerusalem. Then the kyng and his Lodes with his quene and concubines drinke out of them. They droncke wyne, and praysed theyr Idoles of golde, syluer, copper yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared 23 syngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wyntinge, ryght ouer agaynst the candell stycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: & the kyng sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ryntes of his body shoke, and hys knees smote one agaynst y other. * Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtely, that they shulde byngne hym the charmers, Caldees and conurers of deuils. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede this writing, & shewe me the playne meaning therof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde part of my kyngdome.

* Jerem. l. a.

* Dan. ii. a.

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude nether rede y wyntinge, nee shewe the kyng what it signified. The was the kyng fore afayred, in so moche, y hys colour chainged, and his Lodes were fore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng & his Lodes, y quene went vp herselfe into the banquet house, and spake vnto the kyng, sayinge: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sperte of the holy goddes within him, * as it was seene in thy fathers dayes. he hath vnderstandinge and wysdome lyke y goddes. He the kyng Abuchodonosor thy father made this man chiefe of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees & readers of destines: because that soche an aboundant sperte, knowledge & wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee, euen in Daniel, whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

* Dan. ii. a.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde. Art thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whom my father the kyng brought out of Ieruzalem? I haue heard speake of the, that thou hast the sperte of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandinge, and that there hath bene greete wysdome founde in the.

In y. Nowe haue there bene brought me, wife & conuenge charmers, to reade thys wytyng and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coude not tell me, what thys matter signified. Then hearde I saie, that thou canst expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doubtis. Well than, yf thou canst reade thys wytyng, & shewe me the meanynge therof thou shalt be clothed wth purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrd parte of my kyngdome.

The vi. Chapter.

Daniel is made ruler ouer the Lyones. The proclamation of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamation of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kyng as transgressoure. He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is deliuered by lach in God. Daniels accusers are put vnto the Lyons to be towe in sonder. Darius by the proclamation of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an. C. and. xx. Lordes, whiche shoulde be in all his kyngdome about. Aboue these he set thre Prynces (of whom Daniel was one) that the Lordes myght geue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vndiscaled.

But Daniel excelled all these Prynces and Lordes, for the sperte of God was plentifulous in him: so that the kyng was mynded to set hym ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Prynces and Lordes sought, to prycke out in Daniel some quarell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coude they fynde none occasyon ner faute vpon hym. For why: he was so saythfull, that there was no blame ner dishonesty founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we wyl get no quarell agaynst thys Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon this, wente the prynces & Lordes together vnto the kyng, & sayde thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greates estates of the realme: as the Prynces, Dukys, Senators and Judges, are determed to put oute a commaundement of the kyng, & to make a sure statute: namely, y^e whoso deliuereth any peticyon, ether of any God or man (within this. xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of the, O kyng: the same person may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng, confyrme thou this statute, and make a wytyng: that the thing which the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wytyng, and confyrmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode y^e the wytyng was made, he wente into hys house: and y^e windowes of his wall toward Jerusalem stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys peticyon, and prayd hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afoze tyme.

Then these men made seache, and founde Daniel makynge hys peticyon. & prayinge vnto hys God. So they came to the kyng, & spake befoze him concernynge his commaundement, sayinge: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute, y^e within. xxx. dayes who so requyrez his peticion of any God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into the denne of the Lyons? The kyng answered swered, and sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes & Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the prisoners of Iuda & kyng, regardeth nether the, ner thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his peticyon thre tymes a daye. When the kyng hearde these wordes, he was soze greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto y^e Sunne went downe, to y^e intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceauynge the kynges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kyng) y^e the lawe of the Medes & Perses is, that y^e commaundement & statute which the kyng maketh, maye not be altered. * Then y^e kyng had them byngge Daniel, and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, eu^r he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layd vpon the hole of y^e denne: this the kyng sealed with his awne synge, and with the synge of hys prynces: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shoulde not be broken.

So the kyng wente into hys palace, and ate no meate y^e nyght nether was there any mynstrelly brought in befoze hym, nether coude he take any slepe. But by tymes in the mornynge at the breake of the daye, y^e kyng arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yee, the kyng spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruant of the helpyng God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kyng. O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * Wh^{er} God hath sent his angell, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For why: mine vngyltynesse is founde out befoze hym. And as for the, O kyng, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kyng exceedinge glad, & commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon him. For he put hys trust in hys God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, y^e kyng commaunded to byngge them, and to cast the in the Lyons denne: them, they chyldezen and they wyues. * So the Lyons had the mastery of them, and brake all they bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

* After thys, wrote kyng Darius vnto all people, kyndredes, and tuges, that dwelt in all landes: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all my domynon and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in a we of Daniels God.

* For he is the lypynge God, which aby- * Dan. xliij. & dethener: hys kyngdome shal not fayle, and his power is euerlastynge. * It is he that deliuereth, and saueh: he doth wonders and maruelous workes, in heauen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the regne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The vii. Chapter.

A vision of. liij. beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of. liij. kyngdomes of the world: Of the power & increase of Smythia. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Chyia.

In y^e fyrst yere of Balthazar kyng of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in hys heade vpon hys bedde. Which dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys: Daniel spake and sayde: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure greates beastes came vp from the see, one vnlke another.

The fyrst was as a lion, and yet had he * Regles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken a waye from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans herte.

Beholde, y^e secorde beaste was lyke a bea- * re, & stode vpon the one fyde. Among his teeth in his mouth he had. iij. greates longe teeth, & it was sayde vnto him. Arise, cate vp, moch flesch. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leoparde, this had wynges as a foule, * enen foure vpon the backe. Thys beaste had foure heades, and there was power geuen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beaste was geymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had great yron teeth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the resydue vnder hys fete. It was farr vnlke the other beastes that were befoze it: for it had * ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge the, another lytell horne, befoze wh^{er} there were thre of the fyrst hornes plucked awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakynge presumptuous thynges. * I looked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyll y^e olde aged sat him downe. His clothinge was as whyte as snowe, and the hearres of hys head lyke the pure woll. Hys throne was lyke the fyre flame, and hys wheles as the burning fyre. There drew forth a fyre streame, and went out from hym. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued him. x. tymes ten thousande stode befoze hym. The iudgement was set, and the bookes opened. Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which the horne spake. I beholde,

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but they luyes were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a visyō by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, which wente vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him. Then gaue he him * power & dignitie regall, that all people, trybes and tūres shulde serue him. * his power is an euercastinge power, which shall neuer be put downe: & his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. These foure great beastes, are foure kynges which shall aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hyst, and possesse it tyll moze & moze for a longe season. That fourth beaste shalbe y fourth kyngdome vpo earth: it shalbe moze then all other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, ad destroye all other landes.

* The ten hornes, are ten kynges, y shall aryse out of y kyngdome, after whom there shall stāde vp another, which shalbe greater then the fyrst. he shall subdue thye kynges, & shall speake wordes agaynst y hyst of all: he shall destroye the sayntes of the most hyst, * and thyncke, y he maye chaunge tymes and lawes. They shalbe geue vnder hys power, * vntyll a tyme, two tymes, & halfe a tyme. But the iudgement shalbe kepte, so that hys power shalbe take from him, for he shall be destroyed, and peryshe at the last. As for y kyngdome, power and all might that is vnder der the heauen: it shalbe geue to the holy people of the most hyst, * whose kyngdome is euercastinge: yee, all powers shall serue and obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged * but the wordes I kepte tyll in my herte.

The viii. Chapter.

A visyō of a ramme betwene a ramme & an hegoate. The vnderstandyng of the visyō is of the battell betwene the kyng of Babilonia and the kyng of the Persians. Of the Hammele kyng Antiochus.

In the thyrde yere of the raygne of a kyng Balshazar, there appeared a visyō vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * fyrst. I sawe in a visyō (and whē I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe ctye, which lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the visyō, me thought I was by the ryuer of Tylai.

Then I looked vp, & sawe: & beholde there stode before y ryuer, a ramme, which had two hornes: and these two hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, & the hyst came vp behinde. I sawe y this ramme pushed with his hornes, agaynst y west, agaynst y north, & agaynst the south: so that no beastes might stande before him, ner defende them from his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto thys, & then came there an he goate from the west ouer y whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous wretchen horne betwixte his eyes, & came vnto the ramme, that had the two hornes (whō I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcelly vpo him with his might. I sawe him drawe nye vnto the ramme, beinge very scarce vpo hym: yee, he gaue hym soche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Nether had y ramme so moch strength as to stande before him: but he cast hym downe, troade hym vnder hys fete: & no man was able to deliuer the ramme out of hys power.

The goate waxed excedyngly greafe, and whē he was at the strōgest, his great, horne was broken also. * Then grewe there other foure soch lyke in the Trade, toward the. iiii. wyndes of the heauen. Yee, out of one of the leest of these hornes, there came vpyet another horne, which waxed maruelous greafe: toward the south, toward the east, and toward the sayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vpye to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yee, it grewe vpye vnto the prynce of the hoost, from whom the daylye offerynge was take, and the place of hys Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst y daylye offerynge (because of wyckednesse) that it myght cast downe y veryte to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thynges all thynges, that it wente aboute.

And this I hearde one of the sayntes speakinge, which saynte sayde vnto one that asked this question. Howe longe shall this visyō of the daylye sacrifice and of the wastinge abhominacyon endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fete? And he answered him: Vnto y eueryng & the moynyng, euen two thousande and thre hundredth dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be clenched agayne.

Nowe when I Daniel had sene this visyō: and sought for the vnderstandyng of it: beholde, there stode before me a thinge like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Tylai, which cryed, and sayd: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the visyō. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afraied at hys commyng, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me, O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this visyō be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakinge vnto me, I waxed saynte, so y I suncke downe to the groude. But he toke holde vpon me, and sett me vp agayne, sayinge: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in y last wyck: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfilled.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kyng of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kyng of Greke lande: the greafe horne that stode betwixte hys eyes, that is the principall kyng. But wher as it brake, and foure other rose vpye in the Trade: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stande vp * foure kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growyng) there shall aryse a kyng of an vnghamfast face, which shalbe wyle in darcke speakinges.

he shalbe myghty and stronge, but not in his awne strength. he shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospeere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thowre hys craftynesse, falsch shall prospeere in hys hande, hys herte shalbe proude, and many one shall be put to death in his welthyngesse. he shall stāde vpye agaynst the Prynce of Prynces, * but he shalbe destroyed wythout hande. And thys visyō that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as y eueryng and the moynyng. * Therefore wyrt thou vpye thys syght, for it wylbe longe or it come to passe.

Vpon this was I Daniel very saynte, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and was cleued at the visyō, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

The ix. Chapter.

Daniel despyeth to haue that perfolmsh of God which he had promysed concerninge the returne of the people from theyr banysment in Babilonia. A true confesyon. Daniels prayre to heaue. Gabriel the Angell expoundeth vnto hym the visyō of the fyr. weake. The anoyntyng of Chyph. The buryng agayne of Iherusalem vnder Achemias. The death of Chyph.

In the fyrst yere of Darius the sonne of Ahasuerus, * whych was of the seide of the Medes, ad was made kyng ouer the realme of the Caldees: yee, euen in y fyrst yere of his raygne, I Daniel despyred to knowe the yearly nobre out of the bookes, wherof the Lorde spake vnto * Jeremy the prophete: that Iherusalem shulde lye waste. lxx. yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lorde, for to praye and make myne intercession, with fastyng, sacke clothe & ashes, I prayde before the Lorde my God, and knowledged, sayinge.

* O Lorde, thou greafe and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy wyth them, which loue the, and do thy commandmentes. * We haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedyent and gone back: yee, we haue departed from all thy preceptes and iudgementes.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruantes the Prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges and princes, to oure forefathers, and to all the people of the lāde. * O Lorde, righte cōfessyōn belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertayneth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe thys daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Iherusalem. Yee, vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nye: thowre out all lādes: wher in thou hast strowed them, because of the offences, that they had done agaynst the.

Yee, O Lorde, vnto vs, to oure kynges & princes, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, * that haue offended the belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde oure God, perstayneth mercy and foregouernesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from hym, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde oure God, to walke in hys lawes, * whych he layed before vs by hys seruantes the Prophetes: yee, all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore, the curse & othe * that is written in the lawe of Moyses the seruāt of God (agaynst whō we haue offended) is poured vpo vs. * And he hath perfolmmed his wordes, whych he spake agaynst vs, & agaynst oure iudges that iudged vs: to byngne vpon vs soch a greafe plage, as neuer was vnder Iherusalem. Yee, all this plage, as it is written in the lawe of Moyses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before y Lorde our God, oure God, that we myght turne agayne fro once wickednesse, & to be learned in thy ve-rite. Therefore hath the Lorde made haste, to lypunge this plague vpon vs, for the Lorde our God is ryghteous, in all his workes, whych he doth: for why? we wolde not hearken vnto hys voyce.

* And now, O Lorde our God: thou that with a myghtie hande hast brought thy people out of Egypte, to get thy selfe a name which remaineth this daye: we haue sinned O Lorde, & done wickedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the) fro thy cyte Jerusalem thy holy hill. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wickednesse of oure forefathers is Jerusalem & thy people abhorred, of all the that are aboute vs: Now therefore, O our God, heare the prayer of thy seruant, and hys intercession. O let thy face shine ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth waste: for the Lordes sake.

O my God, encline thine eare, and he-ken) at the least for thine awne sake) open thine eyes: beholde howe we be desolated, pee, and the cytie also, whych is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before thee in oure awne ryghteousnes, no: but only in thy great mercyes. O Lorde, heare: O forgiue Lorde, O Lorde conspyre, tarpe not ouer longe: but for thine awne sake do it. O my God: for thy cyte and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowledgyng myne awne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makinge so myne intercessyons before the Lorde my God, for þe holly lilles sake of my God: yee, while I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the mā Gabriel. (* whā I had sene afoze in the vision) came flyinge to me, and touched me about the offering tyme in the eueninge. He informed me, & spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he, I am nowe come to make the vnderstande it. For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so diuised, & therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? *
for thou art a man greatly beloued.

Wherefore, pondeze the matter well, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the visyō.
Lxx. wekes are determed ouer thy people, and ouer the holy cytie: that the wickednes maye be consumed, that the synne maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bypunge in euerlastinge ryghteousnes-se, to fulfill the visyons and the prophetes.
And to anoynte the moost holy one. Under-stande this then, and marcke it well: that fro the tyme it shalbe concluded * to go and repayze Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ (or þe anoynted) prince: there shalbe seuen wekes: Then shall the stretes and walles be buyl-ded agayne. lxx. wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these lxx. wekes, shall Christ be slayne, and they shall haue no plea surin hym. Then shall there come a people with the Prince, and destroye the cyte & the Sanctuary: and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacyon shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for the space of a weke: & when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meatoffringe. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacyon, tyll it be destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shall continue vnto the ende.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ There appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lins nen, which sheweth hym wherefore he is sent.

In the thyrde yere of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wyse called Balthasar) a matter, yee, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto this. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the visyon was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for þe space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to cate bread: as for fleshe and wyne there came none wythin my mouth: No, I dyd not once anoynte my self, tyll the wole thre wekes were out.

Vpon the .xxiiij. daye of the first moneth, I was by the greates floude, called Tygris.
* I lyft vp myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, a mā clothed in lins, whose lynes were gyrred by with fyne golde of Araby: his body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lychtenyng, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, hys armes and fete were lyke fayne glysteryng metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

* I Daniel alone sawe thys visyon: & the men that were wyth me, sawe it not: but a greates fearfulness fell vpon them, so þe they fled awaye, and byd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greates vision, so longe tyll there remayned nomore strength wythin me: yee, I lost my coloure clene, I wasted awaye, and my strenght was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And behold, an hande touched me, whych set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayinge vnto me. * O Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp treblyng. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why, sence þe fyrst daye that thou

that thou set thine herte to vnderstande, and bydest chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganest to speake had not the prynce ouer the kyngdom of the Per-ses withstode me. xij. dayes. But lo, * Michael one of the chiefe prynces, came to helpe and I was left to contynue ther wyth the kinges of Persia, & am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wylbe longe yet of the visyon be fulfilled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast downe my head to the grounde and helde my tounge. Beholde, there touched my lippes one very lyke vnto a man.
Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my iointes are lowed in the visyō, and there is nomore strength within me. Howe may my Lordes seruant then take wyth my Lord/seynge there is no strenght in me, so that I ca-not take my breath? Vpon this there touched me agayne, one moche lyke a man * and conforted me, sayinge. O thou man so well be-loued, feare not: be content, take a good hert vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayde.
Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayd he: knowest thou wherefore I am come vnto the: nowe wyl I go agayne to fygght wyth the prynce of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the pryce of Greke-lande shall come. Nevertheless, I wyl shewe þe þe bypunge, that is fast noted in the scripture of truth. And as for all yonder matters, there is none that helpeth me in the, but Michael poure prynce.

The .xi. Chapter.

¶ A prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, and of the bonde therof, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that fere vnto the kyngdome of Egypte, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria per-secuteth, which figureth vnto vs Antychrist. The pyde of Antiochus.

Ad in the fyrst yere of Darius of Media, I stode by hym, to co-forte him, and to strenghten hym, & nowe wyl I shewe þe truth.
Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chiefe power of hys ryches, he shall prouoke every man agaynst the realme of Grekelande. * Then shall there arys-e yet a myghtye kyng, that shall rule wyth greates dominion, and do what hym lyst. *
And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shalbe destroyed, and deuoyded towarde the four wyndes of the heaumen. They that come after hym, shall not haue soche power & dominyon as he: but hys kyngdome shalbe scattered, yee, euen amonge other then thole.

And the kyng of the south shalbe myghty, & then his other prynces. And one shall be stroger then he, & shall rule hys dominyon wyth greates power.

And in the ende of yeaeres they shalbe loyned together, and the kynges daughter of þe southe shall come to the kyng of the North, for to make frendshyppe, but she shall not op-tayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to endure thozowe his myght: but she, and soch as brought her (pee and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shalbe deliuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade: whych wyth power of armes shall go thozowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to hys strength. As for their Idols and prynces, with their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shall cary the awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall reigne more yeaeres then the kyng of the north. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shalbe slayne to turne agayne into hys awne lande. Wherefore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, & shall gather together a myghtye greates host of people: and one of them shall come, and go thozowe lye a water floude: then shall he retorne, and go forth wyth despyng and boastynge vnto his awne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry and shall come forth to fight agaynst the kyng of the north: yee, he shall bypunge a greates multitude of people together, and a greates heape shalbe geuen into his hande: these shall he cary awaye wyth greates pryde, for so moche as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheless, he shall not preuaile.
For the kyng of the north shall gather (of the new) a greates heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne tyme & yeaeres) wyth a myghtye hoste and ex-celdyng greates good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynst the kyng of the south, so that þe wicked chyldren of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfill the visyon) & then fall. So the kyng of the north shall come to laye sege, and to take the strong fenced cyties: And the power of the of the south shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so strong, as to resyst hym.
Shortly, when he cometh, he shall badle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shall stande in the pleasaunt countre, whych thozowe him shal-be destroyed: he shall set hys face wyth all hys power to optayne hys kyngdom, and to be lyke it. Yee, that shall he do, and geue him vnto the daughters amonge women, to de-stroye hym. But he shall fayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shall he

The booke of the

Prophete Oseas.

The first Chapter.

The time wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by takinge an harlot to his wyfe, signified the disobedience of the people. The destruction of the kingdomes of Israel, & of the Iudaes, is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came unto Oseas the sonne of Beery in the dayes of Oseas, Joathan, Ahas and Iezekias kynges of Iuda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam sonne of Joas kinge of Israel.

At first, when the Lord spake unto Oseas he sayde vnto hym. * So thy wyfe, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the lande hath committed greafe whoredome agaynst the Lord. So he wente, & toke Somer the daughter of Deblaim: whych conceaued, and brought forth a sonne. And the Lord sayde vnto hym: call his name Iezrael, for * I will shortly auenge the bloude of Iezrael vpon the house of Iezrael, & will bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then will I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Iezrael.

She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto hym. Call her name. Lozubaham (that is, not optayninge mercy) * for I will haue no ppye vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put the cleane out of remembrance. * Neuerthelesse, I will haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and will saue the, euen thowowe the Lord thy God. But I will not delpue them thowowe my bowe, swerde, battell, hozies or hozsmen.

Nowe, when she had weaned Lozubaham, she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayde he: call his name, Loamp. For why? ye are not my people, therfore will not I be your God. And though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be as the sande of the see, whych can nerther be measured ner tolde: yet in the place where it is sayde vnto the * ye be not my people: euen there shall it be thus reported of them * they be the chyldren of the lpyngge God. * Then shall the chyldren of Iuda and the chyldren of Israel be gathered together agayne and chose them selues one head, and then departe out of the lande: for greafe shall be the daye of Israel.

The ii. Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentance.

All poure brethren, that they are my people: and poure systernie, that they haue optayned mercy. As for poure mother, ye shall chyde her, as ye childe her.

to be my people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall the people be delpued, yet, all those that be founde wyrtten in the booke. * And any of them that slepe in the dust of the earth, shall awake: some to the euerslastyng lyfe, some to perpetuall shame & reppose. * The wyse (such as haue taught other) shall glorye, as the lpyngge of heauen: and those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as stars, wylde without ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and seale the booke tyll the last tyme. And any shall go aboute here and there, and then shall knowledge increase. So I Daniel looked, & beholde, there stode two: one vpon thes thole of the water, the other vpon pondet lyde. And one of the sayd vnto hym, which was clothed in lpyen and stode aboute vpon the waters of the floude. How longe shall it be to the ende of these wondrous workes?

* Then herde I the man wth the lpyen clothes, which stode aboute vpon the waters of the floude: whiche he helde vp by right hande vnto heauen, and swore by hym whych lyncheth for ever: that it shall tary for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: & when the power of the holy people is cleane scatred abroad, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my Lord, what shall happen after that? He answered: So thy wyfe Daniel, for these wordes shall be closed vp & sealed, tyll the last tyme: and many shall be purged, clenched & tryed. * But the vngodly shall lpye wychedly * and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstadyng. As for such as haue vnderstadyng, they shall regarde it. And fro the tyme forth the daye of offeryng shall be put downe & the abhominable desolaciō sett vp, there shall be a daye. * And dates * dwell is hym, that wayteth, & cometh to the thousande. iij. C. and xxxv. dayes.

So thou thy wyfe now tyll it be ended: take thy rest, and byde thy lot, tyll the dayes haue an ende.

The ende of the prophete of Daniel.

set his face vnto the. Iles, and take many of them. A prince shall stoppe hym, to be him a shame, besyde the confusion that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he tourne agayne to his awne lande, stumbe and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon hym & dyd hym violence, shall stande in his place, haue a pleasant kyngdome: and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, & that nerther in wyath, ner i battell. In his stede there shall aryse a vyle person, not holden worthy of a kynges dignitie: this shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome wth saye wordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yet, and agaynst the prince of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath taken truce wth him, he shall haue disceatfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome hym wth a small floche: and so with craftynesse to get him to the lastest place of the lande, and to deale other wyse, the ether his fathers or grauid fathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thyng, that they had robbed & spoyled, yet, and all theyr substance: pmyngynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, and that for a tyme. Hys power and herte shall be sterred vp wth a greafe armie agaynst the kyng of the south where thowowe the kyng of the south shall be moued then vnto battell, with a greafe & myghtye hoost also. Neuerthelesse, he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yet, they that eate of his meate shall hurte hym: so that his hoost shall fall, & many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shall be mynded to do myschefe, and talke of disceate at one table: but they shall not prospere, for why, the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme apoynted. * Then shall he go home agayne into his awne lande with great good, and set his hert agaynst the holy couenaunt, he shall bulpe agaynst it, and then retorne home. At the tyme apoynted he shall come agayne, and go towarde the south. So shall it happen other wyse then at the first, yet ones agayne. And why? * I shalpe with Italpans shall come vpon him, that he may be smytte and turne agayne: that he may take indignaciō agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yet, he shall turne him, and drawe soch vnto him, as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the daye offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable desolaciō. And soch as breake the couenaunt shall be flatter wth saye wordes. But the people that wyll knowe their God, shall haue the ouerhande and prosper. * Those also that haue vnderstandyng among the people shall enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted wth swerde, wth fyre, wth captiuitie & wth the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be lett vp wth a lytle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them saynedly.

Yet some of those which haue vnderstandyng shall be persecuted also, that they may be tryed, purged and clenched, tyll the tyme be out: for there is yet another tyme apoynted. The kyng shall do what hym lyst: he shall exalte and magnifye him selfe agaynst all that is God. Yet, he shall speake marvellous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes wherein he shall prospere, so longe tyll the * wyath be fulfilled, for the conclusiō is deuised already. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vnto wme. Yet, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye him selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worshippe the myghtie skoute God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall be honoure wth golde and syluer, wth precious stones and pleasant Jewels.

This shall he do, thowowe his stryde fenced places, settinge vpe his straunge God whom he confesteth and encreasynge his glorye. Soche as will receaue hym, & take hym for God, he shall geue the greafe worshippe and power: yet, and make the Lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande wth rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south stryue wth him: and the kyng of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him wth charrettes, hozsmen and w a greafe nauy of shippes. He shall come into the landes, destroye and go thowowe: he shall entre also into the saye pleasaunt lade: Many cyties and countres shall decaye * excepte Edom, Moab and the best of the chyldren of Ammon, whych shall escape from his hande. He shall stretch forth his handes vpon the countrees, & the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. For thowowe his gopyng in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia and Ethiopia. * Neuerthelesse, the tydynges out of the East and the north shall trouble him, for the whyche cause he shall goo forth to destroye and rote owte a greafe multitude. The tentes of his palace shall be pytched betwyxe the two sees, vpon the hill of the noble Sanctuary, for he shall come to his dethe, * and then shall no man helpe hym.

The xij. Chapter.

The prophete the resurrection of the dead. The darkness of the prophete of Daniel.

The prophete

* Jer. vi. a. her, and reprove her * for she is not my people, neither am I her husbande, onlesse she put away her whoredome out of my sight, & her aduoutry fro her brestes. If no I shall strypp her naked, & sett her * euen as she came in to the world: yee, I shall laye her waste, & make her lyke a wyldernesse, & slaye her for thyeste. I shall haue no pite also vpon her chylde * for they be the chyliden of fornicacyon. Their mother hath broke her wedlocke, and she that bare the * is come to confusyon. For she sayde: I will go after my louers, & geue me my water and my bread, my woll & flaxe, my oyle and my dyricke. But I will hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her footstepes: and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shall see them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye: well, I will go turne againe to my fyrst husbande, for at y tyme was I better at ease, the nowe. But this wolde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, spicer & gold * whych she hath hangd vpon Baal.

* Jer. vii. b. Wherefore, & nowe will I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and set a rayne my woll & my flax, whych I gaue her, to couer her shame. * And nowe will I discouer her foolysheesse, euen in the sight of her louers, & no man shall helpe her out of my handes. & moreover, I will take awaye all her myrrour * her holy dayes, her newmoones, her Sabbathes and all her solempne feastes: I will destroye her vncircumcised & spgyt, though she sayeth: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I will make it a wodde, and wylde beestes shall cate it vp. I will punyssh her also for y dayes of Baal * wherein she censd hym, deckyng hym wyth her earpynges & cheynes: wher she folowed her louers, and forgot me, sayeth the Lorde.

* Jer. vii. c. Wherefore beholde, I will call her agayne bringe her into a wyldernesse, & speake frendly vnto her: there will I geue her her vniuersal des agayne, yee & the * valley of Achor also to the we her hope and comforte. Then shall she syng there * as in the tyme of her yowthe, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the lade of Egypte. Then (sayeth y Lorde she shall saye vnto me) O my husbande, & shall call me nomore Baal: for I will take awaye those names of Baal fro her mouth, yee, she shall neuer remembre their names any more. * & he will I make a couenaut with them, with the wylde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and wyth every thyng that crespeth vpon the earth.

* Jer. vii. d. * As for howe, swerde and battel, I will destroye loch out of the lande, & will make the to slepe safely. * Thus will I mary the vnto myne awne selfe for euermore: yee, eue to my selfe will I mary y, in righteousnesse, in equitye, in lounge kyndnesse and mercy. In sayth also will I mary the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme will I thewe my selfe frendly & gracious vnto the heuens, sayeth the Lorde: and the heauens shall helpe the earth and the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, & they shall helpe Ierusalem. * I will sowe them vpon earth, for a seide to myne awne selfe, & I will haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy. And to them whych were not my people, I will saye: thou art my people and he shall saye: thou art my God.

The iij. Chapter.

Of the loue of God toward the people.

Ihen sayde the Lorde to me: * So pet thy waye & worke an aduoutrous womā, whō thy neyghboure loueth, as the Lorde both the chylde of Israel: how be it they haue respecte to straunge goddes, & loue the wyne kannes. * So I gat her for. r. v. sluclynges, and for an homer & an halfe of barley, & sayde vnto her: Thou shalt hyde with me a lōge season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, & loke y medle w none other mā, & then will I slepe my selfe for the.

* Thus the chyliden of Israel shall syt a great while without kyng and prince, without offring and aulter, without prestes & reuelacyon. But afterwarde shall the chylde of Israel conuerse, and seke the Lorde theyr God, and * Dauid theyr kyng: & in the latter dayes they shall worshyppe the Lorde, & bys lounge kyndnesse.

The iij. Chapter.

A complaine agaynst the people and the prestes of Israel.

Care the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyliden of Israel. For the Lorde must punyssh, them that dwell in the lande. And why? * Here is no trewthe, there is no mercie, there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but swearing, lyge, manslaughter: theft & aduoutry haue gotte the ouerhande, and one bloudgytynesse foloweth another. Therefore shall the land be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein, shall be roted out. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, & the fpythes in y see shall dye. Yet is there none, y will chaste nor reprove another. * For thy people rebuketh the prestes, whych shulde reforme other men.

Therefore stonblest thou in the daye tyme & the prophet w the in y nyght. I will bring thy mother to splyce, and why? * my people perishe, because they haue no knowledge. Seinge then y thou hast refused understāding, therefore will I refuse the also: so that thou shalt nomore be my preste. And for so moche as thou hast forgott y lawe of thy God, I will

will also forget thy chylde. The more they increased in the multitude, y more they synned agaynst me, therefore will I chage theyr honoure into shame. * They ate vp the synne of my people, and corage them in theyr wickednesse. * Thus the prest is become lyke the people. Wherefore I will punyssh them for their wicked wayes, and rewarde the acorpyng to their awne ymaginacyons. * They shall eate, & not haue ynough. They haue vnd whoredome, therefore shall they not prospere: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde and not regarded hym.

Whoredome, wyne & bronkenesse taketh the herte awaye. * My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe must tell the. For an whorpe the mynde hath delcyeued them so that they committe fornicacion agaynst theyr God. * They make sacrificyes vpon the hye mountaynes, & burne their incense vpon the hilles, yee, amōg the oakes, groues & bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore, poure daughters are become harlottes, and poure spouses haue broke theyr wedlocke. I will not punyssh poure daughters for beinge deyled, & poure bypdes y became whores: * seynge the fathers the selues haue medled w harlottes, & offered w vntyftes: but the people y will not understāde must be punyshed.

Though thou Israel art disposed to playe the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shuldest not haue runne to Gilgal * ner haue gone vp to Bethauen, * ner haue sworne, the Lordyureth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols, wel, let him go. Their bronkenesse hath put the backe, & brought them to whoredome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bynge, (saye they) to their awne shame. A wynde shall take holde of theyr fetters, and they shall be confounded in theyr offerynges.

The v. Chapter.

Agaynst the prestes and rulers of Israel.

O ye prestes: heare this, take hede, O y household of Israel: geue care, O thou kyngly house, for it wer poure patte to se Judgement done, but you are become a snare vnto yzrahel, and a spred net vnto the mount of Chabor. They kill sacrifices by beapes, And turne farre fro the Lorde, & I haue bene a rebuker of the all. * I know Ephraim well ynough, & Israel is not hysd frome: for Ephraim is become an harlot: & Israel is deyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an whorpe hert, so that they cannot knowe y Lord. * But the pryde of Israel will be rewarded him in hys face, yee, both Israel & Ephraim shall fall for theyr wickednesse, and Juda w the also. * They shall come with their shepe and bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from the. * As for the Lorde, they haue refused him, and brought by bastarde chylde: a moneth therefore shall deuoure them with their porcyss, & blowe with the shawmes at Sibeā, and w the trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethauē vpon the pōsyde of Ben Jamin. In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layed waste, therefore byd I saythfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Juda become lyke them * that remoue the landemarches, therefore will I poure out my wrath vpon the lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrynes of vngodly men. Therefore will I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe hys sycknesse, and Juda hys dysease, * Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto kyng Jareb: yet coulde not be helpe you, ner ease you of your payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelp to y house of Juda. Euen, I will spoye them, & go my waye. I will take the wyth me, and no man shall rescue the. I will go, and returne to my place, tyll they knowe ledge that they haue synned and seke me.

The vi. Chapter.

A sypcyon causeth a man to retorne to God. The wickednes of the prestes.

If theyr aduersite they shall erly seke me, & saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde: * for he hath smyten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall hynde vs by agayne: after two dayes shall he quyen vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayse vs vp, so that we shall lyue in hys syght. Then shall we haue vnderstādyng, & endeuoure oure selues to knowe the Lorde. he shall go forth as the spryng of the daye, & come vnto vs * as the cūnyng & moynpuge rayne vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda, howe shall I intreate the? seynge poure lone is lyke a moynpuge cloude, & lyke a dewe y goeth early awaye. Therefore haue I cut downe the idolydes, and let the be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasure in lounge kyndnesse: & not in offryng: yee, in the knowledge of God, more the in burnt sacrificie. But eue lyke as * Adā byd, so haue they broken my couenaut, and let me as naught. * Gilad is a cite of wicked doers of malycyous people & bloudshedders. And as theues armed wayte for him that passeth by the waye: such is the counsell of the prestes whych with one agreed costell murder cruele suche as hepe the waye: yee they dare do all vnspyrakable myschete. * Hozyphle thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, & Israel is despyled: yee and thou Juda hepest an har- nest for thy selfe, when I returne the capty- nitie of my people.

The vij. Chapter.

Whe I undertake to make Israel who- le, then vngenerousnesse of Ephraim and the wyckednes of Samaria com- meth to lycht: then go they aboute w lyes: therfore I theafe robbereth within: & about the spoyler destroyeth. They cōfide not in their hertes that I remembre all their wickednes. Howie ther awne inuentpos haue beset the whych, I se well ynough. * They make the kynge and the wynces, to haue pleasure in the wyckednes and lyes. All these burne in aduouty, as it were an ouen that the ba- ker heateth, when he hath left kneadynge, tell the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynge and wynces, for they begynne to be wadde dionckethozowe wyne: they vse familiarite with soch as dis- ceane them. They with the ymaginacyon of their herte are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all pnyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mo- nyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their awne iudges, all they kynge are fallen: yet is there none of the p calleth vpon me. * Therfore must Ephraim be mytte amonge the heathen: Ephraim is become lyke a cake, & nomā tur- neth, straungers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of gray heares, yet wyll he not knowe it * and ppyde of Israel is cast downe before they face, yet wyll they not turne to p Lord they God, ner seke hym for all thys.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is beggled, and hath no herte: * Now call they vpo the Egyptians, now go they to the Assyri- as: but whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall spede my net ouer them, & drawe the downe as the foules of the ayre: & accordyng as they haue bene warned, so will I punishe the. * Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsa- ken me. They must be destroyed, for they ha- ue set me at naught, * I am he that haue re- demed the, and yet they dissemble wth me.

They call not vpon me with they hertes, but ye doulpyng vpon they beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate & dypnke, and me will they not obeie. I haue taught them, and defended they name, yet do they ymagin mysehe against me. They turne the selues, but not to the most hyest, & are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shalbe slayne with the swearde, for the may- ce of they tungen, soche scoornes shal they haue in the lande of Egypt.

The viij. Chapter.

The destruction of Iuda and Iherusalem, because of theyr poyntes.

Set the horne to thy mouth, and blo- we: stowtly (as an eagle) shall the enemy come against the house of the Lord: for they haue broke my * couenante, & trasgressed my lawe. Israel shulde haue say- de vnto me: Part my God, we knowe p: but he hath refused the thyng p is good, therfore shall the enemy folowe vpo hym. * They ha- ne ordened thynges, but not thozow me: they haue made princes, & I must not knowe of it. * Of their syluer & golde haue they made them Images, to bynge them selues to de- struccyon. * They call, O Samaria, shalbe taken awaye, for my wrothfull indignacyō is gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe will it be, or they can be clesed. For the calfe came fro Israel, the worke man made it, therfore ca it be no God, but euē I peaces shal p calfe of Samaria be broke. * They haue sowne wynde, therfore shall they reape a storme.

Their sede shal beare no corne, there shal no meale be made of they: increafe: though they reape, yet shal strangers deuoure it vpon. Israel shal perish, the Scitiles shal increa- se him as a foule vessel. Hence they wēt vpon to the Assyri- as, they are become lyke a wyl- de asse in the deserte.

* Ephraim getteth rewardes to get louers and though they hyze them amonge the he- then, yet now wyll I gather the vpon. They shal begynne to be weered wth the bur- then of kynge and wynces. Ephraim hath made many alters to do wyckednes, hys alters (I saye) he had to his sinne. Though I thewe the my lawe neuer so moch, they co- unte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they do sacrifice, offerynge the fleshe and eatinge it: the Lord wyll haue no pleasure therein: but wyll remembre they wickednes, & pu- nish the synnes. * Israel turneth agayne into Egypt, they haue forgotten him p made them, they buylde sayre palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cyties: * therfore will I sende a fyre into they cyties, and it shal consume their places.

The ix. Chapter.

The hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Not thou triumphe, O Is- rael, make no boastyng ouer Ioyoule thynges as do the hea- then, for thou hast commytted ad- uontry agaynst thy God: whozowe rewar- des hast thou loued, more then all the corne- flozes. * Therfore shal they nomore enioye the corne flozes and wyne pressen, and they swete wyne shal slepe them. They will not dwell in the Lordes lande * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypte, and eateth vn- cleane thynges amonge the Assyri- as: They poure out no wyne for a dzyckoffring vnto the Lord.

the Lord, neither geue they hym their slayne offerynge: but they be vnto them as moun- tains meates, wherein all they that ate the, are despyled. For p bread that they haue soch lust vnto, shal not come into the house of the Lord. * What wyll ye do then in the so- lempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lord? Lo, they shal get the a waye for the destruc- cyon: Egypt shal receaue them, and Noph shal burye them.

The nettles shal ouergrowe they plea- sant goodes, and burres shalbe in their ta- bernacles. * Ye ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacyon is come, the dayes of recompen- syng are at hande. And then shal Israell knowe that they were deceyued by a pro- phete folyshe mad, and in a transey: for the multitude of thynne iniquitye God shal mul- tiplie enemies agaynst the. Ephraim hath made him self a watchma of my God, a pro- phete p is become a snare to do hurte in euery strete, and abhominacyon in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, & haue destro- yed them selues, lyke as they dyd afore tyme * at Sabaa: therfore they wyckednes shal- be remembred, and their synnes punyshed.

I founde Israell lyke grapes in the wyl- dernes, and sawe their fathers as the fyrst frygges in the toppe of the pygge tre. * But they are gone to Baal Deor, & tume awaye from me to p shamefull Idoll & are become as abhominable as their louers. * Ephraim flyeth lyke a byrde, so shal their glozy also: In so moch, that they shal neither begette, coceane ner beare chyldren. And though they bynge vpony, yet will I make them chy- deles amoge men. Yee, wo shal come to the, when I depart from them. * Ephraim (as me thynke) is plated in welthynges, lyke as Tyus, but now must the bynge her a wile chyldren forth to the manlaker.

O Lord thou shalt geue the: what shalt thou geue them? geue them an vnfructfull wombe & dzye brestes. All their wyckednes is done at * Gilgall, there do I abhorre the. For the vngenerousnes of their awne inu- cyons, I will dzyue them out of my house. I will loue them nomore, for all their wynces are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, their rote is dzyed vpon, so p they shal bynge no more frute, yee, and though they bynge forth eny, yet will I slaye enen the best belo- ued frute of their body. My God shal cast them awaye, for they haue not bene obedite vnto him, therfore shal they go astraye a- monge the heathen.

The x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israell and hys Idols.

Israil was a goodly * vyne, but he hath brought forth vnprofyta- ble frute: yee, p more frute he had, the moalters he made: the more good I dyd to their lande, the more frend- shype shewed they to their ymages. They herte is deuyded, therfore wyll they be de- stroyed. The Lord shal breake downe their ymages, he shal destroye they alters. Then shal they saye: we haue no kynge, for why? we haue not feared p Lord. And what shal then the kynge do to vs? They comen together, and sweare vayne othes: they be confederat together, therfore groweth their punishment, as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue wor- shypped the calfe of Berhaue: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them, yee, & the pre- stes also, that in they welthynges reioyled wth them: and why? it shal passe awaye fro them. It shal be brought to the Assyrian, for a present vnto kynge Iareb. Ephraim shal receaue full punishment. Israel shalbe confounded for hys awne ymaginacyons, Samaria w his kynge shal vanythe a waye as the scomme in the water. * The hye places of Auen where Israel do synne, shal be cast downe: thysles and thornes shal growe vpo they alters. * Then shal they saye to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylls: fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as * Sabaa dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: shuld not the batayll then come vpon the wycked chyldren, as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wyll chasten them, euen after myne awne despyte, the people shalbe gathered together ouer them, when I punyche them for their great wyckednes. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cove p is vnto go to plowe, therfore I loured hym, and fell vpon his sayre necke. I dzyue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Ja- cob played p hulbade mā: Howe vnto rygh- teousnes, and reape the frutes of welldoinge: plowe vpon your freche lande, for it is tyme to seake the Lord tyl he come and rayne righ- tuousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynes: ye haue reped iniquitye, you haue eaten the frute of lyes. Sepunge thou puttest thy cofydence in thynne awne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy wo- thynges: there shal growe a sedycyon amonge thy people. All thy stronge cyties shalbe layed waste, euen as Salmāna was destroyed with his fampliers, thozowe him that was auenged of Arbell, in the daye of batayll, where the mother perished with her chyldren. Euen so shal it go with you (O Be- thell) because of youre malicious wicked- nesse. Lyke as the moznynge goeth awaye, so shal the kynge of Israel passe.

The prophete

The .xj. Chapter.

Agayn the bypocrytes of Israel.

When Israel was yonge, I loued him: * I called my sonne oute of the lade of Egypt. But y more they were called, y more they wete backe, * offeringe vnto Idols of Baal, & censynge Images. * I leered Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, y wolde haue helped them. I led the with cordes of frendshyppe, and with bandes of loue. I was euen he, y layed the yoke vpon their neckes. * I gaue their foder my self that they shulde not go agayne into Egypt. And nowe is Alur theyr kynge. For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therefore shall the swerde begynne in their cyties, the stroke y they haue layed vpon, shalbe destroyed and eaten: and y because of their awne ymaginacions. And my people shall stonde in a doubte whether to tozne them, for when the prophete called them to the most blest, not one yet wolde geue him his gloze.

What grete thynges haue I geuen the, O Ephraim: howe saythfully haue I defended the, O Israel: haue I dealt with the as with * Adama: or haue I intreated y lyke Scholme: No, my hert is other wise mynded. Per, my mercy is so feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrothfull displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the midst of the, though I came not within the cytie.

The Lorde roareth lyke a lyon, that they maye folowe hym: yee, * as a lyon roareth he, y they maye be afrayed lyke the chyldren of the see: y they maye be scatred awaye from Egypt, as me scarre byrdes: & frayed awaye (as dones vnto be) fro the Assyrians lande: and that because I wolde haue them tarp at home, sayeth y Lorde. But Ephraim goeth aboute me with lyes, and y house of Israel dissembleth. Only Iuda holdeth hym with God, and with the true holy thynges.

The .xij. Chapter.

Agayn the bypocrytes of the people.

Ephraim is fed with ayze, and foloweth after y east wynde: he is euer increasynge lyes and destruction. They be confederate with the Assyrians, * their oyle is carped into Egypt. The Lorde hath a courte to holde y Iuda, and wyl punyche Jacob. After their awne wayes and accordynge to theyr awne inuacions, shall be recopense the. * he toke his brother by the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in hys strengthe he wrestled with God. He * strowe with the angell, and gat the victorie: so y he prayde & despyed hym. * he founde him at Bethell, and there he talketh with vs.

Per, the Lorde God of hostes, euen the Lorde him selfe remembred him. Then turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, & hope still in thy God. But part lyke y marchande y hath a false weyght in his hande, he hath a pleasure to occuple extorcyon. Ephraim thinketh thus: * I am rich, I haue good ynough: In all my woorkes shall not one fauour be founde y I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, eue as when I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and set y in thy tentes, and as in the hys feaste dayes.

I haue spoken thowowe the prophetes, & shewed diuerse visyons and declared my selfe by the ministracion of the prophetes. But at Gilgal is y abhominacyon, they are fallen to banyte. At Gilgal they haue slayne oxen: as many heapes of stones as they had in theyr lade forowes, so many altars haue they made. * Jacob fled ito y lade of Syria, & Israel serued for a wife, & for a wife he kepte wepe.

By a prophete y Lorde brought them out of Egypt, and by a prophet he preserued the. But Ephraim hath poked him to displeasure thowowe his abhominacions, therfore shall his bloude be poured vpon him selfe, and the Lorde hys God shall rewarde hym hys blasphemys.

The .xij. Chapter.

Of the abhominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, the bethen trebled: and he was exalted amonge the Israelites, but he is gone backe to Baal, therfore must he dye. And nowe they synne more and more: * of their synner, they make the molten ymages, after the ymaginacions of ther awne bypocrytes. y very ydols, and yet all is nothinge but the woike of the craftesman: Not wyl standynge they preache of y same to such as there sacrificeth: who so wyl kylle y calves, offereth perfectlye. Therefore, they shalbe as y morninge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye and lyke as dust that y whoyle wynde taketh awaye, fro the flore, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me onely, and that thou shuldest haue * no Sauoure but only me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wilderness y dyde lande. But when they were well fedde and had ynough, they waxed proude, & forgat me: therfore will I be vnto the as a lyd and as a leoparde in y waye to y Assyrians. I will come vpon the as the beare, y is robbed of her whelpes, & I will breake y stubborn herte of theirs. There will I deuoure the as a lyon: yee, y wylde beastes shall teare the.

* O Israel, thine iniquite hath destroyed y but in me only is thy helpe. Where are thy kynge now, that shulde helpe the in all thy cyties: yee, and thy iudges, of whom thou saydest:

Of Joel.

Joel .xviii.

saydest: * geueme a kynge and princes well, I gaue the a kynge in my wroth, and in my displeasure will I take hym fro the agayne. The wychednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and hys synne lyeth hyd: Therefore, shall sorowes come vpon hym, as vpon a woman that traunyleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he conspyeth not, that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of hys byrth, had not I defended hym from the graue, and deliuered hym from death.

* O death, I will be thy death: O hell, I wyl be thy kynge. Yet can I se no comforte, for when he is nowe the goodlyest amonge the blythe, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shall come downe fro the wilderness, and dye vpon his cōnytes, & dynke vpon his welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasant vessels.

As for Samaria, they shalbe made waste, and why: they are dysoberdient vnto theyr God. They shal perishe with the swerde, theyr chyldren shalbe slayne, and their wemen great with chyldre shalbe cryte vpon.

The .xviii. Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

Israel, * turne the nowe, vnto y Lorde thy God, & for y hast taken a grete fall thowowe thy wychednesse. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to the Lorde, and saye vnto hym: O, forgoe vs all oure synnes, receaue vs graciously, * & then wyl we offere the bullockes of oure lyppes vnto the: Alur shalbe nomore oure helpet, nether will we ryde vpon horses eny more. As for the woorkes of oure handes, we wyl nomore call vpon them: For it is thou that art oure God, thou shewest euer mercy vnto y fatherlesse.

O yf they wolde do this: I shulde heale theyr sores: yee, with all my herte wolde I loue them: so that my wroth shulde cleane be turned awaye from them. Yee, I wolde be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shulde growe as the lylic, and hys rote shulde breake out as Libanus. Hys braunches shulde sprede out abroad and be as sayre as the olyue tree and smell as Libanus. They that dwell vnder hys shadowe, shulde come agayne, and growe vpon as the corne, & florish as the vyne he shulde haue as good a name, as the wyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim, what haue I to do wpyth Idols eny more: I wyl graciously heare hym, and lede hym forth. I wyl be vnto the as a grene fyre tre, vpon me shall thou synde thy frute. * Who so is wise, shall vnderstand this: and he that is ryght entricte, wyl re-garde it. * For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous, soch as he Godly wyl walke in them. As for the wyched, they wyl stumbe therein.

The ende of the prophete of Joel.

The booke of Joel the prophete.

The first Chapter.

A prophete agayn the yelwes. He exhorteth the prestes to praye and saynge for the wyrt that was comynge at hande.

Is is the woide of y Lorde: I de, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phathuel. Heare, O yee elders: pondre this well, all ye that dwell in the lande: yf eue there happened soch a thinge in yore dayes, or in the dayes of yore fathers. Tell yore chyldren of it, and lett them shewe it vnto their chyldren, and so they to certifie theyr posterite therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath lefte, that hath the greshopet eaten vpon: what the greshopet lefte, that hath the locuste eaten vpon: and what the locuste hath lefte, that hath the blasynge consumed. Wake vpon ye dronckardes, and wepe: moune all ye wyne suppers, because of yore swete wyne, for it shall be taken awaye fro yore mouth. Yee, a myghty and an innumerable people shall come vpon my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, and chafe bones lyke the lyones. * The y shall make my vyne- yarde waste, they shall yll of the barches of my fygetrees, strepe them bare, cast the awaye, and make the braunches whyle.

Wake the moone as a vyrgyn doth that gyrdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her byrde grome. For the meate and dynke of fringe shalbe taken awaye from the house of the Lorde, and the prestes the Lorde's mynsters shal moune. The felde shalbe wasted, the lande shalbe in a myserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusyon, and the oyle vnterly desolate. The housbandmen and the wyne gardeners shal loke yfleonally and make launtyon, for the wheate, wyne and barley, and because the hurrest vpon the felde is so cleue destroyed. The grapegatherers shal make grete moune, when the vyneyard and fygetrees be so vnterly wasted. Yee, all the poggardes, palmertrees, apertrees, & the other trees trees of the felde shall wether awaye. Thus the merpcheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusyon.

Eye you, and make poure more, O ye prestes, mourne ye in sackcloth, O ye officers of my God: for the meat & drinke-offeringe shall be taken awaye fro the house of your God. Proclayne a fastinge, call the congregacyon, gather the elders * and all the inhabitours of the lande together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lorde: alas, alas for this daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghyte. Shall not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, & the myrrh also and ioye from the house of our God? The seide shall perishe in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, the flores shall be broken downe, for the corne shall be destroyed. What a syghynge make the kyne / the bullockes are very euell lykynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished awaye.

The Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernes, and the flame hath bzent vp all the trees of the felde. Yee, the wyld beasts crye also vnto the: for the water riuers are dyed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

The.ij. Chapter.

He propheseth the commynge and crueltie of the enemyes. An exhortacyon to moue them to conuert.

Blowe out the trôpette in Syon, and crye vpon my holy hyll, that all sorbe as dwell in the lande, maye tremble at it: * for the daye of the Lorde cometh, and is harde at hande: a darcke daye, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yee, and a stormy daye, lyke as the morninge spredeth out vpon the hylls. Namely, a greate and myghty people: such as haue not bene sence the beginninge, neither shall be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre, and behynde him a burninge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a very waste wyldernesse, and there is no man, that shall escape hym: They are to lye vpon lyke barbed horses, & runne lyke horsmen. They shalpe vp vpon the hylls, as it were the sounde of charrettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghty people redy to the batayll.

The folke shall be afrayed of hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a pot: These shall rûne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Every man in his goynge shall kepe his araye, and not gon out of his path. There shall not one dysue another, but eche shall kepe his awne waye. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, & not by the dore: They shall come into the cytie, & runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and styppe in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before hym, yee, the heuens shall be moued. * The sunne & the moone shall be darchened, and the starres shall withdraue theyr shynne. The Lorde shall shewe his voyce before his hoste, for his hoste is greate, stronge, and myghty to fulfill his commaundement. This is that greate and maruelous fearfull daye of the Lorde. * And who is able to abyde it?

Howe thefore sayeth the Lorde. * Turne you vnto me with all your herites, with fastinge, wepyng and mournynge, rite your herites, and not poure clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is gracious and mercyfull, longe sufferynge and of great compassyon: and redy to pardone wyckednes. Then (no doute) he also shall turne, and forgieue, and after his chastenynge, he shall lett your increase remayne, for meat and drinke-offerynges vnto the Lorde your God. * Blowe out with the trôpette in Syon, proclayne a fastynge, call the congregacyon, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, bynng the chyldren & suckylnges together. Lett the bydegrome go forth of his chabze, and the byde out of her closet. Lett the prestes serue the Lorde before the porch and the aulter, wepyng and sayynge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thyne heritage be brought to such confusyon, lett the heathen be lordes therof. * Wherefore shulde they saye amonge the heathen: where is nowe the Lorde?

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare his people: yee, the Lorde shall answer, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I will sende you corne, wyne & oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I will nomore geue you ouer to be a reprovte amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for him of the north, I shall dysue him farre from you: and shute him out into a drye & waste lande, his face toward the east see, and his hynder partes toward the vtmost see. The syncke of him shall go vp, and his fylthy corrupcyon shall fall vpon him selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O lande) but be glad and reioyse, for the Lorde will do greates thynges. We not ye afrayed nether (O ye beasts of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene, and the trees shall beare their frute: the fyge-trees and bynegardes shall geue theyr increase.

We glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) be and reioyse in the Lorde your God, for he hath gauen you a teacher of ryghteousnesse: * he it is that shall sende you downe sheaves of rayne, early and late in the fyrt moneth: so that the garners shall be full of corne, and the prestes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares that the gresshoper, locuste, blastynge, and caterpyller (my greate host, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne. so ye shall haue ynough to eate, & be satisfied: and prayse the name of the Lorde your God, that so maruelously hath dealete with you.

And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israell, and that I am your God: yee, and that there is none other, and my people shall no more be brought to confusyon.

After this, will I poure out my sprete vpon all flesh: and your sonnes and your daughters shall prophesy: your olde men shall dreame & dreames, and your yonge men shall se vlysyons, yee, in those dayes I will poure out my sprete vpon seruautes and maydens. I will shewe wonders in heauyn above and tokens in the earth beneath: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shall be turned into darchenes, and the moone into bloude: before the greate & notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come, that * whosoener calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Syon and at Ierusalem, there shall be a saluacyon, lyke as the Lorde hath promysed: yee, and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

The.ij. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of his people.

Take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne agayne the captiuite of Iuda and Ierusalem: I shall gather all people together, and bynng them in the valley of Josaphat: and there will I reason with the: because of my people and heritage of Israell: who they haue scatred about in the nacyns: and parted my lade: yee, they haue cast lottes for my people, the ponge me haue they set in the bordel house, & solde the damels for wyne, that they myght haue to dryncke. * Thou Tyrus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do w me? Will ye despyse me? well, ye will nedes despyse me, I shall recompence you, enen vpon your heade, & I ryght woorthely: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my sayre and goodly Jewels, and brought the into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Iuda and Ierusalem haue ye solde vnto the Sykes, & ye myght bynng them farre from the borders of their awne countrees.

Beholde thefore, I will rase them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, * and will rewarde you enen vpon your head. Your sonnes and your daughters will I sell thorow the handes of the chyldren of Iuda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto the of Saba, a people of a farre countre: for the Lorde him selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge the Gentyles, proclayne warre, wake vp the gyauntes, lett the drawe nye, lett them come vp all the lusty warryours of the. * Make you sweardes of your plow-shares, and speares of your syckles sythes. Lett the weake man saye: I am stronge. Stre you, & come, all ye heathen rounde about: gather you together, there shall the Lorde laye all thy gyauntes to the grounde. Lett the people arys, & get the to the valley of Josaphat for there will I syt, & iudge all heathen rounde about. * Laye to your sythes, for the Phar- uel is ripe: come, get you downe: the wyne presse is full, yee, the wynepresses runne ouer, for their wickednes is waken greate.

In the valley appoynted, there shall be many, many people: for the daye of the Lorde is ripe in the valley appoynted. * The sunne & moone shall be darchened, & the starres shall withdraue their lycht. * The Lorde shall roare out of Syon, and crye out of Ierusalem, that the heuens and the earth shall quake withall. But the Lorde shall be a defence vnto his awne people, and a refuge for the chyldren of Israell. Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lorde your God dwell vpon my holy mounte of Syon. Then shall Ierusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thowre her any more.

Then shall the mountaynes droye the wyne, and the hylls shall flowe with mycke. All the ryuers of Iuda shall haue water ynough, and out of the Lordes house there shall flowe a spring, to water the broke of * Sitim: but Egypte shall be layed waste, * and Edom shall be desolate: because they haue dealete so cruelly with the chyldren of Iuda, and shed innocent bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Iuda shall be inhabited for euermore, & Ierusalem for generation to generation: for I will not leaue their bloude vnauenged. And the Lorde shall dwell in Syon.

The ende of the prophecie of Joel.

The prophete

The booke of the prophete Amos,

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme of the prophete of Amos. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Arah, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the southe of Ammon.

I wyll not spare them: because they cryt by the weimen greatt wyth chyldre in Galaad, to make the borders of their landes the wyder. Therefore, I will kyndle a fyre in y walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a greatt crye, in the daye of battayll, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so that their kynge shall go into captiuitie by his pynnes together, sayeth the Lorde.

The ij. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wyckednesses of * Moab, I wyll not spare hym: because he bzant the bones of the kynge of Edom to ashes. Therefore, wyll I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Cariath: so that Moab shall perishe with noyse and the sounde of a shawme. I wyll rote out the iudge from amonge them, & slaye all his pynnes with him, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of * Iuda, I wyll not spare him: because he hath cast a syde slawe of the Lorde, and not kepte his commaundementes: for why? * they wolde nedes be disceaued with the lyes that they forsaithers folowed. Therefore, will I sende a fyre into Iuda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wyckednesses of Israel, I will not spare him because he hath solde the ryghteous for money, & the pooze for shoes. They treade vpon pooze mens heades, in the dust of the earth, & croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name, they lye besyde euery alter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of they goddes they dryncke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the * Amozite before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the oaks: notwithstandinge I destroyed his frute from aboue and his rote from vnder.

* Agayne, I brought you out of * lande of Egypt, & led you forty yeres thowowe the wilderness, that ye might haue the Amozites landes in possession. I rayled vpon prophetes amonge youre chyldren, and absteyners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde? * But ye gaue y absteyners wyne to dryncke, & ye, ye commaunded the prophetes sayinge. Prophecy not. Beholde, I will craue you in sonder, lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is full of sheaues: so that the swifte shall not escape nether the stronge be able to do eny thyng: no, the gyaunte shall not saue his awne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swifte of fote of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomack as a gyaunte, shall in that daye be layne to runne his waye naked, sayeth the Lorde.

The iij. Chapter.

The reproche the house of Israel of wickednes.

Take, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldre of Israel) namely, vnto all the trybes, whos I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: * you only haue I accepted fro all the gentes of the earth: therefore, will I viset you in all your wickednesses. I haue twayne walke together excepte they be agreed amonge them selues: * Moth a lyon roare in the wodde, except he haue a praye? Or crieth a loun whelp out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somthinge? Moth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earth where no fowler is? Taketh a man his snare vpon the groude, afore he catche somwhat? Crye they out Ala lum with the tropet in the cytie, and y people not afrayed? Commeth there eny plage in a cytie without it be the Lordes doynges? Howe doth y Lorde God no maner of thinge, but he telleth his secrete before vnto his lernautes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyll not be afrayed? Seinge then the Lorde God him selfe speaketh, who wyll not prophete?

I reach in the palaces at Asdod, and in y palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall y se greatt murder and violent oppresyon amonge the, for why? they regarde not y thinge that is ryght, sayeth y Lorde: they gather together euell gottē goods, and laye vpon robbery in their houses.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God. This lande shall be troubled and beleged rounde about, thy strength shall be plucke fro y, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayeth y Lorde. lyke as an heardman taketh two legges vpon a pecce of an eare out of the loun mouth: Euen so the chyldre of Israel (y dwell in Samaria, haupnge their couches in the corner, their beddes at Damascus, shall be plucke awaye. * Heare, & heare recorde in y house of Jacob (sayeth y Lorde God of hostes) y when I begynne to viset the wyckednesse of Israel, I will viset y alters at Bethell also: so that the hornes of the alters shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

As for the wynterhouse & sommerhouse I will smyte them downe: and the houses of puer: yee, and many other houses shall perishe, and be destroyed, sayeth the Lorde.

The iij. Chapter.

Agaynst the gouernours of Samaria.

Heare this worde & ye sat kynne, that be vpon the hill of Samaria: ye that do pooze men wronge, and oppresse the iedy: ye that saue to your lordes: bypunge byther, let vs drinke. Therefore, the Lorde hath sworn by his holynes: The dayes shall come vpon you, y the enemyes shall carry you away in shypes, & your posterite shall be carryed away vpon fythers bokes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after another, eue the kynges palace shall you ouer throwe, to make awaye to escape, sayeth the Lorde.

Ye came to * Bethell for to worke vngacionnes, and haue increased your sinnes at * Galgal: ye brought your sacrifices in y moynunge, and youre tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thankofferynge of leuen, ye prompted frewill offeringes, and proclaimed them. Soch lust had ye, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Therefore haue I geuen you yble teeth in all youre cyties, and scarfnesse of byrd in all your palaces: yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Why there were but thre monethes vnto the harvest, * I withelde the rayne from you: ye rayned vpon one cytie: and not vpon another, one pecce of grounde was moystured w rayne, and the groude that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Wherefore two, yee, thre cyties came vnto one, to drinke water: but they were not satisfied, yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde.

I haue smytten you with drouth & blasinge: and loke howe many orchardes, vneyardes, fyggetrees & olyuetrees ye had: the caterpyller hath eaten them vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Dystylence haue I sent amonge you, * as y dyd in Egypt: your yonge me haue I slayne with the swerde, and caused your horses to be taken captiue: I made the stynkyng stinour of youre tentes to come vnto youre nostrils. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Some of you haue y ouerthrowen, * as I ouerthrewe Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a bronde plucke out of the fyre. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Therefore, thus will I handle the agayne, O Israel, ye euen thus will I handle the. Make the ready then to mete thy God, O Israel. For so, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the moynunge and the darkenes, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Where as there dwelt a. 4. in one cytie, there shall be left scarce an hundred therein: & where there dwelt an. 4. there, shall scarce ten be left in the house of Israel. Nevertheless, thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Beerlabā: for Gilgal shall be carped awaye captyue, and Bethel shall come to naught. No. cxii.

The boke of the Prophecie Jonas.

The first Chapter.

Of the flight of Jonas when he was sente to preache.
A tempeste aryseth, and casteth hym in the see for his dy-sobedience.

Ihe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas y^e sonne of Amphyay, sayng: * Aryse, & get the to Ni-nue that greate cyte: and preache vnto the, how that theyr wickednesse is come vnto me. And Jonas made hi ready to fle vnto Charlis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Toppa: where he founde a shyp ready for to go vnto Charlis. So he payde bys fare, & wente a boorde, that he myght go with them vnto Charlis, from the presence of y^e Lorde. But the Lorde buelid a greate wynde into the see, and there was a myghty tempest in the see: so that the shyppe was in reperdy of goynge in peces. Then the maryners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast into y^e see, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gatt hym vnder the hatches, where he layed him downe & slouebed.

So the master of the shyppe came to him and sayde vnto him: why slouebest thou?
Up, call vpon thy God: yf God (happely) wyll thynke vpon vs, that we perishe not.
And they sayde one to another: come, let vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. * And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.
Then sayd they vnto him: tel vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thy occupacyon: whence comest thou? and wher goest thou? what countre man art thou, & of what naclo? He answered them: I am an Ebreue, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen, whyche made both the see, & drye lande.
Then were the men exceedingly afrayed, & sayde vnto hym: why dydest y^e so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presce of the Lorde, because he had tolde the) & sayd moreouer vnto hi: What shall we do vnto the, that the see maye cease fro troublynge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me, & cast me into the see, so shall it lett you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempeste is come vpon you.
Neuer theles, the men assayed wyth row-ynge, to bynge the shyppe to lande: but it wolde not be, because the see wrought so: was so troublous agaynst them. Wherefore they cryed vnto y^e Lord, & sayde: * O Lord let vs not perishe for this mans death, for if we die, we shall also die with the.

nether laye thou innocent blonde vnto our charge: for thou, O Lord, hast done, eue as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, and cast hym into the see, and the see lefte ragynge, And y^e me feared the Lorde exceedingly, doyng sacryfices and makinge vowes vnto the Lorde.

The ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas

But the Lorde prepared a greate fyre, to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fyre, three dayes & thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God, out of the fyres belly, and sayd. In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the belly of hell I cryed, & thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the see, & the floude compassed me aboute: yee, all thy waues and roules of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght: but I will yet agayne loke toward thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the fowdes were wyapte aboute myne head. I wet downe to the botome of the hylls, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. When my soule fainted wthin me, I thought vpon the Lorde: & my prayer came in vnto the, euen to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanities, wyl forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeuyng, & wyl paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacyon cometh of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyre, ad it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the fowdes were wyapte aboute myne head. I wet downe to the botome of the hylls, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. When my soule fainted wthin me, I thought vpon the Lorde: & my prayer came in vnto the, euen to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanities, wyl forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeuyng, & wyl paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacyon cometh of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyre, ad it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the fowdes were wyapte aboute myne head. I wet downe to the botome of the hylls, and was barred in with earth for euer. They that hold of vayne vanities, wyl forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeuyng, & wyl paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacyon cometh of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyre, ad it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the fowdes were wyapte aboute myne head. I wet downe to the botome of the hylls, and was barred in with earth for euer. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyre, ad it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninue. The repentance of the kyng of Ninue.

When came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayenge. vp, and get the to Ninue: that great cytie & preach vnto them & preachynge which I haue the. So Jonas arose, & wente to Ninue at the Lordes commaundement. Ninue was a greate cyte vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to, & entred into the cytie: euen a dayes iourney, & cryed, sayenge. There are yet .xl. dayes ad then shall Ninue be ouerthrowen. And the people of Ninue belened God, and proclaymed fasting, and araped the selues in sack cloth, as well the greate as the small of the. And the tydiges came vnto the kyng of Ninue which arose out of his seate, and byd hym apparell of and put on sack cloth, and late hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed & commaunded in Ninue, by the auctorite of the kyng and his Lorde, sayenge. se that nether man or beest, oxe or shepe taste ought at all: ad p^r they nether fede ner drinke water: but put on sack cloth both man & beast: and crye myghtely vnto God: yee, se that euery ma turne fro his euell waye, and from the wyckednesse, that he hath in hande.

Who can tell? God maye turne, & repente, and cease from his ferece wrath, that we perpech not. And when God sawe they^r works how they turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euell, which he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and byd it not.

The iii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

Herfore Jonas was soze dyscontent and angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde. O Lorde, was not thys my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countre: therefore I halted rather to fle vnto Tharsis, for I knowe wel y^e nough that thou art a mercifull God, full of compassyon, longe sufferyng, and of greate kynndes and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment. And now O Lord, take my lyfe fro me (I beseeche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so agrie? And Jonas gat hym out of the cytie, and satt downe on the east syde therof: and there made hym a booth, ad sat vnder it in the shadowe, tyll he myght se, what shulde chaunce vnto the cytie.

And the Lorde God prepared a wynde byne, whych sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his head, to deliuer hym out of his payne. And Jonas was exceedingly glad of the wynde byne.

But vpon the nexte morowe agaynst the spring of the daye. The Lorde ordered a worke, whych smote the wynde byne, so that it wythered awaye. And when the Sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent east wynde: & the Sunne bett ouer the head of Jonas, that he fainted agayne, & wysshed vnto his soule, that he myght dye, ad sayd. It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas. Yet thou so angrie for the wynde byne? And he sayd yee, very angrie am I, eue vnto the deeth. And the Lorde sayd: thou hast compassion vpon a wynde byne, wheron the bestowdest no labour: ner madest it growe whych sprange vp in one nyght & perished in another: And shuldest not I then haue compassion vpon Ninue that greate cytie, wher-in there are aboute an. C. & .xx. thousand per sonnes, that knowe not they^r ryght hand from the lefte, besydes much catell?

The ende of the Prophecie of Jonas.

The booke of the

Prophecie Micheas.

The fyrst Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of they^r Idolatrye.

This is the worde of the Lorde, p^r came vnto Micheas the Morastite, in the dayes of Jothan & Ahaz ad Jechaziah kynges of Juda: whych was shewed hym vpon Samaria & Ierusalem. Heare al ye people, marcke this well O earth and all that therein is. Yee, O Lorde God hym selfe be wytnesse amonge you euen the Lord fro his holy temple. For why? beholde, O Lorde thou shalt go out of his place, & come downe, & treade vpon the hye thynge of the earth. The mountaynes shall colume vnder hym, & the valleyes shall cleue asunder: lyke as waxe columeth at the fyre, & as the waters runne downwarde. And all thys shalbe for the wyckednesse of Jacob, and the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wyckednesse of Jacob? Is not Samaria? Whych are the hye places of Juda? Is not Ierusalem? Therefore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde, to laye aboute the vynegarde: her stones shall I cast into the valley, and discouer her foundacions. All her Images shall be broken downe & all her garmentes shall be bzent in the fyre: yee, all her Idols will I destroye: for why? they are gathered out of the hyre of an whore, & to an whores hyre shall they be turned agayne. Wherefore I will mourne & make lamentacio, bare & naked will I go: I must mourne lyke the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for they^r wounde is past remedy. And why? it is come into Juda, & hath touched the porte of my people at Ierusalem already. Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceauent it.

Thou at Bataphra, welter thy selfe in dust & ashes. Thou dwellest at Sephyr, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost nomore for very sorowe: and why? her neyghboure shal take fro her what she hath. The rebellious cytie hopeth, y^e it shall not be so euell: but for all the, the plage shall come from the Lorde, euen into the porte of Ierusalem. The greate noyse of charrettes shall feare the, that dwell at Lachys, which is an occasyon of the synne of the daughter of Syon, for in the came vp the wyckednesse of Israel. Yee, she sent her courtiers into the lande of Geth.

The houses of lyes will dysceane: & kynges of Israel. And as for the (thou dwellest at Morassa) I shal bring a possessor vpon the, & the plage of Israel shal reach vnto to Odolla. Make the balde, & shaueth the, because of thy tender chyldren: Make the cleane balde as an Egyle, for they shalbe carped awaye captiue from the.

The ii. Chapter.

Threatenings agaynst the fyll people.

Who vnto them, that Imagyn to do herme, ad deuyse ingracyousnesse vnto they^r beddes, to perforce me it: & cleare daye: for ther power is agaynst God. When they couet to haue lande, they take it by violence, they robbe men of they^r houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house & euery man for his heritage. Therefore the Lorde sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, agaynst thys household haue I deuyed a plage, wherout ye shall not plucke your neckes: ye shall nomore go so proude, for it wyl be a perous tyme. In that daye shal thys terme be vled and a mournynge shalbe made ouer you on thys maner: We be utterly desolate, & porcyon of my people is translated. What will be parte vnto vs the laude, that he hath taken from vs?

Neuertheles there shalbe noman to deuyde the thy porcyon in the congregacyon of the Lorde. Cuth, holde your tuge (saye they) It shall not fall vpon thys people, we shall not come so to confusyon, sayeth the house of Jacob. As p^r spere of the Lorde do cleane awaye: or is he so mided? Treuth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto the p^r lyue ryght: but my people doth the contrary, therefore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both cote and cloke from the symple.

Ye haue turned youre selues to fyght, the women of my people haue pe shut out from their good houses, & taken awaye my excellent gyftes from they^r chyldren. Up, get you hence, for here shall ye haue no rest.

Because of they^r Idolatrye they are corrupte, & shal miserably perpech. If I were a fleschly felowe & a preacher of lyes, ad tolde them that they myght lyt by bypnyng & bol-lyng, & be broncken. O y^e were a Prophecie for thys people, But I will gather the i dede, O Jacob, & bypue prenaunt of Israel all together. I shal carpe them one with another, as a flocke in the folde, and as p^r catell in they^r stalles, that they maye be dysquyted of other me. Who so breaketh p^r gappe, he shal go before. They shal breake vp the porte, & go in & out at it. The kyng shal go before them, and the Lorde shalbe vpon the head of them.

The iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the tyranny of princes, and false Propheces.

And thou heare,

And I sayde: heare, O ye headres of the house of Jacob, & ye leaders of the house of Israel: * Shulde not ye knowe, what were lawfull and ryght: * But ye hate the good, and lone the euil: ye plucke of mennes skynnes, and the flesh from theyr bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, and flay of theyr skynne: ye breake theyr bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were in to a cauldron, & as flesh in to a pot. Now the tyme shall come, * that whē they call vnto the Lorde, he shall not heare the, but hyde hys face from them, because that thow theyr awne Imagynacions they haue dealte so wyckedly.

And as concernynge the prophetes that dysceane my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them. * When they haue eny thynge to vte vpon, then they preach that all shalbe well: but yf a man put not some thig in to theyr mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym.

* Therefore poure vssyon shalbe turned to nyght, & poure prophecyinge to darknesse. The Sunne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, & the daye shalbe darcke vnto the.

Then shall the vssyon seers be ashamed, & the sothsayers confounded: yee, they shalbe sayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. * As for me, I am full of strenght, & of the sperte of the Lorde, full of iudgement & boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob theyr wyckednes, and the house of Israel theyr synne.

Heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, & ye iudges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thynge that is lauffull, & wyldest alwys the thynge that is streyght. * Ye that buylde vpon Syon with bloude, and Jerusalem w doynge wronge. * O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gyftes: O ye preastes, ye teach for lucre. * O ye prophetes, ye prophesy for money. Yet will they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lorde amonge vs? Cuth, there can no myfortune happen vs. * Therefore shall Sion (for poure sakes) be plowed lyke a felde: Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye wodde.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Of the callinge of the Gentyles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

At in the latter dayes it will come to passe, that the hyll of the Lordes house shalbe sett vpon hyer then eny mountaynes or hylls: yee, the people shall prease vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentiles shall haite them thither, sayeng: Come, let vs go vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teach vs hys waye, and that we maye walcke in his pathes. * For the lawe shall come out of Sion, & the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multitude of the heathen & re- fourme the people of farre countrees: so that of theyr sheardes they shall make plowshares, & of theyr speares.

* One people shall not lyft vp a sword agaynst another, yee, they shal nomore learne to fyght: but euery man shall syt vnder his vineyard & vnder his figge tre, & no mā to fraye him awaye: for the mouth of the Lorde of hostes hath spokē it. Therefore, where as all the people haue walcked euery man in the name of hys awne God, we wyll walcke in the name of oure God for euer ad euer. * At the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde, will I gather vnto the lame & the outcastes, & such as I haue chastened: & wyll geue pssue vnto the lame, & make of the outcastes a great people: * and the Lorde hym selfe shalbe theyr kynge vpon the mount Syon, from thys tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the. (O tower of Eder, thou stronge holde of the daughter Syon) vnto the shall it come: cutt the lordshipe & kyngdome of the daughter Jerusalem. Why then art thou now so heuy? is there no kynge in the? are thy counsellers awaye that thou art so payned, as a woman in her trauaile? And now (O thou daughter Syon) be loy, let it greue the as a wyfe laborynge wth chylde: for now must thou get the out of the cylie, and dwell vpon the playnfelds: yee, vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered, * and there the Lorde shall lowse the from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Now also are there many people gathered together agaynst the, sayng: what, Sion is curled, we shall se oure lust vpon her. But they knowe not the thoughtes of the Lorde, they vnderstande not his counsell, that shall gather them together as the sheues in the barne. Therefore get the vp, O thou daughter Syon, and throlpe out the corne: for I wyll make thy horne prync, & thy clawes brasse, that thou mayest grynde many people: theyr goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lorde, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The. v. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

After shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O robbers daughter: they shall laye sege agaynst vs, & synpte iudges of Israel w a rodde vpon the cheeke. * And Bethleem Ephrata, art lytle amonge the thou- sandes of Iuda, Out of the shall come vnto me, which shal be the gouernoure in Israel: who se out goynge hath bene fro the begynning, & fro euerlastynge. In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, but yll the tyme that the (which shall beare) haue borne: then shall the remnant of his brethern be conuerted vnto the children of Israel. He shall stāde fast, & geue fode in the strength of the Lorde, and in the victorie of the name of the Lorde his God: and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the farthest partes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assyrian maye come into poure lāde, & treade in poure houses. We shall bringe vpon seuen shepherdes and viii. princes vpon the: these shall subdue the land of Assur w the swerde, and the lande of * Assyria with their naked weapens. * Thus shal he deliuer vs from the Assyrian, when he cometh within oure land, and setteth his fote within oure borders.

And the remnant of Jacob shall be amonge the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grashe, that tarieth for no man, and waxyty of no body. * Yee, residue of Jacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles and the multitude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes of the wodde, and as the Lyons whelp amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thowowe) treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hand shalbe lift vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduersaries shall perishe.

The tyme shall come also, sayeth the Lorde, that I will take thine horses from the, and destroye thy charrettes. I will breake downe the ctyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy stronge holdes. * All witchcraftes wyll I rote out of thyne hāde, there shall no mo sothsaynges be within the. * Thine Idols and thyne Images wyll I destroye out of the: so shalt thou nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne awne handes. Thy grones wyll I plucke vpon by the rotes, & breake downe the ctyes. Thus wyll I be auenged also, vpon all the heathen that will not heare.

The. vi. Chapter.

An exhortacion to heare the iudgement agaynst the: that beynge vnkynde, what maner of sacrifices do please God.

Erkē now what the Lorde sayeth: * Clap, reproc the mountaynes, & lett the hylls heare thy voyce. O heare the punishment of the Lorde, ye mountaynes, & ye mightie foundacions of the earth: for the Lorde will reproc his people, & reason w Israel. O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wher haue I hurte the? geue me answere. * Because I brought the from the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of the house of bondage: * Because I made Moyses, Aarō and Miriam to lede the: Remember (O my people) what Balach the kynge of Moab had Imagyned agaynst the and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, from Sethim vnto Galgal, that ye maye knowe the loupng kyn- dnesses of the Lorde.

What acceptable thinge shall I offere vnto the Lorde? shal I bowe my knee to the hie God? Shall I come before hym with bzent offrynges, and wyth calues of a yeaer olde? Hath the Lorde a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? O shall I geue my fyrst borne for myne of- fences, & the frute of my body for the synne of my soule? I will shewe the, O mā, what is good, & what the Lorde requyrez of the flamel, to do ryght, to haue pleasure in lo- uinge kyndnesse, to be lowly, & to walcke w thy God. * The Lordes voyce crieth vnto the clype, & the man shall be saued consider the thy name (O Lorde) herken what is your rodde, & here hym & warneth you? * Shuld I not be displeased, for the vnyghtuous good in the houses of the wycked, & because the measu- re his mynstred? O shulde I iustifie the false balaunces and the bagge of disceatfull weygh- tes, amonge those that be full of riches vnyghtuously gottē: where the cytelms deale with falshe, speake lyes, & haue disceat- full tungen in their mouthes?

Therefore, I will take in hāde to punish the, & to make the desolate, because of thy synnes. * Thou shalt eate, & not haue ynough: yee, shalt bringe thy selfe downe. Thou shalt be, but not escape: & those that thou woldest saue, wyll I deliuer to the: the swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: shalt presse out olues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynte thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt dryncke no wyne. Ye kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folowe their pleasures, therefore wyll I make the waste, and cause thy inhabytors to be ab- horred, O my people: & thus shalt thou beare thyne awne shame.

The. vii. Chapter.

A complaint of the litle nombre of the ryghteous: agaynst the crueltie ought we not to haue wth our greated frenndes.

Is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleanynge in the haruest, there are no mo grapes to eate, yet wold I sayne (wth all my herte) haue of the best frute. * There is not a godly man vpon earth, there is not one rightuous amonge men. They labour all to shed bloud, and euery man hunteth his brother to deathe: yet they saye they do well whē they do euil. As the prince will, so sayeth the iudge: that he maye do him a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what his herte desireth: & the hearers allowe hi. The best of the is but as a thistle, & the most rightuous of the is but as a hyssop.

The booke of the Prophet Nahum.

Of the destruction of Ninive and of the deluge of the world.

Nahum is the heavy burthen of Ninive, whych Nahum of Elchos dyd write as he sa-we it. * The Lord is a gelous God, & a taker of vengeance is the Lord, and wrothfull. * The Lord taketh vengeance of his enemyes, and re-serveth displeasure for his aduersaries. * The Lord suffereth longe, he is of great power, & so innocent that he leaveth no man faultlesse before him. The Lord goeth forth in tēpest & stormy weather, the cloudes are the dust of his fete. Whē he reproveth the see, he dyeth it up, & turneth all the floudes to drie lande.

Babylon is desolate, Charnel & the pleasure of Lybanus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hylls consume. At the sight of him, the earth quaketh: yee, the whole world, and all p dwell therein. * Who maye endure before hys wrath? * Who is able to abide his gryme displeasure? His anger taketh on lyke fyre, and the harde ro-ckes are clouen in sunder before him.

Full gracious is the Lord, and a stronge holde in the time of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in hym: when the floude cometh ouer, and destroyeth the place, and whē the darchnesse foloweth styll vpon his enemyes. What do ye Imagin the agaynst p Lord on this manner? (Cush, whē he hath once made an ende, there shall come nomore trouble.) For like as the thornes that stike together, and as the drie strawe, so shall the brochardes be consumed together, euē when they be full. There come out of the south as Imagin myschefe, & geue vngacious coun-cell agaynst the Lord.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: Let the be as well prepared: yee, & as many as they can, yet shall they be hewē downe, and passe awaye. And as for p, I will bere p, but not utterly destroye the. And now wil I breake his rodde from thy backe, & burst thy bōdes in sonder. But the Lord hath geuen a commaundement concernynge the, p there shall come nomore sede of thy name. * The carued & casten Images will I rote out of the house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.

The ii. Chapter.

He describeth the victorie of the Caldees agaynst the Ninuities.

Beholde

Behold, * vpon the mountaynes come p fete of him, that bringeth good tydings: & preacheth peace. * Juda, kepe thy holy dayes, perfourme thy promises: for Messiah shall come nomore in the,
he is utterly rote out.

The scatterer shall come vp agaynst the, & laye sege to the castell. Loke thou well to p streets, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the Lord shall restore againe the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broke them downe, & marred p wyne braunches.
The wilde of his grauntes glystereth, hys men of warre are clothed in purple. hys cha-rettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forward, & his spere shaftes are soked in venim.
The charettes rolle vpo p streets, & welter in p hye wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke cresettes of fyre, & go swyftly, as p lyghte-ninge. Whē he doth but warne his grauntes, they fall in their araye, & hastily they clym-me vpon the walles: yee, the engins of p warre are prepared all ready. The water portes shall be opened, and the kynges palace shall fall. The quene her selfe shall be led awaye captiue, and her gentyl women shall mourne as the dones, & grone within their hertes.

Ninive is like a pole full of water, but the shall they be fayne to fle. Stand, stāde, (that they crye) & there shall not one turne backe.
Awaye w the syluer, awaye with the golde for here is no ede of treasure. There shall be a multitude of all maner of costly ornāmentes thus must the be spoyled, emptied & clene striped out: that their hertes may be melted awaye, their knees tremble, all their loynes be weake, & their faces blacke as a pot.

Where is now the dwellyng of the lps, & the pasture of p lps whelpes? where the lyon & the lyonelle wēt w the whelpes, & no man frayd the awaye? But p lyon spoyled prough for hys yonge ones, & deuoured for his lyonelle: he filled his dēnes w his praye, & his dwellig place w that he had rauished.
Beholde, I will vpo the, sayeth the Lord of hostes, and will set fyre vpo thy charettes p they shall smoke with all, & the swerde shall denoure p yonge lps. I will make an ende of thy spoyling fro out of p earth, & p voyce of thy mellaungers shall nomore be herde.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the fall of Ninive.

Wall full of lyes & robbery, & wyll not leauē of fro rauishing. There a man maye heare scourging, rullynge, the noyse of the wheles, p cryenge of the doxes, and p rollinge of the charettes. There p horse mē get vp w naked swerdes, & glysteringe spea-res: there lyeth a multitude slayne, & a greate heape of deed bodyes: there is no ende of deed coarces: yee, mē fall vpo their bodyes, And that for p greate and manyfolde who-dome, of p fayre & beutyfull harlot: which is a mactresse of witchcraft: yee, and selleth p people thoro her whozdom, & the nacyos thoro her witchcraft.

* Beholde, I will vpon p (sayeth p Lord of hostes) and will pull thy clothes ouer thy head: p I maye thewe thy nakednes amōge the heathen, and thy shame amōge p kyng-domes. I will cast dyte vpon the, to make the be abhorred, & a gasynge stocke: yee, all they that loke vpon the, shall starte backe, and saye: Ninive is destroyed.

Who will haue pitie vpon p? where shall I seke one to cōforte the? Art p better then the greate cite of Alexandria: that laye in the waters, and had p waters roide aboute it: which was strongly fenced & walled with p see? Ethiopia & Egypte were her strength & p exceeding great, aboute measure. Africa & Lybia were her helpers, yet was she dy-uen awaye, & brought into captiuite, her po-ge chyldren were smittē downe at the head of euery strete, p lottes were cast for p most auncient men in her, & all her myghtye men were bounde in chaines. Euen so shalt thou also be dyoncken, & hyde thy selfe, and seke some helpe agaynst thyne enemy. All thy stronge cities shall be lyke fygetrees with ripe figges: wyche when a man shaketh, they shall fall into the mouth of the eater.

Beholde, thy people within the, are but wēme: the portes of thy lade shall be opened vnto thyne enemyes, and the fyre shall deuoure thy barres. Drawe water now agaynst p be beseged, make vp thy strong holdes go into p clape, tēpre p mortar, make strong brick: * yet p fyre shall consume the, p swerde shall destroye the: yee, as the locuste doth, so shall it eate p vp. It shall fall heuely vpo p as p locustes: yee, ryght heuely shall it fall vpo the, euē as p greshoppers. Thy marchautes haue bene nobzēd w the starres of beaue: but now shall they sprede abrode as the locustes & fle their waye: Thy lordes are as the gre-shoppers, & thy captaynes as the multitude of greshoppers: wyche when they be colde, remayne in the hedges: but whē the Sunne is vp, they fle awaye, & no mā can tel where they are become. Thy shepherdes are a slepe (Wkyng of Assur) thy worthyces are layed downe, thy people is scatred abrode vpo the mountaynes, & no man gathereth them together agayne. Thy woude cannot be byd, thy plage is so soze. All they that beare this of the, shall clappe their hādes ouer the. For what is he, to whom thou hast not alwaye bene doyng hurte?

The ende of the prophecy of Nahum.

The

a bier in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be visited: the shall they be wasted awaye. * Let no man beleue his frende, ner put hys confy-dēce in a brother. Kepe p porte of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome: * for the sonne shall put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shall rise agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe against her mother in la-we: and a mans foes shall be euen they of hys awne houtholde.

Acuerthelesse, I will loke vpon p Lord I wyll patiently abyde God my saupoure: my God shall heare me. * Thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shall get vp agayne: & though I lyt i darchnesse, yet the Lord is my lyght. I wyll beare the punishment of p Lord (for why, I haue offended hi) tūll he syt i iudgement vpo my cause, & se p I haue right. He wyll bring me forth to the lyght, & I shall se his rightuousnesse.

He that is myne enemy shall loke vpon it, & be cōfounded, which now salet. * Where is thy Lord God? Wyne eyes shall beholde her, when she shall be trode downe, as p clape in p streets. * The tyme will come, that thy gappes shall be made vp, & the lawe shall go abrode: & at p tyme shall they come vnto the fro Assur vnto the stronge cityes, & from the stronge cityes vnto the ryuer: fro the one see to p other, fro the one mountayne to p other.

Not wythstandynge, p land must be wasted, because of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of their awne Imaginacions.
Therefore fede thy people with thy rodde, & flocke of thine heritage which dwel desolate in the wodde: that they maye be fedde vpon the moūt of Charnell, Balan & Galaad as afoze time. Maruelous thynges wil I thewe the, * lyke as whē they came out of Egypte Thys shall the heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power, * so that they shall laye their hande vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. * They shall lyke the dust lyke a serpent, & as the wormes of the earth, that tremble in their holes. They shall be afrayed of the Lord oure God, & they shall feare the.

Where is there such a God as thou: that pardonest wyckednes, and forgeuest the offences of the remnaunt of thyne herptage?
He kepeth not his wrath for euer: and why? his delite is to haue cōpassiō: * he shall turne agayne, and be mercifull to vs: he shall put downe oure wyckednes, and cast all oure synnes into the botome of p see. Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Jacob, & thy mercy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sowne vnto oure fathers longe agoo.

The Prophecye

The booke of the Prophet Abacuch.

The fyrst Chapter.

A complaine agaynst Israel.

This is þe heny burthe, which the Prophet Abacuch dyd se. Lorde, how longe shall I crye, & thou wylt not heare: how longe shall I complaine vnto the, suffrynge wronge, & þu wylt not helpe? Why lettest þu me se weepynesse and labour? Euyl & violence are before me, power ouergoeth right: for þu lawe is to arme in pecces, & there can not right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the ryghteous: this is þu cause, that wronge iudgement proceedeth. Scholde, amonge the heathen, and loke well, wondre at it, and be abashed: for I wyl do a thyng in your tyme, whych though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. For lo, I wil rayse vp the Caldees, that bitter and swyfte people: which shall go as wynde as þu land is, to take possessiõ of dwelling places, þe not their awne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall sit in iudgement & punishe. Their horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, & byte faster then þu wolues in the euenyng. Their horsemen come by greate heapes fro farre, they sle hastily to deuour as þu Eagle. They come all to spoyle: out of them cometh an east wynde, whych bloweth and gathereth their captiues, lyke as the sande. They shall moke þu kynges, and laughe the princes to scorne. They shall not set by any ströge holde, for they shall laye ordinaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fresh courage vnto the, to go forth & to do more euil, and so ascribe the power vnto * their God. But thou O Lorde my God * my holy one, thou art from the begynnyng, therefore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordered the for a punisshment, and sett the to reprove the myghtye. Thyne eyes are clene, thou mapest not se euil, thou canst not beholde, þu thinge that is wycked. Wherfore the dost thou loke vpon þu vngodly, and holdest thy tynge, when the wycked deuoureth the man þu is better the him selfe? Thou makest men as the fybe in the see, and lyke as þu creppynge beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angle, they catch it in their net, & gather it in their parne: wherof they reioice ad are glad. Therefore offre they vnto their net, & do sacrifice vnto their parne: because that thoroowe it their porceyon is become so fat, & their meate so plenteous. Wherfore, they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the besson of the prophete, Agaynst polluting, couetousnes, and Idolatrye.

I stode vpon my watch, & set me vpon my bulworke, to luke and se what he wolde saye vnto me, and what answer I shulde geue him that reproued me. But the Lord answered me, & sayde: Wryte the vision playnely vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, maye rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a tyme, but at the last it shall come to passe, & not faple. And though he tarp, yet warte thou for him, for in very dede he will come, & not be slacke. Behold, the vneightcouste thiketh him selfe in sauergarde as in a ströge holde: but þu luke that lyue by his fapth. Lpke as þu wyne disceaugeth the bronckarde, euen so þu proude shall faple and not endure. He openeth his desire wyde vvas the hel, & is as vnfacible as death. All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto him all people. But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, & moke him with a byworde, & saye: Who vnto him that heapech vpon other mens goodes: how longe will he lade hym selfe with thicke clayer? How sodely wyl they städe vp, that shall byte, & awake, that shall teare þu in peeces: yee, thou shalt be their praye. Seeinge þu hast spoyled many heathen, therefore shall the remnaunt of the people spople the: because of mens bloude, & for the wöge done in the lande, in the cite and vnto all them that dwell therein. Who vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gottē goodes into his house: that he maye set hys nest an hye, to escape from þu power of misfortune. Thou hast deuyfed the name of thine awne house, for thou hast slayne to moch people, and hast wilfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwyxe the ioyntes of the buylding shall answer. Who vnto him, that buyldeth the towne with bloude, & maynteneth the cite with vneightuousnes. Shall not the Lord of hostes bryge this to passe, that the labourers of the people shall be bryt with a greate fyre, & that the thinge wher vpon the people haue weered the selues, shall be lost? For þu earth shall be full of knowledge of þu Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters prouer the see. Who vnto him that geueth his neyghboure bypnycke, puttynge in gall and makynge him droncken, * that he maye se hys preyteers. Therfore with shame shalt thou be filled, in steade of honoure. Dryncke thou also, tyll thou stombe with all: for the cuppe of the Lordes right hāde shall compasse the aboute, and shamefull speying in steade of thy thy worshyppe. For the wöge that þu hast done in Libanus, shall ouerwhelme the, and the wilde beastes shall make the afraied: because of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the cite, and vnto all soch as dwell therein.

What helpe then wyl þu ymage do, whom the worchman hath fashioned? O þu bayne cast ymage, wherby because the craftelman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he dome idols: Who vnto hym, that layeth to a peece of wood: arple, & to a domme stone: städe vp. For what instructioun maye soch one geue? Scholde it is layed ouer with gold & syluer and there is no bryth in it. But the Lord in his holy temple is he: who all the worlde shulde feare.

The iii. Chapter.

A prayer of the prophete Abacuch for the ignorant.

Lorde, when I herde speake of þu, I was afraied. The worlde that thou hast take in hande, shalt thou perfourme in his tyme, O Lorde: & whe thy tyme cometh, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath þu thinkest vpon mercy. God cometh from Cheman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharau. Selah.

His glory conereth þu heaucns, & the earth is full of his prayse. His shine is as þu sunne, and beames of lyght go out of hys handes, there is his power byd. Destruction goeth before hym, & a pestilent specknell goeth before his fete. He standeth, & mesureth þu earth he loketh, & the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of þu worlde fal downe to powder, & þu hilles are sayne to bowe the selues, for his goynges are euerlastynge and sure.

I sawe, that the paulyons of the Mo-rians & the feses of þu land of Madian were vered for weepynesse. Wast thou not angrie O Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in the floudes, & thy displeasure in þu sees: yee when thou sattest vpon thine horse, & when thy charetes had þu victorie. Thou thewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed w an othe vnto the trybes. Selah.

Thou dydest deuyde þu waters of þu earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afraied, the water streame wente awaye: the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hand. The sunne & moone remayned styll in their habitacp. Thyne arrowes wente out glisterynge, and thy speares as þu thynne of the lyghtenynge. Thou trodest downe the land in thyne anger, and dydest throspe þu beathē in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thine anointed. Thou smotest downe þu head the house of þu vngodly, & disconcredest hys foundaciõs, eue vnto þu necke of him. Selah. Thou dydest stryke thozow w his scepter the heades of his playne people: which come as a stormy wynd to scatre me abroad, & are glad whe they maye eat vp þu pooze secretly. Thou makest a waye for thine horses in the see, eue in þu mudde of great waters. Whe I heare this, my body is vexed, my lyppes treble at þu voyce therof, my bones corrupte, I am afraied where I städe. O þu I myght rest in the daye of trouble, & I myght go vp vnto our people, which are already prepared.

For the fygg trees shall not be grene: & the bynes shall beare no frute. The labour of þu olyue shall be but lost, & the lande shall bring no corne: þu shepe shall be taken out of þu folde, and there shall be no catel in the stalles. But as for me, I wyl be glad in the Lorde, and will reioyce in God my Saupoure. The Lord God is my strength, he shall make my fete as the fete of hertes: & he which geueth the victory, shall bring me to my hye places syngynge vpon my psalms.

The ende of the prophete of Abacuch.

The booke of the Prophet Sophony.

The fyrst Chapter.

A thynnyng agaynst Iuda & Ierusalem because of their Idolatrye.

This is the worde of þu Lord, which cam vnto Sophony the sone of Chusi, the sonne of Gedoliah, þu sone of Amariah, the sonne of Iezchiah in the tyme of * Josiah the sonne of * Amos kyng of Iuda. I wyl gather vp all thynges in þu lande (sayeth the Lord) I wyl gather vp man & beast: I wyl gather vp the foules in þu payre and the fysh in the see (to þu greate decaye of the wycked) and wyl utterly destroye the men out of the lande, sayeth þu Lord. I will stretch oute myne hāde vpon Iuda, & vpon all soch as dwell at Ierusalem. Thus will I rote oute þu remnaunt of Baal from this place, & the names of the * Remurins and prestes: yee, & soch as vpon their house toppes worshyppe and bowe the selues vnto the hoste of heauen: which sweare by þu Lord, & by their Malchom also: which starte a backe from the Lord, and nether seke after þu Lord ner regarde hym.

We still at the presence of the Lord God, for the daye of the Lord is at hande: yee, the Lord hath prepared a slayne offering, and called hys gesses therto. And thus shall it happen in the daye of the Lordes slaynofferyng. I will viset the princes, & þu kynges chylde, and all soch as were straunge clothinge. In the same daye also wyl I viset all those, that treade ouer the thresholde so proudly,

The Prophecy

¶ proudly, which sell their Lordes house with robbery & falshe. At þ same tyme (sayeth the Lord) there shall be herde a grete crye from the * fysh porte and an howlinge from the other porte, and a grete murthure from þ hylls. Howle ye that dwell in þ myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, & all they that were laden with syluer, are roted out.

¶ At the same tyme wyll I seke thozow Jerusalem with lanternes, & vylet them that continue in their dregges, and save in their hertes: * Cuth, þ Lord wyll do nether good ner euell. Their goodes shall be spoyled, and their houses layed waste: * they shall buylde houses, & not dwell in them, they shall plate vnyardes, but not drinke þ wyne therof.

¶ For þ grete * dape of þ Lord is at hande, it is herde by & cometh on a pace. Horrible is the tydinges of the Lordes dape, the shall the gyannte crye out: for that dape is a dape of wraath, a dape of trouble and heynelle, a dape of vter destruction & misery, a darcke & glomyng dape, a cloudy & stormy dape, a dape of the noyle of troettes & thowmes, agaynst the stronge cyties & hie towres. I will brunge the people into such veracion, þ they shall go aboute lyke blinde me, because they haue spyned agaynst the Lord. Their bloude shall be shed as the dust, & their bodies as the myre. * Nether their syluer ner their golde shall be able to deliuer them in that wrothful dape of the Lord, but the * whole lande shall be consumed thozow þ fyre of his gelousy: for he shall soone make cleue ryd- daunce of al them that dwell in the lande.

The ii. Chapter.

¶ Be mouth to returne to God, prophesyinge vnto the one destruction, & to the other deliuerance.

¶ I Kampne poure selues & serche. ¶ Acypon þ halt no desire to þ lawe or þ thing goforth þ God hath concluded, & of the tyme come wherein man shall passe awaye as the dust: or þ fear full wraath of þ Lord come vpon you: yee, or þ dape of þ Lordes soze displeasure come vpon you. Seke þ Lord all yee meke harted vpon earth, ye þ worke after his iudgemēt: seke ryghteoulnesse, seke * lowynesse: þ ye maye be defended in þ wrothful dape of the Lord: * For Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shall be layed waste. They shall cast out Asdod at the noone dape, and Accaron shall be pluckte vpon by the rotes.

¶ Who vnto you þ dwell vpon the see coast ye murthorous people: the worde of þ Lord shall come vpon you. ¶ Canaan thou lande of the Philistines, I will destroye þ, so that there shall no man dwell in the eny more, & as for þ see coast, it shall be heardemens co- tages & shepefoldes: yee, it shall be a porcion for such as remayne of the house of Juda, to fede ther vpon. In þ houses of Ascalon shall they rest towarde nyght: for the Lord their God shall vylet the, & turne awaye their cap- titiue. * I haue herde þ despite of Moab, & the blasphemys of þ children of Ammon how they haue shamefully itreated my pro- ple, & magnified them selues within the bor- ders of their lande. Therefore, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel) Moab shall be as Sodome & Ammō as Gomorra: euē dze thorne hedges, salt pit- tes & a perpetuall wyldernes. The resydue of my folcke shall spoye the, the remaunt of my people shall haue the in possessiō. * This shall happen vnto them for their pryde, be- cause they haue dealte so shamefully with þ Lord of hostes people, & magnified the sel- ues aboue the. The Lord shall be grymme vpon them, & destroye all the goddes in þ lande. And all the fles of the heathen shall worshippe him, euery man in his place.

¶ Pe Moypas also shall perishe w my swer- de: yee, he shall stretch out his hāde ouer the north, and destroye Assur. * As for Ninue, he shall make it desolate, dze & waste. The flockes & all the bestes of þ people shall lye in þ middelt of it, pellicanes & storkes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall syng in the wyndowes, & rauens shall syte vpon þ balches, for þ boordes of Cedre shall be ryuen downe. This is the proude and ca- relesse cytye, that sayde in her herte. * I am, and there is els none. How is she made so waste, that the bestes lye therin? Who so goeth by, mocketh her, and popnteth at her with his spnger.

The iii. Chapter.

¶ Agaynst þ gouernours of Jerusalem, of scallpge of all the Gentyles. A cōsolt to the resydue of Israel.

¶ Who to þ abhominable, fylthie, & cruell cytie: which will not heare, ner be re- fourmed. Her trust is not in þ Lord, nether will she holde her to her God. Her ru- lers within her are as coarpyng * lyas: her iudges are as * wolues in þ euening, which leaue nothyng behide them tply þ mozowe. Her prophetes are lyght persons & vnfaith full mē: her prestes vnhalowe þ sanctuary & do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But þ iust lord þ doth no vnyght, was amo- ge the, euery mozing shewing the his lawe clearly, & ceaseth not. But þ vngodly wyll not lerne to be ashamed. Therefore wil I ro- te oute this people, & destroye their towres: yee, ad make their stretes so voyde, that no mā shall goo therin. Their cytyes shall be bro- ken downe, so that no body shall be left, ner dwell there eny moze.

The boke of the Prophete Aggeus.

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ The tyme of the Prophecy of Aggeus. An exhortacion to buylde the temple agayne.

¶ In the secōde peare of kyng Darius, in the vi. moneth the fyrst dape of þ moneth, came the worde of the Lord (by the Prophete Aggeus) vnto * zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel þ prynce of Ju- da, & to Josua the sonne of Josedeck the hye prest, sayinge. Thus speaketh the Lord of hostes, and sayeth. This people doth saye. The tyme is not yet come to buylde vpon the Lordes house. Then spake þ Lord by þ pro- phete Aggeus, and sayde. * Ye your selues can finde tyme to dwell in silced houses, and I shall thys house lye wast: Consyder nowe poure a wne wayes in poure hertes (sayeth the Lord of hostes) * ye sowe moch, but ye byng lytle in: ye cate, but ye haue not y- nough, ye bynck, but ye are not fylled: ye deche poure selues, but ye are not warme: and he that earneth eny wages, putteth it in a broken purse.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Con- sydere poure a wne wayes in poure hertes, get you vpon to þ mountayne, fetch wood, ad buylde vpon the house * that it maye be acce- ptable vnto me, & that I may thewemyne þ honoure, sayeth þ Lord. Ye looked for moch and lo it is come to lytle, & though ye brin- ge it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayeth the Lord of hostes? * Euen because that my house lyeth so waste, and yeeonne euery man vnto hys awne house. Wherefore, the heauē is forbydden to geue you eny dew, and the earth is forbydden to geue you encrease. * I haue called for a drouth, both vpon the lande and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that þ grou- de bynggeth forth, vpon men & vpon catell, yee, and vpon all handy labour.

¶ Now when zorobabel þ sonne of Sala- thiel, & Josua the sonne of Josedeck the hye prest to the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the Lord they God, and the wordes of þ Prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lord they God had sent him) the people byd feare the Lord. Then Aggeus the Lor- des angell sayde in þ Lordes message vnto the people, * I am with you, sayeth þ Lord. * So the Lord waked vpon the sprete of zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and the spre- te of Josua þ sonne of Josedeck þ hye prest, and the sprete of the remnaunt of all the people.

wherwith I shall vylet the. But neuerthe- les, they stande vpon early: to folowe the fyl- thyness of their awne ymaginacions. There- fore, ye shall wayte vpon me (sayeth þ Lord) vntyll the tyme that I stande vpon: for I am determind, to gather the people & to bring the kingdomes together, that I may poure out myne anger, ye all my wrothfull * dys- pleasure vpon the. * For al the worlde shall be consumed with the fyre of my gelousy. And then wyll I clesse the lypes of the peo- ple, that they maye euerychone call vpon þ name of the Lord, and serue him with one shulder. Soche as I haue subdued, and my children also whom I haue scatred abrode, shall byngge me presentes beyonde the wa- ters of Ethiopia.

¶ In that tyme shalt thou nomoze be con- founded, because of all thy ymagynacions, wher thozow thou haddest offended me: for I will take awaye the proude boasters of thynne honour fro the, so that thou shalt no more triumphe because of my holy pyl. In þ also wyll I leaue a small pooze simple peo- ple, which shall trust in the name of þ Lord. The remnaunt of Israell shall do no wy- kednes, ner speake lyges: nether shall there eny disceatfull tunge be soude in their mou- thes. For they shall be fed, ad take their rest, and no man shall make them asrayed. Geue thākes, O daughter Syō, be ioyfull, O Is- rael: reioyce & be glad from thy whole hert, O daughter Jerusalem, for the Lord hath take awaye thy punishment, and turned backe thynne enemyes. The kyng of Israel, euē the Lord hym selfe is with the: so þ thou nedest nomoze to feare eny mysfortune.

¶ In that tyme it shall be sayde to Jerusa- lem: feare not, & to Syon: let not thynne hā- des be slacke, for the Lord thy God is with the, it is he that hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in the, & a marvelous loue toward the: yee, he reioysseth ouer the w gladnesse. Soche as haue bene in heynesse, wyll I gather together, and take out of thy congregacion: as for the shame and reprofe that hath bene layed vpon the, it shall be far- re from the. And lo, in that tyme wyll I de- stroye al those that were þ: * I wil helpe the lame, and gather vpon the cast awaye: yee, I will get them prayse and honour in all lan- des, where they haue bene put to shame. At þ same tyme wyll I byngge you in, & at the same tyme wyll I gather you. I wil get you a name and a good reposte amonge all peo- ple of the erth, when I turne backe your ca- ptuite before your eyes, sayeth the Lord.

people: that they came and laboured, in the house of the Lorde of hostes they God.

The ii. Chapter.

The second that the goodlynes of the second temple shall exceede the first, because of the coming of Christ.

Vpon the. xliii. daye of the. vi. moneth, in the secōde yere of kynge Darius, the. xxi. daye of the. xliii. moneth, came the word of the Lorde by the prophete Aggeus, sayenge: speake to zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Iuda, & to Iesua the sonne of Iosedech the hye p̄ste, & to the resydue of the people, and saye: * Who is left among you, & sawe thys house in her fyrst bewtye? But what thynke ye now by it? Is it not in poure eyes, eue as though it were nothinge? Neuerthelesse, be of good chere, & zorobabel (sayeth the Lorde) * be of good cōfōrte, & Iesua & sonne of Iosedech hye p̄ste: take good hertes vnto you also all ye people of the lade, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, & do accordyng to the worde (* for I am with you, sayth the Lorde of hostes) lyke as I agreed with you, when ye came out of the lande of Egypt: & my sp̄te shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * yet once more wil I shake heauē and earth, the see, and the drye land, yee, & I wyll moue all heathen, & the conforste of all heathen shall come, & so wyll I fyll thys house wth honoure, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. * The syluer is myne, & the golde is myne, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Thus the glōry of the last house shall be greater then the fyrst, sayth the Lorde of hostes: & in thys place wyll I geue peace, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

The. xliii. daye of the nynt moneth in the secōde yere of kynge Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto the prophete Aggeus, sayenge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. Aske the p̄stes cōcernyng the lawe, and saye: * yf one beare holy flesch in hys coate lappe, & with his lappe do touch the bryd potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meate: shall he be holy also? The p̄stes answered and sayde: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one beying defyled wth a deed carcase, touch any of these: shall it also be vncleane? The p̄stes gaue answer, & sayde: * yee, it shall be vncleane. Then Aggeus answered & sayde: euen so is thys people & thys nacyon before me, sayeth the Lorde: & so are all the workes of theyr handes, yee, and all that they offere, is vncleane.

And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forth, & how it hath gone wth you afore or euer there was layed one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde: & when ye came to a corne heape of. xx. bushels, there were scarce ten: & that when ye came to the wyne presse for to powre out. i. pottes of wyne, there were scarce. xx. For I smote you wth heate, blastynge & hable stones in all the labours of poure handes: yet was there none of you, & wolde turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Consydre then from this daye forth & afore: namely, from the. xliii. daye of the nynt moneth, vnto the daye that the foundation of the Lordes temple was layed: mark it well, * is not the seede yet in the barn? haue not the vynes, the figgetrees, the pomgranates, and olyue trees bene yet vncroftfull: but from thys daye forth, I shall make them to prosper.

Moreouer, the. xliii. daye of the moneth came the word of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayenge: Speake to zorobabel the p̄nce of Iuda, & saye: I wyll shake both heauen & earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kynngdomes, yee, & destroye the myghty kynngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charrettes, & those that syt vpon them, so that both horse and man shall fall downe, euery man thow he his neyghbours swerde. And as for the, & zorobabel (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruant: I wyll take the (sayeth the Lorde) at the same tyme, and make the as a scale, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

The ende of the prophecyp of Aggeus.

The booke of the Prophete zachary.

The fyrst Chapter.

The moneth the people to returne to the Lorde, and to eschue the wickednes of theyr fathers. As prophesied by Christ and the Apostles.

In the eyght moneth of the secōde yere of kynge Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto zacharie the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the prophete, sayenge: The Lorde hath bene so displeased at poure forefathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: * Turne you vnto me (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayth the Lorde of hostes. * We ye not lyke your forefathers, vnto who the prophetes cryed afore tyme, sayeng. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. * Turne you from poure euell wayes, and from poure wycked ymaginacions. * But they wolde not heare ner regarde me, sayeth the Lorde. What is now become of poure forefathers and the prophetes prophetes: are they yet styll alpye? But byd not my wordes and statutes) which I commaunded by my seruantes the prophetes) touche poure forefathers? Upon this, they gaue answer and sayde: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, accordyng to oure owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he delt wth vs.

Upon the. xliii. daye of the. xi. moneth whych is the moneth Seebah, in the secōde yere of Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayeng, I sawe by nyght and lo, there sat one vpon a reddy horse and stode styll amonge the myrtre trees, that were beneth vpon the ground, and behynde hym were there reddy, speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayde I, O my Lorde, what are theses? And the aungel that talked wth me, sayde vnto me. I wyll shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the myrtre trees answered & sayde: These are they whom the Lorde hath sente to go thowowe the world. And they answered the aungel of the Lorde, & stode amonge the myrtre trees and sayde. We haue gone thowowe the world: and beholde all the world dwell at ease and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungel gaue answer and sayde: O Lorde of hostes, howe longe wylt thou be vnnmerciful to Ierusalem and to the cyties of Iuda? * with who thou hast bene displeased nowe these thre score & ten yeres. So the Lorde gaue a loupyng and a comfortable answer vnto the aungel & talked wth me. And the aungel that comened wth me, sayd vnto me: Crye thou, & speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I am exceedinge gelous ouer Ierusalem and Sidon, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathen: for where as I was but alpye afore, they byd theyr best that I myght destroye them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: * I wyll turne me agayne in mercye toward Ierusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, yee, and the plommet shall be layed abroade in Ierusalem, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Crye also, and speake thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. My cyties shall be in good prosperyte agayne, the Lorde shall yet conforste Sidon: & chose Ierusalem: Then lyfte I vp myne eyes, & sawe, & beholde foure hornes. And I sayde vnto the aungel, that talked wth me what be theses? he answered me. * These are the hornes which haue scattered Iuda, Irael & Ierusalem abroade. And the Lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayde I: what wylt these do? he answered and sayde: These are the hornes which haue so strowed Iuda abroade, that no man durste lyfte vp hys head: But these are come to fray them awaye: & to caste out the hornes of the Gentiles: whychelyste by theyr horne ouer the lande of Iuda, to scatter it abroade.

The ii. Chapter.

The renewyng of Ierusalem and Iuda.

Lift vp myne eyes agayne, and lo I beholde: & beholde a man wth a measure lyne in hys hand. Then sayde I: whether goeste thou? & he sayde vnto me: Come I measure Ierusalem, & I maye se how longe & howe brode it is. And beholde the aungel that talked wth me, went bys waye forth. Then went there oute another aungel to mete him, & sayde vnto hym: Wane speake to thys ponge man, and saye: Ierusalem shall be enhabtyed wthout eny wall, for the very multitude of people and cattell that shall be therein: * yee, I myselfe (sayth the Lorde) wyll be vnto her a wall of fyer rounde aboute, and wyll be honoured in her.

O get you forth, & fle from the lande of the north, sayth the Lorde, yee, * whome I haue scattered into foure wyndes vnder heauen, sayth the Lorde. Saue thy selfe, & syon: thou that dwellest wth the daughter of Babylon, for thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. After that glorious power hath he sent me out to the heathen, whych spoyled you, * for who so toucheth you, shall touch the apple of hys owne eye. Beholde, I wyll lyfte vp myne hande ouer them: * so that they shall be spoyled of those: whych afore serued them, and ye shall knowe, that the Lorde of hostes hath sente me.

Be glad, & reioyce, O daughter of Syon: for lo, * I am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayth the Lorde at the same tyme there shall many heathen cleue to the Lorde and shall be my people. Thus wyll I dwell in the myddest of the, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde of hostes hath sente me vnto the. The Lorde shall haue Iuda in possession for hys parte in the holy ground, and shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. * Let all flesch be styll before the Lorde, for he is rysen oute of hys holy place.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the lawe and byndyng of Christ, vnder the gyure of Iesue the p̄ste. A prophecyp of Zachary.

Ad he shewed me Iesua the hye p̄ste standyng before the angel of the Lorde * and Satan stode at his ryght hand to resyst hym. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan. The Lorde reprove the (thou Satan,) yee, the Lorde that hath chosen Ierusalem, reprove the. Is not thys a brand taken out of the fyre? Howe Iesua was clothed in vncleane raiment, and stode before the aungel whych answered and sayde vnto those that stode before hym, take awaye the foule clothes from hym. And vnto him he sayde. Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the and wyll decke the wth chaung of raiment.

he sayde mozeouer, sett a sayre myter vpon hys heade. So they set a sayre myter vpon hys heade, & put on clothes vpon hym, and angel of the Lord stode there. Then an angel of the Lord testifed vnto Iesua, and spake thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. If thou wilt walke in my wayes, & kepe my watch: thou shalte rule my house, & kepe my courtes, & I will geue the place amonge these that stode here. Heare (O Iesua) thou hye preste, thou and thy frends that dwell before the, for they are woderous people. Behold, I will bring forth the bzaunches of my seruaunt: for lo, I stonde I haue laped before Iesua: vpon one stone shalbe vii. eyes. Beholde I will he-we hym out (sayeth the Lord of hostes) & take awaye the synne of the lade in one day.
Then shal euery man cal for his neyghbour under the vine and vnder the figgetre, say-th the Lord of hostes:

The. iiii. Chapter.

The vision of the golden candlesticke and the explication thereof.

And an angel that talked with me came agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is rayled out of hys slepe & sayd vnto me: what seest thou? And I sayde I haue looked, and beholde: a candlesticke al of golde with a boule vpon it, & his seuen lampes ther in, and vpon euery lape seuen stalkes.

And two olpue trees therby, one vpon the ryght syde of the boule, and the other vpon the lyfteside. So I answered, and spake to the angel that talked w me saying, O my Lord what are these? the angel that talked wth me answered and sayde vnto me: knoweste thou not what these be? and I sayde: No my Lord. He answered & sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lord vnto zozobabel, sayinge: * Neither thorow an hooste of men nor thorowe strengthe, but thorowe my spere, sayeth the Lord of hostes. What art thou thou great mountayne, before zozobabel? It must be made euen. And he shal bypunge vpon fyrste stone, so that men shal crye vnto him good lucke good lucke.

Mozeouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge. * The hādes of zozobabel haue laped the foundacyon of the house: vpon handes, shal also synne the st, * that ye maye knowe howe that the Lord of hostes hath sent me vnto you. For he that hath bene dispylled a litle season, shal reioyce, when he seeth the tyme weyght in zozobabels hande.

The. vii. eyes are the Lordes whych go tho-row the whole world. Then answered I, and sayd vnto him, what are these two olpue trees vpon the ryght and lefte syde of the candelstick? I spake mozeouer, and sayd vnto him what be these two olpue bzaunches (whych thorow the two golden pyppes) emptie them selues into the golde. He answered me & sayd knowest thou not, what these be? And I sayde, no, my Lord. Then sayd he. * These are the two olpue bzaunches, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The. v. Chapter.

The vision of the flyinge booke, & synnysinge the cure of theuys and such as abuse the name of God, by the bypoun of the measure, is synnysinge the bypoun of Iuda to Babelon.

I turned me, lyftynge vpon myne eyes, & looked, & beholde, a flyinge booke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I see a flyinge booke of. xx. cubytes longe, and. x. cubytes broude. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the cure of theuys that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all theuys shalbe iudged after this booke & all swearers shalbe iudged accordynge to it same, & I will bypunge it furth (sayeth the Lord of hostes) so that it shall come to the house of these, & to the house of him, & falsly sweareth by my name: & shall remayne in hys house, & consume it, w the tymbre and stones thereof.
Then the angel that talked w me, wente forth and sayd vnto me: lyft vp thynne eyes and se, what is this that goeth forth. And I sayde: What is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out. He sayde mozeouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyft vp a talent of leade: & lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: this is vngodlynnes. So he cast her into the myddest of the measure, and threwe the lompe of leade into the mouth of the measure.

Then lyfte I vpon myne eyes, & looked: and behold, there came out. ii. womē, and a wind was in their wynges (for they had wynges lyke the wynges of a stork) & they lyft vpon the measure betwixt the earth and the heauē. The spake I to the angel that talked w me: why-ther will these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: into the lande of * Synear to buyld them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The. vi. Chapter.

The four charrettes he describeth the prosperite of four kyngdomes.

Mozeouer, I turned me, lyftynge vpon myne eyes, and looked, & be-holde, there came foure charretes out from betwixt two hylls, whiche hylls were of brasse.

In the fyrst charret were * red hoxles, in the second charret were black hoxles, in the third charret were whyte hoxles, in the fourth cha-ret were hoxles of dyuers colours and strōge Then spake I, and sayde vnto the aungell that talked with me: O lord what are these?

The aungell answered, and sayde vnto me:
* These are the. iiii. wyndes of the beauen, whiche be come forth to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That with the blacke hoxle went

wente into the lande of the north, & the white folowed them, and the speckled hoxles wete forth towarde the south. These hoxles were very stronge, and wente out: & sought to go & take the earth iourney ouer the whole earth.
And he sayde: get you hence, & go thorow the world. So they wente thorow out the world. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: behold, these that go to-warde the north, shall styll my wrath in the north cowntre.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayng. Take of the prisoners that are come from Babelon: namely, helbai, Tobiah, & Iadai: & come thou & same daye, & go into the house of Iosiah, the sonne of Sophony.
Then take golde & syluer, & make crownes therof, and let them vpon the head of Iesua, the sonne of Iosedech, the hye preste, & speake vnto hym. Thus sayth the Lord of hos-tes. Behold, the man whose name is * the bzauche: & he shall bypunge vpon after him, * shall buyld vpon the temple of the Lord, yee, euen he shal buyld vpon the temple of the Lord.
* He shal beare the prayse, he shal syt vpon the Lordes trone, & haue the dominacyon.

* A preste shal be also vpon his trone, & a peaceable cosicel shalbe betwixt them both. And the crownes shalbe in the temple of the Lord, for a remembraunce vnto he-lcim, Tobiah, Iadai, and then the sonne of Sophony. And soch as be farre of, shal come & buyld the temple of the Lord, that ye maye knowe, how that the Lord of hostes hath set me vnto you. And this shal come to passe, yf ye will herken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord poure God.

The. vii. Chapter.

The estimation of fastynge without mercede. The bysynnysinge of charyte, & the obaynace of the people.

It happened also in the fourth yere of kyng Darius, the worde of the Lord came vnto zachary in the fourth daye of the fourth moneth, which is called, Cullen: what tyme as Sarasar & Rogomelech & the men that were w them sent vnto Bethell for to praye before the Lord: and that they shulde saye vnto the prestes, whiche were in the house of the Lord of hos-tes, and to the prophetes. Shuld I wepe in the fourth moneth, & absteyne as I haue done now certayne yeres? Then came the worde of the Lord of hostes vnto me say-ge. Speake vnto all the people of the land, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the fourth & seuenthy moneth (now this. lxx. yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me?
When ye dyd eate also and droncke, dyd ye not eate & dryncke for youre awne selues?
Are not these the wordes, whiche the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, whē Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthy, she and the cytyes rounde aboute her: whē there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in the playne countrees?

And the worde of the Lord came vnto zachary, sayge. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. * Execute true iudgement: the we-mercy & lounge kyndnesse, euery man to hys brother. Do the wyddowe, the father-les, the straunger, & poore no wrong: & let no man ymageneuel agaynst hys brother in hys herte. * Reuerthelesse, they wolde not take hede, but turned theyr backs, and stopped theyr eares, & they shulde not heare: yee, they made theyr hertes as an Adamant stone lest they shulde heare the lawe & wordes, * whiche the Lord of hostes sent in hys holy spere by his prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the Lord of hostes was very wroth at the. And thus is it come to passe:
* that lyke as he spake and they wolde not heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayth the Lord of hostes) but scatered them amonge all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lade was made so desolate, & there trauayled no man in it nether to, ner fro, for the pleasaunt lande was utterly laped waste.

The. viii. Chapter.

Of the returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, and of the mercy of God toward them, & of good wordes, & the callynge of the Gentiles.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayge. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. I was in a great gelousy ouer Sion, yee, I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a great dyspleasure thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. I will turne me agayne vnto Syon, & will dwell in the myddest of Ierusalem: * so that Ierusalem shalbe called a saythfull & true cytye, & hyl of the Lord of hostes, yee, an holy hyl.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. There shall yet olde men & women dwell agayne in the stretes of Ierusalem: yee, & soch as go w itaues in their hādes for very age. The stre-tes of the cytye also shalbe full of yōge boyes and damselles, playynge vpon the strates.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: yf the sydue of this people thynke it to be impossible in these dayes, * shuld it therfore be un-possible in my syght, sayth the Lord of hos-tes? Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: Be-holde, I will deliuer my people from the lan-de of the east & west, and will bypunge them agayne: that they maye dwell at Ierusalem.

* They shalbe my people, & I will bypunge God, in treuth and ryghteousnesse.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: let your handes be stronge, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, whych be in these dayes & the foundacyon is layed vpon

The Prophecy

*Agg. i. a.

upon the Lord of hostes house that the temple may be builded. For why? before the days, neither men nor catel could wyne any thinge, neither myght any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I lett every man go agaynst his neyghboure.

*Agg. ii. c.

Neuertheles, I wyll now intreate presy due of thys people nomore as afore tyme, sayth the Lord of hostes, but they shalbe a sede of peace. The vineyarde shal geue her frute, & grounde shal geue her increase, and the heauens shal geue they dewe: and I shal cause the remnant of thys people, to haue all these in possession. And it shal come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the heathen (O ye house of Juda, and ye house of Israel) Euen so wil I deliuer you, that ye shalbe a blessing: feare not, but let your handes be stronge.

*Eph. i. i. c.
*ach. ii. b.
*Isa. ii. b.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: lyke as I deuyld to punyssh you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lord of hostes, & spared not. Euen so am I determined now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Juda & Jerusalem, therefore feare ye not. Nowe & thynge that ye shal do, are these: * Speake every man the treuth vnto his neyghboure, execute iudgement truly, and peaceably wythyn your portes, none of you pinagin euil in his herte agaynst his neyghboure, and loue no false othes: for all these are & thynge that I hate, sayeth the Lord. And the worde of the Lord of hostes, came vnto me, sayeng: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. The fast of the fourth moneth, & fast of the fift, the fast of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shal be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous hys feastes vnto the house of Juda: Onely, loue the treuth and peace.

*Esa. li. a.
*Isa. xlii. a.
*Isa. xlii. a.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. There shal yet come people, and the inhabitants of many cyties, & they that dwell in one cyte shal go to another, sayeng. * Up, let vs go, & praye before the Lord, let vs seke the Lord of hostes, I wyll go w you: yee, moche people & myghty heathen shal come & seke the Lord of hostes at Jerusalem, and to praye before the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. In & tyme shal ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gentyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, & saye: we wyll go w you, for we haue herde, that God is amonge you.

The. ix. Chapter.

The conuersion of the Gentyles. The coming of Christ to pynge on an asse.

The worde of the Lord shalbe receaued at Adrach, & Damascus shalbe hys offering: for the eyes of all men & of & trybes of Israel shal loke vnto the Lord. The borders of hemath shal be her-de therby. Thus also Sidon, for they are very wyle, * Thus shal make her self stronge, heape vpon synner as & sande, & golde as & claye of & stretes. Behold, & the Lord shal take her in, & haue her in possession: * he shal synne downe her power into & see, and she shalbe consumed w fyre. This shal Ascalon se, & be afraied. * Gaza shalbe very forry, so shal Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For & kynge of Gaza shal perysh, & at Ascalon shal no man dwell.

Strangers shal dwell at Asdod, & as for & pynde of the Philistynes, I shal rote it out. * They bloude wyll I take awaye from they mouth, & they abhominacyons from among they teeth. Thus they shalbe left for our God, yee, they shalbe as a prince in Juda, & Accaron lyke as a Jebus. And so wyll I copse my house rounde about w my men of warre goynge to & fro: that no oppressoure come vpon the eny more. For that haue I sene now w myne eyes.

* Reioyce & greatly, O daughter Syon be glad, O daughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kynge, cometh vnto the, euen the ryghteous and sauoure, Lowly & symple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, & vpon & foale of an asse. I will rote out & charrettes fro Ephraim, & the horse from Jerusalem, & batell bowes shalbe destroyed. he shal geue the doctrine of peace vnto & heathen, * & his dominion shalbe from & one see to & other, & from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thouzow the bloude of thy couenaunt: shal let thy prisoners out of the piete wher i his no water. Turne you now to & strage holde, ye & be in prison, & longe for to be deliuered. And this daye I byng & worde, & I wyll rewarde & double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me & Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes, O Sidon, wil I rayle vpon agaynst & Grekes, & make & as a gyautes swarde: & the Lord God shalbe sene aboue them, & hys dartes shal go forth as & lyghtenynge. The Lord God shal blowe the trompet, and shal come forth as a storme out of the south.

The Lord of hostes shal defende them, they shal consume & deuoure, & subdue them w & synge stones. They shal dyncke & rage, as it were thouzow wyne. They shalbe fylled lyke & balens, & as & hornes of & antler. The Lord their God shal deliuer them in the daye, as & flock of his people: for as prepyous stones of a dyademe they shalbe lett vpon his lande. O how prosperous and goodly a thynge shal that be! The roze shal make & ponge men chearefull, and the new wyne the maydens.

The. v. Chapter.

The people is moued to requite the doctrine of truth of the Lord. The Lord promyseth to byset and comforte the house of Israel.

*Zach. i. a.

Raye the Lord then by tymes to geue you & latter rayne, * so shal the Lord make bright cloudes, ad geue you rayne ynough for all the increase of the felde. For wayne is the answere of Idols. The sothsayers se lyes, and tell but wayne dreames: the conforte that they geue, is no thynge worth. Therefore, go they astraye lyke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, because they haue no & shepherde. My wrath full displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, & I wil byset the goates. For the Lord of hostes will graciously byset his flock, the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the batell. Out of & Juda shal come the helmet & the nayle the batell bowe, ad all the princes together. They shalbe as & gyautes, which in the batell treade downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shal fyght for the Lord shalbe wth them, so that the horsmen shalbe confounded.

I wyll conforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I wyll turne them also, for I pitie them: and they shalbe lyke as they were, when I had not cast the of. For I the Lord am their God, ad wyll heare the. Ephraim shalbe as a gyaunt, ad their hert shalbe chereful as thouzow wyne: yee, their children shal se it, and be glad, ad their hert shal reioyce in the Lord. I wyll blowe for them and gather them together, for I wyll redeme them. They shal increase, as they increased afore. I wyll sowe the amonge the people, that they may thyncke vpon me in farre countreys: they shal lyue wth their children, & turne agayne. I wyll byynge them agayne also from the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria. I wyll carpe them into the lande of Galaad & to Libanus and they shal wante nothinge. he shal go vpon the see of trouble, & synne the see waues: so that all the depe floudes shalbe dryed vp. The proude boastyng of Assur shalbe cast downe, and the sceptre of Egypte shal be taken awaye. I wyll conforte the in the Lord, that they maye walke in his name, sayeth the Lord.

The. xi. Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The care of the sayth: full is conuicted to Christ by the father. A greuous byson agaynst Jerusalem and Juda.

When thy dozes, O Libanus, that & tyre maye consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye & tyre trees for the Cedre is fallen, yee, all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Baalan) for the myghty stronge wood is cut downe. When may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their gloze is destroyed. When may heare the Lyons whelpes roare, for the pynde of Jordane is wasted awaye. Thus sayeth the Lord my God: ffeede the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shalbe slayne of those & possesse them: yet they take it for no sunne, but they that sell them, saye: The Lord be thacked, I am rich: yee, their awoke shepherdes spare the not. Therefore wyll I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lord) but lo, I wil deliuer the people, euery man into his neyghbours hande and into the hande of his kynge: that they maye synne the lande, and out of their handes I wyll not deliuer them.

I my selfe fedde & slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staues: the one is called loupynge mekenesse, the other is called destroyer, ad so kepte the shepe. These shepherdes I putt out of offyce in one moneth, for I myght not awaye wth the, neither had they eny delite in me. Then sayde I: I wyll fede you nomore * & thynge that dyeth, let it dye: and that wyll perysh, let it perysh, and let the remnant cate, euery one the fleshe of his neyghboure. I toke also my loupynge meke staff, and brake it, & I myghte disannull the & couenaunt, which I made wth all people. And so it was broke in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that had a respect vnto me, knewe therby, that it was the worde of the Lord. And I sayde vnto them: yf ye thynke it good, byng hyther my pyce: yf no, then leaue. * So they waped downe. xxx. syluer pence, the value & I was pypled at. And the Lord said vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly pyce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the. xxx. syluer pence, and cast them to the potter in & house of the Lord. Then brake I my other staff also, (namely destroyer) & I might lowse & brotherhead betwixt Juda and Israel. And the Lord sayde vnto me. Take & also the staff of a foolyshe shepherde: for lo, I wyl rayle vpon a shepherde in the lade, which shal not seke after & thinges that be lost, ner care for such as go astraye: he shal not heale & wounded, he shal not norysh the thynge that is whole: but he shal eate the fleshe of such as be fat, and teare theyr clawes in pecces.

Idols shepherde, that leaueth the flocke. The swerde shal come vpon hys arme and vpon hys ryght eye. hys arme shalbe cleane dryed vp, and hys ryght eye shalbe soze blynded.

The. xii. Chapter.

The destruction and buryynge agayne of Jerusalem.

he heuy burthen which the Lord hath deuyld for Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord * which spred the heauens abrode, layde the foundation of the earth: and geueh man the breath of lyfe. Beholde, I wyll make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfeit, vnto all the people that are rounde about her.

The Prophecy.

*Zach. xiii. c *Yee, Iuda hym selfe also shalbe in the sege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme wyl I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for al people, so that al soch as lyft it vp, shalbe toare and rente, and all the people of the earth shalbe gathered together agaynst it.

*In that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyl make all houses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wittes. I wyl open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all the houses of the people with blindness. And the princes of Iuda shal saye in their hertes. The inhabytors of Jerusalem shal geue me consolacio in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme wyl I make the princes of Iuda lyke an hote burnynge ouer with wood, and lyke a cresset of fyre among the strawe: so that they shal consume all the people rounde aboute them, both vpon the ryght hande & the left. Jerusalem also shalbe inhabited agayne: namely, in the same place where Jerusalem standeth.

The Lorde shal preserue the tētes of Iuda lyke as a forre tyme: so the glory of the house of Dauid: & the glory of the cytelys of Jerusalem, shalbe but lytle regarded, in coparison of the glory of Iuda. In that daye shal the Lorde defende the cytelys of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then amonge the shalbe as Dauid: and the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as Gods house, and as the Angell of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme wyl I go about to destroye all soch people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the cytelys of Jerusalem, wyl I poure out the sprete of grace & compassion, so that they shal loke vpon me, who they haue pearced: & they shal bewepe hi as me moune for their only begottē sone: yee, & be soz for him, as me are soz for their first chyld.

Then shal there be a great mournynge at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Ademnon in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shal bewaile euery kyndred by the selues. The kyndred of the house of Dauid the selues alone, and their wyues by the selues: The kyndred of the house of *Nathan them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. The kyndred of the house of *Leui them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. The kyndred of the house of *Semei them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. In lyke maner, all the other generacions euer yphone by them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues.

The. xiii. chapter.

Of the well of grace and truth. Of the cleane rebbaunce of Adolatre, and of false prophetes.

At that tyme shal the house of Dauid and the cytelys of Jerusalem haue an open well, to wash of synne and uncleynesse. And then (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) I wyl destroye the names of Idolers out of the lāde: so that they shal nomore be put in remembraunce.

As for the false prophetes also, and the unclene sprete, I shal take the out of the lande. So that yf any of them prophete any more, his a wne father and mother that begat him, shal saye vnto hi. Thou shalt dye for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yee, his a wne father and mother that begat him, shal woude him, whē he prophetieth. And then shal those prophetes be confounded, euery one of his visio when he prophetieth: nether shal they were sack clothes any more, to disceane men with all. But he shal be sayne to saye: I am no prophet: I am an husbandman, for so am I taught by Adam fro my youth vp. And yf it be sayde vnto hym: how came these woundes then in thine hādes? he shal answer. Thus am I wounded in the house of myne a wne frendes.

Arise, O thou swerde, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Smyte the shepherde, and the shepe shalbe scatred abrode, and so wyl I turne myne hāde to the lytle ones. And it shal come to passe (sayeth the Lorde) that in all the lande two partes shalbe roted out, but the thyrde parte shal remayne therein. And the same thyrde parte wyl I bringe thorow fire, & wil cleanse the, as the siluer is clenched: yee, & trye the lyke as golde is tryed. Then shal they call vpon my name and I will heare them: I wyl saye: it is my people. And they shal saye: Lorde my God.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The wallpape of the church vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

Beholde, the daye of the Lorde cometh, that shal be spoyled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heathen to fight agaynst Jerusalem: so the citie shal be wonne, the houses spoyled, and the weme defiled. The halfe of the citie shal go awayne into captiuite, and the residue of the people shal not be caried out of the citie. After that shal the Lorde go forth to fight agaynst those heathen, as men vse to fyght in the daye of battell. The shal his fete stand vpon the mount olyuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount olyuete shal cleue in two, eastwarde and westwarde, so that there shalbe a great valley, and the halfe mount shal remoue towarde the north, & the other towarde the south. And ye shal be vnto the valley of my hylls, for the valley of the hylls shal reach vnto Masal. Yee, he shal be lyke as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Osiā kyng of Iuda. And the Lorde my God shal come, & al saintes with him. In that daye shal it not

The booke of the Prophete Malachy.

The first Chapter.

A complaine agaynst Israel and her priestes.

Ye heuy burthen, which the Lorde sheweth agaynst Israel, by Malachy. I haue loued you, sayeth the Lorde: & yet ye saye: wherein haue thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayeth the Lorde: yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: yee, I haue made bys hylls wast and his heritage a wilderness for dragons. And though Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wyl go bypide vpon agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) what they bypided, that was he Idone: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whome the Lorde hath cunct bene aingtye withall.

Poure eyes haue sene it, and ye poure selues must cofesse, the Lorde hath brought the lāde of Israel to great honoure. Shulde not a sonne honour his father, & a seruaunt his master? Yf I be now a father, where is myne honoure? Yf I be the Lord, where am I feared? sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Now to you priestes, I despyse my name. And yf ye saye: wherein haue we despyed thy name? In this, ye offere unclene bled vpon myne auter. And yf ye wil saye: wherein haue we offered any unclene thinge vnto the? In this ye saye: the auter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. Yf ye offere the blynde, is not that euell? And yf ye offere the lame and sycke, is not that euell? Yee, offere it vnto thy prince, shal he be content with the, or accepte thy person, sayeth the Lorde of hostes?

And now make poure prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for soche thinges haue ye done. Shal he regard your personnes, thinke ye, sayeth the Lorde of hostes? Yee, what is he amonge you, that wyl do so moch as to shut the doores, or to kinde the fyre vpon myne auter for naught? I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and as for the meat offering, I wyl not accepte it at your hande. For fro the rising vp of the sonne vnto the going downe of the same, my name is greates amonge the Gentiles: yee, in euery place shal there sacrifice be done, and cleane meat offering offered vnto my name: for my name is greates amonge the heathen, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. But ye haue unhalowed it, in that ye saye, the auter of the Lorde is not to be regarded, and the thing that is set ther vpon not worthy to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but labour and trouble, it not be lyghte, other cleare or dymme.

This shalbe that speciall daye whiche is knowne vnto the Lorde: nether day ner nyght but about the euenynge tyme it shalbe light.

In that tyme shal there waters of lyfe runne out fro Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them towarde the east see, and the other halfe towarde the uttermost see, and shal continue both somer and wynter. And the Lorde hym selfe shalbe kyng ouer all the earth.

At the tyme shal there be one Lord onely, & his name shalbe but one. He shal go about the whole erth, as vpon a felde: fro Gibea to Wēno, & fro the south to Jerusalem. He shal be set vp, & inhabited in her place: fro Ben Jaminys porte, vnto the place of the first porte, & vnto the corner porte: & from the tower of Hananeell, vnto the kurges wyne presses. There shal men dwel, & there shalbe no more cursinge, but Jerusalem shalbe safely inhabited. This shalbe the plage, wherewith the Lorde wil smyte all people, & haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, their flesch shal consume a waye, though they stāde vpon their fete, their eyes shalbe corrupt in their holes and their tynge shal consume in their mouth.

In that daye shal the Lorde make a great sedicion amonge the, so that one man shal take another by the hande, & lape his hādes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. Iuda shal fyght also agaynst Jerusalem, & the goodes of all the heathen shalbe gathered together round aboute: golde & syluer & a very great multitude of clothes. And so shal this plage goo ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, & all the bestes that shalbe in the host, lyke as yf a plague was. Euery one that remayneth then of all the people, which cam agaynst Jerusalem, shal go by perly, to worshyppe the kyng (euen the Lorde of hostes) and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generation vpon the earth goeth vnto Jerusalem for to worshyp the kyng (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shal come no rayne. Yf the kyndred of Egypte go not vp, & come not, it shal not rayne vpon them nether.

This shalbe the plage wherewith the Lorde wil smyte all the heathen, & come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yee, this shalbe the synne plage of Egypt & the synne plage of al people that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydynge gere of the horses be holy vnto the Lorde, & the kettels in the Lordes house shal be lyke the basens before the auter: yee, al the kettels in Jerusalem and Iuda, shalbe holy vnto the Lorde of hostes: and all they that laye offerings, shal come & take of them, & byght the there in. And at that tyme there shal be no more Cananites in the house of the Lorde.

naple, ad thus haile ye thought seyne at it (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) offeringe robbery, yee, the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meat offeringe, shulde I accept it of your hande, sayeth the Lorde. Curled be the dissembler, which hath in his flocke one that is a male, ad when he maketh a voice, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a grete kynge (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and my name is fearfull among the heathen.

The ii. Chapter.

Chateynnges agaynst the prestes byngge seducers of the people.

Ad now (O ye prestes) this comaundment toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it, ner regard it, to geue y glorie vnto my name, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, I will sende a curse vpon you, & will curse youre blessinges: yee curse them wyll I yf ye do not take hede. Beholde, I shall corrupte your sede, and cast dounge in youre faces, euen the dounge of youre solemne feastes and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe, that I haue sent this comaundment vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leui, might stande sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

I made a couenaunt of lye & peace wyth him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, ad had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, ad there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one awaye fro their synnes. For in the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowledge, y men may leke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messaunger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleue out of y waye, ad haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Therefore wyll I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene parciall in the lawe.

Haue we not all one father? hath not one God made vs? why doth every one of vs then despise his awne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Iuda offended: yee, the abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: for Iuda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shal destroye the ma that doth this: (yee, both the master ad the scoler) out of the tabernacle of Iacob with hym that offereth vp meat offeringe vnto the Lorde of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to this popnte agayne, y the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares, wepyng and mourninge: so that I wyll nomore regard the meat offeringe, nether wyll I receaue or accepte eny thyng at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherefore? Cuse because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt betwixte y and the wyfe of thy yowth, thou hast despyled. Yet is the thyne awne companyd and marped wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent sprete. What dyd then the one? he sought the sede promised of God. Therefore loke well to your sprete, and let no man despyle the wyfe of his yowth. Yf y hatest her put her awaye sayeth the Lorde God of Israel and geue her clothyng for the scoone, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to youre sprete, ad despyle her not. Ye greue the Lorde with your wordes, & yet ye saye: wherewithal haue we greued him? In this, that ye saye. Al that do euil are good in the syght of God, and soch please hym. O els where is the God that punisheth?

The iii. Chapter.

Of the messaunger of the Lorde John Baptiste of the dape of the Lorde, and of Elias.

Behold, I will sende my messaunger, whiche shall prepare the waye before me: ad the Lorde whom ye wolde haue, shal soone come to his temple, yee, eue the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Behold, he cometh, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. But who may abyde the dape of his comyng? Who shal be able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmithes fyre, ad lyke washers sope. He shal syt him downe to trye and to clesse the syluer, he shal pource the chyldren of Leui, and purifye them lyke as golde and syluer: that they maye bringe meat offerings vnto the Lorde in righteousness. Then shall the offeringe of Iuda and Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lorde, lyke as from the begynnyng ad in the yeaeres, a fore tyme. I wyll come and punyche you, ad I my selfe wyll be a wyfte wytnes agaynst the wyches, agaynst the aduouterers, agaynst false swearers: yee, & agaynst those that wrongeously kepe back the hytelnynges dewty: which were the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge not, & ye (O chyldren of Iacob) wyll not leaue of ye are gone awaye from myne ordinaunces, and seng the tyme of your forsaithers haue ye not kepte them.

Turne you now vnto me, and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: ye saye, wherin shal we turne? Shulde a man vse falschod and disceat with God as ye vse

Of Malachy.

Jo. cccxii.

ye vse falschod and disceate with me: yet ye saye wherin vse we disceate w the? In thethes & heaue offerings. Therefore are ye cursed wyth penury, because ye dissemble with me, all the sozte of you.

Bringe euery wythe into my barne, that there maye be meat in myne house: and procure me withall (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) yf I wyll not open the wyndowes of heaue vnto you, ad poure you out a blessing with plenteousnesse. Yee, I shall reprove the consumer for your sakes, so y he shall not eate vp the frute of youre grounde, nether shall the vyngarde be bare in the felde, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: In so moch that all people shal saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Pe speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayeth the Lorde. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde: It is but lost labour, to serue God: what profyt haue we for keepyng his comaundmentes, and for walkyng humbly before the Lorde of hostes? Therefore maye we saye, that y proude are happye, & that they which deale with vngodlynesse, are sett vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: the Lorde consydereth and heareth it. Yee, it is before him a memozyal booke, wyrtten for soch as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in the dape that I wyll make (sayth the Lorde of hostes) they shal be myne awne possession: and I will fauoure them, lyke as a man fauouret hys awne sonne, that doth hym scrupce. Turne you therfore, and consydre what dyfference is betwyte y righteous and vngodly, betwixte him that serueth God, and him that serueth hym not.

For march, the dape cometh that shal burne as an ouen: and all the proude, yee, ad all soch as do wyckednesse, shal be strawe, & the dape that is for to come, shal burne the vp (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shal leaue them nether rote ner braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shal that Sonne of ryghteousnesse aryse, and health shal be vnder his wynges: ye shal go forth, ad multiplie as the fat calues, ye shal treade downe the vngodly: for they shal be lyke the asthes vnder the soles of youre fete in the dape that I shal make, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Remembre the lawe of Moses my seruauant, whych I comytted vnto hym in Oreb for all Israel, with the statutes and ordinaunces. Beholde, I wyll sende you Elias the prophete: before the comyng of the dape of the grete and fearefull Lorde. He shal turne the hertes of the fathers to theyr chyldren, and the hertes of the chyldren to their fathers, that I come not ad smyte the earth with cursyng.

And ye shall knowe, that I haue sent thys comaundment vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leui, might stande sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

I made a couenaunt of lye & peace wth him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, ad had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, ad there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one awaye fro their synnes. For in the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowledge, y^e men may leke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messaunger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleue out of y^e waye, ad haue caused the multitude to be offeended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Therefore wyll I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene parciail in the lawe.

Ye haue we not all one father? hath not one God made vs? why doth euery one of ys then despise his awne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Iuda offended: yee, the abhominacion is done in Irael and in Ierusalem: for Iuda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shal destroye the ma that doth this: (yee, both the master ad the scoler) out of the tabernacle of Iacob with hym that offreth by meat offeringe vnto the Lorde of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to this poynte agayne, y^e the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares, weppynge and mourninge: so that I wyll nomore regard the meat offeringe, nether wyll I receaue or accepte any thyng at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Eue because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt betwixte y^e and the wyfe of thy yowth, thou hast despyled. Yet is the thynne awne companyd and marped wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent wyfe. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promised of God. Therefore loke well to your wyfe, and let no man despyle the wyfe of his yowth. Yf y^e hatest her put her awaye sayeth the Lorde God of Irael and geue her clothyng for the scozne, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to your wyfe, ad despyle her not. Yegreue the Lorde with your wordes, & yet ye saye: wherewithal haue we greued him? In this, that ye saye. Al that do euil are good in the syght of God, and soch please hym. O ye, where is the God that punisheth?

The iii. Chapter.

Of the messaunger of the Lorde Iohn baptiste, of the dape of the Lorde, and of Elias.

Behold, I will sende my messaunger, whiche shall prepare the waye before me: ad the Lorde whom ye wolde haue, shal soone come to his temple, yee, eue the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Beholde, he cometh, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. But who may abyde the dape of his comyng? Who shal be able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmithes fyre, ad lyke washers sope. He shal syt him downe to trye and to clesse the syluer, he shal pource the chyldren of Leui, and purifye them lyke as golde and syluer: that they maye bringe meat offeringes vnto the Lorde in righteounes. Then shall the offeringe of Iuda and Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lorde, lyke as from the begynnyng ad in the yeaeres, a fore tyme. I wyll come and punyssh you, ad I my selfe wyll be a wyfte wytnes agaynst the wyches, agaynst the aduouterers, agaynst false swearers: yee, & agaynst those that wrongeously kepe back the hytelnynges dewty: which were the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge not, & ye (O chyldren of Iacob) wyll not leaue of: ye are gone awaye from myne ordinaunces, and sens the tyme of your forfathers haue ye not kepte them.

Turne you now vnto me, and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: ye saye, wherin shal we turne? Shulde a man be falsch and disceat with God as ye be ye be falsch and disceat with me: yet ye saye wherin be we disceat wth the? In thises & beaue offeringes. Therefore are ye curfed wth penyry, because ye dissemble with me, all the sorte of you.

Bring euey thinge into my barn, that there maye be meat in myne house: and prouene me withall (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) yf I wyll not open the wyndowes of heauē vnto you, ad poure you out a blessing with plenteounesse. Yee, I shall reprove the consumer for your sakes, so y^e shall not eate vp the frute of your grounde, nether shall the wynearde be bare in the felde, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. In so moch that all people shall saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasant lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Ye speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayeth the Lorde. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde:

It is but lost labour, to serue God: what profyt haue we for keepynge his comaundmentes, and for walkynge humbly befoze the Lorde of hostes? Therefore maye we saye, that y^e proude are happie, & that they which deale with vngodlynesse, are sett vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: the Lorde conspydereth and heareth it. Yee, it is befoze him a memozyal booke, wyrtten for soch as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in the dape that I wyll make (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) they shal be myne awne possession: and I will fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth his awne sonne, that doth hym scrupce. Turne you therfore, and conspyde what dyfference is betwixte y^e righteous and vngodly, betwixte him that serueth God, and him that serueth hym not.

For march, the dape cometh that shal burne as an ouen: and all the proude, yee, ad all soch as do wyckednesse, shal be strawe, & the dape that is for to come, shal burne the vp (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shal leaue them nether rote ner braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sonne of ryghteounesse aryse, and health shal be vnder his wynges: ye shal go forth, ad multiplie as the fat calues, ye shal treade downe the vngodly: for they shal be lyke the asphes vnder the soles of your feete in the dape that I shall make, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

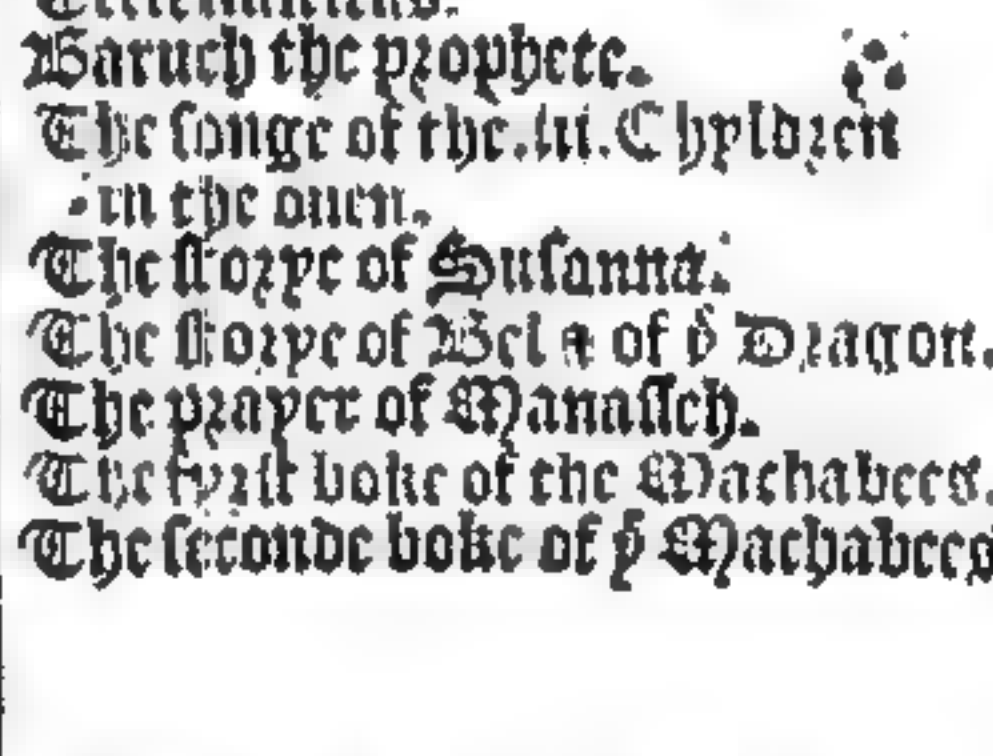

Remembre the lawe of Moses my seruauant, whych I comytted vnto hym in Dreb for all Irael, with the statutes and ordinaunces. Beholde, I wyll sende you Elias the prophet: befoze the comyng of the dape of the greete and fearefull Lorde. He shal turne the hertes of the fathers to their chyldren, and the hertes of the chyldren to their fathers, that I come not ad smyte the earth with cursynge.

A consyderacyon that the bo-

Let us before are founde in the hebreue tonge, receaued of all men: & that the other folowynge, whiche are called Hagiotographa (because they were wont to be reade, not openly and in comen, but as it were in secret and aparte) are nether founde in the hebreue nor in the Caldein whiche tonges they haue not of longe bene wrytten (in lesse then it were happily the booke of Sapience) wher upon it were now very harde to repayre & amende them: And that also they are not receaued nor taken as legittimate & leasfull, as well of the hebreues as of the whole Church, as S. Hierome sheweth: we haue separat them, & sett them asyde, that they may the better be knownen: to thyntent that men maye knowe of whiche booke wrytyn ought to be receaued, and of whiche not. For the sayde S. Hierome speakynge of the booke of Iudith (which is Hagiotographa) sayth, & the auctoritie therof is not esteemed worthy and sufficient to confyrme and stablysh the thynges that lyght in disputacyon. And generally of all the booke called Hagiotographa, he sayth, that men maye reade them to the edifyinge of the people: but not to confyrme & strengthen the doctrine of the Church. I leaue oute here the lawe (as they call it) of Canon. c. Sancta Romana. xv. distinc. where he sheweth his iudgement.

Lykewys the Glose of. c. Canones. xvi. distinc. which sayth, that men reade the, but not in generall: as though he shulde saye, that generally and thorowly they are not allowed. And not wythout a cause: For that they haue bene corrupted and falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in his booke called Historia Ecclesiastica: Whiche thyng is easie to be knownen euen now a dayes in certen poyntes, namely in the booke of the Machabees: whose second booke S. Hierome confesseth that he founde not in the hebreue, by the manner wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspect and the lesse receaued. In lyke manner is it of the thynde and fourthe booke of Esdras, whiche S. Hierome protesteth that he wolde not haue translated, esteeming them for dreames: where as Iosephus yet in his booke of hys Antiquities declareth & summe of the matter after the manner of a storye, as well of the booke of Machabees as of the. iii. of Esdras: all though he esteame the booke compyled from the raygne of kynge Artaxerxes vnto hys tyme, to be Hagiotographa.

Wherfore then, whē thou wilt mapnteyne any thyng for certen, rendyng a reason of thy sayth, take heade to procede therein by the wyse and pyththyve Scriptures, folowynge S. Peter, whiche sayeth: he that speaketh, let hym speak as though he spake the worde of God. he sayeth the worde of God, as a thyng most true and certen, opened by the Prophetes and Apostles, inspyred wyth the holy goost: of whom we haue wrytten moare cleare then the daye. Lawers haue greate desyre to confyrme and stablysh thei opponys by the lawe of man, saye, that they came to speake wythout lawe: how moch more feare and drede then ought he to haue, that sayth he is a Chyrtian, the whiche holdeth not hym selfe, or reasteth not in the lawes of the wyse God: but in mennes inuencions, iudgynge of all thynges accordynge to them, and leanyng to an vncerten ymagynacyon and phantasie. Let vs therfore that are buylded on the foundacyon of the holy Prophetes and Apostles, and on the head corner stone (on whiche they them selues were founded, and whiche they preached, that is Iesus Chyrt, the sure stone) leaue the thynges that are vncerten to folowe the certē: holdynge vs and reasynge vs in them, and fastenynge our ancre there, as in a sure place. For oure Chyrtien sayth conspyeth not in doutfull thynges, but in playne and moost certen assurance, and in moost true perswasyon, taken & confyrmed by infallible verite. In whiche God graunte vs to walke perpetuallye, to thyntent that accordynge to it (fulfyllynge his holy wyll in vs, and settinge asyde all inuencions contrary vnto hym) we maye lyue to hys honour, and to the edifyinge of hys Church.

So be it.

The thynde booke of Esdras.

The fyrst Chapter.

Josephus holdeth passage. After his death he becometh a god: whom the king of Egypt putteth out, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, & Sedechias is taken.

Ad * Josias helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde, & sette the Passouer the xiiii. daye of the fyrst moneth. he set the prestes also in ordre (accordynge to thei dayly courses) beyng arrayed in lode garmetes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto the Levites & holy mynysters of Israel, & they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to let the holy arche of the Lorde, in the house of kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde. Ye shall no more beare the Arche vpon youre shulders. Now serue youre Lorde, & take charge of hys people of Israel, after youre byllages and youre trybes: accordynge as kynge Dauid & kynge of Israel, hath ordeined, & accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: ye, loke & see al do seruyce in the temple, accordynge to the ordynge & distribucion of the principall men which are appoynted out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the chyldren of Israel. * Apill the Passouer, & prepare offrynges for your brethren, & do accordynge to the commaundement of the Lorde, which was geuen vnto Moyses. And vnto the people of the house of Josias gaue. xxx. thousande of shepe, lambes, kyddes, & goates, & thre thousande oxen. These the kynge (of his kynghly liberalite) gaue vnto the people, accordynge as he had promysed: & to the prestes for the Passouer, he gaue two myddes, & an hundred oxen. Moreover, Jechonias, & Semelias, & Nathanael brethren, & Malabias, Ichiel, & Josabad gaue them to the Passouer, fyue thousande shepe & fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thynges were brought to passe, the prestes & the Levites stode goodly in thei ordre, & had the vneuened bred thorow out of the trybes. And after the ordynge of the principall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the sight of the people accordynge * as it is wrytten in the booke of Moyses, & so they rosted the Easter lambe as accordynge was. As for the thacke offrynges & the other, they dyght them in kettels and pottes, & set them before the people w good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues, and the prestes. For the prestes offered the fatt, vntill the tyme was expyred, but the Levites prepared for the selues & for thei brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy syngers also & chyldren of Asaph stode in thei ordre, accordynge as Dauid deuyfed. So dyd Asaph zachary & Jothun, whiche were appoynted by the kynge. Moreover the porters & doore keepers stode by the doores & diligently, so that none went out of his stadyng & seruyce: for thei brethren (the Levites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges performed, that belonged to the offeringe of the Lorde. In the daye they helde the Passouer, and offered thankoffrynges beynde the sacrifice of the Lorde, accordynge to the commaundement of kynge Josias.

So the chyldren of Israel whiche were then present helde an honorable Passouer & feast of swete bread. vii. dayes lode. Pee soch a Passouer was not kepte in Israel, from the tyme of the Prophet Samuel. And all the kynghes of Israel helde not soch an Easter, as this which kynge Josias helde, & the prestes, the Levites, the Jewes & all Israel, of all them that were at Jerusalem. And in the xviii. yere of the raygne of Josias was this Passouer kept. And was a perfecte herte dyd kynge Josias orde all his workes, before the Lorde, & the thynges that were wrytten of hym in tymes past, concernynge those that synned & were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before all people, & that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel. * After al these actes of kynge Josias, Pharaos kynge of Egypte wet by the waye and came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent the kynge of Egypte vnto Josias sayng: what haue I to do w the, O kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayne in all haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon hys charret, but vnder toke to fyght agaynst hym, & herkened not vnto the worde of the prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pyched a battayll agaynst hym in the felde of Mageddo. And the prynces pressed to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruauntes. Carrye me awaye out of the battayll, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him awaye out of the front of the battayll. Then sat he vpon the secōde charett, came to Jerusalem, dyed, & was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. And in al Jewry they mourned for Josias, pee the rulers also w thei wyues made lamentacion for hym vnto this daye. And this was done euer styll in Israel.

These thynges are wrytten in the booke of the storyes of the kynghes of Juda, namely, all the actes and workes of kynge Josias, his kynghly power & maiesty, his vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, & what he dyd, pee thynges which are not wrytten in the booke of the kynges of Israel & Juda. * And the people toke Jeichonias the sonne of Josias and made hym kyng in steade of Josias his father, when he was xxxiii. yere olde. And he raygned ouer Israel thre monethes. And the kyng of Egypte put him downe, that he shuld not raygne in Jerusalem, & rayled vpon a tere of the people: namely, an. E. talentes of syluer & one talent of golde. The kyng of Egypte also made Joachim his brother kyng of Juda & Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges conseil w^{ch} the kyng him selfe & Zaccarias his brother, he toke them, & caried them awayne prisoners into Egypt. It was the twelfth yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lade of Juda & Jerusalem, and he dyd euell before the Lord. After this, * Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon came vpon, & bounde him with bandes of yron, & caried hym vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, & all the Jewels, & caried them vnto Babylon, & brought them in to his auncient temple at Babylon. Of his vncleynesse & vngodlynes, it is wrytten in the booke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his sonne raygned in his steade. He was made kyng beyng xviij. yere olde, and raygned but thre monethes & x. dayes in Jerusalem, & dyd euell before the Lord. So after a yere, Nabuchodonosor sent & caused him to be brought vnto Babylon with the holy vessels of the Lord, & made Sedechias his brother kyng of Juda & Jerusalem, whē he was xxi. yere olde: & he raygned xi. yere. And he dyd euell also in the syght of the Lord, & caried not for the wordes that were spoken vnto him * by the prophet Jeremey at the mouth of the Lord. And where he had made an othe vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor, he forsooke him selfe, & fel from hym hauping a syluerneck & a hert, & transgressed all the statutes and ordynances of the Lord God of Israel. The rulers also & heades of the people of the Lord dyd moche euell, & became vngodly, more then the Genthe, beyng defiled in all maner of abhominacions. Yee & defiled the holy temple of the Lord at Jerusalem. And the God of theyr fathers sent his messengers vnto the, to turne them backe & to call them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wolde sayne haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had his messengers in derisyon: & loke what God spake vnto the by his prophetes, they made but a spozte of it. This drewe on so longe, tyll the Lord was wroth wth his people for theyr vngodlynes, & tyll he caused the kynges of the Caldees to come vpon, which slew theyr poore men wth the sword, yee euen in the copasse of their holy temple, & spared no body, neither yonge nor olde, neither mayden nor ponge man: but they were all deliuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, & all the holy vessels of the Lord & the kynges treasures toke they, & caried them vnto Babylon. * As for the house of the Lord, they went vpon it, & brent it, & brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldinges & brought them to naught, and the people that were not slayne wth the sword they caried vnto Babylon.

Thus became they prisoners and bonde men of the kyng of Babylon, tyll they were deliuered & raygned for them selues, * whē the wordes of the Lord were fulfilled, whych he promysed them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremey, and tyll the lade had her rest: namely, all the tyme that it laye wayte, had it rest and quyetnes. lxxvii. yeres.

The.ii. Chapter.

¶ Thus geuech licence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and rejoyce therein the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sende to Artaxerxes, which accuse the Jewes for buyldinge of the temple: and so is the buyldinge dysceined of by the decree of Darius.

Now when the kyng Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & when the Lord wolde personifie the word that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophet Jeremey: the Lord rayled vpon the temple of Cyrus, the kyng of Persians, so that he caused thes wrytunge to be proclaymed thorow oute his whole realme, sayinge: Thus sayeth the kyng of Persians: The Lord of Israel that hys Lord hath made me kyng of the lande, and comaunded me to buylde hym an house at Jerusalem in Jewry. If there be any now of youre people, the Lord be with hym, and go vpon with him to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute that place shall helpe them, whether it be with golde, wth syluer, wth gyftes, wth horses, and necessary catell, & all other thynges that are brought with a fre wyll to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem.

Then the principall men out of the tribes and vylages of Juda and Benjamin stode vpon: so dyd the prestes also and the Levites (whom the Lord had moued) to go vpon, and to buylde the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them, helped them with al maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also, and with many libterall gyftes, and thes dyd many one, whose mynde was stered vpon thereto. * The kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornaments that were halowed vnto the Lord, (whych Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had caried awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his Idoll & ymage) and deliuered them to Mithrydates his treasurer, and by hym they were deliuered to Salimanasar the debite in Jewry. And this was the nombre of them: Two thousand & lxxx. C. syluer boules, xxx. syluer basens, xxx. basens of golde. ii. M. and. lxxx. C. vessels of syluer, & a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde & syluer were. v. M. viii. C. & lxx. These were nōbred vnto Salimanasar, & so them they were come agayne wth hym to Jerusalem out of the captiuite of Babylon. * Now in the tyme of the kyng Artaxerxes the kyng of Persia, these men. Balemus and Mitridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balchemus, Semelius the Scribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria & in other places vnder the domynion therof, wrote a letter vnto the kyng Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kyng of them in Jewry & Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner.

Syr, the seruantes Rathimus the storpyr, Sabellius the Scribe, & other iudges of the courte in Celosyria & Phenices. Be it knowne & manifest to oure Lord the kyng, & the Jewes which are come vpon from vnto vs into the rebellious & wycked cytye, begynne to buylde it agayne, & the walles aboute it, & to sett vpon the temple anew. Now if thes cytye & the walles therof be set vpon agayne, they shall not onely refuse to geue tributes & taxes, but also rebell vnto agaynst the kyng. And for so moch as they take thes in hande now aboute the temple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scozne of it, but to shewe it vnto oure Lord the kyng, & to certyfye hym therof: to thynke if it please the kyng, he may cause it to be sought in the booke of olde: and shall fynde soche warnynges wrytten, & shall vnderstande, that thes cytye hath all waye bene rebellous & dysobedient, & it hath subdued kynges & cytyes, & that the Jewes whych dwell therein, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstynate, vnfaithfull, and fygthynge people, for the which cause this cytye is wasted. Wherefore now we certyfye oure Lord the kyng, & if thes cytye be buylded & occupied agayne, & the walles therof set vpon anew, it canst haue no passage into Celosyria & Phenices.

Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the storpyr, to Balchemus, to Sabellius the Scribe, & to the other officers & dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epistle whych ye sentest vnto me, and haue comaunded to make diligent search, & haue founde, that the cytye hath euer rebelled kynges, & the same people are dysobedient, & haue caused moche warre, & that myghty kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, which also haue rayled vpon taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherefore, I haue comaunded those people, that they shall not buylde the cytye, & they make no more in it, and they procede no farther wth the buyldynge: for so moch as it myght be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kynges.

Now when Rathimus and Sabellius the Scribe, & the rulers in the lade had red the wrytunge of the kyng Artaxerxes, they gatt them together, & came in all haste to Jerusalem wth an hoost of horsemen, and wth moche people of fote, & forbad the to buylde. And so they left off from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the second yere of the kyng Darius.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The the sentences of the the ponge men, of whych the first is declared.

The kyng Darius made a great feast vnto his seruantes, vnto all his courtiers, & to all the officers of Media and Persia, yee to all the debytes and rulers that were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred & xxvii. courtiers. So when they had eaten & drōcken beyng satysfied, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kyng wente into his chambze, layed hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thes ponge men, that kepte the kynges personne, & watched his body, comened amonge them selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thyng, & loke whose sentence is wyldest & more excellent then the other, vnto hym shall the kyng Darius geue greete gyftes, & clothe hym with purple. He shall geue hym vessels of golde to dryncke in, clothes of golde & coneynges: he shall make hym a costly charret, & a bydle of golde, he shall geue hym a bonnet of whyte sylke, & a cheyne of golde aboute his neck: yee he shall be the secōde & principall next vnto the kyng Darius, & that because of his wysdome, and shall be called the kynges kynsmān.

So, euery one wrote his meanyng, sealed it, & layed it vnder the kynges pelowe, & sayde: when the kyng aryseth, we wyll geue him oure wrytynge, & loke whose worde shall kyng & thes chiefe Lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spoken, & same shall haue the victory. The first wrote: Wyne is a stronge thyng. The second wrote: The kyng is stronger. The third wrote: Wemen haue yet more strenght, but aboute all thynges the trouth beareth awaye the victory. Now when the kyng was rylen vpon, they toke theyr wrytynge & deliuered them vnto hym, & so he red the. He sent he forth to call al his chiefe lordes, all the debytes & rulers of the courtiers of Media & Persia. And when they were set downe in the coucell, the wrytynge were red before them. And he comaunded to call for the ponge men, & they myght declare theyr meanynges the selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kyng sayde vnto them: shewe vs & make vs to vnderstande what the thynges are that ye haue wrytten.

¶ Aaa iii. Then

D Then beganne ſpyſt (which had ſpoken of the ſtrength of wyne) & ſayde: O ye men, ſpyne is maruelous ſtroge, & ouercometh them ſpyne it: it ſpyne the mynde, & ſpyne both the poore man & the kyng to horage & vaupte. Thus doth it alſo with the bondman & with the free, with the poore & ryche: it taketh awaye theyr vnderſtandynge, and maketh them careleſſe and mery, ſo none of them remembere any heynynesse dett or dewtye: It cauſeth a man to thynke alſo that ſpyne which he doth, is honeſt & good: & remembreth not ſpyne is a kyng, nor ſpyne is mauctoryte, & that he ought not do ſuch thynges. Moreover, when men are ſpyne they forgett all frendſhip, all brotherly faythfulnes & loue: but as ſoone as they are dronken, they drawe out ſpyne & will ſyght: & when they are layed downe from ſpyne, & ſorſen vp agayne, they cannot tell what they byd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the ſtrongest? For who wolde clake in hand to do ſuch thynges? And when he had ſpoken this, he helde his tonge.

The.iii. Chapter.

The declaration of the.ii. laſt ſentences of the young men, proph. ſpoken in the Chapter before: of which the laſt, that is, that verſe beareth the victorie in all thynges, is moſt commended & allowed. Darius wyſteth letters to all ſcullers vnder hym, that they ſhulde orde ſozobabel to the buyldynge of Jeruſalem.

When ſpyne ſeconde (which had ſayde, that the kyng was ſtroger) beganne to ſpake, ſaying: O ye men, are not they ſpyne ſtrongest & moſt excellēt, ſpyne conquere the lande, & the ſee, & all that is in ſpyne, and in the earth? Now is the kyng loſde of all theſe thynges, & hath domynion of the all: and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he ſende his me forth a warfare, they go, & breake downe hylles, walles & towres. They are ſlayne, & ſlaue (other men) them ſclues, & ouerpaſſe not the kynges worde. If they get ſpyne victory, they ſpyne ſpyne all ſpyne people. Lyke wyſe, the other ſpyne medle not with warres & ſyghtynge, but tyll the grounde: when they reape, they ſpyne trybute vnto the kyng. And yf the kyng alone do but comaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he comaunde to forgyue, they forgyue: yf he comaunde to ſmyte, they ſmyte: yf he byd dzyne awaye, they dzyne awaye: yf he comaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he comaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he comaunde to plante, they plante. The comen people & the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kyng in the meane ſeaſon ſytteth hym downe, eateth, and dzyne, and taketh his reſt: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kyng, & not one of them darre get hym out of ſpyne waye, to do his awne buſynes, but muſt be obediēt vnto ſpyne ge at a worde. Judge ye now, O ye men, how ſhulde not he go farre aboue vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had ſpoken this, he helde his tonge. The thyrde, whose name was ſozobabel, which had ſpoken of women & of trueth, began to ſaye after this maner: O ye men, it is not ſpyne grete kyng, it is not ſpyne multitude of men, nether is it wyne ſpyne excellēt: Who is it then ſpyne hath the lordſhipp ouer them? Haue not women borne the kyng, and all ſpyne people that rule thoſe thynges? Haue not women borne the, and brought them vp, ſpyne plante the vyne, wherout the wyne cometh? They make garments for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde, & ſyluer, & all precious thynges, and ſe a ſayre well fauoured woman, they leaue all to gether, and turne theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her, & haue more deſyre vnto her, then vnto ſpyne ſyluer & golde, or any maner of precious thyng. * A man leaueh his father & brought hym vp, leaueh his awne natural countre, & cleaueh vnto the woman: yee he ſeopardeth his lyfe with ſpyne woman, & remembreth nether father, ner mother, ner countre. By thys the ye muſt nedes knowe, that women haue the domynion ouer you.

Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his ſwerde, & goeth ſpyne waye to ſcale, to kyll, to murder, to ſayle vpon the ſee, and ſeeth a lyon, and goeth in the darcknes: & when he hath ſtollen, diſcaued and robbed, he ſpyne geth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth ſpyne wyſe better then father and mother: yee many one there be, ſpyne tene out of theyr wyrtes, & become bondmen for theyr wyues ſakes: many one alſo haue perished, haue bene ſlayne, & haue ſpyned becauſe of women.

And now belue me, I knowe a kyng which is grete in ſpyne power, and all lades ſtande in awe of hym, & no man darre laye hande vpon hym: yet byd I ſe, that Apame (the daughter of ſpyne grete kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubynne, ſat beſyde the kyng vpon the ryght hande, & toke of ſpyne crowne from ſpyne head, & ſet it vpon her awne head, and ſmote the kyng wyth her left hande. Moreover, the kyng looked vpon her wyth open mouth: yf he laughed vpon hym, he laughed alſo: but yf he toke any diſpleaſure wyth hym, ſpyne kyng was ſayne to flatter her, & to geue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then ſtronger? Grete is ſpyne earth, & ſpyne is ſpyne heauen. Who doth theſe thynges? Then ſpyne kyng & ſpyne wyſe looked one vpon another. So he beganne to ſpake of ſpyne trueth: O ye men, are not women ſtroger? Grete is the earth, ſpyne is the heauen, ſpyne is ſpyne courſe of the ſunne, * he compaſeth the heauen rounde aboute, & ſeteth his courſe his courſe agayne to ſpyne awne place in one daye. Is he not excellēt that doth thys? Yee grete is the trueth, & ſtroger then all thynges. All the earth calleth vpon ſpyne trueth, the heauen prayſeth it, all wykes ſhake & treble at it, & whiſt is no vnryghteous thyng. Wyne is vnryghteous: ſpyne is vnryghteous: women are vnryghteous: all the chyldren of men are vnryghteous, yee all theyr wykes are vnryghteous, and there is no trueth in them, in theyr vnryghteouſnes alſo ſhall they be deſtroyed & perſh. As for the trueth, * it endureth, & is all waye ſtroge: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore worlde without ende.

The trueth accepteth no perſonnes, it putteth no difference betwixte riche or poore, betwixte the myghtye or ſymple, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euell or good, and all men are louingly dealt wth all in ſpyne wykes of it. In ſpyne iudgement of it there is no vnryghteous thyng, but ſtrength kyngdom & power & maiesty for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth.

And with that he helde his tōge, and all the people cryd, & ſayde: Great is ſpyne trueth, & aboue all. Then ſayde ſpyne kyng vnto hym: Aſke what thou wilt, more then is appoynted in ſpyne wyrtynge, and I ſhall geue it the, for thou art ſounde wyſer then thy companyons: ſpyne ſhalt ſyt next me, and be my kynſman: Then ſayde he vnto the kyng: Keine bre thy promple & vowe, which thou haſt vowed & prompled (in the daye when thou cameſt to the kyng dome) to buylde vpon Jeruſalem, & to ſende agayne all ſpyne veſſels and Jewels, ſpyne were taken awaye out of Jeruſalem: which Cypus ſeparated, whē he offered in Babylon, & wolde ſende them agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vpon the tēple which ſpyne Edomptes byent, when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed by ſpyne Chaldees. This onely (ſpyne kyng) is ſpyne thyng that I requyre, thys is ſpyne maiesty, which I deſyre and aſke of the: that thou perſourme the vowe, which thou wyth thyne awne mouth haſt made vnto ſpyne kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kyng ſtoode vp, and kyſſed him, & wrote a letter vnto all ſpyne deputies and ſherues, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they ſhulde coueye him forth, and all them ſpyne wolde go vp with him. He wrote a letter alſo vnto all ſpyne ſherues that were in Celosyria and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, ſpyne they ſhulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jeruſalem, to buylde the cytie withall. Moreover he wrote vnto all ſpyne Jewes ſpyne were gone out of ſpyne realme into Jewry becauſe of the freedome, ſpyne no officer no ruler, nor ſherue, ſhulde come to theyr doores, and ſpyne all theyr lande which they had conquered, ſhulde be free & not tributary. And that ſpyne Edomptes ſhulde geue ouer ſpyne cypres and villages of the Jewes, which they had taken in: yee & that they ſhulde yearly geue xx. talētes to ſpyne buyldynge of ſpyne tēple, vntyll the tyme that it were ſynghed, and to the dayly halowynge of the byent offrynges (as it is commaunded) ten talētes yearly alſo. And ſpyne all they which come from Babylon to buylde the cytie, ſhulde haue free libertye, they & theyr chyldren, & all the breastes.

He wrote ſpyne greatneſſe alſo, & comaunded that ſpyne holy garment ſhulde be geuen them, wherin they mynſtred: & wrote ſpyne comaundementes ſhulde be geuen to ſpyne Leuites, vntyll the daye, that the houſe were ſynghed, and Jeruſalem buylde vp: & comaunded that all they that watched the cytie, ſhulde haue theyr porcyons & wages.

He gaue ouer alſo all the veſſels ſpyne Cypus had ſeparated from Babylon: and all that Cypus had geuen in comaundement, ſpyne ſame charged he alſo, that it ſhulde be done & ſent vnto Jeruſale. Now when thys ponge man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jeruſalem, and prayſed ſpyne kyng of heauen, and ſayde: * Of the cometh the victory, of the cometh wyſdome and cleareneſſe, and I am thy ſeruant. Blessed art thou, which haſt geuen me wyſdome: that wyll I prayſe, O Lord, thou God of oure fathers.

And ſo he toke the letters, & wente vnto Babylon. And when he came there, he tolde thys vnto all his byrthzen ſpyne were at Babylon, & they prayſed ſpyne God of theyr fathers, that he had geuen them reſtrengthening & libertye to go vp, and to buylde Jeruſalem & the tēple (wherin the name of the Lord is called vpon) and they reioyſed with inſtrumēttes and gladneſſe ſeven dayes longe.

The.v. Chapter.

They that returne to Jeruſalem are nūbered. They begynne to laye the foundacyon of the tēple, but are lett by the meanes of enemies: and ſo is the buyldynge byent of by the ſpace of two yeares.

After thys were the principall men of all the villages choſen in the trybes and kynredes, that they ſhulde go with theyr wyues and chyldren, with theyr ſeruautes & maydens, with all theyr catell and ſubſtaūce. And Darius the kyng ſent with them a thouſande horſemen, to coueye them ſafely vnto Jeruſalem, and theyr byrthzen were glad, playeng vpon inſtrumēttes, and ſyngynge. And theſe are ſpyne names of the men, which wente vp out of the vyllages, accordynge to the trybes. All these ministred in the sanctuary, & were seruantes of Salomon: ccc. iii. C. & lxxii.

These folowynge are they, that went vpon from Chelmellat Chelarta (whose prynces were Carmelam and Careth) & myght not thewe forth theyr cytyes and kynredes, how they were of Israel: The sonnes of Dalarus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Rechodatus. Of the prestes that executed y^e offyce of the presthode, and were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whych married one of the daughters of Phargelen, and were named after hym. The wyrtynge of the same kynred was sought in the register of theyr generacion, but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the presthode. Vnto them sayde Nehemias and Aspharas, that they shulde haue no portyon in the Sanctuary, tll there rose vpon an hye prest, that were well instruct in the playne cleannes and tructh. (Of all Israel) besyde seruantes and maydens) there were. xlii. C. and xl. Now were there of seruantes and maydes. vii. C. & xxxvi. Of syn- ginge men ad syn ginge women there were two hundred, & lxxv. Foure hundred and xxxv Camels. Seuen thousand, & xxxvi. horses. Two hundred thousande and xlv. mules. ffue. C. and xxv. Asses.

Their heades also & the rulers in the tribes, when they came to Jerusalem, & wolde buylde and set vpon the tēple of God agayne in his place, they gaue (after their abylite, vnto the temple, to the treasure & to the seruice of the Sanctuary. xii. C. & p. pounds of golde, ffue thousande of syluer, and an hundred prestes garments. And so dwelt the prestes and the Leuytes, & the people that went out to Jerusalem, and in the countre there about, the syn gers also & the porters, euery one of Israel in his awne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israel were euery mā at his busynes, they came all wyth one consent into the courte, whiche was befoze the East dore. And there stode Iesus the sonne of Josedece and his brethren the prestes, ad zojobabel the sonne of Salathiel and hys brethren, setting vpon an altier, to offere brett sacrifices vpon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses.

There came people also of other countrees, and the heathen out of all lades to set vpon an altier in his place, and offred sacrifices ad brett offrynges vnto the Lorde in the morninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, * as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayly offred they as accordyng was, and made y^e sacrifices appoynted, y^e offrynges also of the Sabbathes & of the new moones, and all holy feastes. * And al they that bowed offrynges vnto the Lorde, beganne at the newe moone of the vii. moneth to offere vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylde. And they gaue vnto y^e Masons and Carpenters, money, meate, & drinke with chearfulnesse. Vnto them of Sidon also and Tyze they gaue carres, that they shulde carry Cedre trees fro Libanus to be ioyntes & beames, ad that they shulde make wyppes in the hauch of Joppe, accordyng as it was appoynted & ordeyned by Cyrys Kyng of the Persians.

And in the secōde yere they came into y^e temple of God at Jerusalem. * In the secōd moneth begane zojobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesus the sonne of Josedece and their brethren the prestes and Leuytes, and al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captiuitie of Babylō, & layed the foundation of the temple, in the new moone of the second moneth in y^e secōd yere y^e they were come into Jewry & Jerusalem. And they appointed y^e Leuytes (y^e were aboue. xx. yere old) vnto y^e seruice of y^e Lorde: so Iesus & his sonnes and his brethren, al the Leuytes stode together, & performed the lawe and ordynance in the house of the Lorde.

And the prestes stode, & had their garments & trompettes, and the Leuytes the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals, geuyng thanks and prayes vnto the Lorde, accordyng * as Dauid the kyng of Israel had ordeyned. And the song y^e they dyd singe vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. * O synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, & his goodness vnto Israel endureth for euer. And all y^e people blew out with trompettes, and song with loude voyce, praying the Lorde together in y^e rearing vpon of the house of y^e Lorde. * There came also from among the prestes and Leuytes the rulers & elders, accordyng to the tribes and kinredes (such as had sene the house afore) to the buyldyng of this tēple with great crye and great mourning, many also with trompettes ad great ioye: In somoch, that the trompettes might not well be hearde for the wepyng and mourning. For the comyn people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

Then came the enemyes of the tribes of Juda and Benjamin, to knowe what that trompettyng and noyse of shawmes might be. And they perceaued y^e it was they which were come agayne out of captiuitie, & wolde buylde the temple vpon a new vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to zojobabel and Iesus, ad to the rulers of the byllages, and sayd vnto the. Shall we buylde wyth you also? For we lyke wylshane heard your Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazar the kyng of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. Then zojobabel and Iesus and y^e rulers of the byllages of Israel sayde vnto them. It is not mete, that ye shuld buylde the temple of our God wth vs: we our selues alone wyl buylde vnto the Lorde, lyke * as Cyrys the kyng of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the lande layed them selues agaynst those y^e were in Jewry, helde vpon y^e buyldyng from the, layed wayte vpon them pynely, stopped such as brought any thyng to them, forbad them to buylde, and hyndered those that made the passage, that the buyldyng shuld not be fynished: ad this continued so longe as kyng Cyrys lyued: and so they put off the buyldyng for the space of two yeres, vntill the raygne of kyng Darius.

The. vi. Chapter.

Aggus and zachary prophete. They buylde the temple without let or hynderance, by the commaundement of Darius.

Now withstandynge in þe secōde ye-are of þe raygne of Darius, * Ag-geus & zachary the sonne of Addo propheced vpon them in Jewry and Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. * Then zojobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec stode vp, and beganne to buylde the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem, whē the Prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At the same tyme came Syssennes the vnder Shreue in Syria and Phenices, wpyth the landlordes ad hys companionys, and sayd vnto the: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the rose and al other thinges agayne? And who are the woorkers me, that buyld them? Neuerthelesse the elders of the Jewes had such grace of þe Lorde, that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked thereto) but buylded on syl, vnto the tyme that kynge Darius were certifyed ther-of, and an answere receaued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

Syssennes the vnder Shreue in Syria & Phenices, and the landlordes wpyth the companionys, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenices, sende their salutaciō vnto Darius the kynge. We certifie the lorde the kynge, þe we came into þe lande of Jewry, and went to Ierusalem: where we founde the buylding the great house of God & the temple, with great costely fre stone and w goodly tymbre for þe walles: pec they make great haste with the woorkes, & helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their hades, and with great diligence and woorthyp is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had comaunded them to make by the house and the buyldinge, ad this we byd, to the intent that we myght certifie the perfectly, & wypte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the woorkes. So they gaue vs this answer: We are the seruautes of the Lorde, which made heauen and earth: ad as for this house * it hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by the great & myghtie kynge of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, the kynge of the Caldees, whych brake downe the house & bzant it, & carped awaye the people preloners vnto Babilon. * Ne-uertheles in the fyrst yere that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babilō, Cyrus þe kyng wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agayne: and al the ornamentes that Nabu-chodonosor carped awaye from Ierusalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his awne temple: these bzought Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered them to zojobabel and to Salmanaſar the vnder Shreue, comaſdyng them þe they shulde bypge those same ornamētes agayne to Ierusalem into þe temple and to begynne to þe tyme forth, to buylde the temple agayne in his awne place. Then Salmanaſar layed þe foundaciō of þe Lorde house at Ierusalem, ad euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore þe kynge, yf thou thinkest it good, let it be fought in the Lybraries & rolles of kynge Cyrus: yf it be foude then, that it is done w the counsell & consent of kynge Cyrus, and yf oure lorde þe kynge be so mynded, let hym wypte vnto vs therof.

* The commaunded kynge Darius, to seke in the Lybraries: ad so at Egbathanis in a lytle cytie in Medea there was foude soche a wyptynge: In the first yere of the raygne of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaūded that the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem shuld be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there continually vnto þe Lorde) whose length shalbe .x. cubites, and the bredeth, the score cubites, ad foure square with thre hewen stones, with a loft of tymbre of the same countre, pec with a new loft, and the expens therof to be geuen of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornamētes of golde and syluer, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Ierusalem, where they were afore. Syssennes also the vnder Shreue in Syria and Phenices, the Princes and their companionys, & the other that be heade rulers in Syria & Phenices, shal not medlenoz haue any thig to do with þe place.

* Cyrus haue commaunded also, þe they shal buylde the house of þe Lorde whole vp ad haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that become out of captiuyte: tpe the house of the Lorde be finished: ad out of the trybute and taxing that is pearly rayled vp in Syria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe to the offeringe of the Lorde: & the same to be deliuered vnto zojobabel the officer, that he therewithal maye ordeyne oxe, rammes, lambes, and corne, salt, wyne and oyle, and that continually euery yere: after the expences * which the Priestes that be at Ierusalem, shew to be made dayly: thys shal be geuen vnto them without delaye, þe they maye offer sacrifices dayly to þe hyest God, for the kynge and for his seruautes, and to praye for the people. Let it be proclaymed also on euery side, that whosoener breaketh oz despyleth this comaundement of the king, shalbe hanged vpon a galows (made of his awne good) ad all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto þe king. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and de-stroye all the kynges ad people, that vnder-take by violence to hinder þe same, oz to deale vncur-

vncuriously with the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem. * Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe done with al diligence.

The. vii. Chapter.

The temple is finished and dedycate: and the feast of vnleuened bread is holden.

Then Syssennes the vnder Shreues in Celosyria, and Phenices, and the other Landlordes wpyth their companyons, obeyed the thinges þe kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were diligent in þe holy woorkes, and were felowe helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the woorkes of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus ad zachary propheced.
And they perfourmed all thinges thozow þe comaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia.

And thus was our house finished vnto þe xxiii. daye of the moneth Adar, in the vi. yere of kynge Darius. And the chyldre of Israel the priestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuyte, and soche as were ioyned vnto them, byd accor-dyng as it is written in the boke of Moyses And in the dedication of the temple: they of-fired an hundred oxen, two hundred rammes, foure hundred lambes, & twelue goates, for the synnes of all þe people of Israel, after þe nombre of the trybes of Israel. The priestes also & the Leuites stode arayed in theyr prestly garmētes, after the trybes, ouer all the woorkes of the Lorde God of Israel accor-dyng to the boke of Moyses, and the porters by all the doores.

And the chyldren of Israel (with those þe were come out of captiuyte) helde the passeouer the fourtene daye of the fyrst moneth, when the priestes and the Leuites were san-ctified. They þe came out of captiuyte, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctified together, and so al they that came out of captiuyte, killed the easter lambe, for theyr brethren, for the priestes ad for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of captiuyte, & escaped from al the abominacions of þe heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feast of vnleuened bread seven dayes longe, eatynge and drynkyng and were mery before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of þe kynge of Assyria, and coforted their handes to the woorkes of the Lorde God of Israel.

The. viii. Chapter.

Eldras causeth the people to assemble and come together, and then readech them the lawe. They kepe the feaste of Tabernacles.

Ad after hym * when Artaxerxes the kyng of the Persians raygned, there wente vnto hym Eldras the sonne of Sarapas, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of helchiah, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abihu, the sonne of Abineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrst preste. This Eldras wente vp from Babilon (for he had good vnderstandyng in the lawe of Moyses, that was geue of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taught ad done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him and byd him great woorthyppe and honoure after all hys despyres. There went vp wpyth hym also certayne of the chyldre of Israel, of the priestes, of the Leuites, of the singers, porters and minystrs of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yere of the raygne of kin-ge Artaxerxes, i the fyuerth moneth, that is in the seuenth yere of the raygne, they wet from Babilon in the new moone of the v. moneth, & came the hye waye to Ierusalem after his comaundement, lyke as the Lorde had prospered theyr iourney. For in these Eldras gat great instruction, that he shul-de leaue none of the thynges behinde, which are in the lawe and comaundementes of God. And he taught whole Israel all righousnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, ad deliuered the wyptynges (that were come fro Artaxerxes the kynge) to El-dras þe preste & reder of the lawe of þe Lorde:
And thys is the coppe of the letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth his gretynge vnto El-dras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendshyppe and good wyl I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be eny of the Jewes, of the priestes & Leuites in my realme, which despyreth and is contēt to go with the vnto Ierusalem, þe he maye do it. Therfore, yf eny be mynded to heare the company, let them come together, and go with þe, lyke as I am content and my seuen frendes, my counselers) to se what they do at Ierusalem and in Jewry, & kepe the thynges according as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: ad to bypge the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Ierusalem, & all the syluer ad golde that is in the countre of Babilon, vnto the Lorde to Ierusalem, with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem. Pee, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates and other that belonge to these thynges: and that they maye offer sacrifices vnto the Lorde, vpon the altier of the Lorde, which is at Ierusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyl do with the syluer ad golde, that do after thy mynde, accorpyng to þe comaundement

ment of the Lord thy God, & lykewise, with the holy vessels that are geuen the, for þe service of the house of þe Lord thy God: & other thinges whatsoeuer is necessary for þe worke of the temple, that shalbe geuen the of þe kynges treasure & loke what thou wylt thy brethren wyl do with the golde & syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lord. And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the prestre and reader of the lawe of the Lord doth wyte, it shalbe geue hym: tyll an hundred talentes of syluer, & of golde in lyke maner. Of coyne also an hundred measures, & tyll an hundred vessels of wyne, & other pleurous thinges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of the best God, that the wrath of God arys not in the realme of the kyng, and of his sonnes. I commaunde you also, þe requyre no taxe ner trybute of the prestres, Leuytes, syngers, and ministers of the temple, ner of the writers: & that no mā haue auctorite to medle eny thyng against the. As for the (Esdras) set thou iudges & arbytrers in the whole lande of Syria & Phenices, after the wysdome of God: and learne all soch as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy Lord, and let all them that offend agaynst the lawe, be punished: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banished.

* Then sayde Esdras the wyrtre. * Blessed be þe God of our fathers, that hath geue so good a mynde and wyll into the hert of þe kyng, to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, & hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kyng, of his counsell, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was steadfast in my mynde, accordyng as þe Lord my God helped me, & I chose out men of Israel to go vp with me. * And these are þe heades, (after their kynredes & houses of theyr fathers) that went vp with me from Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerxes: Of the sonnes of Phares, Seronius. Of þe sonnes of Siemarith, Amicus. Of the sonnes of David Accus, the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, zachary: & with him there turned agayne an hundred & fyftie men. Of the sonnes of the captaine of Moabylon, zaraei, & with him. ii. C. ad. l. mē. Of the sonnes of zachues, Jechonias zecholy, & with hym two hundred and fyftie men. Of the sonnes of Salamaassias, Gortholpe, & with hym two hundred and fyftie men. Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zarias, & with hym four score. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias Jecheli, and with hym two hundred and twelue men. Of the sonnes of Banias, Salimoth & sonnes of Zolaphia, and with hym an hundred and thre score mē. Of þe sonnes of Beer, zachari & Be-hel, & with hym two hundred & viii. men. Of the sonnes of Esdras, Johannes Ezechā, & with him an hundred and tenne men. Of þe sonnes of Adoniam those that were þe last, and these are theyr names, Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel & Semeias, & with hym lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Chia, where we pitched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

* As for the sonnes of the prestres & Leuytes, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazer, and Eccelom, and Masma, & Malobam, and Enaathan, & Samea, & Zoribimathan, Eunagan, zachari, Mosollamū (these were the leaders and men of experience) and I sent them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, & commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus & to his brethren and to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs soch men, as myght execute the prestres offyce in the house of the Lord our God. And with the myghtie hāde of our Lord God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from amonge the sonnes of Moosis the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebechiam and the sonnes and his brethren Alvin & Ann, of whome there were. xviii. From amonge the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananus, and their sonnes were xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom David had ordeyned, & the principal men that ministered for the worke vnto the Leuytes in the temple two hundred and twente men, whose names are all toliened vp in wyrtre.

* Then commaunded I a fastyng vnto the ponge men before the Lord, that I myght desyre of hym a prosperous iourney and a good waye for vs, þe for vs, for oure chyldren and for the catell, because of the layenges a wayte, and I durst not requyre of the kyng men of horse and of fote, to coueys vs safely agaynst our enemies, for we had said vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lord our God shulde be with them, that seke him with theyr whole hert. And theffore we besought God our Lord earnestly because of these thynges, & he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer. And I separated fro amonge the rulers of the people, and fro the prestres of the temple. xii. mē and Sebeia & Asania, and ten men of theyr brethren with them. And I weped them the golde and the syluer and all the prestly ornamentes of the house of our God, wherby the kyng, and his counsell, and his Princes, and whole Israel had geue. And when I had weped it, I gaue them an hundred and fyftie talentes in syluer, and an hundred talentes of syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden vessel seuen tymes twente, and vessels of other other metal (þe, of good metal) twelue gli-steryng as the golde, and laide vnto them: þe are holy vnto the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the syluer is prompyd vnto the Lord God of oure fathers. We diligent now and kepe it, vntill the tyme that þe deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prestres, to the Leuytes, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambze of the house of oure God.

* So, the prestres and the Leuytes which receaued of me the golde, the syluer and the vessel, brought it into Jerusalem into þe temple of þe Lord. And from the ryuer of Chia we bracke vp the twelue daye of the first moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And whē the thyrde daye was past, they weped gold, and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Harimoth the sonne of Ior the prestre, and with hym was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, & with them were Josabbus & sonnes of Isnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre and to the wayght: & the wayght of them was writen by the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuite, they offered sacrifice vnto þe Lord the God of Israel: cunen twelue oxen for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe. xii. goats for sunne, twelue kyne for a thakoffring, all to the sacrifice of the Lord. And þe kynges commissio deliuered they vnto the stewardes and debytes of the kyng, and to the vnderthreues in Celosyria and Phenices.

* Nowe, when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyō of Israel, the Princes, the Prestres, and Leuytes, the straunge people & indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr vncleynesse from the Cananites, Bethytes Pherytes, from the Moabites, Egipcians, and Edomytes. For both they & theyr sonnes haue myngled the selues with þe daughters of them, and the holy seide is mixte with the outlandish heathen, & sens the begynnyng of their raygne haue the rulers & heades bene partetakers of theyr wyckednesse.

* As soone as I had hearde these thinges, immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, & pulled out the heare of my head & my beerd, and sat me downe for owfull and heuy. So all they that were moued thowow the word of the God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat still, full of heynesse vntill the euenyng sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastyng, hauyng rente clothes & the holy garment, knelled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto þe Lord, and sayd: O Lord, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wyckednesses are exalted vnto

the heauen: for syns the tyme of our fathers we are in great synne vnto thys daye. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we w our brethren and with our prestres haue bene deliuered vnto the kynges of the earth, into the sword, and into captiuite, and became a people with confusion and shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lord God, how greates is the mercy that we haue gotten of the: in þe thou hast left vs a rote and a name in þe place of thy Sanctuary, to discover oure lyght in the house of þe Lord our God, & hast geue vs meat at all tymes of our mynistracyon. And when we were in captiuite, we were not forsake of the Lord our God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious & fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vntayles and meate, pec and leane to buyde by þe temple of our Lord God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Syria, and to dwell in Jewry and Jerusalem. And now, O Lord, what shall we saye haupnge all these thynges in posseltyon? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, which thou gauest vnto vs by the hādes of thy scruauntes & prophetes, sayyng: The lande that þe go vnto and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in posseltyō, is defiled with the vncleynesse and fylthynges of the heathen, & with their abhominacyō haue they polluted it all together. Therefore, shall þe not ioyne your daughters, vnto theyr sonnes, ner marry your sonnes vnto their daughters. Moreover, þe shall neuer seke to make peace with them, þe maye increase & eate the best in the land, and that þe maye deuyde the inheritance of the lande vnto your chyldre for euermore. As for the thyng that now happeneth vnto vs it cometh all for our wycked woordes and great synnes. yett hast thou geue vs soch a rote, & we are come agayne into our awnc lande, & we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes & commaundementes agayne, and myngled oure selues with the vncleynesse of the outlandish heathen. O Lord, art thou angrie with vs: wylt thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote & name remayne no more? O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yett vnto thys prestre daye. And beholde, now are we before the in our synnes, now can we not stāde before the in them.

* And whē Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, wepyng, and lrynge flatt vpon the grounde before the tēple, there gathered vnto hym fro Jerusalem a great multitude of men and women, of pong men and maydens, for there was a very greates wepyng & mournyng in the congregacyon. So whē Jechonias the sonne of Jecheli one of the chyldre of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lord, because because we haue married outlandish women of the heathen. Now art thou over all Israel. We will weare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, & we will put awaye all our wyues which we haue taken of the heathen, wyth theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted þ by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, ope thou it, & declare it playnely vnto vs, accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde: for þ matter belongeth vnto the, and we will helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes, ad of the Leuytes, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they swaie.

The.ii. Chapter.

¶ After Esdras had made the lawe, the people put a waie theyr draunge wyues: and then returned they euery man meryly vnto his owne dwellinge.

¶ Then Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple without, and wente in to the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Asabus, and remayned there, ad byd rate no meate, nor dronke drynke, for the multitude of the wyckednes of the people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewry and at Ierusalem, for all soch as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captiuite, that whosoever came not to Ierusalem within two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the olde lordes of þ counsell) his goodes shulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacion of the captiuite. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda & Benjamin gathered together at Ierusalem, the twetyeth daye of the nynt moneth. And the whole multitude sat trembleng in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras arose vp, and said vnto the: ye haue done vneightously, in that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to mariage and so to increase the synnes of Israel. And now we knowledg the same, and geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, ad perfourme his wyll, departyng from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cryed the whole multitude w loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for so moch as þ people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stande without the house: agayne, thys worke is not a thyng, that can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges. Ozyeue therfore that the rulers of the multitude and they þ dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues, the prestes also and iudges of euery place maye stāde in the tyme appoynted, tyll they wage the wyath of the Lorde in thys bulynge.

bathens helpe them thereto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captiuite. And Esdras the preste chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers accordyng to their names, & in the new moneth of the tenth moneth they sat together, to examē this matter. And so the matter was a determyng (concernyng the men that had outlandish wyues) vntill the new moneth of the fyrst moneth. And of þ prestes that had inpyt the selues with outlandish wyues, there were founde. * Of the sonnes of Iesu the sonne of Joseder and his brethren, Hazeas, Eleazar, Josibus & Joadeus, whyche offered the selues to put awaye their wyues, and to offre a ramme for theyr ignoraunce. And of the sonnes of Semmeri, Masseas, & Elles, and Jecech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Mosera, Limoth, Hilmāen, Nathanea, Jusio, Jedbus, and Callas. And of the Leuytes Josabbus, Semecis, and Colnis, Calctas, Hactas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of þ syngers of the Sanctuary, Eliarib, zacharus. Of the porters, Sallumus ad Colbanes. And of Israel, of the children of Tozo, Osi, and Remias, and Geddias, and Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias & Wannas. And the chyldre of Iolamā, Chanias, zachari, Feizelus, Joddius, Crimoth and Elias. And of þ sonnes of Jathoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and zochias, Larimoth, Sabdius, and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of zebes, Johannes, Amarias, zabbias, and Emmeus. And of þ sonnes of Wannus, Olamus, Maluchus, Jedbus, Isabus, Alabus, & Jerimoth. And of þ sonnes of Adon, Raatus, and Woolias, and Caleus, ad Raanas Haaluas, Nathathias, Besei, Wannus, & Manasses.

¶ And of the sonnes of Naue, Rones, Afeas, Melchias, Sameas, Simō, Benjamin Malchus ad Marras. And of the sonnes of Alom, Cariancus, Nathathias, Wannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semel. Of the sonnes of Wannus, Jeremij, Mordias, Abamas, Johel, Baneas, Beliaas, Iona, Marimoth, Eliarib, Nathaneus, Elias, Ozias, Dielus, Semebius, zambis, & Ioseph. Of the sonnes of Robeus, Idelus, Nathathias, Sababus, zecheda, Seumi, Jelleus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to mariage, & they put them awaye with theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israel, dwelt at Ierusalem and thowout all the lande, in the new moone of the seuenth moneth, and the chyldren of Israel were in their dwellinges. And the whole multitude came together vpon the floore at the East syde of þ holy port of the tēple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hye preste ad reader, þ he wolde bringe the lawe of Moles, which was geue of the

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ The people is reprovēd for their vntychfulness. God wyll sende another people if these wyll not be reformed.

of the Lorde God of Israel. So Esdras þ hye preste brought þ lawe vnto the whole multitude, to mā & womā, & to all prestes, that they might heare the lawe, * in þ new moneth of the vii. moneth. And he red in the floore that is before þ holy porte of the temple, from the mornyng early vnto the euenyng, before men and womē. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

¶ And Esdras þ preste & reader of the lawe stode vp vpo a pulpit of wood, which was made therfore: & vpo his ryght hāde there stode by hi Nathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Ozias, Ozechias, and Sallamus: vpon his left hand stode Haldens, Misael, Malachias, Abuscas, Sabus, Nabadias & zachary. The toke Esdras þ boke before the whole multitude, for he was the principall, ad had in most honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all straght vpon their fete. So Esdras prayled þ Lord þ moost hye God, the Almyghty God of hostes. And all þ people answered: Amē: & helde by their hādes, fell downe flat vpon þ earth, & prayled the Lord. And Iesus, Bencas, Sarchias, Jadinus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Jorabus, Ananias, & Phillas the Leuites lyft their hādes vpwarde, & bowed their faces to þ ground, & prayled þ Lord: Those were they whych taught þ lawe of the Lord, & red the lawe of the Lord, in the congregacyon: & euery man set them before that understode the lawe. The spake Atharates vnto Esdras the hye preste & reader, & to the Leuites that taught the multitude, saying: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that had hearde the lawe, wepte. So Esdras sayde: * Departe poure waie then, & eate the best, & drynke the swetest, & sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothyng: for thys daye is holy vnto þ Lord, & be not ye sorry, for the Lorde wyll bring you to honoure. Then wente they theire waie euerychone, and byd rate and drynke, & were mery, and sent rewardes vnto them that had nothyng, that they also myght eate wyth gladnesse: for they were exceedingly reioyled, thowow the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Ierusalem to holde the feast, accordyng to the couenaunt of the Lorde God of Israel.

The ende of the thirde booke of Esdras.

The seconde boke of the Prophet * Esdras (the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Melchias, þ sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, þ sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Achia, the sonne of Phinees, þ sonne of hely Amerias, the sonne of Azarias, þ sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Elzi, þ sonne of Voccus, þ sonne of Abisu, þ sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leui) whych was pr. soner in the lande of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerxes kynge of Persia.

¶ And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: go thy waie, & shew my people their synfull dedes, and their chyldren their wyckednes, whych they haue done agaynst me, that they may tell theyr chylders chyldre the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why they haue forgotten me, & haue offered vnto strange goddes. Am not I euen he, þ brought the out of the lāde of Egypte, fro the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wyath, and despyled my counceils. Pull thou out then the heare of thy heade, & cast all euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

¶ It is a people without lernynge & nourture. How longe shall I forbear them, vnto whom I haue done so moche good? * Many kynages haue I destroyed for their sakes: Pharaō wyth his seruantes & all his power haue I smytten downe & slayne: All þ nacyōs haue I destroyed & roted out before the, and in the East haue I brought two landes & people to naught, euen Tyre and Sydon, and haue slayne all their euemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto them, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord: * I led you thowow the see, & haue geue you sure stretes sence the begynnyng. * I gaue you Moles to be poure captayne, & Aaron to be the preste: * I gaue you lyght i a ppler of fyre, & greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eate, & tentes for your succoure:

caused water to flowe therout? For y^e heat I couered you wyth the leaues of the trees A good pleasur fat lād gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites, the Pherytyes & Philystines before you. * What shall I do more for you, sayeth the Lorde?
Thus sayth y^e Almyghty Lorde: * Why ye were in the wyldernes, in y^e water of the Amoyptes, beyng a thyrst, & blasphemynge my name, I gaue you not thyr for your blasphemys, but cast a tree i to y^e water, & made y^e ryuer swete. What shall I do vnto y^e, O Jacob? Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. * I wyll turne me to a nother people & vnto those wyl I geue my name, y^e they may kepe my statuts. * For ye haue forsaken me, I wyl forsake you also. Why ye despyce me to be gracious vnto you, I shall haue no mercy vpon you. * Why ye call vpon me, I wyl not heare you. For ye haue despyled your handes with bloude, ad your sere are swyft to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsake me (in a maner) but your awne selues, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth y^e Almyghty Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father hys sones, as a nother her daughters, & as a nothe her yōg babes, y^e ye wolde be my people, ad I wuld be your God: y^e ye wolde be my chyldren, & I wuld be your a wne fathers? * I gathered you together, as an hēne gathereth her chekens vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out fro my face. * Why ye offere vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for your solemne feast dayes, your new moones, ad your circumcysions haue I forsake. I sent vnto you my seruantes y^e Prophetes, who ye haue taken & slayne, and tozme they^e bodys in peces, whose bloude I wyl requyre of your handes, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almyghty Lorde: your house must be desolate. I wyl cast you out as the wynde doth y^e strawe: your chyldre shall not be fructfull, for they haue despysed my commaundement. Ad done the thyng y^e is enell before me. Your houses wyl I geue vnto a people y^e shall come, and * they^e y^e neuer herde me, shall beleue in me: & they^e vnto whom I neuer shewed toke, shall do the thge that I comaunde the. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowledg the. I repozte me vnto the grace, y^e I wyl do for y^e people whych is come, whose chil-dre reioyse in gladnes: & though they haue not sene me wyth bodely eyes, yet in sprete they beleue the thge y^e I saye. And nowe brother, beholde what greute worshyppe, & se y^e people y^e cometh from the East, vnto who I wyl geue the dukedō. * of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, of Osee, Amos, & Michas, of Joel, Abdy, Jonas, Naum, ad Abacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, zachary, ad Malachi, whych is called also an agell (or messenger) of the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

The Synagoge syneth saute forth der a wne chyldren, The Gentyles are called.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue them my commaundemētes by my seruantes the Prophetes, whych they wolde not heare, but despyled my counsels.
The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto the. So your waye ye chyldren, for I am a wyddowe & forsaken: I brought you vp wyth gladnesse, but wyth sorow and heuynes haue I lost you: for ye haue sinned before the Lorde your God, & done y^e thge that is euell before him. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddow & forsaken: go your waye, O my chyldren, and alke mercy of the Lorde. As for me, O father, I call vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyldren, whych wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou byng the to confusyon, & their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scattered abroad amonge the heathen, let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thought scozne of my couenaunt.

Who be vnto the Lorde, thou that hydest y^e vnpyghtuous by y^e. Thou wycked people, remembre * what I dyd vnto Sodome and Gomorre, whose lāde is turned to pytch & asphes. Euen so also wyl I do vnto all the, that heare my not, sayeth y^e Almyghty Lorde. Thus sayeth y^e Lorde vnto Eldras: Tell my people, that I wyl geue the the kyngdome of Ierusalem, whych I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glory also wyl I take vnto me, & geue the y^e euerlastynge tabernacles, whych I had prepared for those. The tree of lyfe shall be vnto the a swete smellige opntemēt: they shall nether laboure nor be weery. So ye your waye, & ye shall receaue it. Praye for your selues a fewe dayes, y^e they may dwell therein.

Howe

is the kyngdome prepared for you, therefore watche. Take heauen ad earth to witnesse for I haue broken the euell in peces, & created the good, for I yue sayth y^e Lorde. Mother embrace thy chyldren, ad byng them wyth gladnesse: make they^e fete as fast as a ppter, for I haue chosn the, sayeth the Lorde.

And those that be deed wyl I raple vp agayne from they^e places, and bringe them out of the graues, for I haue knowne my name I Israel. Feare not thou mother of y^e chyldren, for I haue chosn the, sayeth the Lorde. And for thy helpe I shall sende the my seruantes Esay & Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with diuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowynge with mylk and ho-ny and seuen mountaynes, wher vpon there growe roles and lylpes, wher I wyl fyll my chyldren wyth ioye. Execute iustye for the wyddowe, be iudge for the fatherles gent to the poore: defende the conforlesse: clothe the naked: heale the wounded & speke: laugh not a lame man to scozne: defende the treple, and let the blynde come i to the lyght of my clearnes: * wheresoeuer thou syndest the deed, take them, and burye them, and I shall geue y^e, y^e spyt place in my resurreccio.
Holde still O my people, and take thy rest for thy quyetnes is come. Feede thy chyldre, O thou good nothe, stablysh their fete: As for the seruantes whom I haue geuen the, there shall not one of them perishe, for I wyl se the them from thy nombze: vexe not thy selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heuynes cometh, other shall wepe and be sorow-full, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous.
The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be able to do nothyng agaynst the, sayth the Lorde. Wy handes shall couer the, so that thy chyldren shall not se the fyre euerlasting Be ioyfull, O thou mother wyth thy chyldre, for I wyl deliuer the, sayth the Lorde.
Remembre thy deed chyldren, for I shall byng them out of the earth, & shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull, sayth the Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chyldren, vntyll I come, & shew mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer, and my grace shall not fayle.

I Eldras receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mozt Mzab, that I shuld go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naught, and despyled the commaundemēt of the Lorde. And therefore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen that heare and vnderstande: Loke for your shepherde, he shall geue you euerlastinge rest, for he is nye at hā, that shall come in the ende of y^e worlde.
Be readye to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerlastynge lyght shall shyne vpon you for euermore. He the shadowe of thy^e worlde, receaue the ioyfulness of your glory. I testifie my fauour opely: O, receaue the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, ge-uyng thāckes vnto hym, that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Arise vp & stande fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lorde, which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, and haue receaued glayous garmentes of the Lorde. Take thy nombze O Spō, and shut vp thy purpyred, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lorde. The nombze of thy chyldren whom thou long-edest for, is fulfilled: beseeche the power of the Lorde, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge, may be halowed.

* I Eldras sawe vpon the mount Sion a great people, whom I coude not nombze and they all prayled the Lorde with songes of thankesgeuyng. And in the myddest of them there was a yonge man of an hpe stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon eury one of they^e heades he set a crowne, & was euer higher and higher, whych I mar-uelled at greatly. So I asked the agell, and sayd: Spō, what are these? he answered ad saide vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothyng and put on the im-mortall, and haue testyfyed ad knowleged the name of God. Now are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the aungell: what yōge personne is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in they^e handes?
So he answered, and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of God, who they haue knowledged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commende them, that stode so styfly for the name of y^e Lorde. And so the aungell sayde vnto me: So thy waye, & tell my people, what maner of thynges & how greute wonders of the Lorde thy God, thou hast sene.

The.iii. Chapter.

The wondrous woordes whiche God dyd for the people are recyted. Eldras maruelly that God cut-teth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer hys people, whych yet are synners also.

In the thyrtye yere of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylon, and lape troubled vpon my bed ad my thoughtes came vp ouer my hert: for I sawe the desolacyon of Syon, and the plenteous wealth of the that dwelt at Babylon: and my sprete was sore moued, so that I beganne to speake fearfull wordes to the mozt hyst, and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnynge, why thou wilt plantest.

plstedst the earthe (as that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast bryethed in hym the bryeth of lyfe: and so helpedest befoze the, and thou leddest hym into paradysse, which garden of pleasure thy ryght hande had planted, or euer the earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, which he transgressed, & immediatly thou appointedst death in hi, and in his generacions. Of hym came nacrons, trybes, people and kynredes out of nombze. * And euer people walked after their awne will, and dyd nyce thynges befoze the: as for thy commaundementes, they despyed them.

* Sm. vi. b.

* Sm. vii. b.

* But in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floude, vpo those that dwelt in the world, and destroyedst them. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was y water floude also i these. Neuerthelesse one of them y leftest: namely Noe wyth his household, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened that whē they that dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiplye, and had gottē many chyldren, and were a great people, they beganne to be moze vngodly then the fyrst.

* Ge. xii. b.

* Gen. xxi. a.

* Gen. xxi. b.

* Ge. xxi. a.

Now when they all lyued so wyckedly befoze the, * thou dydest chose the a man fro amonge them, whose name was Abraham. hym thou loudest, ad vnto him onely thou spewedst thy wyl, and madest an euerglasting couenaunt with hym, promysynge hym, that thou wouldest neuer forsake his seed. * And vnto hym y gauest Isaac, * vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob ad Esau. As for Jacob thou dydest chose hym, and putt backe Esau. * And so Jacob became a great multitude.

* Gen. xxi. a.

* Gen. xxi. b.

And it happened that when thou leddest thy people out of Egypte, * thou broughtest them vp to the mounte Syon, bowynge downe the heauens, lettynge fast the earth, moynge the grounde, makynge the depthes to quake, and troublynge the world: And thy glory wente thorow foure portes of fyre, & earth quakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest geue the lawe vnto y seed of Jacob, & diligēce vnto y generacō of Israel.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from the that wycked hert, y thy lawe myght bryge forth frute in them. For the fyrst Ada bare a wycked hert, transgressed, and was overcome, & so be all they that are borne of him.

* Roma. vii. a.

* Thus remayned weaknes with the lawe i the herte of the people, w the wyckednesse of the rote: so that the good departed awaye and the euell abode still. So the tymes passed awaye, and the peares were brought to an ende. * Then dydest thou callye the vpa-seruaunt called Dauid, * whom thou commaundest to buyde a cyte vnto thy name, and so offere vp incense and sacryfye vnto y therin. Thys was done now many peares. Then the inhabytters of the cyte forsoke the, and in all thynges dyd euen as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked herte.

And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon then better ad moze righteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the domynyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe they vngodlynes, and so greates wyckednesse, that it coulde not be nombzed: yee, whē my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the thy tye peare) my herte sayled me, for I sawe, how thou suffrest them in such vngodlynes & sparest the wicked doers: but thyne awne people hast thou rote out and preserued thyne enemyes, & thys hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceaue how thys happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the sayynge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleued thy couenautes, as Jacob? And yet they rewarde appareth not, ad they labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here & there thorow the heathen, and I se that they be rich and wealthy, and thyncke not vpo thy commaundementes. Wyldest thou therfore oure wyckednesse now in the balaunce, and theirs also that dwell in the world, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpo earth, that hath not synned befoze y? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalt finde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

The fourth Chapter.

The Angell expoweth Esayas, because he cometh to enter into the profounde iudgements of God.

And the Angell that was sent vnto me (whose name was Ariell) gaue me an answer, & sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moch vpo it in thys worlde, & y thynkest to comprehend the waye of the hysell. Then said I: Yee, my Lorde. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to shewe the theze wayes, and to sett forth the synplytudes, befoze the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the waye, that thou desyrest to se: and I shall shewe the from whence the wicked herte cometh. And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: So thy waye, wepe me the wepyght of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What mā borne is able to do y? Why requiryst thou soch of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shulde aske the, how depe dwelliges are in y see? Or how great water springes are vpo the firmamēt? Or how great water springes are in the begynnyng of the depe? Or which are the outgoinges of paradysse? Paradytūre thou wouldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet into y depe nor hel, nether dyd I euer clyme vp into heauen. Neuerthelesse, now haue I asked the but only of fyre and wynde and of the daye, where thorow thou hast traunpiled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no answer of them.

He sayd mozeouer vnto me: Thyne awne thynges, & soch as are growne vpo the, canst thou not knowe: how shuld thy vessel then be able to comprehend the waye of the hysell, and now out wardly in the corrupte world, to vnderstāde the corrupciō that is euident in my sight? Then sayd I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we shuldelyue in wyckednesse, & to suffer, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me, & sayd: I wente in a wood, & * the trees toke soch a denyce ad sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye befoze vs, and that we maye make vs yet moze woddes.

* Job. i. c.

* Job. i. b.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke thys denyce, ad sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodd that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thought and denyce of the wodd was but vayne and nothinge worth, for the fyre came and consumed the wodd: The thought of the floudes of the see came lyke wyle to naught also, for the lāde stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge now betwixt these two, whom wouldest thou iustifie, or whom wouldest thou condemne? I answered & said: Clerely it is a folysh thought that they both haue denyed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wodd, & the see also hath y place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me, ad sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy self also? For lyke as the ground is geuen vnto the wodd, and the see to his floudes: euen so * they y dwell vpon earth, may vnderstāde nothinge, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboute the heauens, may only vnderstāde the thynges, y are aboute the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseeche y, O Lorde, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of soch as we dayly medle withall, namely, wherfore that Israel is blasphemed of the heathen, and for what cause the people (whom thou euer hast loued) is geuen ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly nacrons: & why y lawe of our fathers is brought to naught and the wylten couenautes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye out of y world as the greshoppers, ad our lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to optayne mercy. What wil he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs: Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, & sayd: The moze thou searchest, the moze thou shalt maruell for the world hasteth fast to passe awaye, & cannot comprehend the thynges, y are promysed for the righteous i tyme to come, for * thys worlde is full of vnrightheousnes ad weaknes.

* 1. Job. v. b.

But as concernynge the thynges wherof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccō therof is not yet come: Yf the euell now that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place wher the euell is sowen, passe not awaye, then canot the thyng come y is sowen v good. For the corne of euell seide hath bene sowen in the hert of man from the begynnyng, and how moch vngodlynes hath he brought vp vnto thys tyme? and how moch shal he yet bryng forth, vntill he come into the barne?

Wondrest thou by thy self, whē the corne of euell seide is cutt downe, how greates a barne shal it fyll? I answered and sayd, how and whē shal these thynges come to passe? Wherfore are our peares seide & euell? And he answered me, sayynge: Hast not thou to moch vpo the hysell, for thy hastynes to be aboute him is but vaine, thou makest to moch a do. Did not the soules also of y righteous aske questyon of these thynges in they holynes sayng: * how longe shall I hope of thys fauour? Whē cometh the frute of my barne, and my rewarde? And vpo this Jeremiel y Archāgel gaue the answer, and sayd: Eue whē the nombze of the seides is fylled i you, for he hath weped the world i the balaunce: in measure and nombze hath he measured y tyme, & moueth it not, vntill the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I & sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, now are we all full of synne, and for our sake paradytūre it is not, the barne of the ryghteous shal not be fylled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the earth.

* Job. i. c.

So he answered me, & sayd: So thy waye to a womā wyth chyld, and aske of her whē she hath fulfilled her tyme monethes, yf her chyld be borne maye kepe y byrth any longer with in her, Then sayde I: No Lorde, that can be not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell y secret places of soules are lyke the prey chamber of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauapleth, maketh haste, when the tyme & necessyte of the byrth is at hande. Euen so doth he haste to deliuer it that is conuyncted vnto her. Loke what thou desirest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnyng. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come then is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, and I shall expounde the synplitude vnto the. So I stode, and behold, an whote burnynge ouen wete ouer before me: and it happened that when the flame was gone by, the smoke had þ vpper hāde. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloude, & sent downe moche rayne wth a storme: & whē the stormy rayne was past the droppes remayned still. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceedeth the smoke, euen so the measure of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: ad I prayed ad sayde: May I lyue (thynkest thou) untill that tyme? O, what shal happen in those dayes? he answered me, ad sayde: As for the tokens wherof I askest me, I maye tell the of them in parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

The. v. Chapter.

The. v. Chapter. The Angell comen together.

Euertheless, as concernig the tokens, marke thys: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earthe, shalbe take in a great nōbre, & the waie of the trouth shalbe hyd, and the lande shalbe barren fro sayth: but * iniquyte shal haue the vpperhande, lyke as thou hast sene now, ad as thou hast heard longe agoo. And the lāde that thou seist now to haue rule, shalt thou shortly se waste. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrd trompet, that þ sunne shall sodely thynne agayne in the nyght, & the moone thre tymes i the dape, and blood shal droppe out of wood, and the stone shal geue his voyce, & the people shalbe inuyncted: and euen he shal rule, whō they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and the foules shal flyt, & the Sodomytys shal cast out his fiuh, and make a nople in the nyght, whych many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, ad the wyld beasts shal go theyr waie, and menstruous women shal beare monsters, & salt waters shalbe founde in the swete: one frende shal fyght agāst another: then shal all witt and vnderstādyng be hyd and put asyde into theyr secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shal vncyghteousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One land also shal aske another, and saye: Is ryghteousnes gone thozow the? And it shal saye No. At the same tyme shal men hope, but nothyng opayne: they shal labour, but theyr wayes shal not prosper.

To shewe the soche tokens I haue leue, & yf thou wylt praye agayne, & wepe as now and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awoke, and a fearfulness wente thozow all my body, and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withall. So the aūgel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vpon my fete.

And in the seonde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the caprayne of the people came vnto me, sayng: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countenance so heuy? Knowest thou not, that Israel is conuyncted vnto þ, in the lande of theyr captiuitie? Alþ then ad eate, and forsake vs not, as þ shepherde that leaueh his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy waie fro me, and come not nye me: and he hearde it, ad as I sayd: so wete he þys waie fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mourning and wepyng, lyke as Uriel the aūgel commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that þ thoughtes of my herte were very greuous vnto me agayne, ad my soule receaued þ sprete of vnderstandyng, and I began to talke with the moost hiest agayne and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery wood of the earth ad of all the trees thereof, thou hast cholen the one onely vyne parde: & of all landes of the whole worlde thou hast cholen one pyt: and of all flourcs of the grounde thou hast cholen the one lyfe: and of all the depthes of the see thou hast fylled the one ryuer: ad of all buylde cytyes thou hast holowed Sion vnto thy selfe: ad of all þ foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: & of all the catell that are made thou hast prouided the one shepe, & among all the myltitudes of folkes thou hast gotten the one people, & vnto thys people whō thou loudest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other and why hast thou scatred thy one only people amonge many: which treade them downe, yee whych haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer belueid thy conuynctes? And

And though thou werest enemy vnto thy people, yet shuldest thou punysh them with thynne a wne hādes. Now whē I had spokē, these wordes þ Angel þ came to me þ nyght afore, was sent vnto me, & sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynges that I saye, and I shal tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made the? And I sayd: O Lorde, but of very grete & compassyon haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experie of þ waie of the most hyst, ad to seke out parte of þys iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: þ I mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lorde? wher vnto was I borne then? O, why was not my mothers chyldbed then my graue? So had I not sene þ mysery & trouble of Jacob, and the trauaple of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: Remembre the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes, & are scatred abrode: make me the flourcs grene agayne, & are withered: open me the thynges that is closed: and byngge me forth the wyndes, that are shut vp: shewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thynges, that thou labourrest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, whō maye knowe these thinges, but he that hath not þys dwellyng with men? Afor me, I am vnwyle: how may I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as þ canst do none of these thynges that I haue spokē of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayd: Beholde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they do, þ haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyl lychen my iudgement vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of þ last: eue so is there no swytnesse of þ fyrst. So I answered and sayd: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, & be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue þ maker, ne the maye the worlde holde them at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: how hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruante, that thou lyunge maker, hast made the creature lyunge at once & the creature bare it: eue so myght it now also heare them that be present, at oce. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the chyldbed of a woman, & saye vnto her: If thou byngest forth chyldren, why doest thou it not to gether, but one after another? Drape her therfore, to byngge forth ten chyldren at once. And I sayde: she cannot, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geue a chyldbed vnto the earth, for those þ be sown vpo it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a ponge chylde maye not byngge forth þ thynges that belonge to the aged: eue so haue I ordned the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seyng thou hast now geuen me a waie, I will speake before the: for oure mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet ponge, & now she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me, and sayde: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, & she shall tel þ. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whom thou hast now brought forth) lyke those that were before þ, but lesse of stature? And she shal answer the: They that be borne in the pouth of strength, are of one fast wyth, and they that are borne in the tyme of age, (when the chyldbed fayleth) are other wyse. Consydre now thy selfe, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures which now begynne to be old, & haue passed ouer þ strength of pouth. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseeche þ, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, shewe thy seruante, by whom doest thou viset thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

The Angell instructed Eldas, and geueh hym answer to þys questyons.

Ad he sayde vnto me. In the begynnyng when þ grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred and lyghtened, or euer þ foundacyōs of Paradyle were layd, before the fayre flourcs were sene, or euer the moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together, or euer the hyghnes of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore þ measures of the firmament were named, or euer þ chymneys in Syon were hote, ad or the presente peares were sought out, and or euer the inuycyōs of them that now synne, were put asyde, before they were sealed that now gather sayth for a treasure: then byd I colyde and pondre all these thynges, and they all were made thozow me, and thozow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I & sayd: which shal be þ partynge asunder of þ tymes? O, when shalbe the ende of the fyrst, & the begynnyng of it þ foloweth? And he sayd vnto me: From Abraham whō to Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne: Abb iii. of hym of hym, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hyle of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys world and Jacob is the begynnyng of it that followeth. The hande of man betwixte the hyle and the hande. Other questyon (Esdas) aske thou not.

I answered then, & sayd: O Lord, Lord, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beseech the, shewe thy seruauit the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered ad sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and soude. There shall come a grate moeyon, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest þy wordes, be not afraied: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the word therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, þy why I had hearde it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and hearkened: & behold, there was a voyce that spake, and founde of it was lyke þy soude of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, & to vyllet them that dwell vpon earth, and wil begynne to make iniquityon of them, what they be that haue hurt euylte with vnyghteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Spō shall be fulfilled: and when the worlde, that shall vanysh awaye, shall be ouersealed, then will I do these tokens.

The bookes shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall se all together, & the chyldre of a yere olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with chyldre shall bring forth vntymely chyldre of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, and be raysed vp: & sodenly shall the lowen places appeare as the vnlowen, the full store houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, & the trompet shall geue a soude, which whē euery mā heareth, they shall be hastily afraied. * At þy tyme shall frendes fyght one agaynst another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The spynges of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shall not rene. Whosoeuer remayneth from all these thynges that I haue told the, shall escape, ad se my saluacyon, and the ende of your worlde. And the men that haue receaued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death, from theyr byrth, and the bert of the indwellers shall be chaunged, & turned into another meanyng: for euell shall be put out, and dyscete shall be quenched. As for sayth, it shall flozyshe, corrupcyon shall be ouercome: & þy truelyth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shall be declared. And it happened when he talked w me, that I looked demurely vpon hym, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the, the tyme of the nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thynges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is heard before the hyst: for why? þy myghte hath sene thy ryghteous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sence thy yowth: and therfore hath he sent me to shewe the all these thynges, ad to sape vnto the: Be of good conforte, and feare not, and haste not with þy tymes that are past to thyncke wayne thynges, and make not hast of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner, & I myght full þy thre weekes: which he told me. In þy eyght nyght was my bert vnderd with me agayne, & I begane to speake before þy hyst, for my sprete was greatly sett on fyre, & my soule was i dysstresse, & I sayd: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature fro the begynnyng (eue the fyrst daye) and saydest: * Let heauen & earth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the sprete, and þy darckenesses were put on euery syde, and splende: there was no mans voyce as yet from þy. Then commaundedst þy a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worck myght appeare and be sene.

Vpon the seconde daye thou madest the sprete of the firmament, and comaundedst it to part a sunder, and to make a deuytyon betwixte the waters, that the one part myght remayne aboue: and the other beneth. Vpon the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe, þy the waters were gathered i the seuenth part of þy earth: Sixe partes hast thou dyed vp, and kepte them, to thyntent þy men myght fowre & occuppe husbandrye therein. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worcke was made. For imedyatly there was grete innumerable frute, and many vynerse pleasures & desyres of tēptacyon, floures of chaumgreable couloure and smell, and this was do the thyrde daye.

* Vpon the.iii. daye þy commaundedst þy the Sunne shuld geue his spynne, & the moone her lyght: þy starres dydest thou set in ordre: and gauest them a charge: to do scrupce euen vnto man, that was for to be made.

Vpon þy fyft daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth part (where the * waters were gathered) that they shulde byynge forth diuerse bestes, foules and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water and without soule, brought forth lypynge bestes, at þy commaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous worckes. Then dydest thou preserue two soules, the one one thou calledst Enoch and the other Lelathan, ad dydest separate the one fro the other: for the seuenth parte (namely, where þy water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, which was dyed vp the thyrde daye, that he shulde dwell i the same parte, wherin are a thousand hilles. But vnto Lelathan thou gauest the seuenth part, namely the moyst, and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wilt, and whan. Vpon the sixte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the, it shulde byynge forth bestes, catell, and all that crepe, and (belydes this) Ada also, who thou madest Lord of all thy creatures, of hym come we all, & the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde now & spoken before þy, that I myght shewe how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Ada thou hast sayd that they are nothyng, but be lyke a spetle, & hast lykened þy abouidance of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rose of the house.

And now, O Lord, the heathen whych haue euer bene reputed as nothyng, haue begone to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called the fyrst bozne, thy only begotten, & thy feruent louer) are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde? How longe shall thys endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

The Angel sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

And it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an Angell, which had bene by me also the nightes afore, and he said vnto me: Vp Esdras, and heare the wordes þy I am come to tel the. And I sayd: speake on Lord my God. Then sayd he vnto me. The see is set in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and grete: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go to the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he wente not thorow þy narrow, how myght he come into the brode?

Item another: A cpte is buylded and set vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes the entraunce is narrow & sodayne, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght had, and a depe water at the left and as it were onely one strapte path betwixte the both, so smal that there coulde but one man go there.

Yf thys cpte now were geue to an heye, & he neuer wete thorow the paelous waye, how wolde he receaue his inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lord, Then sayd he: Eue so is Israel also a porcion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde: & whē Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyng iudged y was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrow, ful of sorow & trauayle. They are but few & euell, full of paelis and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall frute.

If they now which are entred into thys worlde, maye not cōprehende these strapte and wayne thynges, moche lesse maye they cōprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquietest thou thy self the, seing thou art but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thyne herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lord Lord, * thou hast ordeyned i thy lawe, þy the ryghteous shuld inheret these thynges, but that þy vnsaythfull and vngodly shulde perishe. Neuertheless, the righteous shall suffre strapte thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffered strapte thynges shall not se the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstandynge aboue the hyst. For there be many that perishe, because they despyse the lawe of God þy is sett before them. For God hath geuen strapte commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shuld lyue: and yf they kepte this they shuld not be punished.

Neuertheless, they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagined wayne thynges, and purposed to lyne, and sayd mozeouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despyed, and denyed hys promyses: in hys statutes & ordynances haue they not bene saythfull and stedfast, and haue not perfourmed hys worckes.

And therfore Esdras: vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, ad the byrde shall appeare, and the earth that now passeth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is deliuered fro the fore sayde euells, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall be openly declared, with those that be with hi: & they that remayne, shall be mercy in foure hundred yeaers.

After these same yeaers shall my sonne Chyrist dye, & all men that haue lyfe, and þy worlde shall be turned into the olde sylere seuen dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgements, so þy no man shall remayne. And after seuen

Whi. iiii. dayes, dayes, the world that yet a taked not, shall be rayled vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earth shall restore those þe haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in it. And the secrete place shall deliuer those þe be committed vnto the. And the most hyest shall be openly declared vpon þe seate of iudgement, and all mysery shall vanysh awaye, & longe suffring shall be gathered together. But the iudgement shall continue, the treuth shall remaine, and sayth shall waxe strong, the worke shall folowe, & the rewarde shall be shewed: the ryghteousnes shall watch, & the vnryghteousnes shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: * Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, & Moses for þe fathers that sinned in the wyldernes, & he that came after hym for Israel, in þe tyme of Ahas and Samucl: and * David for the destruction of Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, & helias for those þe receaued rayne, & for þe deed, that he myght lye, and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuerse other lyk manner, which haue prayed for many.

Then so now, seing the corrupte is growne vp, & wyckednes increased, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayde: This present world is not the ende, there remaineth moche honoure in it, therefore haue they prayed for the worke. But the daye of dome shall be the ende of this tyme, and the beginning of the immortalite for to come, wherin all corrupcion vanyshed, all voluptuousnes is lousd all mysbelue taken awaye, ryghteousnes growne, and the verpte spronge vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is destroyed, nor to opresse hym þe hath gotten þe victory. I answered then, and sayde: This is my first and last sayig: þe it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Ada: or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym þe he shuld not synne. For what profit is it for men now in this present tyme to lye in heynnes, & after death to loke for punishment. O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, þe art not fallen alone, but we all that come of þe. For what profit is it vnto vs, yf there be promysed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle wyth deadly wyckednes: and that there is promysed vs an euclastynge hope, where as our selues are euil & vayne, and þe there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of healt & freedom, where as we haue lyued euell, & þe the wyckednes of the hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue led a pacyent lyfe, wher as we haue walcked in the most wycked wayes of all: And that there shall be shewed a paradys, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is freedom and medycyne, where as we shall not go in: for we haue walcked in vnpleasunt places: And that the faces of them, which haue absteyned, shall synne aboute the starres, where as oure faces shall be black and parched: For whyle we lyued & dyd vnryghtously, we considered not that we shuld suffer therfore after death.

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consideration ad thought of the bat-tayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffer as thou hast sayde. But yf he gett the victory, he shall receaue the thyng that I saye. For this is þe lyfe, wher of Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, sayinge: * Those the lyfe, that þe mayest lye. Neuertheles, they beleued hym not, nether þe prophetes after hym. No ner me which haue spoken vnto them þe heynnes shulde not reach vnto them to the destruction, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be enfourmed in saluacyon.

I answered then, and sayde: I knowe Lorde, that the hyest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, whych are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walcke in his lawe: and that þe is pacient and longe sufferynge toward those that haue synned in the wyckednes, and that he is libell to geue where as it requyeth: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplid his lousge kyndnesse toward those that are present and that are past, ad to them whych are for to come. For yf he multiplie not his mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lyuynge, wyth those that dwell therein. He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnes, that they whych haue done euell, myght be casd from the wyckednes, the ten thousande parte of men shulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed w his worde, & yf he wold destroye þe multitude that stryuet, there shulde be verp fewe left in an innumerable multitude.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ Elias prayeth God rather to lye vpon hym, a wne mercy, then on the synnes of the people.

And he answered me, sayinge. The most hyest made this worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I will tell the a symilitude, Elias: As when thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto þe, that it geueth moche moulde, whereof earthen vessels are made, but litle of it that golde cometh of. Eue so is it with the worke of this worlde. * There be many created, but fewe shall be preserued. Then answered I and sayde: The shalowe by the wytt (thou soule) and denoure the vnderstan-understandynge, for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare, and wyllynge to prophete: for thou hast no longer space geuen þe, but onely to lye. O Lorde, wilt thou not geue the seruaut leaue, that we maye praye before the, and that thou mayest geue sede vnto oure herte, & buyde oure vnderstandynge, that there maye come frute of it: & that eue-ry one which is corrupte, and beareth þe state and place of a man, maye lye.

For thou art alone, & we all are one wo-ckman and type of thy hades, lyke as thou hast sayd, and lyke as the body is fashioned now in the mothers wombe, & thou geuest the me-thes, and thy creature is preserued in fyre ad water: & it, none thes both thy worke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thyng that preserued, and it that is pre-serued, shall both be kepte together: and whē tyme is, the wombe deliuereth the thyng that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded þe bestes to geue mylk vnto the frute, that the thyng which is created and fashioned, maye be no-ryshed for a tyme: and then thou dyspolest & ordrest it with thy mercy, byngest it vp w thy ryghteousnes, nuturest it in thy law, & refourmest it with thy vnderstandynge, mo-rtifyest it as thy creature, & makest it lyuige as thy worke. Serynge then that thou de-stroyedst hi, which with so great labours is created and fashioned thowowe thy com-maundment, thou couldest lyghtly ordeyne, also, that the thyng which is made, myght be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in ge-nerall: as þe knowest: but of thy people: for whose sake I am loze: and of thy inheritan-ce: for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whom I am woofull: and for Jacob, for whose sake I am greued, therefore begynne I to praye before the, for my selfe & for the, for I le the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the swyftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therefore hea-re my voyce, and vnderstande my wordes, and I shall speake before the.

This is the beginninge of the wordes of Eldas, before he was receaued: O Lorde, thou that dwellest in euclastynge, whose eyes are lyft vp i the ayre, whose scole is exceeding hye, whose gloze & maiesty maye not be comprehended, before whom the ho-stes of heauen stande with tremblynge, whose keepinge is turned in wynde & fyre, whose worde is true, whose talchynge is stedfast, whose commaundment is stronge, whose ordinaunce is fearfull, whose loke dyeth vp the depthes, whose wyath maketh the mou-taynes to melt awaye, and whose tructh beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy seruaut, and marck with thyne eares the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lye, I wyl speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstandynge, I wyl an-swere. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, whych serue in the tructh. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the hea-then, but to the desire of those that kepe thy testymones wyth sorowes. Chynke not vnto those that haue walcked fapnedly befo-re the, but vpon them, which with will haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroye them, which haue had beasly maners, but to loke vnto the that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignaciō at the, which are worse then bestes: but loue them, that all waye put they trust in thy ryghteousnes & gloze: for we & oure fathers haue all the sa-me syknes and dyscase, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercyfull.

For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, þe shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of ryghteousnes: for þe ryghteous whych haue layed vp many good workes together, shall out of they dedes receaue re-warde. For what is mā, that thou shuldest take displeasure at hym? O what is the cor-ruptible mortall generaciō, that thou shuldest be so rough toward hym?

* For of a tructhe there is no man amonge them that be borne, but he hath dealt wyckedly: and amonge the fapthfull there is no-ne, which hath not done amysse. For in this (O Lorde) thy ryghteousnes and thy good-nes shall be prayled and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, which are not ryche in good workes.

*11. p. 111. d.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spokē a ryght, and accordyng vnto thy wordes it shall be. For I wil not verely confyde the workes of them, which haue synned before death, before the iudgement, before destruction, but * I wyl reioyse ouer the worke and thought of the ryghteous. I will remembre also the pylgre-mage, the holy makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbunde man soweth moche sede vpon the groude, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sowne or plantid is not all kepte safe, ne-ther doth it all take rote: Eue so is it: if the that are sowne in the worlde, they shall not all be preserued.

*11. p. 111. d.

I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, the let me speake. Like as the husbunde mans sede perissheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to much rayne vnto it: Euen so perissheth man also, which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne a wne ymage and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all them

Abb v gcs, and

ges, and lykened hym vnto the husbunde mans sede. Benot wroth at vs, O Lorde, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thyne awne inherytaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

D Then answered he me & sayde. Thynges present are for the present, and thynges to come for soch as be to come. For thou lackest yet moch, seynge þ mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft tymes drawne nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnyghteous. In this also thou art maruelous before þ hyest in that thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thyne awne selfe, that thou art had in soch honoure amonge þ ryghteous. Therfore shal great wechednes and mysery come vpon the, that in the latter tyme shal dwell in the worlde because they haue walched in grete pryde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, and seke out glozy for soch as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradys opened, the tre of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plentyfounes made ready, a cytie is buylded for you, & a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euell is marked from you, þ weaknes, and moch is hyd fro you, & into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulness. Sorowes are vanyshe awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortallite. And therfore aske thou nomore questions concernynge the multitude of the that perishe. For they haue taken libertie: despyled the hyest, thought scoone of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

* p. lat. xliii. a Moreover, they haue troden downe hys ryghteous, and * sayde in theyr herte, that there is no God, yee and that wyttyngly, for they dye. For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Eue so is thyrt & payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyll that man shulde come to naught, but they which be created haue despyled the name of hym that made them, and are vnrhachfull vnto hym, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement now at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namely vnto the, and to soch as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayd: Beholde O Lorde, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme & when, thou hast not shewed me.

The. ix. Chapter.

¶ Elias hath visyons shewed vnto hym.

A Answered me then and sayd: Measure thou þ tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seyst that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whych I haue tolde þ before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherein the hyest wylt begynne to vylet the worlde, which he made. And whē there shalbe sene earth quake and vproare of the people & the worlde, the shal thou well vnderstande, that the most hyest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnynge.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnynge and ende, and the ende is manifest: Eue so the tymes also of þ hyest haue playne begynnynge in wonders and sygnes, and the ende in workynge and tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shal be able to escape by hys workes and by faith, wherein ye haue beleued, shal be preserved from the sayde perils, and shal se my sauyoure in my lande, and wythin my borders, for I haue halowed me fro the worlde. The shal they be in carefulnesse, which now haue abused my wayes: and they þ haue cast the oute despitely, shal dwell in paynes.

For soch as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowne me, & they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet freedom, and whē they had yet open leysure of amendement and couersyon, and vnderstode not, but despyled it: þ same must knowe it after death in paine. And therfore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the ryghteous shalbe saued, and whole the worlde is, & for who the worlde, and when it is. Then answered I and sayd: * I haue talched before & now * ill. ca. b. ill. a. I speake, ad will speake also her after, that there be many moo of them whych perishe, the shalbe saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayynge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the floures be, so are the coulours also: soch as the workman is, soch is also the worke: and as the husband ma is hys selfe, so is hys husbande also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, where in they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wythstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whych is vnsearchable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I consydered the worlde, & beholde, there was parcell, because of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generacyons. Let the multitude perishe thou, whych are growne vp in wayne, and lett my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante: for wyth grete labour haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles

Neuertheles, þ thou wylt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalt not fast in them) goo thy waye then into the felde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate onely of the floures of þ felde, taste not flesch, dryncke no wyne, but eate floures onely. Praye vnto the hyest continually, so wyl I come, and talke with the.

E So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of þ same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth, and beganne to talke before the hyest, and sayde: O Lorde, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou hast declared and opened thy selfe vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou spakest, sayynge: heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob: Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shal byynge frute in you & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers which receaued þ lawe, kept it not and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for why? it was thyne. * For they that receaued it, perished, because they kepte not the thyng that was sowne in them.

It is a custome when the ground receaueth sede, or the see a ship, or a vessel meate and dryncke, that whē it perissheth or is broken wherin a thing is sowne, or wherin my thyng is put: the thynges also perishe and are broken, which are sowne or put therein. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we that haue receaued the lawe, perishe in synne & oure herte whych also receaued the lawe: notwithstanding * the lawe perissheth not, but remaineth in his labour.

And when I consydered these thynges in my herte after thys maner, I looked aboute me with myne eyes, and vpon the right syde * I sawe a woman, which mourned sore, made grete lamentacyon, and wepte with loude voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, and she had a slyde vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayd. Wherfore wepest thou? why art thou so sorow and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me. Syr, lett me be wayle my self and take yet more sorow: for I am sore vered in my mynde, & brought very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth þ? Or who hath done eny thing to þ? tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfructfull and baren, and haue had an husband thyrtye yeres. And these. xxx. yeres I do nothyng els daye and nyght & all houres, but make my prayer to þ hyest. After thyrtye yeres God herde me thy handmayden, looked vpon my mysery, consydered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husband also & all my neyghbours, & we gaue grete honoure vnto the myghtie. And I noryshed hym with grete trauaile. So when he grew vp, and came to þ tyme, that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feast.

The. x. Chapter.

¶ Elias and the woman that appeareth vnto hym comen together.

A As it happened that when my son & ne wente into hys chamber he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrew we all þ lyghtes, and all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the seconde daye at nyght: and whē they had all rested, that they might comforte me, I rested and also rose vp by nyght, and fled, & am come hyther in to thys felde, as thou seyst: and am purposed not to come in the cite, but to remayne here, and nether to eate ner dryncke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditations & thoughtes fall, that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou fooly woman, seyst thou not oure heynnes and mournynge, & what hap-peneth vnto vs: how spon oure mother is all wofull and sorow, and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery: seynge we be all now in heynnes, & make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull.) Is for þ heynnes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, & she shal tell the, that it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnynge all me are borne of hir, and other shal come: & beholde, they walke all most all in to destruction, and many of them shalbe roted out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hath lost so great a multitude: & not thou, which art sorow, but for one. But þ thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mourninge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I bare w heynnes: but þ earth is accordinge to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth againe into her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with trauaile & sorow, eue so þ earth also fro the begynnynge geueth her frute vnto man, for hym þ made her. And therfore with holde thy sorowe and heynnes by thy selfe: & loke what hap-peneth vnto the, beare it strongly. For þ thou iudgeth the marcke and ende of God to be ryghteous be ryghteous and good, & receaueth his cell in tyme. & shall be comended therein. So thy waye then into the cytye to thy husbnde. And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I wyll not go in to the cytye, but beare wyll I dye. So I commened moze with her and sayde: Do not so, but be counceled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Syon? We of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seyst that our Sanctuary is laped waste, oure alter broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playnynge of instruments and syngynge laped with dore, the chancelgeynge put to spylde, our myght is vanquished awaye, the lyght of oure candelstick is quenchyd, the arcke of the couenaunt is taken from vs, all oure holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon oure vs, is dishonoured: oure chyldre are put to shame, oure prestes are bent, oure Leuites are caried awaye into captiuite, our virgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauished, oure ryghteousnes spoiled, and oure chyl-dren destroyed, oure yonge men are brought in bondage, and oure stronge worthyes are become weake: and Syon (which seale is the greatest of all) is lowed vpon from her wyght: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore make of thy great heynes, and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: for the myghty maye be mercifull vnto the, & that the byest maye geue the rest from thy labour and trauaile. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd wyne and glyster, so that I was afrayed of her, and mused what it myght be. And immediately she cast oute a greete voyce, very fearful, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I looked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a citie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundarpon.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed wyth loude voyce, and sayde: where is Ariel the angell, which came to me at the fyrst? For he hath caused me to come in many confidencys and hope thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corrupcion, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, became vnto me, and looked vpon me, & I sape as one that had benedeed, and myne understanding was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and comforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine understanding bereft? and the understanding of thy herte, & wherfore art thou sorow? And I sayd: Because thou hast forsake me: and I haue done accordinge vnto thy wordes, I wente in to the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp and be manly, and I shall geue thee exhortacion.

Then sayd I: speake vnto me my Lord for sake me not, lest I dye in wayne: for I haue sene that I knowe not, and herde that I donot knowe. And he sayd: vnto me: vnderstandinge be disceaued, & my mynde? But now I beseeche the, that thou wyllt shewe thy seruante of this word. He answered me therin & sayd: heare me, and I shall enfourme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the byest hath opened many secreete thynges vnto the. He hath sene that thy waye is ryght, and that thou takest sorowe continually for thy people, and makest greete lamentacion for Syon: and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a lytle whyle agoe after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourninge, and thou hast comforted her: neuertheles now seyst thou the lykenes of a woman nomore, but thou thoughtest there was a citie builded: and like as she tolde of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: The woman whom thou sawest, is Syon, and wher as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtie yeres vnfrutefull and bare, those are the xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offsprynge made in her.

But after xxx. yeres Salomons builded her, & offred, and then bare the barke sonne. And wher as she tolde of: that she noyshed hym with labour, that was the dwellinge of Jerusalem. But wher as she tolde the of her sonne dyed whā she came into her chamber, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse, how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And now God seyth, that thou art sorow in thy mynde, and suffrest fro thy herte for her, & so hath he shewed the her cleannesse, and the faynes of her bewyfe.

And therfore I had the remayne in a felde where no house is builded. For I knew that the byest wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundation ner buildynge is. For in the place where the byest wyll shewe his cite, there shall be no mans buildynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne herte be afrayed, but go thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayre buildynge, and how greete it is, and how greete thou thinkest it after the measure of thine eyes, and the shall thou heare as moche as thine eares maye comprehend. For thou art blessed about many other, and art called with the byest, as the fewe. But to morrow at nyght thou shalt remayne here, and so shall the byest shewe the the vision of his thynges, which he will do vnto the, that dwell vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the same nyght lyke as he commaunded me.

The

The. xi. Chapter.

Can this chapter and in the. ii. next ensynge, be entencer of seven bysons and of the interprete: as pson the first.

When sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from the see an Aegle, which had. xii. wynges and thre heades: And I sawe, and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wynges of the ayre blew in the, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, & out of his fethers there grew other lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreover I sawe, that the Aegle flew w his wynges, and raygned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwell vpon the earth: and I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, & no man spake against hym, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vpon his clawes, & gaue a soude with his fethers, and a voyce sayynge after this maner: watch not all together, slepe euery man in his awne place, and watch for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe, that the voyce wente not oute of his heades, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrary fethers, and beholde, there were cyght of them. And I looked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether, & raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it raygned the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared nomore. So the next folowynge stode vp, and raygned, and had greete tyme: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrst, so that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & sayd heare thou that hast kepte in the earth so long, thyss I sape vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomore: There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, & appeared nomore also. So went it with all the residue one after another, so that euery one raygned, and then appeared nomore. Then I looked, and beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myght rule also: & some of the ruled, but within a whyle they appeared nomore: for some of the were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked, and beholde the. xii. fethers appeared nomore, and the two wynges: & there was nomore vpon the Aegles body, but two heades that rested, and fyre fethers. The sawe I also, that the fyre fethers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpon the ryght syde, for the four continued in the. place.

So I looked, & beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp the selues, & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp but shortly it appeared nomore, & the secōde was looner awaye then the fyrst. And I behelde & lo, the two thought also by the selues to raygne: & when they so thought, beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And the I sawe, that the two heades were filled with hym, and the head was turned wyth the that were by hym, and dyd eate vpon the two vnder wynges, that wolde haue raygned.

But this head put the whole earth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwell vpon earth w moche labour, and he had the gouernance of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I looked, & beholde, the head that was in the myddest sodenly appeared nomore, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those that dwell therein. And I behelde, & lo, the head vpon the ryght syde, deuoured it that was vpon the left syde. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consydre the thyng that thou seyst. The I sawe and beholde, as it were a lyon roareth, rennyng hastely out of the wood, & he sent out a mas voyce vnto the Aegle, & sayd: heare thou, I will talke with the, & the byest shall sape vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpon earth & in my worlde, and the ende of they tymes myght come thow to the?

And the fourth came, and ouerwonne all the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulness, and ouer the whole copasse of the earth with the most wicked labour, & so longe tyme dwelt he vpon the earth with disceate, & the earth hath thou iudged not with truerth. For thou hast troubled the meke, thou hast hurte the peaceable & quyet, thou hast loued lyes, & destroyed the dwellynge of the that brought forth frute, and hast cast downe the walles of soch as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealing and blasphemie come vnto the byest, and thy pryde vnto the myghty. The byest also hath looked vpon the proude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and they abhominacions are fulfilled. And therfore appeare nomore thou Aegle, & thy horrible wynges, and thy wycked fethers, & thy vngacious heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy wayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, whā she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope for the iudgement and mercy of hym that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

And it

Ad it happened when the Lyō spake these wordes vnto p̄ Agle, I sawe, & beholde, the head that afore had the vpperhand, appeared nomore: nether dyd p̄ foure wynges appeare any more, that came to him, and were let vp to raygne: and their kyngdome was small and full of vyroure. And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared nomore, and the whole body of the Agle was hēte, and the earth was in grete feare. The awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, & from grete feare, & sayde vnto my spere: Lo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou se-archest out p̄ wayes of the hyst: lo, yet am I weery in my mynde, & very weake in my spere, and lytle strenght is there in me, for p̄ grete feare p̄ I receaued this nyght. Therfore wyll I now beseeche the hyst, that he wyll cōfōrte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syght, and yf I am iustified with the be-fore many other, and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, cōfōrte me thē, and thewe me thy seruaunt the interpretacion and playne differēce of thys horrible syght, that thou mayest perfectly cōfōrte my soule: for thou hast iudged me woꝛthy, to shew me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacyon of thys syght. The Agle whom thou sawest come vp fro the see, is the kyngdome* which was sene in the visyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto p̄. Beholde, p̄ dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were before it. In p̄ same kyngdome shall. xii. kyn- ges raygne, one after another. For the secōde shall begynne to raygne, and shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: and thys do the twelue wynges signifye, which thou sawest. As for p̄ voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heades, but not from the body, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of p̄ kyngdome there shall arysse great stryppynge, and it shall stande in parcell of fallynge: neuertheles it shall not yet fall, but shall be let into his begynnynge. And p̄ cyght vnder wynges whych thou sawest hāge vnto the wynges of hym, be token, that in him there shall arysse cyght kynges, whose tyme shall be but small, and they peares swyft, & two of the shall beare. But when the myddest tyme cometh, there shall be foure kepte in the tyme, whē his tyme begynneth to come p̄ it maye be ended, but two shall be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heades cō-rynge, this is the interpretacyō: In his last shall the hyst rayse vp thre kyngdomes, &

call many agayne into thē, & they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, w̄ moch labour aboue all those that were before thē. Therfore are they cal- led p̄ heades of the Agle: for it is they that shall byynge forth hys wyckednes agayne, and that shall perforce and fynish his last. And where as p̄ sawest, that p̄ grete head appeared nomore, it signifyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet w̄ pay- ne, for the two that remaine, shall be slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of the one shall deuoure the other, but at p̄ last shall he fall thozow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as p̄ sawest two vnder wynges vpon the head that is on the ryght syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whom p̄ hyst hath kepte vnto the p̄ ende: thys is a small kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyō whō thou sawest rylinge vp out of p̄ woodd, and roarynge, and speakynge vnto the Agle, & rebukynge him for hys vnyghteous- nesse, is the wynde, which p̄ hyst hath kepte for them, & for they wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reynoue thē, and rēte them asunder before them. For he shall set the ly- ynge before the iudgement, and shall rebu- ke them: for the residue of my people shall be deliuer with trouble those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make thē ioy- full vntill the commynge of the daye of iud- gement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the frō the begynnynge. This is the dreame p̄ thou sawest, & thys is the interpretacyon. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the hyst.

Therfore write all these thynges p̄ thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde thē, and teach thē the wyse i the people, whose hertes thou knowest maye comprehend and kepe these secretes. But wayte p̄ here thy selfe yet se- uen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, whatlocuer it pleaseth the hyst to declare vnto the, and with that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the cytie, they gathered thē all together from the least vnto p̄ most, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offen- ded the? & what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and lyttest here in thys place? For of all people thou onely art left vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candell in a darcke place, & as an haue & ship preserued from the tēpest. Haue we not clā- aduersite ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene bzent wyth Syon? For we are not better, then they that dyed there: and they wepte w̄ loude voyce. Thē answered I them & sayd: Be of good cōfōrte O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for p̄ hyst hath you in you in remembraunce, and the myghtye hath not forgottē you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsake you, nether am I depa- red from you, but am come into thys place to praye, because of the mysery of Israell: p̄ I myght seke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sactuary. And now go youre waye home euery mā, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the cytie, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remained styll in the selde seuen dayes, as the Angell bad me, and dyd eate onely of the floures of the selde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Ad it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the cloudes therof. And I looked, & beholde, the mā was strong and increased wyth the cloudes of heauen. and whē he turned his countenaunce to con- sider, all the thynges trebled that were sene vnder hym: and whē the voyce went out of hys mouth, all they bzent that herde hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, & beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of mē out of nombze from the foure wyndes of the hea- uen, to fyghte agaynst the man, that came oute from the see. And I looked, and beholde he graued hym selfe a grete mountayne, & flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherout the hyst was gra- uen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they which ca- me to fyght agaynst him, were soze afrayed and yet durst they fight. Neuertheles, when he sawe the fearnesse and violence of the peo- ple, he nether lyft vp his hāde ner helde swer- de, ner eny weape: but onely (As I sawe) he sent out of hys mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of hys lyppes the wynde of the flamme: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes, & they were all myte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, and the grete storme, & fell with a rushe vpon the people, which was prepa- red to fyght and bzent them vp euerychoue: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothynge sene: but onely dust & smoke. When I saw this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hi: some were glad some were soꝛy, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I spch thozow grete feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wonders from the be- gynnynge, and hast counted me woꝛthy, that thou mightest receaue my prayer, thewe me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I confide in my vnderstandynge: Lo vnto thē that shall be left i those dayes ad moche more vnto thē that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heynnes.

Now vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which shall hap- pe vnto them, and to those that are not left behinde. Therfore are they come into great paretles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier, p̄ he which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe a- waye as a cloude out of p̄ world, & now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, & sayde. The in- terpretacion of the syght shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thynges p̄ thou hast required. For thou hast spoke of them that are left behynde, and thys is the inter- pretacion. He that taketh a waye the paretl in that tyme, hath kept him self. They that be fallen into harme, are soch as haue woꝛ- kes and sayth vnto p̄ hyst myghtie. Kno- we this therfore, that they which be left be- hynde are more blessed, thē they that be deyd. This is the meanynge of the vpsyde. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from p̄ depe of the see, the same is he whom God the hyst hath kepte a grete season, which by his awne selfe shall deliuer his creature, and he shall orde thē that are left behinde. And where as p̄ sawest, that oute of hys mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre & storme, and how that he lyft vp nether swerde nor weapen, but that the rusheynge in of him de- stroyed the whole multitude that came to fyght agaynst him: it signifyeth, that p̄ dayes come, whā God will deliuer them that are vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynde shall he come vpon them, that dwell in the earth. And one shall vnder take to fyght agaynst another, one cyte agaynst another, one place agaynst another* one people agaynst ano- ther, and one realme agaynst another. Whē this cometh to passe, thē shall the tokens come, that I shewed the before: and thē shall my sone be declared, whō thou sawest clime vp as a man. And when all the people bea- re hys voyce, euery man shall in their awne lande leaue the battayll that they haue one agaynst another, & an innumerable multi- tude shall be gathered together, as they that be wyllinge to come, & to ouercome him by fyghting. But he shall stāde vpo the toppe of the mount Syon. Neuerthelesse Syon shall come, and shall be shewed, beyng pre- pared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyst graue forth without any hā- des,

* Dan. vii. c.

Des. But my sonne shal rebuke the people þ are come, for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for they euell ymaginacions: and they paines wherwith they shalbe punyshed, are lyckened vnto the flamme: and with out any labour, shall he destroye the, euen by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto him: those are þ ten tribes which were caried awaye presoners out of their awne lande, * in the tyne of Oseas the kynge, whom Salmana-sar the kynge of Assyria toke prisoner, and carped them ouer the water, & so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them thys counsell, that they shulde leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to go forth into a farther countre, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe their statutes, which they neuer kepte in theyr awne lade. And so they entred in at the narrow passages of þ water of Euphrates, and God shewed tokens for them, * and helde still the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thozow þ countre there was a greete waye, namely of a peare and a halfe iourney, for the same regyon is called Assareth. The dwelt they there vnto þ latter tyme: and whē they come forth agayne, the hyest shall holde still the springes of the streame agayne, that they may go thozow, therfore sawest thou þ multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my bozder. Now whē he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal defende his people that remaine, and the shall he shew them greete wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lord, Lord, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the mā coming up from the depe of the see? And he sayd vnto me: Like as thou cast nether seke out nor knowe these thynges that are in the depe of the see, euen so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but i the tyme of the dape. Thys is the interpretacyon of the dreame whych þ sawest, therfore thou one-ly art here lyghtened: for thou hast forsake thyne atone lawe, and applyed thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyfe hast thou ordred in wyldome, & * hast called vnderstandyng thy mother and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyest. After the dapes I wyll shew the more, & talke with þ at more large, yee heup and won-derous thynges wyll I declare vnto the.

Then went I forth into the felde, geuyng mayle & thanks greatly vnto God, because of hys wonders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and soche as is in tyme, and there I satt the dapes.

The.iiii. Chapter.

God appeareth vnto Eldras in the bush, and sheweth hym what he shall do.

On the thyrdd dape I sat vnder an-oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, & sayde: Eldras, Eldras! And I sayde: here am I, Lord, and stode by vpon my fete.
Then spake he vnto me: * In the bush dyd I appare vnto Moses, & talked with hym whē my people serued i Egypte, and I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypte, and brought him vpon the mount Syon, where I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous woordes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded hym, saying: These wodes shalt thou declare, & not hyde them. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and þ interpretacyōs whych I haue shewed the: for þ shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned and remaine with my conseil, and with soch as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For þ wolde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begyne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of þ tenth parte: yet remaineth there þ which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, and reforme thy people: comforte soch of them as be i trouble: and tell now of the destruccio: let go from the mortall thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are most heup vnto the, and haste the to flye from these tymes: for soch euell and wyckednesse as thou hast now sene happē, shall they do yet moch worse. * For the weaker that the worlde ad the tyme is, the more shall synne and wickednesse increase in them that dwell vpon earth. For the trueth is fled farre awaye, & lesynge is hard at hande. For now hasteth the visio: to come that thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lord, I wyll go as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they that shall be borne after warde, who wyll exhorste or rebuke them? Thus the worlde is set in darcknes: & they that dwell therein, are without lyght: for thy lawe is kyndled, because no mā knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sēde the holy goost into me, and I shall wyte all that hath bene done in the worlde sens the begynnyng, which was wyitten in thy lawe, that me maye fynde the path, and that they which will lyue in þ latter dapes, maye lyue.

And he

And he answered me, sayinge: God thy waye, gather the people together, and save vnto them, that they seke þ not for fourtye dapes, but loke thou gather þ many bore-trees, & take with the Sarea, Dabzia, Selemia, Scanus and Asiel, these fyue, whych are ready to wyte swyftly, & come hyther, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstandyn-ge in thyne hert, which shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be perfourmed which thou shalt begynne to wyte. And the shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the per-fecte, and some thynges shalt thou shew secretly vnto the wyse. Tomorrow this houre shalt thou begynne to wyte.

Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together, and sayde: heare these wordes O Israel, oure fathers at þ begynnyng were stragers in Egypte, from whence they were de-liuered, & receaued the lawe of lyfe * which they kepte not, which ye also haue transgressed after them. Then wasthys lande & the lande of Syon parted amonge you by lott to possesse. But your fathers & ye your selues also haue done vnrpyghtousnes, and haue not kepte the wayes which the hyest commaunded you. And for so moch as he is a ryghteous iudge, he toke from you in tyme þ thyng þ he had geuen you. And now are ye here & poure brythren amonge you.
Therfore ys to be that ye wyll subdue your awne vnderstandyng, and reforme youre herte, ye shall be kepte alpye, & after death shall ye opteyne myrcy. For after death shall the iudgemēt come, when we shall ly-ue agayne: and then shall the names of the ryghteous be manifest, and the woordes of the vngodly shall be declared. Let no man therfore come now vnto me, ner aske eny questyon at me these fourtye dapes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he comaūded me) and we wente into the felde, & remayned there. The next dape a voyce called me sayinge: Eldras * open thy mouth, & dy-ncke þ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, & beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full as it were with water, but the coulor of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had droncken it, my hert had vnderstandyng, & wyldome grewe in my brest: for my spete was kepte in re-membraunce, and my mouth was opened and gave nomoze. The hyest gaue vnderstandyn-ge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thynges of þ nyght, which they vnder-stode not. But in the nyght they dyd cate bzed: as for me, I spake in the dape & helde not my tounge by nyght. In .xl. dapes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

And it happened when the fourtye dapes were fulfilled, that þ hyest spake, sayinge:

The fyrst that thou hast wytten, speake openly, þ the worthy & vntoworthy maye rede it. But kepe the .lxx. last, that thou mayest shew it onely to soch as be wyse amonge thy people. For in them is þ sprynge of vnderstandyng, the fountayne of wyldome, and the streame of knowledge. And I dyd so.

The.xv. Chapter.

The punishment that euell people shal haue, which God commaūdeth Eldras to shew vnto them.

Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecie, which I wyll put in thy mouth, sayeth the Lord: and cause the to be wytten in a letter, for it is the trueth. Feare not the ymaginacions agayn-st the, let not þ vnfaithfulness of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaithfull shall dye in theyr vnfaithfulness. Beholde sayeth the Lord, I wyll byynge plagis vpon the worlde, the swerde, hunger, death and destruccio, for wyckednes hath the vpper hand in all the earth, and theyr shamefull woordes are fulfilled.

Therfore sayeth the Lord: I wyll holde my tounge nomoze vnto theyr wyckednesse, whych they do so vngodly: nether wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they deale with all so wyckedly. Beholde * þ innocent bloud of the troubled cryeth vnto me, & the foules of the ryghteous complayne contynually: and therfore (sayeth þ Lord) I wyll surely auenge, & receaue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

* Beholde, my people, is led as a flock of shepe to be slayne, I wyll not suffre them now to dwell in Egypte, but wyll byynge them out with a myghty had & a stretched out arme, & smyte it with plagis as aforesaid and wyll destroye all þ lande of it. Egypte shall mourne, and the foundacyōs of it shal-be smytten with the plage and punyshment, that God shall byynge vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde, shall mour-ne: for theyr sedes shall be destroyed tho-row the blastynge and hayle, and an horrible starre. No worth the worlde and them that dwell therein, for the swerde and theyr destruccyon draweth nye, and one people shall stande by to fyght agaynst another, and swerdes in theyr hādes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do vyolence vnto other: they shall not regarde theyr kynge and prynces, the wayes of theyr doynges and handelynges in theyr power. A man shall desyre to go into the cyyte, and shall not be able. For because of theyr pryde the cyytes shalbe brought in feare, the houses shal shake, and men shalbe afrayed. A man shall

shall haue no ppyte vpon hys neyghbour, but one shall prouoke another vnto battayll to spoyle theyr goodes because of the hunger of bred, and because of the greate trouble.

Behold, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the vpyrling, from the South, from the East and Lybanus to turne vnto them, & restore the thynges þ they haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wyl I do also, & receyue them in theyr bolome. Thus sayeth the Lord God: my ryght hand shall not spare the synners, & my swerde shall not cease ouer them, that shed the innocēt blood vpon earth. The feare is gone out from hys wrath, & hath consumed the foundacyōs of þ earth, & the synners lyke the straw þ is kyndled. No worth them that synne, & kepe not my commaundementes, sayeth the Lord. I wyl not spare them, so poure wape þe chyldren from violence despye not my Sactuary: for the Lord knoweth all them that synne agaynst hym, & therefore depyured he them vnto death and destruction: for now are the plagēs come vpon þ worlde, & þe shall remayne in them. For God shall not depyure you, because þe haue synned agaynst hym.

Behold, an horrible vpsyon cometh from the East, where generacyōs of Dragons shall come out, and þ people of þ Arabes with many charettes, and þ multitude of them shall be as þ wynde vpon earth, that all they which heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, maye feare and be afrayed, and as the wynde bores oute of the wod, so shall they go out, and wth greate power shall they come, and stāde fygthynge wth them and shall waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remēbyng theyr byrth, and shall turne aboute swearyng together in greate power, to persecute them. But these shall be afrayed, & kepe spļce at theyr power and shall fle: and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shall beseege them, & consume one of them, & in theyr hoost shall be feare and drede, and stryfe amonge theyr kynges.

Behold cloudes from þ East, and from the North vnto the South, and they are very horrible to lōke vpon, full of wrath & storme. They shall smyte one vpon another, & they shall smyte at the greate starre vpon earth and theyr starre, and the bloude shall be from the swerde vnto the bely, and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shall be great fearfulness, & trembling vpon earth, and theyr þe the wrath, shall be afrayed, and a trembling shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate raptures from the South, & from the North, & parte from the West, and from the storm wynde from the East, & shall shut them vpon agayne and þ cloude whych he rapted vp in wrath, & the starres to cause feare toward the East & West wynde, shall be destroyed: & the greate cloudes shall be lyft vp, & the myghtye cloudes full of wrath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earth afrayed and them that dwell therein, & that they maye poure oute ouer all places an horrible starre, fyre and hayle, and spenge swordes, & many waters: that all felbes maye be full, and all ryuers, & they shall breake downe the ctytes and walles, mountaynes & hylles, all trees, wood, & the graffe of þ meadowes, & all theyr frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon, and make her afrayed, they shall come to her & beseege her: þ starre & all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the dust & smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewaile her: & they that remayne vnder her, shall do scrupce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia þ confortest thy selfe also vpon þ hope of Babylon, and art a wozypp of her personne: vnto the thou wretch, because þ hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast deckte thy daughters in whoredome, that they myght triumphe & please thy louers, whych haue all wape despyed to committe whoredome wth the: thou hast folowed the abhominable ctyte in all her workes and inuēcyōs.

Therefore sayeth God: I wyl sende plagēs vpon þ, wyddowhede, pouerte, hunger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruction, & death, and the glorie of thy power shall be dyed vp as a floure, when the heate ryleth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be lyke as a poore wyfe þ is plagued & beaten of women: so that the myghtie and loue shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I so hate þ sayeth þ Lord? If thou haddest not all wape slayne my chosen, exaltinge þ stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer theyr death, when þ wast dyckken: sett forth the betwte of thy countenance.

The reward of thy whoredome shall be recompensed the in thy bolome, therefore shalt thou receaue rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth þ Lord) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall depyure þ into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of hōger, and thou shalt fall thorow the swerde. Thy ctytes shall be broken downe, & all thyne shall perishe wth the swerde in the feld. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, and eate their awne flesh, & drinke their awne blood for very hōger of bred and theyr of water. Thou

Thou unhappie shalt come thorow the see, and receaue plagēs agayne.

In the passage they shall cast downe the slayne ctyte, and shall rote out one parte of thy lande, and consume the porcyon of glorie. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be thy fyre, and shall consume the: thy ctytes and thy lāde, thy wood and thy frutefull trees shall they burne vpon wth the fyre. Thy chyldren shall they carry awaye captiue, and loke what thou hast, they shall spoyle it, and marre the betwte of thy face.

The xvi. Chapter.

The heathen shall be punished.

Whe vnto the Babylon & Asia, woe vnto the Egypt and Syria: gyde þe selues with clothes of sack & hearre, and mourne poure chyldren, be soze, for þe destruccyon is at hand. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it back? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, & who wyl quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, and what is he that wyl dyue them awaye? Maye eny man dyue awaye an hongrie lyon in the wod? Or maye eny man quench the fyre in stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arrowe, that is shot of a strōg archer. The myghtye Lord sendeth þ plagēs, & what is he þ wyl dyue the awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in his wrath, & what is he that wyl quench it? he shall cast lyghtninges, and who shall not feare? he shall thunder, & who shall not be afrayed? The Lord shall threaten, & who shall not vterly be beaten to poulder at his presence? The earth quake, & the foundations therof: the see aryleth vp with waues from the depe, and the floudes of it are vniquite & the fshes therof also before the Lord, and before the glorie of his power. For stronge is his ryght hand that holdeth þ bowe, his arrowes that he shoteth, are warpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

Behold, the plagēs are sent, & shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, & shall not be put out tyll it consume þ foundacyōs of þ earth. Lyke as an arrowe which is shot of a myghtye archer, returneth not backward: euen so the plagēs þ shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Who is me, who is me, who wyl deliuer me in those dayes? The beginninge of sorowes & greate mourninge: the beginninge of dardh and greate death, the beginninge of warres, and þ powers shall stand in feare: the beginninge of euels, and they shall tremble euery one. What shall

I do in these thynges, when þ plagēs come? Beholde, hōger & plage, trouble & angursh are sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shall not turne fro their wyckednesse, ner be all wape mynde-full of the scourges.

Beholde, vitayles shall be so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thinke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall myschefe growe vpon earth, warres, dardh and greate disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perishe of hōger, and þ other that escape the hunger, shall the swerde destroye: & the deed shall be cast oute as donge, & there shall be no man to conforthe them. For the earth shall be wasted, and þ ctytes shall be cast downe: there shall be no man left to tyll the earth & to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall plucke them of & gather them? The grapes shall be rype, & who shall treade them? For all places shall be desolate of men, so þ one man shall despye to se another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole ctyte there shall be ten left, and two in the feld, which shall hyde them selues in the thynke bushes, and in þ clyffes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon þ olyue tre, or as whē a vineyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligently sought thorow the vineyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or foure left, for them þ search their houses with the swerde. And the earth shall be left waste, and þ felbes therof shall ware olde: and her wapes and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no man shall trauallye there thorow. The daughters shall mourne, hauing no bydegromes: the women make lamentacyon, hauing no husbandes, their daughters shall mourne, hauing no helpe of their bydegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and their husbandes shall perishe of hōger. O ye seruantes of the Lord, heare thesē thynges, and marke them. Beholde, þ worde of the Lord, & receaue it: beholde, the plagēs drawne, & are not slack in tariēge. Lyke as a traualyng woman, which after þ. ix. moneth bringeth forth a sonne, when þ houre of the byrth is come, an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chyld cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twyckling of an eye. Euen so shall not the plagēs be slack to come vpon earth, and the worlde shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you redy to the battayll: and in all euell be euen as pylgryms vpon earth. * he that selleth, lett hym be as he that buyeth his wape: and he that buyeth as one that will lese. Whoso occupieth marchaundies, as he that bynneth not: & he that byldeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: he þoweth, as one that shall not reape: he þoweth the vyneyard, as he þall not gather the grapes: they that mary, as they þall get no chyldren:

and they that mary not, as the wyddowes: and therfore * they that labour, labour in vayne. For straungers shall reape theyr fru-tes, & spoyl their goodes, ouerthow the their houses, & take their chyldren captiue, for in captiuite & hunger shall they get chyldren.
And they that occupie theyr marchaundies with robbery, how longe deke they theyr cyties, theyr houses, theyr possessions, & personnes: þ more wyll I punyssh the for theyr synnes, sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whoze enureth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte, when she delecteth her selfe, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that defendeth, which shall make iniquity on for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye lyke therunto, ner to the worckes therof: for oʒ euer it be lōge, iniqui-te shall be taken awaye out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall raygne amonge you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpo his head, which sayeth before þ Lord God and his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all þ worckes of men, theyr pynagacions, theyr thoughtes and theyr hertes. * For he spake but þ worde: lett the earth be made, and it was made: lett þ heauen be made, and it was made. In his wo-de were the starres made, & he knoweth the nōbre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteyneth.
He hath shut þ see in þ myddest of þ waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon þ waters. He spiedeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpon þ waters hath he founded it. In þ deserte & drye wyldernes hath he made springes of water, and poles vpon the toppes of þ mountaynes, that þ floudes myght poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, and gaue hym byeth, lyfe and vnderstādyng, yee and the spete of þ Almyghty God, which made all thynges, and hath searched þ ground of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth poure pynagacions & in-uencyōs, and what ye thynke when ye syn-ne, and wolde hyde poure synnes. Therfore hath the Lord searched and sought out all poure worckes, & he shall be wyse you all.
And when poure synnes are brought forth, ye shall be ashamed before me, & poure awne synnes shall be poure accusers in that daye.
What wyll ye do? O how wyll yee hyde poure synnes before God and his Angells?
Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue off from poure synnes, and forget poure vnyghteousnes, & medle nomoze with the: so shall God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multytude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, & fede þ pble with foles: & they that consent vnto them, shall be had in dyspōn laughed to scoone, & troden vnder fote.

For vnto the places there shall be a place, & and in the next cyties a greete insurreccyon vpon those that feare þ Lord. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyl and waste soch as feare the Lord, theyr goodes shall they take fro the, and shutte them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowne who are my chōse, & they shall be tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my belouch, sayth þ Lord: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hāde, but I wyll deliuer you from þ same. Be not ye afayced dispayre not, for God is poure captayne.

Whoso kepeth my commaundementes and pceptes (sayeth the Lord God) lett not poure synnes wepe you downe, and lett not poure vnyghteousnesse be lyft vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes, and tangled in theyr wyckednesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in with bus-shes, and the path therof couered with thornes, þ no man maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre,
and byent.

The ende of the.iiii.
booke of Esdras.

The booke of Tobias,

The fyrst Chapter.

Tobias byng taken prysoner, forsaketh not the lawe of trouth. The mercy and charite of Tobias and the maners of hym in hys yowthe. He taketh Mar-nah to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He succoureth Gabell with money. Hea his are fayne to fyre, but after the deeth of Sennacherib they retourne agayne.

Tobias was of the trybe and cy-tie of Nephtali, which lyeth in þ hye countrees of Galile aboue Naalon the waye towarde the West, haupnge þ cytie of Sephet vpon the left syde.

Though he was taken prysoner in the dayes of Salmanasar kyng of þ Assyriās heuertheles beyng in captiuite, he forsoke not the waye of trouth: In so moch þ what soeuer he myght get, he parted it daylie w his felow prysoners & byethren, that were of his kynred. And though he were ponger then all in þ trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe chyldishly in hys workes. And when all the other wente to the golden calves, whych Jeroboam the kyng of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all theyr companies, and gat him to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lord, and there worshypped the Lord God of Israel, saythfully offerynge of all his fyrst frutes & ty-thes, so that in þ thyrde yere he mynstred all the thytes vnto the straungers and con-uerter. These and soch lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordyng to þ lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke oute of his awne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whom he called after his awne name, and taught hym from hys youth vp, to feare God, & to refrayne from all synne.

Now when he with hys wyfe, hys sonne and with all his kynred was come in capti-uite vnto the cytie of Ninue, what tyme as they all dyd eate of the meates of the heathen, he kepeth his soule, and was neuer despyled in theyr meates. And for so moch as he was myndfull of the Lord in all his hert, God gaue hym fauoure in the syght of Sal-manasar þ kyng, which gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do what soeuer hym lyst.

So wente Tobias vnto all them þ were in prysen, and comforted them, & gaue them whollome exortacions. And when he came to Ragas a cytie of the Medes, haupng ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges where w þ kyng had honoured hym) & saue among a greete company of people of hys kynred, one Gabelus (which was of hys awne try-be) beyng in necessite, he gaue hym the sayd weyght of syluer vnder an hād wyptynge.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kyng was deed, and Sennacherib hys sonne repgned in his steade, which hated the chyldren of Israel. Tobias wēt daylie tho-row out all his kynred, and comforted them, & gaue of hys goodes to euery one of them, as moch as he myght: he fed the hōgre, clothed the naked, and buried þ deed and flayne, and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kyng came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punysshed hym for hys blasphemie) and in hys wrath slew many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was tolde the kyng, he comaunded to slaye him, & toke awaye all his goodes.
Heuertheles, Tobias with his sonne and w his wyfe fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after .xlv. dayes þ kyng was slayne of his awne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restored vnto hym.

The.ii. Chapter.

Tobias byrdeth soche of his sepulchres as feare God, to a banquet of feast. He is reproued of his frendes.
He searcheth God moare then the kyng. He becommeth blynde by the peryng wynde and substance of God. Hys kynfolkes mocke hym.

After these thynges vpon a solcymne daye of þ Lord Tobias made a good feast in his house, and sayde vnto his sonne: Soo thy wyfe & byng byther some of oure tribe, soch as feare god, & they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father that one of þ chyldren of Israel laye slayne vpo the strete. And immediatly he leapte from his table, left the feast, came fastynge to the deed coarfe, toke hym and bare him pruely in to his house, that when the Sunne was downe, he myght safely burye hym. And when he had hyd the coarfe, he dyd eate hys meate with mourninge & feare, remēbyng the wordes, that the Lord sayeth by þ prophet Amos: poure hys feastes shall be turned to sorowe and heynnes.

But when þ Sunne was downe, he wēt his wyfe & buried hym. Then all his neygh-bours reproued hym, saying: It is not lōge, sens it was comaunded to slaye the because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buryest thou the deed agayne? Heuertheles, Tobias fearige God moare then þ kyng, toke the bodies of the flayne, and hyd them in his house, & buried them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buryed þ deed, and was wery, cam home, and layed hym downe by the wall & slepte. And Eccl. iii. while

Whyle he was asleepe, there fell downe vpon hys eyes warme donge out of the swaloes nest, so that he was blynde. This tempta-cion dyd God suffer to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his pacifce, lyke as of holy Job.
For in so moch as he euer feared God from his youth vp, & kepte his comaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that p plage of blyndnes chaused vnto hym, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thakied God all the dayes of his lyfe.

For lyke as blessed Job was had in derision of kynge, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynfolkes, which sayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, for the which p hast done allmes & buryed p deede?
But Tobias rebuked them, & spake: Hane not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shall geue vnto them, p neuer turne they beleue from him. Anna his wyfe wente daylye to the weeuinge worcke: & loke what lpyunge she coude get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened p she toke a lye, and brought it home.

And when her husbände herde it crye, he sayd: loke p it be not stolen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to cate or to touch eny thyng of theft. The was hys wyfe angrie, & sayde: Now is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy allmes deedes are manifest. With these & loch lyke wordes dyd she cast him in the tethe.

The.iii. Chapter.

The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Raguel is slaundered of her fathers seruantes. The prayer and fastyng of Sara. And also the innocency and chastite of her. The prayres of Tobias and of Sara are hearde.

When Tobias toke it henely, and with teares beganne to make hys prayer sayinge: O Lorde thou art ryghte-ous, and all thy iudgements are true, pee all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgement. And now O Lorde be myndefull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, nether remembre my mysdoedes, nether the mysdoedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy commaunde-mentes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captiuyte, into death, into derisyon and shame vnto all nacys, among whom thou hast scatred vs. And now O Lorde, thy iudgements are great, for we haue not done accordeyng to thy comaundementes, nether haue we walched innocently befoze the. And now O Lorde, deale with me accordeyng to thy wyll, and commaunde my spere to be receaued in peace, for moze expedient were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At p same tyme it happened, that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Rages a cytie of the Medes was slaundered of one of her fathers handmaydes, namely, that she shulde haue had seuen husbandes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Therfore, when she reproued p mayden for her faute, she answered her, saye: Godlett vs neuer se sonne ner daughter of p moze vpon earth thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt p slay me also, as p hast slayne seuen men? At this woyce wente Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether ate ner dracke, but continued i prayer and besought God with teares, p he wolde delyuer her from thys rebuke.

Vpon p thyrde daye it chaunced, p when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayled p Lorde saye: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers, which when p art wroth, shewest mercy, & in tyme of trouble p forgeuest p synnes of them, p call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyft I vprync eyes. I beseeche p O Lorde, lose me out of the bondes of thys rebuke, or els take me utterly awaye from of the earth.
Thou knowest Lorde, p I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane fro all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte company with those p passe they tyme in sport, nether haue I made my self parta-ker w them p walche in lpyght behauour.
Neuertheles an husbād haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture ether I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for p happily haue kepte me to another husbād. For why? thy counsell is not in p power of man. But whosoever loueth the and serueth the a ryght, is sure of thys, that p hys lyfe be tempted & proued, it sta-deth in p trieng, and p he endure in pacifce he shall haue a rewarde, and be hylpe crowned: and p he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shall delyuer hym: and p hys lyfe be in chastityng, p he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dāpna-cion: and why? after a stozme thou makest the wether fayre & still: after wepyng & he-uynes thou geuest greate ioye. Thy name O God of Israel, be prayled for euer. At p same tyme were both they prayers hearde in the lpyght of p magesty of p hyst God.
And Raphael p holy Angell of the Lord was sent to helpe the both, whose prayers came at one tyme toget her befoze God.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Tobias thynkyng to dye geueth a goodly exhortacion and monycon to hys sonne.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias and sayde vnto him: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundacion. When God taketh awaye my soule, burye p my body, & holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For p oughrest to remember, what and how greate pails she suffered for p in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfilled p tyme of her lyfe, burye her beyside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, & beware, lest at eny tyme thou consent vnto synne, & lest p lett slpye the comaundementes of the Lord oure God.

Geue allmes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned awaye fro the. Be mercifull after thy power. If thou hast moch, geue plenteously: p thou hast litle, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of p litle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the daye of necessite. For mercy delyuereth fro all syn-ne and from death, and suffereth not the soule to come in darkenes. A greate conforte is mercy befoze the hye God, vnto all them that shew it.

My sonne, kepe the well from all who-dome, and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faute be knowne of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde ner in thy woorde, for in pyrde beganne all destruccyon.

Whosoever worketh eny thyng for the, immediatly geue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruantes wagies remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng p thou wol-dest not another man shulde do vnto p. E-ate thy bred with the hongrie and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon p buriall of the ryghteous, and do not thou eate & dryncke therof with the synners. Aske euer counsell at the wyse.

We allwaye thanckfull vnto God, and beseeche hym, that he wyll orde thy wayes, and that what soeuer thou deuylest or ta-kest in hāde, it maye remayne in him. I certyfy the also my sonne, that (when p wast yet, but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytie of p Medes, & his hand wyrtunge haue I by me.
And therfore seke some meanes, how thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer, & geue hym his band wyrtunge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayed: truely it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, p we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well.

The.v. Chapter.

The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, which is sent in to Rages. An Angell accompanieth with hym in hys journey.

Then answered Tobias his father, & sayde: father, all that thou hast commaunded me, wyl I do, and that diligently. But how I shall require this money I can not tell: Nether doth he know me, ner I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thyther, I neuer knewett. Then hys father answered hym, and sayde: I haue hys bād wyrtunge by me which when thou shewest hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But goo thy waye now, and get p some faythfull man to goo with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lpyunge. Then went Tobias out, & vpon the strete he foun-de a fayre poge man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take hys iour-ney. And he knewe not that it was an angell of God, but saluted hym, and sayde: From whence art thou, p good poge man?
He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest p the waye, that ledeth vnto p countre of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged w oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a cytie of the Medes, which lyeth vpon the moūte Egbarhanis.
Tobias sayd vnto him: I praye p, tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thyn-ges. Then wēt Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At p which his father marueled, & prayed, that he wolde come in vnto him.

Now when the angell came in, he saluted him, and sayd: Ioye be with the for euer moze. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye can I haue that syt here in darknes, and se not the lpyght of heauen? The ponge man sayde vnto him: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: Canst thou byrnye my sonne to Gabelus, vnto p cytie of Rages in Medea? And whe thou comest agayne, I shall paye p thy hyre. And the Angell sayd vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne, and bringe him to p agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what trybe art thou? The Angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: Askst thou after the kynred of an hyrlyng, or sekest p a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make p not ca-refull, I am Azarias the sonne of great hananius. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a greate kynred: but I praye p, be not displeased, that I desyred to know thy kynred. The Angell sayd vnto him: thy sonne shall I leade forth safely, and byrnye him whole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias, and sayde: Well, go on your waye, & God be in your iourney, and his Angell beare you company. So when they had prepared all thynges, that they wolde take with them in their iourney: Tobias had his father & his mother fare well, and they went on their waye both together. Now when they were gone: his mother beganne to wepe, & sayde: The staffe of our age hath thou taken awaye and sent hym from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with our pouerte, thys had bene greates riches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: Wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Angell of God shall beare hym company, & orde well all the thynges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with lope. At these wordes his mother left of fro wepyng, and helde her tongue.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

¶ Young Tobias is deliuered from the fythe, by the Angell. The Angell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

Tobias wote on his waye, and a dogge folowed hym, and by fyft nyght they abode by the water of Egrus. Then wote he out to wash his fete, & beholde, there came forth an horrible fythe to deuoure hym. Of whome Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: Lorde, he cometh vpon me. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and draw him to the. And he dyd so, and drew him vpon the lande. And the fythe beganne to leape at his fete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto him: take out the boweles of thys fythe, and as for the herte, the gall & the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medycyne. Tobias dyd so, & rosted the fythe, and they toke him with them in their iourney: & prayd they salted, as moch as was sufficient for them, tyll they came to Raguel a cytie of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Angell, & sayde vnto him: I praye thy brother Azaria, tell me, wher to are these thynges good of? & fythe & thou hast bydden me kepe.

The Angell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the hert vpon a coales, the smoke therof dyspuech awaye all manner of euell sprytes, whether it be fro man or from woman, so that from thence forth the same shall come nomore vnto the. The gall is good to anoynte eyes to styke & eyes wythall, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shalbe whole.

And Tobias sayd vnto him: wher to wilt thou & we remaine? The Angell answered & sayd: here is a nye kynsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, and hath nether sonne nor daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, & thou must marry her, & therfore desyre her of her father, & he shall geue her to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstode, she hath bene married vnto seven husbandes, & they all are deed; and I haue herdesaye, that she deuell slewe them. I am afrayed therfore, lest such thynges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seyng I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shoulde byngge the in thy age with sorowe to thy graues.

Then sayde the Angell Raphael vnto him: heare me, & I will tell thee what they be, of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they preceue marriage of such a fashion, & they shut God out fro them & from thy hert, & geue them selues to thyne auncle lust, such as it were an horse & mule, which haue no vnderstandinge: vpon such hath the deuell power. But when thou takest her, & art come in to the chamber, withholde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy diligēce vnto no thyng but vnto prayer with her.

And in the fyft nyght, roste the leuer of the fythe, and the deuell shalbe dyspuech awaye. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarches. The thyrde nyght shalt thou opteyne the blessing of God so that whole chyldren shalbe borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take a mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleschly lust: & in the seche of Abraham thou mayest optayne the blessing in chyldren.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

¶ Young Tobias and the Angell come to the house of Raguel. He requyeth Raguels daughter to wyfe and obteyneth her.

Then wote they to Raguel, which receaued the ioyfully. And when Raguel looked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyketh this younge man vnto my sisters sonne? And when he had spoken this, he sayde: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the trybe of Nephtaly, out of the captiuitie of Babilone. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde: yee, we knowe hym well. And when he had spoken moch good of hym, the Angell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou askest, is thys younge mans father. Then Raguel bowed hym selfe downe, and wepte, toke hym aboute the neck, and kyssed hym, and sayde: Gods blessinge haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good good verteous man. And Anna his wyfe & Sara his daughter wepte also.

Now whē they had talked together, Raguel bad hym a wether, ad to make a feast. And when he prayed them to syt downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyl nether eate nor dynche here thys daye, excepte thou fyrt graunte me my peticion, & promise me to geue thy daughter Sara. Whē Raguel herde this he was astonnyed, for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seven mē, that wente in vnto her: and he beganne to feare, that it shuld chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doute, and gaue the younge man no answer, the aungell laide vnto him: feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, beloggeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, & this daughter of myne myght be married in her auncle kynred, accordyng to the lawe of Moses. And now doute thou not, but I wyl geue her vnto the: So he toke the ryght hande of his daughter, and gaue her into the ryght hand of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfyll hym blessing in you. And they toke a letter, and made a wytyng of the mariage. And thē made they mery, ad prayd God. And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: We of good cheare my daughter, & Lorde of heauen geue the ioye, for the hennies that thou hast lustred.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

¶ The Angell byndeth the deuell. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to praye, and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

Now after that they had supped they brought the yonge mā into her. The thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fythe, and layed it vpon the hote coales. So the aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuell, ad sent hym awaye and bounde hym in the wyldernes of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgyn, and sayde: Up Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to daye, to morow, ad quermorrow: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconyle our selues wyth God: and what the thyrde holy night is past, we shall ioyne together in the dutye of marriage. For we are the chyldren of holy men, and we maye not come together as the heathen that knowe not God.

Then stode they by both together, and besought God earnestly, that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of our fathers, prayd he thou of heauen and earth, of the see, welles ad floudes, ad of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the * mouldie of the earth, ad gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lorde thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnes, & I take this syfter of mine to wyfe, but only for the loue of chyldren, in whō thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde together to a good age.

And aboute the cock crowyng, it happened, that Raguel called his seruantes, ad they wente with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced now vnto hym peradventure, as it did vnto the other seven mē, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deed, that I maye burye him afore it be lyght daye. So she set a mayden to se, which when she came into the chamber, founde them whole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came agayne, and brought good tydinges. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe prayd the Lorde and sayd: Prayd be thou, O Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully wyth vs, and put awaye fro vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto vnder two beloned. O Lorde, cause the to magnifye the more perfectly, ad to offere the sacrifice of thy prayse, ad of thy helth: that all people maye knowe, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruantes, to fyll the graue, that they had made, wyth earth, afore it was lyght, and bad his wyfe prepare a feast, ad to make readye all thynges that were necessary for meate, to loche as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, & foure wethers to be slayne, and meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias, to remaine with him two weekes. As for al the good that he had gaue Tobias the halfe of it, ad made this wytyng, that the halfe which remayned, shuld fall vnto Tobias after they death.

¶ The ix. Chapter.

¶ The Angell goeth to Sabelids, at the desyre of Tobias: which deliuereth the letter, and receaueth the money.

¶ The Angell

Athen Tobias called vnto hym p Angell, whom he thought to haue bene a mall, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the herken vnto my wordes: If I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruauit, I shall not deserue thy prouidence. Neuerthelesse I beseeche the, that thou wylt take the bestes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in rages the cyte of Medes, and deliuer him his hand wytyng, and receaue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my marpage. For I knowest thy selfe, that my father doth not reuerence the dayes: and if I tarye one daye to long, he wyl be sorry in his mind. Now leist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot saye hym nay.

Then toke Raphaell foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two Camels, and wete vnto Rages the cyte of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wytyng, & receaued all the money. He tolde him also of Tobias the sonne of Tobit, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come to hym to the marriage. Now when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sytting at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayed God, and sayde: the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a ryght vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe, and your elders, that ye maye se your chyldren and your chylders chyldren, vnto the thyrde and fourth generation, and your seide be blessed of the God of Israel, whych requyeth woelde without ende. And when they all had sayd Ameen, they went to feaste, but with the feare of the Lord held they the feast of the marriage.

The .x. Chapter.

Tobias & his wyfe are sadde for the taryance of their sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias wth his wyfe.

Now whyle ponge Tobias made longe taryeng, by reason of p marriage, hys father was full of care and heynnes, and thought: what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so long? Or why shuld he be kepte so long there? Peradventure Gabelus is deed, and no man wyl geue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna his wyfe with hym, and beganne to wepe both together, because they sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for hys mother, she wepte wth discomfortable teares, and sayd: What is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye in to a straunge countre, p light of our eyes, thou staff of oure age, thou comforte of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seyng all the thynges p we haue are only in the, we shuld not haue sent the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tounge, and be not discomforted, our sonne is whole and solide: the man that we sent hym wythall, is saythfull pough. Neuerthelesse, he might in no wyse be comforted: but daylye went out, looked aboute, and went about all the stretes, wherby he thought he shulde come agayne: that (yf it were possible) he myght se hym commynge a farre of.

But Raguell sayde vnto hys sonne in lawe: O tarye here, and I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel him that thou art in good health. Tobias sayde vnto him: I am sure, that my father & my mother counte every daye, and that they hertes are sorow.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, and wolde in no wyse heare hym, he deliuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe part of all his good: in seruauntes and handmaydens, in shepe, in Camels, and in hyne and moch money, & so sent him awaye from hym with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy angell of the Lord be with you in your iourney, and byngge you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case wth your elders, & that myne eyes maye se your chyldren afore I dye. So the elders embraced they daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortinge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbunde, to rule well her houtholde, to kepe her house in good ordre, and to shewe her selfe faultlesse.

The .xi. Chapter.

Ponge Tobias leuynghys wyfe and houtholde in the mydder waye, comyngh before with the Angell. The dreame of his mother lokyngh after her sonne. He is fully receaued of hys father and mother. Sara cometh seuen dayes after.

As they now were going home warde agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninue. And the Angell sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therefore yf it please the, we two wyl go before, and let the houtholde with thy wyfe and the catel come soft and sayly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shuld go before, Raphaell sayde vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fysh with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they went their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence she myght se farre aboute her. And whyle she was waytyng there there for his commyngh, she looked a farre of: and anon she perceaued her sonne comyngh, and ranne and tolde her husbunde, sayinge: Behold, thy sonne cometh. And Raphaell sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest into the house, immediatly worshippe the Lord thy God, and geue thanks vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kysse hym: & drype his eyes ouer with the gal of the fysh that thou hast brought with p. For be sure, that his eyes shal straght waye be opened, and thy father shal se the lyght of heauen, & shal reioyse at the sight of p. The dogge that had ben with the in they iourney, ranne before, and came as a messenger, & wagged with his taylor for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne, and stombled with hys fete, & gaue a seruauit hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed him, he and his wyfe, and they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshypped & thanked God, they satt downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gall, and anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed half an houre, & then beganne the blemish to go out of hys eyes, lyke as it had bene the whyte skynne of an egge: whiche Tobias toke and dreyne from hys eyes, and immediatly he receaued hys syght.

Then they prayesed God, he and his wyfe, and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thanks, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also whole & sounde with al the houtholde and catel, with camels and moche moneye of his wyues, and wth the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde hys father and his mother al p benefytes, whiche God had done for hym, by the man that led hym. Achfor also and Nabath Tobias sister sones came, & were glad and reioysed with hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merry, and wereright ioyfull euerychone.

The .xii. Chapter.

Ponge Tobias reckened by vnto his father the pleasures that the angell dyd hym. He offered vnto the angell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

Athen Tobias called hys sonne vnto hym, and sayd: What maye we geue this holy man, that went wth the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: Father, what rewarde shall we geue hym? Or what thyng can deserue hys benefytes? he hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the money fro Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue p cruel spete from her, he hath bene an occasyon of gladnesse to her father & mother: he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of p fythe, he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, yee we all haue receaued great good of him. How shulde we worthelely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylt deliuer hym, yf happily he wyl vouch safe, to take wth hym p halfe of all that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, & toke hym asyde, and beganne to praye hym, p he wolde be content to take in good worth, the halfe parte of al that they had brought. Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Prayse ye the God of heauen, and geue thanks vnto hym before all men pynge, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde p kinges secretes, but to shewe to prayse the workes of God, it is an honorable thing. Prayer is good with fastinge, & mercy is better, then to hoorde up treasures of golde. For mercy deliuereth fro death, clengeth synne, and causeth to fynde cuerlasting lyfe. But they p do sinne and vnryghteuousnes, are the enemyes of they awne soule.

Wherfore I tell you the trueth, and will hyde nothyng from you. When thou prayest with teares, and buryest the dred, and ledest thy dyner, and byddest the deed in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myghtest burye them in the nyght, I offered thy prayer before the Lord. And because thou wast accept and beloued of God, it was necessary, that tentacyon shulde trye the. And now hath the Lord sent me to heale the, and to deliuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euell spete. For I am Raphaell an Angell one of the seuen that stande before God.

When they hearde this, they were sore afrayed, and trembled, and fell downe vpon they faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Angell: Peace be wth you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wth you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayse and thanks vnto hym.

You thought that I dyd cate and dryne: he with you, but I vse meat that is multiplyble, and drynke that cannot be sene of men.

Now therefore is the tyme that I must turne agayne, vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his wonderful workes.

And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye out of they syght, so that they sawe hym no more. Then fell they downe flat vpon they faces by the space of thre houres, and prayesed God: when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderful workes.

The .xiii. Chapter.

Tobias the eldre geueth thanks vnto God.

Then

When olde Tobias opened his mouth and prayd the Lord, & sayd: Great art thou O Lord for evermore, and thy kyngdome wolde withoute ende: for thou scourgest and healest: thou leddest vnto hell, and byngest out agayne, and there is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the Lord, ye chyldre of Israel, and prayse hym in the syght of hea-then. For amonge the heathen which knowe hym not hath he scattered you, to thynke ye shuld shewe forth his maruelous workes: and cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghty but he. He hath chastened vs for our mysdoes, and for his awne mercy sake shall he saue vs.

Consydre then, howe he hath dealt with you, and prayse him with feare and drede, & magnifye the cuerlastyng kyng in youre workes. I wyll prayse him euē in the land of my captiuite, for he hath shewed his maiestye vnto a synful people. Turne you therefore O ye synners, and do ryghteousnes before God, and be ye sure, that he wyll shewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, and my soule, we will reioyce in God. O prayse ye Lord al ye his chosen, holde ye dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem cytie of God, the Lord hath punyshed ye for the workes of thine awne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good thynge, and geue thanckes to the cuerlastyng God, that he may buyld vp his tabernacle agayne in the, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all soch as be in captiuite, and that thou mayest haue ioye for evermore. With a sayre light shalt thou shyne, and all the endes of the world shall honoure the. The people shall come vnto ye fro farre, they shall byng gyftes, and worshyp the Lord in the, and thy lande shall they haue for a Sanctuary, for they shall call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blasphem the, shall be condemned: but blessed shall they be that buyld the vp. As for the, thou shalt reioyce in thy chyldre for they all shall be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all that loue the, and that be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the Lord, O my soule, for the Lord our God hath deliuered his cytie Jerusalem from all her troubles. I will count my self happy, yf my sede remaine to se the cleames of Jerusalem.

The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Sapphyre and Smaragde, and all the copasse of her walles with picepous stones. All her stretes shall be paved with white marble stone, and in all stretes shall Alleluya be songe. Praysed be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdom maye be vpon her for evermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

The .xliii. Chapter.

Tobias prophesyeth the destruction of Ninue, his soune returned to Raguel, after the death of his father and mother.

After that Tobias had gottē his sight agayne, he lyued .xlii. yeares, & sawe his childers chylde. Now when he was .C. and .ii. yeares olde, he dyed: & was buried honorably in Ninue. For when he was sixe and fyfye yeares of age he lost the sight of his eyes, and when he was thre score yeares olde, he gat his sight agayne. The residue of his lyfe led he in ioye, and increased wel in the feare of God, & departed in peace.

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his soune Tobias, and seuen yonge springaldes his sonnes chylde, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Ninue is at hand, for ye worde of the Lord cannot faile, and our brethren that are scattered out of the lande of Israel, shall come thither agayne. And the whole land of it ye hath bene wast, shall be fylled: and the house of God that was burnt in it, shall be buylded agayne: & al soch as feare God, shall returne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their Idols, & come to Jerusalem, and dwell there, and al the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, and worshyp the Lord God of Israel.

And therefore my chylde, heare your father: Serue the Lord in the truely, seke after his wil, and do the thynges that please hym. Comaunde your chylde that they do right, geue almes, be myndeful of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truely and with all theyr power. Heare me now therefore my chylde, and abyde not here: but in what daye soeuer ye haue buried your mother belyde me, get you from hence. For I fe, that the wyckednesse of it shall byng it to destruction and ende.

After the death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye fro Ninue, with his wyfe and chylde, and with his childers chylde, and came agayne to his father and mother in lawe, and founde them whole and in a good age, and toke the care of them. And he closed their eyes, and was heyre vnto al Raguel's goodes, and sawe the fyfth generacion, and his childers chylde. And when he was .xcix. yeares of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lord, and his kynfolkes buried him. And al his posterite continued in good lyfe, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted both of God and men, and of all the people of the lande.

The booke of Judith.

The fyrst Chapter.

The buyldyng of Egbathanis. The byldyng of Nabuchodonosor agaynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are despyed.

Arpharat the kyng of Mesopotamia subdued many people vnto his domynion, & buylded a noble stronge cite which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of free stone, four squared, seuen cubytes hye and thre cubytes brode. He made towres there vpon an hundreth cubytes hye. But vpon the four corners euery side was twenty forte brode. He made the portes in the hyegth, lyke as the towres. This kyng trusted in his myghty host, and in his glorious charrettes. So in the twelfth yeaer of his raygne it happned, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians (which raygned in the great citie of Ninue) fought agaynst Arpharat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Ragau, besyde Euphrates and Tigris and Tadason in the felde of Crioth the kyng of the Elykes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyft vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the heathen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to soch as dwelt in Galile in the great felde of Eldelon, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Jerusalem and the whole lade of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consent wolde not agree vnto him, & sent the messengers agayne empty, and put the awaye without honour. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indignacion at all those landes, and swore by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countrees.

The .ii. Chapter.

Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the world. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

In the thirtenth yeaer of kyng Nabuchodonosor, vpon the .xii. daye of the fyrst moneth, it was deuysed in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defende hym selfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, all his captaynes, and men of warre, and shewed them his secret counsell, and tolde the that his purpose was to byng the whole earth vnder his domynion. Now when they were all content with this sayyng, Nabuchodonosor the kyng called Holofernes the captayne of his warres, & sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the west, and specially agaynst those that haue despised my comaudemēt. Thou shalt spare no realme, al stronge cyties shalt thou byng in subieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kyng commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twenty thousande fightyng men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. Al his ordinaunce sent he before with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the host was well provided for with oren, and smal catell, and that without nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his host. Moche golde and syluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourne, he and all his host, with charrettes, horsemen, and archers: of whome there were so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grechopers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, which lyce vpon the syde of Celicia: & so he went vp into al their castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welthy cytie of Holothus, he brake it downe, & spoyled all the chylde of Charis and the Ismaelites, which laye towarde the wilderness, and vpon the South syde of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye cities that were there, from the broke of Hambrze tyll a man come to the see: and he toke the borders in fro Celicia vnto the coastes of Iaphet towarde the South. He carped awaye al the Madianytes, and spoyled all theyr goodes, & who soeuer withstode hym, he slew the with the swerde. After this he went downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of harvest, & bent vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fell vpon all them that dwelt in the earth.

The .iii. Chapter.

Holofernes become to byng subiect to Holofernes: The tyrannye and crueltie of hym.

In the kynges & prynces of all cyties and landes sent theyr Embassytours: namely, they of Syria, & Mesopotamia, Siria Sobal, and Lybia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease toward vs: For us: It is better for us to serue þ great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then þ we shulde dye, and be slayne, and receaue greater hurte. All our cyties and possessions, all mountaynes and hylles, all felde, great & small catell, shepe goates, hoxes, and camels, al our goodes & householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it al together. We our selues also and our chyldren wylbe thynne a wone, come vnto vs a peaceable lord, and vse our seruice at thy pleasure.

B Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with hoxmen & great power, and conquered all stronge fenced cyties, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cyties he toke stronge men, and such as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. There came soch a feare also vpon those countrees, þ the indwellers of all the cyties, the Princes and rulers, and the people together, wente forth to mete hym as he came, and receaued hym honorably with garlandes and tozcles, with daunces, tabrettes and pyper.

C Neuerthelesse, though they dyd thys, yet myght they not swage hys rgyorous stomack: but he destroyed their cities, & he wed downe they woddess. For Nabuchodonosor the kyng had commaunded him, that he shuld rote out all þ Goddess of the lande: to the intent that he only myght be called and taken for God, of the nations whych Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So went he thozow Syria Sobal, ad thozow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, & came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa and Septopol, and toke they cyties, and remayned there thyrte dayes, wherun he caused all the whole multitude of hys host to be gathered together.

The. iiii. Chapter.

C Israel requyreth helpe of God agaynst Holofernes. They fast and praye.

A When the chyldren of Israel þ dwelt in Iewry heard thys they were so afraied of him. There came soch tremblunge also and feare vpon them, that they sorowed he shulde do vnto the cytye of Ierusalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cyties & their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Iericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, & made fast the towynes with walles, ad prepared cozne for them agaynst the battayll.

Eliachim also the Preste wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Efelon (which lyeth ouer agaynst þ great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shuld take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wher-by there might be any waye and passage to Ierusalem, and that they shulde holde diligently: watch where any strait was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the prest of þ Lorde had commaunded them. And all the people cryed earnestly, and humbled they: soules with fastynges and prayers, they and they wyues. The Prestes put on hearrie clothes, ad layed the yoge babes before the temple of þ Lorde, and couered the aulter of the Lorde with an hearrie cloth. And with one accorde they cryed vnto þ Lorde God of Israel, that they chyldren shuld not be geuen into a praye, and their wyues into a spoyle, that their cyties shuld not be layed waste, & that they Sanctuary shuld not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen.

Then Eliachim the hys Preste of þ Lorde wente rounde aboute all Israel, and spake vnto the, sayinge: We pe sure, that þ Lorde will heare youre petitions, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastynges & prayers in the syght of the Lorde. Remembre Moyses the seruaunt of the Lorde, which ouerthrewe the Amalechites (that trusted in they might & power in their host, in they wylde, in they charrettes and hoxmen) not with weapons, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall al the enemies of Israel be, yf ye continue in this worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacion they continued in prayer before þ Lorde. In so moche þ they which offered brent sacrifices vnto the Lorde, offered the offeringes vnto the Lorde, beyng arayed in hearre clothes ad had as shers vpon they heades. And they all besought God for they whole bert, þ he wolde vylet his people of Israel.

The. v. Chapter.

C Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes. Achior sheweth vnto Holofernes the meruelles of God done vnto the Jewes, for which theynge the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with hym.

A And worde came to Holofernes the Prince of the warres of the Assyrians that the chyldren of Israel prepared them selues to make resistance, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwixte the mountaynes. Then was he excedyng wroth, and called all the Princes of Moab, and the Captaynes of Ammon, and sayde vnto them. Tell me what people is thys, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what maner of cyties are they? What is their power? Or what maner of host haue they? who is they Captayne? And why do they despyse vs (more then all those that dwel in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, þ they myght receaue vs wpyth peace? Then Achior the Captayne of al the Ammonites answered, and sayd: Syr, yf it please the to heare heare, I wyl tell the truth before the, concerninge thys people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye go out of my mouth.

B Thys people is of the generacyon of the Caldees, they dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folowe þ goddess of their fathers that were in the lande of þ Caldees, and so forsoke they the customes of their fore fathers (which had many goddesses) & worshipped one God, that made heauen & erth: which also commaunded them, þ they shuld go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe whē there came a dearth into þ whole land, they wete downe to Egypte, and there they dwelt foure hondreth yeres, in the whyche they multiplied so greatly, that their host might not be nombred. And when the king of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued the in buyldyng of his cyties with makyng of clape and byck, they cryed vnto God they Lorde, whiche punished the whole lande of Egypte with diuerse plagues.

C Now when the kyng of Egypte let the go their waye, and the plage ceased, & then folowed after them, to take the, & to bryng them agayne into hys seruyce, whyle they were flyng a waye, the God of heauē opened the see, so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wal, and these went thorow the botome of the see dyre shod. In the which place whē an innumerable people of the Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with þ waters: that there remayned not one, to tel them that came after, how it happened. So when thys people was passed thozow the reed see, they came into the wyldernes of the mount Synai, where neuer man myght dwell afore, & where þ lone of mā had neuer rested. There were the bitter waters made swete for the, that they myght drynke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Wherelocure they went (without bowe and arrowe, without bulker or swerd) they God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Pee, no man was able to hurte thys people, except it were so, þ they departed vnsafely from the worshyppinge of the Lorde they God. But as oft as they worshypped any other helyde they God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, ad to be put to confusyon. Neuerthelesse, as ofte as they were soyr for departyng from the worshyppinge of they God, the same God of heauē gaue them power and strength to withstande they enemies.

Moreouer, they slewe the kyng of þ Canaanites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Guites, and Amorites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke their landes ad cyties in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the syght of they God it went wel with them, for they God hateth vnyrghtenness. For in tymes past whē they went out of the waye, which God had geuen the, that they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse bataylles of many nations: and many of the were caried a waye prersoners vnto a strange countre. But now latel they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lorde they God, ad are come together agayne out of the countrees where they were scatred abroad: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwel therein: and as for Ierusalem where they Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possession.

And therfore my lorde, make diligent inquisicio, yf thys people haue done wyckedness in the syght of their God, then let vs go vpon agaynst the, for doutles they God shall deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf thys people haue not displeased they God, we shal not be able to withstande them, for they God shall defende the, and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde.

Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, al the great men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, & sayde one to another: what is he this, which darre saye, that the chyldren of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kyng and his host: where as they are an vnderpenned people, without strength or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe that he hath discaied vs we wyl go vpon into the mountaynes: & whē the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shalbe spekte with the swerd, that al people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without hym.

The. vi. Chapter.

C Achior is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

S When they had left of speakyng, Holofernes toke soze indignacion, and said vnto Achior: For so much as thou hast prophesied vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of they God, I wyl shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Pee, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perishe with them thozow the swerd of the Assyrians, & all Israel shalbe destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is þ Lorde of the whole erth. Then shall the swerd of my knyghthode go thozow thy sydes, and thou shalt fall downe spekte amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalt thalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be utterly destroyed with them. But if thou thinkest thy prophesie to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy colour? why arte thou afrayed? Thinkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayest knowe, I thou shalt see these thynges with them, beholde, fro this houre forth I will sende the vnto ponder people, that when the punishment of my sword (which they haue worthely deserved) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punished with them.

So Holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achior, & to cary hym vnto Bethulia, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the childre of Israel. Then Holofernes seruantes toke hym, and wet thozow I playne felde. But when they drez npe vnto the mountaynes, the spunge casters came out agaynst them: neuerthelesse they gat the awaye by the syde of the mountayne, ad bounde Achior hande and fote to a tree, and so left hym boude with withyes, and turned agayne vnto theyr Lorde.

Notwithstandinge I chyliden of Israell went downe fro Bethulia, came vnto hym, lowsed hym, brought him into Bethulia, set hym in the myddest of the people, and asked him what the matter was, that I Assyrians had left hym bounde?

Asias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Symeon, and Charim (which is also called Gothoniell) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the people, and before them al he tolde them, what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thyng that he asked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge, and how Holofernes hym selfe was wroth, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the children of Israel, he myght commaunde Achior also to be put to death with diuerse tormetes, because he sayde: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had playnly tolde out all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpon their faces, prayeing the Lorde, and poured out their prayers together vnto the Lorde, with a general complaynte and wepyng, and sayde: O Lorde God of heauen & of earth, beholde their pride and loke vpon our lowlynnes, and consyde how it standeth with thy sayntes, and make it to be knowne, that thou forsakest not those, which holde them fast by the, ad how that thou bypnyest the lowe, that presume of the selues, and make theyr boast in theyr awne strenght. So when the wepyng and prayer of the people (whych they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achior, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power and strenght thou hast prayled, shal so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather se theyr destruccio. When the Lorde our God then shall geue his seruantes thyng lybertie, God be also with the amoge vs, that if it please the, thou wylth all thyne mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Asias had ended the counsell, he toke him into his house, ad made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers at the night longe in the congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The vii. Chapter.

Wethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people request helpe of God. They of Wethulia wolde geue ouer the ctyte for wante of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentacion.

The next daye, Holofernes commaunded his host to go by agaynst Wethulia. There were an hundred & twenty thousande fyghtynge men on fote and two and twenty thousande horsmen, beside the the preparynge of the that were wonne: and came to them on euery syde out of the countrees and ctytes whiche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battail agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hill syde, vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynst Duthaim, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth toward Ezelon.

Now when the chyliden of Israel sawe so great a multitude of the Assyrians, they fel downe flat vpon the grounde, strawed althes vpon their heades, and prayed with one accord, that I God of Israel wolde shewe his mercy vpon his people, and so they toke their weapens, and sat betwixt the mountaynes in the narrow place, and kept the waye daye and nyght. But whye Holofernes was gong aboute, he founde the water sprynge, which fro the South syde was conueyed into I ctyte by a codyte: this commaunded he to be direct another waye, & to cut their codyte in sunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, wher they vled secretly, more for pleasure then for necessity.

Then wente I Ammonites & the Moabites vnto Holofernes, & said: The chyliden of Israell trust nether in speare nor azowe, but haue taken in, ad kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest ouercome the therefore without I stryking of any batayl, set men to kepe the welles that they drawe no water out of the: so shalt thou destroye the without sword, or at I least they shall be so feble, that they must be sayne to geue ouer the ctyte: whych they thynke not able to be wonne, for so moche as it lyeth in the mountaynes.

mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well & all his men of warre, & he set an hundred at euery well rounde aboute.

And when this watch had endured twety dayes, the Cisternes & all that had water, sayled them that dwelt in I ctyte of Wethulia, so that in I whole ctyte they had not dryncke pough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylye in a measure. Then came the men and women, ponge per sonnes ad chyliden all vnto Asias, & sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell with vs thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of the Assyrians, therefore hath God solde vs in theyr handes, and there is no man to helpe vs where as we are brought downe before theyr eyes I thirke & great destruccyon. Therefore gather now together all I people that be in the ctyte, that we maye all yelde oure selues wyllyngly vnto I people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and prayse the Lorde with our lyues, then to be slayne and perpyse, and to be laughed to scoorne and shamed of euery man, when we se our wyues and chyliden dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earthe this daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (whych punisheth vs accordyng to I deseruyng of our synnes) and geue you war nyng, that ye geue vnto the ctyte now ito I power of Holofernes host, that oure ende maye be shorte with the sword, whych els shall endure longe, for wante of water and for thyrst.

When they had spoken out these wordes there was a greates wepyng and howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voyce, sayenge: we haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done a myse, we haue dealt wyckedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punish our vnyghteousnes with thyne awne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knowlege the, vnto a people whych knowe the not, lest they saye amoge the heathen: where is theyr God?

And when they were so weery with this cryenge and wepyng, that they helde theyr tinges, Asias stode vp with watrye eyes, and sayde: Take good hertes vnto you, (deare brythren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peradventure he shall cut awaye this indignacion, and geue glory vnto his name. But if he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the bycrouse woman Judith, which requered the assistance because theyr cympted the Lorde. She also moueth them to encorage and heren the people, and sheweth her counsell agaynst the enemyes of the Jewes.

And it happened when these wordes came to I ears of Judith a wyddowe, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, I sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Asa, the sonne of Clay, the sonne of Jammo, the sonne of Iedon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, I sonne of E-uam, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Hannas, which dyed in the dayes of the barlye harvest. For whye he was byndynge the sheues together in the felde, the heate came vpon his head, & he dyed at Wethulia his ctyte & there was he buried besyde his fathers. Now was Judith this desolate wyddowe thre yeres and six monethes. And in I hyer partes of her house she made her selfe a pre-up chambze, where she dwelt, beyng closed in with her maydens. She ware a smock of heare, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and newe mones and the solempne dayes that I people of Israell kepte. She was a very sayre and bewtifull person. Her husband also had left her greates riches, a plenteous housholde, great vnueneable possessions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a very good repute with euery one, for she feared I Lord greatly, ad there was no body that spake an euell worde of her.

When this Judith hearde, how Asias had promised the people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vnto the ctyte vnto the Assyrians, she sent for the elders Chamby and Charim, and when they came to her, she sayde: what thyng is this, wherin Asias hath consented, that if God helpe not with in fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer the ctyte to the Assyrians? What are ye, that ye tempte the Lorde? This deuyce optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath and displeasure. Wyl ye set the mercy of I Lorde a tyme and appoynte hym a daye after poure wyl?

Neuerthelesse, for so moche as the Lord is pacyft, lett vs rather repent, pourynge out teares, and bescechig him of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, nether wyl he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyliden of men. And therefore lett vs hertely fall downe before hym, and serue hym with a meke spete, and with wepyng eyes saye vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs accordyng to his awne wyl and mercy: that lyke as oure herte is now vexed, and brought lowe thozow the pryde of them, it maye so be comforted thozow his grace: in so moche as we folowe not the synnes of our fathers, which forsoke theire God, & worshipped other gods: for the whych synne they perished with the swerde, were spoyled & brought to shame of al their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely he, for whose sake lett vs tary with mekenesse. he shall requyre and make inquisiciō for our blood from the veracions of our enemyes: he shall bringe downe all the hepten, that ryle vp agaynst vs, & put them to dishonoure, euen the Lorde oure God.

¶ Therefore deare brethren, seynge ye are p^rhonorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respecte, ad vpon whom the lyfe of the people standeth, lyft vp their hertes with poure exhortaciō, that they may call to remembraunce, how oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, yf they worshipped the Lord a ryght. They ought to remembre, how oure father Abraham beinge tempted, and tryed thow many trybulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beinge tryed thow many troubles, were founde steadfast in fapth. Agayne, they that receaued not theyr tēcyons wth the feare of God, but put the selues forth with vn-pacpency and murmuringe agaynst God, perished by the destroyer, and were slayne of serpyntes. And therefore shuld not we vnderstande, how oure fathers, for the wyng that is done vnto vs: but to consydre, that all these punysshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes. Seleuige also that thys correccon cometh vnto vs (as to the seruantes of God) for amendement, and not for oure destruccyon.

¶ Then sayde Ollas & the elders vnto Iudith: All that thou speakest, is true, and no mā can reprove thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Iudith sayd vnto them: Seyng, ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell & deuice, yf it be of God: & beleche God, that he wyl byngge my counsell to good ende.

¶ Thus haue I deuyled: ye shall stāde this nyght before the porte, and I wyl go forth with Abrahams mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God, that he wyl graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayd. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyōs of it, tyll I open it vnto you my self: do ye nothing els but praye vnto the Lord poure God for me. Then Ollas the prince of the people of Iuda sayde vnto her: So thy waye in peace the Lorde be with the, that we maye be auēged of our enemyes. And so they wete from her agayne.

The .ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Iudith for the byctore.

¶ Now when they were gone they waue, Iudith wente into hir closet, put on an hearye smock, strowed ashes vpon hir head, fell downe before the Lord, & cried vnto hym, sayng, O Lord God of my father. Sūmed, which gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemyes, & vled bypolce and wyllfulnes and that rauished & vyrgin & put her to dys-honesty. Thou p^rgauest theyr wyues into a praye, and theyr daughters into captiuyte, ad all theyr praye for a spoyl vnto thy seruantes, which bare a zeale vnto p^r helpe me wyddow, O Lorde my God, I beleche the. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnyng: and loke what thou hast taken in hand ad deuyled, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgements are done i thy euerylastyng for knowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assyrians, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpo the host of the Egyptians, when they beinge weapened, persecuted thy seruantes, and put theyr trust i theyr charrettes, horsmen, & in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedest vpo their host, castyng a thyck darchnes before the: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

¶ Euen so Lord, lett it go with these, that trust in the power & multitude of theyr mē of warre in theyr charrettes, arrowes & speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, which destroyest warres fro p^r begynnyng, and that thou art the Lord. O lyft vp thyne arme now, lyke as euer from p^r begynnyng, and i thy power byngge theyr power to naught, cause theyr myght to fall in thy wrath. They make theyr boast, & theyr will vnhalowe and desyle thy Sanctuary, and to wayst the tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe the horne of thyne auter wth theyr swerde. Wylg to passe (O Lorde) that the pyde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his awne swerde, that he maye be take wth the snare of hys eyes in me, and that I mayest smyte hi wth p^r lyppes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse him ad hys strength, & that I maye destroye hym.

¶ Thys shall byngge thy name an euerylastyng remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrowe hym. For thy power (O Lord) stādeh not in p^r power of men, nether hast p^r ny pleasure i the strength of horses. There was neuer proude personne p^r pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene enermore.

¶ O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare heare me poore woman, callyng vpo the, & puttyn my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy couenaunt, O Lord, and mynister wordes in my mouth, and stablysh this deuice in my hert, that thy house maye cōtynue styll in holynes, and that all the hepten maye knowe, that thou art God, ad that there is none other but thou.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Iudith becheh her selfe to go to Holofernes, the sleuyng that the elders gaue Iudith. Holofernes is a loue with Iudith.

¶ Now when she had left of cryeng vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lye flat before the Lorde, & called her mayden, wēt downe into her house, laped the hearye cloth from her, put of the garmentes of hir wyddowhode, washed her body, anointed hyr selfe with precyous thinges, of sweete sauoure, byrped and platted her heare, sett an hoone vpon hir heade, and put on soche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon hir fete, armelletes, spages, earynges, synger rynges, ad decked her selfe with all hir best arape.

¶ The Lorde gaue her also a specyall bewtye ad faynesse (for all this deckyng of hyr selfe was not done for eny voluptuousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a ryght dyscrecon and vertue, therfore dyd the Lorde increase hir bewtye) so that she was excedyng ampyable and wel sauoured in all mē eyes. She gaue hyr mayde also a botell of wyne, a pot with oyle, pottage, cake bred & cheese, and wente hir waye.

¶ Now when she came to the porte of the cytie, she foude Ollas and the elders of the cytie waytyng there. Which whā they sawe her, they were astōnyed, & marueled greatly at her bewtye, neuer thelesse, they asked no questyō at her, but let her go, sayng: The God of oure fathers geue the his grace, and with his power perfourme all the deuyce of thy herte: that Ierusalē maye reioyse oure the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made hir prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente oute at the porte, she and hir mayde.

¶ And as she was goyng downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the spyng of the daye, the spyres of the Assyrians met with her, and toke her, sayng: whence comest thou? Whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the hebrues, ad am fled fro the, for I knowe, & they shal be geuen vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scozne to yelde the selues vnto you that they myght fynde mercy i poure sight. Therfore, haue I deuyled by my selfe after this maner: I wyl go before the prince Holofernes, and tell hym all the secrettes, and wyl shew him, how he maye come by them and wyne them, so that not one mā of hys host shall perishe.

¶ And when these mē had hearde hir wordes, and consydered hir fayre face they were astōnyed (for they wondred at hir excellēt bewtye) & sayd vnto her: thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndyng out this deuyce, & thou woldst come downe to oure lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shall please hym at the herte. So they brought her into Holofernes pauplyon, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before hym, immediately he was ouercome ad taken with hir bewtye. The sayd his seruantes: who wolde despile p^r people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre wemē? Shuld we not by reaso fyghte agaynst the for these? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes syttinge in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, sylke, gold, smaragde and precyous stones, she looked fast vpon hi, & fell downe vpon p^r earth. And Holofernes seruantes toke her vp agayne, at their lordes commaundement.

The .xi. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes requyeth of Iudith the cause of her comyng, whych geueth him a suttell answer.

¶ When sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, & feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte mā, & wold serue Nabuchodonosor p^r kinge. As for thy people, yf they had not despyled me, I shulde not haue lyft vp my speare agaynst p^r. But tell me now, what is the cause that p^r art departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

¶ And Iudith sayde vnto hym: Sy, vnderstande p^r wordes of thy handmayden: for yf p^r wylt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall byngge thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande lyueth, and as truly as his power lyueth, which is in p^r to the punysshment of all men that go wrogg, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thow the, but ad the bestes also of p^r feld. For all people speake of thy prudent actyuyte, and it hath euer bene reported, how p^r onely art good & myghtie in all his kyngdome, & thy discrecon is comended i al lādes. The thig is manyfest also, p^r Achior spake, & it is wel knowne, what p^r comādest to do vnto him, for this is playne & of a suretye, p^r our God is so wroth wth vs (by p^r reason of our synnes) p^r he hath shewed by hys prophetes vnto p^r people, how p^r for their synnes he will deliuer the ouer vnto p^r enemye. And for so moch as p^r childe of Israel knowe

Woe it we that the that they haue so displeased they? God, they are sore afrayed of the.

They suffre greate hunger also, and for wante of water, they are ded now in a manner. Whereouer, they are appoynted to slaye all they? catell, that they maye dyyncke the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy dynammes of their God, which he hath forbydden them to touch, for coine, wyne and oyle. Sepynge now, that they do these thynges it is a playne case that they must nedes be destroyed. Which whē I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, ad the Lord hath sent me vnto the, to shew the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyppe God euen here now besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I will make my prayer vnto God, ad he shall tell me, when he wyll rewarde them they? synne, then shall I come and shewe the and hyunge the thozow the myddest of Ierusalem so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israel, as I shewe without a shepherde: there shall not so moch as one dogg bark agaisst the, for these thynges are shewed me by the prouidence of God: and for so moch as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to be the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes & all his seruantes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not soch a woman vpon earth, in betwyte and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hyther before thy people, that I mayest geue the to our hādes. And for so moch as thy promyse is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

The. xii. Chapter.

Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well instructed. She despyeth lycence to go out in the nyght season to praye, and oportunityneth it. Agao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, and she cummeth. Holofernes is droncken.

When commaunded he her to goi whe-
In her hys treasure laye, and charged that she shulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but will eat of soch as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges that thou hast brought with the sayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayde: As truly as thou spuest my lord, thy handmayden shall not spende all thys, yll God haue brought to passe in my hand, the thynges that I haue deuyfed.

So hys seruantes brought her into the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she despyed that she myght haue leue to go forth by nyght & before daye to her prayer and to make intercessio vnto the Lord. Then commaunded Holofernes his Chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the nyght season she toke forth into a valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then wente she vp, and besought the Lord God of Israel that he wolde prosper her waye, for the delue-raunce of hys people. And so she wente in, & remayned cleue in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the eueninge.

Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruantes, and sayde vnto Agao his chamber layne: Go thy waye, and counsell thys hebuzelle, that she may be wyllyng to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shulde so laugh a mā to scoorne that she were come from hym vnmeeled with all. Then wente Agao vnto Judith, & sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come to my lord, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and dryncke wyne, and be mery with hym. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lordenaye? whatsoeuer is good before hys eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is hys pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckte her self wyth her apparell, and wente in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so that he bent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: Drinke now and sytt downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dyd eate, and dranke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and drake moze wyne, then euer he dyd afore in hys lyfe.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Holofernes sleapeth for very dronkenesse, and Judith cutteth off hys heade, and geueth the same to her auncle. The people of whom she is reueled with hope. They geue thanks vnto God, for they? deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achior which misseith at her state done to Holofernes.

On whē it was late in the nyght, hys seruantes made haste euery man to hys lodgynge. And Agao shut the chamber doores, and went hys

his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpo the bed all droncken, & of very dronckenes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden, to stāde without before the doore, & to wayte. And Judith stode before the bedd, makinge her prayer with teares, and moued her lyp-pes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy ctye of Ierusalem, lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I may perfourme this, which I haue deuyfed thozow the helpe that I haue in the,

And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedstede, ad lowed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she hold of the bearye lockes of hys heade, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God in thys houre, and with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the neck, ad smote off hys head. Then toke she the canapp a waye, and rolled the deed body asyde. Immediately she gat her forth, and deliuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after they? custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thozow the valley vnto the porte of the ctye. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Ope the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they heard her voyce, they called the elders of the ctye together. And they came al to mete her, lytle and greate, yonge & olde, for they thought not that she shuld haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered aboute her euerychone: but she wente vp in to an hye place, and caused silence to be proclaimed.

When euery man now helde hys tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despyed, nor forsaken them, that put they? trust in hym, & in me his handmaide he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yee in my hand thys same nyght hath he slayne his enemy of hys people.

And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, sayinge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assyrians, & this is the canapp, wherein he laye in his dronk-nes: where the Lord oure God hath slayne hym by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth, his Angell hath kepte me, goynge thither, remay-nyng there, & comynge hyther agayne from thence. And the Lord hath not suffred me his handmayde to be despyed, but without any fylthynes of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: & that w greafe victo-ry, so I am escaped, and ye deliuered. O geue thanks vnto hym euerychone, for he his gracious and hys mercy endureth for euer.

So they praysed the Lord altogether, & gaue thākes vnto hi. And to her they sayd: The Lord hath blessed the in hys power, for thozow the he hath brought our enemies to naught. And Olias the cheferuler of the people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lord the hye God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauen & earth, which hath gyded a ryght to woude and to synke of the head of the Captayne of oure enemies. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorable, & thy prayse shall neuer come oute of the mouth of men, which shall all waye remembre the power of the Lord, seige: thou hast not spared thynce a wne self, but put the in icopardy, considering the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped they? fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, & he came. Then sayde Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto who I gauest witness, & he wolde be aūged of his enemies, eue he hath thys nyght thozow my hād smytten off the head of all the vnfaithfull. And that I mayest se it so is, beholde this is the head of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde despyed the God of the people of Israel, ad threatened the destruction, saying: whē the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause also to be syncke with the swerde. When Achior sawe Holofernes head, he fell downe vpo his face to the ground for very anguysh & feare, so he sowned w all. But after he was come agayne to himselfe, he fell downe before her, ad prayled her saying: Blessed art thou of thy God in all thy tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of the.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The counsell of Judith. Achior begyns an heathen mā, turneth to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

Judith sayd vnto all the people: Brethren, heare me. Sytke vp thys heade vpon our walles, and when I shal aryseth, take euery man hys weape, and fall out vpolently: not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to renne vpon them, with violence. When the spyes in the tentes se this, they shall of necessity be compelled to fle backward, ad to rāple vp they? captayne to the battayll. So whē their captaynes come into Holofernes pauplyon, Add iii and

and fynde the deed body wrapped in bloud, fearfulness shall fall vpon them: and whē ye perceauē that they flye, folowe thē without all care, for God shall deliuer thē vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achioz seynge the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell off from his heathenish belefe, and put his trust in God, and let hym selfe be circumcised: and so was he nombred among the people of Israel, he and al his posterite vnto thys daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they sticht vpon Holofernes head vpon the walles, and every man toke hys weapen, & so they wente out with an horrible cry. Whē the spyys sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greates noise to wake hym vp, because they thought with the noise to haue rased him. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in or open.

But when the captaynes and wynges and all the chefe in the kynge of the Assyrians hoost came together, they layde vnto the Chamberlaynes. So poure waye in, ad wake him vp, for the myse are crepte out of theyr holes, and darre prouoke vs vnto battayll.

Then wente Agao into hys chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with hys handes, for he thought he had bene sleppynge with Judith.

But whē he had hearkened perfectly with hys eares, and coulde perceauē no sterynge, he wente nether to the bed, and lyft it vp, and thē sawe he the deed body of Holofernes lye there with out a head, wel-tred in his bloud vpon the earthe. Then cryed he wth loude voyce, and with wepyng rent hys clothes, and wente into Judiths tent, and found her nat: And so he leapte out vnto the people & sayd: one woman of the Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lye vpon the ground and hath no head.

When the chefe of the Assyrians hoost herd that, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intollecable feare and tremblynge vpon them, so the mynides were soze afrayed, And there was an excedyng greates crye in the whole hoost.

The. xv. Chapter.

The sight of the Assyrians. The pursuit of Israel after them. Israel becometh reche, by the spynges of the Assyrians. Judith is praised of Joachim and of the people.

Now when all the hoost herde that Holofernes was headed, their mynides & counsell fell from them: and soch a feare came vpon them, that they undertoke to defende them selues by flyng a waye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyr heades, left all behynd them, and made haste to escape from the Hebrewes: for they herde, that they were halig to come after with theyr weapens, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, & thorough all the fote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them and wente downe with trompettes, blowynge and makynge a greates crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no ordre, & kept not the selues together, but fled theyr waye. Neuertheles, the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, and discomforted as many as they myght gett. And Dias sent messagers vnto all the cyties and countrees of Israel.

So all the regyons and every cytye sent out theyr best men after them in harnesse, & smote them with the swerde, tyll they came to the vttemost parte of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and toke all the theyr which were fled had left behynd them, and so they founde greates good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayll, toke with them soch thinges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombre of the cattell, and of all costly Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hiest, they were all made reche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hys preste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they myght see Judith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worthyppye of the cytye of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israel, thou honoure of oure people, thou hast done manly, & thy herte is confortyd, because thou hast loued clenlynes and chastyte, ad hast knowne no man but thyne a wne husband: therfore hath the hande of the Lorde confortyd the, & blessed shalt thou be for ever. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thys tyde dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assyrians. But all that beloged vnto Holofernes, and had bene hys, specially (whether it were of gold, of syluer, precyous stones, clothynge, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Judith. And al the people reioysed, both women, maydens, and yonge people, with pypes and herpes.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The songe of Judith for the victorie. After the victorie obtained, the people cometh to Jerusalem, to worshyp and prayse God.

Then

When longe Judith thys songe vnto the Lorde. Begynne vnto the Lorde vpon the tabrettes, synge vnto the Lorde vpon the cymbales. Synge vnto hym a new songe of thankesgeyng, be ioyfull & call vpon hys name. It is the Lorde that destroyeth warres, euen the Lorde is hys name. Which hath pitched hys tentes in the myddest of hys people, that he myght deliuer vs from the hand of all oure enemyes. Allur came out of the mountaynes of the North in the multitude of hys strenght. His people stopped the water brokes, and theyr hordes couered the valleyes. He purposed to haue bent vpon my lande, and to slaye my yonge men with the swerde.

He wolde haue carped a waye my chyldren and virgyns into captiuite, but the almyghty lorde hyndred hym, and deliuered hym into the handes of a woman, which brought hym to confusyon. For theyr myghtie was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonne of Titan that slew hym, nether haue the greates gyautes set them selues agaynst hi: but Judith the daughter of Merari with her sayre bewtye hath discōfited hym, and brought hym to naught. For she layde a waye her wyddowes garment, and put on the apparel of gladnesse to the reioysynge of the chyldren of Israel. She anoynted her face, and bounde vpon her heare in an hooe, to begyle hi. Her sylppers rauyned his eyes, her bewtie captiuated his mynde, with the swerde smote she of hys neck. The Hebrewes were astonied at her stedfastnes and the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when my symple appeared, dyde of thys. The sones of the daughters haue pearled the thowowe and slayne them as fugytyue chyldren: they perished in the battayll, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankesgeyng vnto the Lorde, a new songe of prayse wll we synge vnto oure God.

Lorde, Lorde, thou arte a great God, myghty in power, whom no man may ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, and they were made: thou sentest thy spyte, and they were created, and no man can withstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foundations with the waters, the stonye rockes shall melt before the lyke ware. But they feare the: shall be greates with the iayll chynages. No vnto the people that ryle vp agaynst my generacyon, for the almyghty Lorde will auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wll be vset them. For he shall geue fyre and wormes into theyr flesh, that they may burne and sele it for euermore.

After thys it happened, that after the victorie, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purposed, they offered all theyr bent sacrifices and theyr promysed offrynges. And Judith offered all Holofernes weapens, and all the Jewels, that the people had geuen her, and the canopy that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vpon the Lorde. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: and this ioye by reason of the victory with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, every man wente home agayne, and Judith was in greates reputacyon at Bethulia, and ryght honoably taken in all the lād of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastyte ioynd, so that after her husbande Manasses dyed, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Vpon the hys solempne dayes she wente out with greates worthyppye. She dwelt in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yere, & left her handmayden free, and dyed, and was buried belyde her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherein this victory was gotten, was solemply holden, and rekened of the Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euersince, vnto thys daye.

The. xi. Chapter, after the Latyn.

The dreame of Mardocheus.

Mardocheus sonne of Jair, the sonne of Seime, sonne of Ci-lei of the trybe of Benjamin, a Jewe: which had his dwelling in the cite of Susis, a man of greate reputacion, and excellent amonge al them that were in the kynges court. (Ne-uertheless, he was one of the prisoners, who Babuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had caried awaye from Ierusalem vnto Babylon with Zechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of great Artaxerxes in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisan, had this Mardocheus such a dreame: he thought he herde a greate tempest, horrible thunderclappes, earthquakes & great vpyoure in the lād, and that he sawe two greate dragons, ready to fyght one agaynst another.
They crye was greate. At the which roa-ryng and crye al heathen were vp, to fyght agaynst the ryghteous people. And y same daye was full of darknes and verye vncle-are, full of trouble and angur, yee a greate fearfulnes was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euil that was deuysed ouer them, and were at a poynte w them selues to dye.
So they cryed vnto God: and whyle they were cryenge, y litle well grewe to a great ryuer and into many waters. And with y it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne.
And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorypous and proude.

Now when Mardocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, & mused stedfastly in his herte, what God wolde do: ad so he desyred to knowe all the matter, & his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

The. xii. Chapter.

Mardocheus biterech the treason deuysed agaynst the kyng, and is therefore rewarded of hym.

At the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Taresi the kynges court the kynges Chamberlay-nes and porters of the palace. But when he hearde they deuysed, & had delygently considered they ymagynacions, he perceiued that they wente aboute, to laye they cruell handes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes and so he certifyed the kyng therof. Then caused the kyng to examen the two gelded wyth tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to death.

This the kyng caused to be put in y Cranycles for an euerlastyng remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp y same matter. So the kyng commaunded that Mardocheus shulde remayne in the court, and for thys faythfulnes of his, he gaue him a rewarde.
But Aman y sonne of Amadathu the Aga-gite, which was holden in greate honoure & reputacion in the kynges court vnder toke to hurte Mardocheus and hys people, because of the two Chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The coppe of the letters of Artaxerxes agaynst the Jewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

The great kyng Artaxerxes which raigneth fro India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and foue and twenty lādes, sendeth his frede-ly salutation vnto all y wyces and debtyes of the countrees, which be sub-iecte vnto his domynion. Whē I was made lord ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my domynion, my mynde was not with crueltie and wronge to exalte my selfe by y reason of my power: but purposed with equyte alwaye and gen-tylnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiccio, and wholy to set them i a peaceable lyfe, and thereby to bypunge my kyngdome vnto tranquillite, that me myght safely go thorow on euery syde, and to reuereace agayne, which all men desyre. Now whē I asked my counsellors how these thyn-ges myght be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellent in wysdome, whose good will, tructh, & faythfulnes hath oft bene shewed and proued (which was also y pyncipall and next vnto the kyng). His name: which certifyed vs, how that i all lādes there was scatred abrode a rebellyous folke, that made statutes & lawes agaynst all other people, ad haue allwaye despyed the proclaimed commaundementes of kynges: ad how that for thys cause it were not to be suffred, that such rule shulde contynue by you and not to be put downe. Seynge: now we perceaue the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, vsinge straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstande oure statutes and doynges, ad go a-boute to stablish shrewed matters, that our kingdome shuld neuer come to good estate, and stedfastnes: Therefore haue we commaunded, that all they y are appoynted in wytyng and shewed vnto you by Amā (which is ordeyned and sett ouer all oure landes) and the most pyncypall next vnto the kyng, and in maner as a father (shall with they wyues and chyldren be destroyed and roted oute wyth the swerde of they ene-myes

myes and aduersaries: and that there shalbe no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And thys shalbe done the. xiii. daye of y moneth (called Adar) of this yere, that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye wyth vyolence be thrust downe into the hel, to y intent that after this maner, oure empire maye haue peace and tranquillite.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the workes and noble actes of the Lorde, and made his prayer vnto him, saying: O Lord Lorde, thou valeant and almyghtie kyng (for all thynges are i thy power,) and yf thou wilt helpe & deliuer Israel, there is no man that can withstande ner lett y: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderous thynges so euer is vnder the heauē: thou art Lord of all thynges, and there is no man that can resist thy maicstie (O Lord) Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, y it was nether of malice, ner presumptio, ner for eny desyre of glory, y I wolde not bowe downe my selfe ner worshyp poudre proud presumptuous Amā (for I wolde haue bene content, & that with good will, yf it myght haue done Israel eny good, to haue kepte his fotesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not lett the honoure of a man in the steade of the glorie of God, and because I wolde worshyp none but onely y my Lorde.
And thys haue I done in no pryde ner presumptio.

And therefore O Lorde thou God & kyng, haue mercy vpo thy people for they ymagin how they maye bypunge vs to naught, yee they mynde and desire is to destroye and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hath euer bene thyne inheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy poynt, which thou hast deliuered & brought oute of Egypte for thyne awne selfe. Hears my prayer, and be mercifull vnto thy people, whom y hast chosen for an heretage vnto thy selfe. Turne oure complaynte and so-rowe into ioye, y we maye lye O Lord, and praysse thy name. O Lord, suffre not y mou-thes of the that praysse the, to be destroyed.
All the people of Israel in lyke maner cryed as earnestly as they coude vnto the Lorde, for they death and destruction stode before they eyes.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of hys and her people.

Alene Esther also beynge in the battayll of death, resorted vnto the Lorde, layed awaye her glorypous apparell, and put on the garmentes that serued for syghthige and mournyng. In the steade of precious oymment, she scatred asches and donge vpo her head: and as for her body, she dumbled it wyth fastyng, and brought it very lowe. All y places where she was won-te to haue ioye afore, those fylled she wyth y heare, y the plucte of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israel wyth these wordes.

O my Lorde, thou onely art oure kyng, helpe me desolate woman, whych haue no helper but the, for my misery and destruccio is harde at my hāde. Fro my youth vp I haue herde oute of y kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonge all people (& so haue oure fathers of their fore elders) y they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, and loke what thou didest promise the, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Now Lorde, we haue synned before the, therefore hast thou geuen vs into the handes of oure enemyes, because we worshipped they goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous.
Acuertheless it satisfieth them not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuite and oppressed amonge them, but thou hast layed they handes vpon the handes of they goddes: so that they begynne to take awaye, y thyng that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appoynted, to destroye thyne inheritaunce, to shut and to stoppe y mouthes of the that praysse the, to quench the glorie & worshyp of thy house and thine altar, and to open y mouthes of the heathen, y they may praysse the power and vertue of the goddes, and to magnifie the fleshy kynges for euer.

O Lord, geue not thy scepter vnto them that be nothing, lest they laugh vs to scorn in oure misery & fall: but turne they deue vpo them selues, and punish him, that hath begone the same ouer vs, and sett him to an example. Thynke vpon vs O Lorde, and shew thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure distres and of oure trouble. Strengthen me O thou kyng of Goddes, thou Lord of all power, geue me an eloquent & pleasant speech in my mouth before the Lorde. Turne hys hert into y hate of oure enemye, to destroye him, and all such as consent vnto hym. But deliuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me thy hand mayde, which haue no defence ner helper but onely the. Lorde, thou knowest all thynges, y wotest that I loue not the glorie and worshyp of the vnyghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcysed and of all heathen.

Thou knowest my necessity, that I hate the token of my preeminence and worshipp, which I beare vpon my head, what tyme as I must shew my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weare it not when I am quyet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy hande mayden haue not eaten at Amā's table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor de-lite

Iste in the kynges feaste, that I haue not drinke the wyne of the drinckoffringes, and that I thy haden mayden haue no ioye sence the dape that I was brought hyther, vnto this dape, but onely in the Lord. O thou God of Abraham, O mighty God about al, heare the voyce of them, & haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hande of the wicked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

The xv. Chapter.

Mardochus moueth Hester, to go into the kynges, and make intercession for her people, and the prefors: with hys request.

Mardochus also had Hester go in vnto the kyng, and praye for hyr people and for hyr countre. Remembre (sayeth he) thy dayes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast noyshed vnder my hande: For Aman which is next vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lorde, and speake for vs vnto the kyng, and deliuer vs from death. And vpon the thyrde dape it happened, that Hester layed a waye the mourninge garmentes, and put on her gloriouse apparell, & deckt her selfe goodly (after she had called vpon God, which is beholder and Sanyoure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leane her selfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The thyne of her bewtie made her face rose colour red. The similitude of her face was chearful and amiable, but her herte was sorrowfull for greute feare. She wote in thow all the doores, and stode before the kyng. The kyng satt vpon the trone of hys kyngdome, and was clothed in his goodly aray, all of golde and set with precious stones, & he was very terrible. He lyt vpon hys face, that shone in clearnes, and looked grmly vpon her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and faynt, leane her selfe vpon the heade of the mayde that went with her.

Neuertheles, God turned the kynges mynde that he was gentle, & he leaped out of hys seate for feare, & gat her in his armes, and held her vpon tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her lounge wordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare thou shalt not dye: for oure commaundement toucheth the comys and not f. Come nye. And with she helde vpon his golden rodd, and layde it vpon her neck, and embraced her frendly, and sayd: talke with me. The sayd she: I saue the (Lord) as an Angell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clearnesse: For excellent and wonderfull art thou (Lord) and thy face is full of ampte. But as she was thus speaking vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the which cause the kyng was afrayed, and all his seruantes comforted her.

The xvi. Chapter.

The coppe of the letters of Artaxerxes, wherby he reuoketh those which he had sent forth.

The greute kyng Artaxerxes, which raigned fro India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred & xxviii. landes, sendeth vnto the byncs and rulers of the same landes, such as loue him, hys frendly salutation. There be many for the sondre frendshippes and benefites which are diuersly done vnto the for they worship, becuier the more proude and hie mynded, and undertake not onely to hurte our subiectes (for plenteous benefites maye they not suffre, and begynne to ymagin some thing agaynst those that do them good, & take not onely all vntankfulness a waye from men) but in pryde and presumptio (as they that be vnmynedfull and vntankfull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seyth all thynges, which (iudgement) hateth & punyssheth all wyckednes. It happeneth oft also, that they which be set in offyce by the power, and vnto whom the busyness and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proude, and despyle them selues with sheddyng of innocent bloude, which byngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false & disceatfull wordes and with lyeng tales, disceau and betraue the innocent goodnes of byncs.

Now is it profytable and good, that we take hede, make search therat ter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde: but the shamefull vnhonest, & noysome thynges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, & we maye make the kyngdome quyte and peaceable for all men, and that we myght some tyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thyng that now is present before oure eyes, to wythstande it, and to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner.

What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt, and had obtained the frendship that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hys honoure of every man, as the next and principall vnto the kyng, he coude not for benite hym selfe from hys pryde, hath undertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.

With many folde disceate also hath he desired to destroye Mardochus oure helper & preferer,

The booke of wysdome,

The fyrst Chapter.

How we ought to searche and enquire after God, & how be those that feinde hym. Of the holy goost, we ought to fynde from backe syde & murmure, &c.

Sett youre affectyō vpon ryght trowthesse, ye that be iudges of the earth. Haue a good opinion of the Lorde, and seke hym in synclenesse of herte. For he wil be founde of them that tempte him not, & appeareth vnto such as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertu (if it be allowed) refourmeth the vntowse. And why? wysdome shall not entre into a frowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fawnded nortoure, & withdraueth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstandyng: and where wyckednes hath the vpper hande, he flyeth from thence. For the spere of wysdome is lounge, gentle and graciously, & wyll haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euill wyth hys lippes. For God is a wytrnesse of hys reynes, a true searcher out of hys herte, and an hearer of hys toge. For the spere of the Lord fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde: & the same that vpholdeth all thynges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

Therfore, he that speaketh vnrightheous thynges, can not be hydd, neither maye he escape the iudgement of reproofe. And why? iniquyfiction shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reproofe of hys wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wyckednes shall be punished. For ye care of gelousy heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudginges shall not be hydd. Therfore, beware of murmure, which is nothyng worth, and refrayne youre tonge from sleaude. For there is no worde so darch and secrete, that it shall goo for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Deske not pour a wne death in the error of your lyfe, destroye not your selues thow the workes of your a wne hader. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruccyon of the lounge. For he created all thynges, that they myght haue their beyng: yee all the people of the earth hath he made & they shuld haue health that there shulde be no destruccyon in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for righteounesse is curialling and immortal, but vnrightheounesse byngeth death.) Neuertheles the vngodly call her preferre, whych hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocēt Hester the lyke partaker of oure kyngdome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken the oute of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Jewes (which were accused of the wicked, that they might be destroyed) are no euill doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes: and that they be the chyldren of the most hye lounge God, by whom the kyngdome of vs & oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hitherto. Wherefore, as for the letters and commaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effect: for he that lett them vp and inuented the, hageth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, & God (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after hys deservynge.

And vpon this ye shall publish and set vpon the cōpy of this letter in all places, that the Jewes maye frely and without hinderaunce holde them selues after theyr a wne statutes, and that they maye be helpe, and that vpon the xiii. dape of the xii. moneth. And, they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of theyr angursh and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the dape, where in the chosen people shulde haue perished.

Howouer, amonge the hye solenne dayes ye haue, ye shall holde this dape also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come this dape maye be a remembrance to good, for all such as loue the prosperite of the Persians: but a remembrance of destruccyon to those that be sedycious vnto vs.

All cityes & landes that do not this, shall horribly perishe and be destroyed wyth the sword and fyre, and shall not onely be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wyde beastes and foules.

The ende of the reast of the booke of Esther, her vnto them both with wordes & workes: and whyle they thynke to haue a frende of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

The.ii. Chapter.

The ymaginacions and desires of the wycked, and thei counsell agaynst the saythfull.

Where the vngodly talke and ymaginacions amonge them selues (but not ryght:) The tyme of oure lyfe is but short and tedious: and when a man is once gone, he hath no more ioye nor pleasure, nether knowe we any mā that turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of naught, and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure byeth is as a smoke in oure noses, and the wordes as a sparck to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shall be very asches that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanish as the soot aye. Oure lyfe shall passe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to naught as the myst that is dymed awaye with the beames of the Sonne, and put downe with the heate therof. Oure name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle, and no man shall haue oure workes in remembraunce.

For oure tyme is a very shadowe & passeth awaye, & after oure ende there is no returning, for it is fast sealed, so that no man cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that ther are, and lett vs soone vse the creature lyke as in yowth. Let vs fyll oure selues with good wyne & opyntment, and let there be no shoure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. Let there be no remedye, but oure lust go thorow it. Lett every one of you be partaker of oure voluptuousnes. Let vs leaue some tokē of our pleasure in every place, for that is oure porcion, els get we nothyng. Lett vs oppresse the poore ryghteous, let vs not spare the wyddow nor olde mā: let vs not regarde the heedes that are gray for age. Lett vs laue of vngodlynesse be our auctorite, for þing that is feble is nothing worth. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghteous, and why? he is not for oure profyt, yee he is cleane contrary to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offending agaynst þ law, and schalldreth vs as trasgressours of all nyrour. He maketh his boast to haue the knowledge of God, yee he calleth him self Goddes sonne. He is the bewayer of our thoughtes: He greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his life is not like other mens, his wayes are of another fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne personnes, he withdraweth hym selfe from oure wayes as fro fylthynges: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the tyme, and maketh his boast that God is his father. Lett vs se then yf his wordes be true, lett vs proue what shall come vpon hym: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. For yf he be þ true sonne of God he wyll receaue him, and deliuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Lett vs examen hym with despytfull rebuke and tormentyng, that we may knowe his dignite, and proue his patience. Lett vs condemne hym with the most shameful death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Such thynges do the vngodly ymagin, and go astraye, for their awne wyckednes hath blynded them. As for the mysteries of God, they vnderstande the not: they nether hope for the rewarde of ryghteousnesse, nether regarde þ worship that holy soules shall haue. For God created mā to be vnderstode, yee after þ ymage of his awne lykenesse made he hi. Neuerthelesse thorow enuie of the deuill came death in to the worlde: and they that holde of his lyde, do as he doth.

The.iii. Chapter.

The conseruacion and assurance of þ ryghteous. The rewarde of the saythfull.

At the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shall not touch the. In the syght of þ vntowse they appeared to dye, and they ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the righteous is indged to be vetter destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffre payne before men, yet is they hope full of immortallite. They are punished but in fewe thynges, neuerthelesse in many thynges that they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and synedeth them mete for him selfe: yee as þ golde in the forname doth he trye them, and receaueth the as a bzent offeringe, and when the tyme cometh, they shall be looked vpon.

The ryghteous shall wyne as þ sparkes that renne thorow the red bushe. They shall iudge the nacyons, and haue dominion ouer the people, and they Lord shall raygne for cuer. They that put they trust in him, shall vnderstande the trueth, and soch as he saythfull, will agree vnto him in loue: for his cholen shall haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodly shall be punished accordyng to they awne ymaginacions, for they haue despyled the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lorde.

Who so despylith wyldome & nyrour, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of soche, it is but vayne, they labours vnfutefull, & they workes vnfuteable. They wynges are vndiscrete, and they chyldren most vngodly. They creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren and vnderfled, which hath not knowne the synfull bedd: she shall haue frute frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, which with his handes hath wrought no vnrightheousnes, nether ymagined wicked thynges agaynst God. For vnto him shall be geue þ speciall gift of sayth, and the most acceptable porcion in the temple of God. For glorious is þ frute of good labour, and the rote of wyldome shall neuer fade awaye. As for the chyldren of aduouterers, they shall come to an ende, & the seede of an vnrightheous bedd shall be roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothing regarded, and their last age shall be without honoure. Yf they dye hastily they haue no hope, nether shall they be spokē to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnrightheous.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Of the chaste generacion of the saythfull, and of theyi felicity. Of the death of þ ryghteous, and of the conseruacion of the vntowse.

How saye is a chaste generacion with vertue? The memorie shall be of immortall, for it is knowne with God and with men. When it is present, me take example there at: and yf it goo awaye, yet they despye it. It is all waye crowned and holden in honour, and wynteth the rewarde of the vnderfled batayll. But þ multitude of vngodly chyldren is vnfuteable, & the thynges that are planted with whordome, shall take no depe rote, nether laye any fast foundation. Though they be greene in þ braunches, for a tyme, yet shall they be shaken with þ wynde: for they stande not fast, and thorow þ vehemencie of the wynde they shall be roted out. For þ vnperfected braunches shall be broken, they frute shall be vnfuteable and sowre to cate, yee mete for nothyng. And why? all þ chyldren that are borne of the wicked, must beare record of þ wyckednesse agaynst their fathers & mothers, when they be asked. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken with death, yet shall he be in rest.

Age is an honorable thyng: neuertheles it standeth not onely in the length of tyme, nether in the multitude of yeaeres: but a mans wyldome is the graye harte, and an vnderfled lyfe is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amonge synners, he translated him. Yee suddenly was he taken awaye, to the intent that wyckednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandyng, & that ypocryse shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewitchyng of lyes make good thynges darck, the vntowse felicitye also and wyckednes of voluptuous despye turne asyde the vnderstandyng of the symple. Though he was soone ded, yet fulfilled he moche tyme: for his soule pleased God: therfore hastid he to take hym awaye from amonge the wycked. This the people se, and vnderstande it not, they laye not vpon soche thynges in theyi hertes, how that the lounge fauoure and mercy of God is vpon his sainctes, and that he hath respect vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is ded cometh: neth the vngodly which are lyuyng: and þ yowth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnrightheous. For they se þ ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuyed for him, and wherfore the Lord hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se him and despyse him, therfore shall God also laugh the to scorne: so that they the selues shall dye here after (but without honour) yee in shame amonge the ded for euermore. For without any voyce shall he burst those that be puffed vp, & remoue the from the foundacyons, so that they shall be layed waste vnto þ pyest. They shall mourne, and theyi memozi shall perper. So they beynge afrayed shall remembre theyi synnes, and theyi awne wyckednesse shall be wyse them.

The.v. Chapter.

The constancye of the ryghteous before theyi persecuters. The hope of the vntowse is vnderfled and vayne. The blessings of the sayntes and godly.

When shall þ ryghteous stode in great steadfastnesse agaynst soche as haue dealt extremely wyth them, and taken awaye theyi labours: When they se it, they shall be vexed wyth horryble fear, and shall wonder at the hastynesse of þi daye health: growinge for very distresse of mynde and shall saye within them selues, haunyng inwarde sorowe, and mournyng for very angursh of mynde.

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, & iested vpon. The foolles thought theyi lyfe very madnesse, and theyi ende to be with out honour. But lo, how they are counted among þ chyldre of God, & theyi porcion is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred fro the waye of trueth, the lyght of ryghteousnesse hath not wynd vnto vs, and the sonne of vnderstandyng rose not vpon vs. We haue wried oure selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pyde done vnto vs? What profyt hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messanger rennyng before: as a wypp that passeth ouer the waues of the water, which when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be founde nether the path of it in the floudes. As a byde.

wyde that sleeth thow in the ayre, and no man can se eny token where she is shoven, but onely heareth the noyse of her wynges, beatinge the lyght wynde, partinge þ ayre, thow the vehemence of her goynge, and flyeth on bakynge her wynges, where as after warde no token of her waye can be founde. As lyke as when an arrowe is shot at a mark, it parteth þ ayre, which immediatly cometh together agayne, so that a mā can not know where it wete thow. Eue so we in lyke maner as soone as we were bozne, be ganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende, & haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure awne wyckednesse.

E Soch wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of þ vngodly is lyke a drie thysell flour (or dust) that is blowne awaye with the winde: lyke a thynne scomme that is scatred abroad with the storme: lyke as the smoke which is disperfed here and there w the winde, & as the rement braunce of a stranger þ tarict for a dape, and the departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermore: their reward also is with the Lord: and their remembraunce with the best. Therfore, shall they receaue a glorio^s wyngdome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for w þs ryght hande shall he couer the, and with þs awne holy arme shall he defende the. His gelouly also shall take awaye the harnesse, & he shall weapen the creature to be auēged of þ enemies. He shall put on ryghteousnes for a breast plate, and take sure iudgement in steade of an helmet. The invincible shilde of equite shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare and the whole compase of the worlde shall fyght wth hym agaynst the vntyse.

D Then shall the thonder boltes go out of the lightnings, and come out of the rayne bowe of the cloudes to the place apointed: out of þ hearde stony indignacion there shall fall thyck hayles, and the water of the see shall be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renne roughly together. Pee a myghty wynde shall stande by agaynst them, and a storme shall scatter them abroad. Thus þ vnyghteous dealynge of the shall byynge all the lande to a wildernes, & wyckednes shall ouerthrowe the dwellinges of the myghtye.

The. vi. Chapter.

The callinge of kynge, wynges, and iudges: which are also exhorted to seache wyldome.

Wylsome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one þ is strong. heare therfore (O ye kynge) & vnderstande: O lerne þe that be iudges of the endes of the earth. Gene eare þe that rule the multitudes, & desire in moch people. For the power is geuen you of the Lord, and the strength fro the best: which shall trye poure work: & seache out poure ymaginacions: how that ye beinge officers of his kingdome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte þ lawe of righteounes, nor walked after þ wyll of God. Horribly & that ryght soone shall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgement shall they haue that beare rule. Therfore is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorite shall be soe punished. For God which is lord ouer all, shall excepte no mans personne, ne ther shall he stāde i awe of any mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small & greates, & careth for all a lyke. But the myghty shall haue the sozer punishment.

Into you therfore (O ye kynge) do I speake, that ye maye lerne wyldome and not go amysse. For they þ hepe þs ryghteousnes shall be ryghteously iudged, & they that are lerne in righteous thinges, shall fynde to make answer. Therfore, set poure lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurtour. Wyldome is a noble thinge, and neuer faydeth awaye: yee she is easely sene of the that loue her, and founde of soche as seke her. She preuenteth the that desire her, & she maye fynd thewe her selfe vnto the. Who so awaketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greates trouble, for he shall fynde her syttinge readye at þs doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandynge: and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe, ad þ soone. For she goeth aboute, sekynge soch as are mete for her, she weeth her selfe cherfully vnto them in their goynge, and meeteth the with all diligēce. For the vnfayned desire of reformacion is her begynnynge: to care for nurtour is loue, and loue is the kepynge of her lawes. Now the kepynge of the lawe is perfeccion and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familiar with God. And so þ desire of wyldome ledeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge. If poure delpte be the in roiall seates and cypiters (O ye kynge of the people) set poure lust vpon wyldome, that ye maye raygne for euer more. O loue the lyght of wyldome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wyldome what she is, and how she came by, I wyll tell you, and wyll not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but wyll seke her out from the begynnynge of the natuure, and byynge the knowledge of her into lyght, & wyll not kepe back the trueth. Nether wyll I haue to do wyth consumynge enuye, for soch a man shall not be partaker of wyldome. But the multytude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, & a wyse kyng is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thow my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The

The. vii. Chapter.

Wyldome ought to be preferred before all thynges.

I My selfe also am a mortall mā, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacion of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I shapyned to be fleshy. In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude thow the seide of man, and the commodious apetyte of slepe. Wth I was bozne, I receaued lyke ayre as other men, & fell vpon the earth (which is my nature) cryng and wepyng at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, and brought vp with greates cares. For there is no lig that hath had eny other begynnynge of byrth. All mē then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge out in lyke maner.

Wherfore I despyed, and vnderstanding was geuen me: I called, and the sprete of wyldome came into me. I sett more by her then by kyngdomes and roiall seates, and counted ryches nothyng in comparison of her. As for precio^s stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but clape before her sight. I loued her aboue wellfare & beutye, & purposed to take her for my lyght for her lyght cannot be quenched. All good thynges came to me with her, & innumerable ryches thow we her handes. I was glad in the all, for thys wyldome wente before me, ad I knew not that she is the mother of all good thinges. Now as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches fro no man, for she is an infinite treasure vnto mē, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue & frendshype of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wyldome.

God hath graunted me to talke wysely, and conueniently to handle the thyges that he hath graciously let me. For it is he, that ledeth vnto wyldome, and teacheth to vse wyldome a ryght. In his hand are both we & oure wordes: yee all oure wyldome, oure vnderstandynge and knowledge of all oure wordes. For he hath geuen me the true sciēce of these thynges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, ad the powers of the elementes: the begynnynge, endynge and myddest of the tymes: how the tymes altere how one goeth after another, and how they are fulfilled, the course of the peare: the ordynances of the starres: the natures & kyndnes of beastes: the furiosnesse of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the ymaginacions of men: the diuersities of yonge plantes: þ vertues of rotes, ad all soch thynges as are secrete & not loked for, haue I learned. For the workmaster of all thinges hath taught me wyldome. In her is the sprete of vnderstandynge, which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, sorpyll, curteous, discrete, quych, vnderfyled, playne, swete, loupynge the thynges þ is good, sharpe, which forbiddeth not to do well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, fre: haupynge all vertues, circumspecte in all thynges: receaupynge all spretes of vnderstandynge beynge cleane and sharpe. For wyldome is nymler then all nymler thinges: she goeth thow & attayneth to all thynges, because of her clenness. For she is the bryeth of the power of God, and a pure cleane expresyng of the cleannes of Allmyghtie God. Therfore can no vnderfyled thyng come vnto her: for she is the byghthenes of the euerlastynge lyght, the vnderfyled myrroure of the maiesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse. And for so moch as she is one, she maye do all thinges: and beynge stedfast her selfe she renueth all, and amonge the people conueryeth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Godes frendes and prophetes for God loueth no man, but hym in whom wyldome dwelleth. For she is more beutye then the sunne, and geweth more lyght then the starres, and the dape is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the dape cometh nyght. But wyckednesse cannot ouercome wyldome, and foolishnes maye not be w þe

The. viii. Chapter.

The effectes of wyldome.

Wylsome reacheth from one ende to another mightely, & loungly both the ordre all thinges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen fro my youth vp: I did my diligēce to mary my selfe with her, soch loue had I vnto her beutye. Who so hath þ company of God, commendeth her noblyte, yee the Lord of all thynges him selfe loueth her. For she is the scole maistrisse of the nurtour of God, and the choicer out of his wordes. If a man wold desyre ryches in this lyfe, what is richer then wyldome, that worketh all thynges? Thou wilt saye: vnderstandynge worketh. What is it amoge all thynges, that worketh more then wyldome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnes, let him laboure for wyldome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes & prudence, righteounes and strenght, which are soch thynges as men can haue nothyng more profitable in their lyfe. If a mā desire moch knowledge, she can tell þ thynges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the sotelytes of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentēces. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and þ endes of all tymes and and ages. So I purposed after this manner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and comme loungly with her: no doute she shall ge-ue me good counsell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnes & grefe. For her sake shall I be well and honestly taken amonge the comens and lordes of the coun-cell. Though I be yonge, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandyng, so that I shall be mar-uelous in the syght of grete me, and the faces of princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tounge, they shall byde my leasure, when I speake, they shall loke vpon me, and yet I talke moch, they shall lape their hādes vpon their mouth. Moreover, by the mea-nes of her I shall obtayne immortallite, and leane behynde me an euerlasting memoriall amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacjons shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrantes shall be afrayed, when they do but heare of me, among the multitude I shall be counted good and myghty in batayll. When I come home, I shall fynde rest with her: for her company hath no bitternes, & her felowship hath no tedynousnes, but myrth and ioye.

Now when I considered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte how that to be ioyned vnto wyldome is immortallite, and grete pleasure to haue her frendshype: how that in the woordes of her handes are infinite ryches: how that, who so kepeth company with her shall be wyle: & that he which talketh with her, shall come to honoure: I wente aboute sekynge, together vnto me. For I was a ladd of a rypp wytt, and had a good vnderstandyng.

But whē I grew to moze vnderstandyng, I came to an vnderfyled bodp. Neuertheles when I perceaued that I coude not ke-pe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wyldome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepped vnto Lord, and besought him, and with my whole herte I sayde after this manner.

The ix. Chapter.

A prayer of Salomon to obtayne wyldome.

God of my fathers, and Lorde of mercyes (thou that hast made all thynges with thy worde, and ordeyned man thozow thy wyldome, that he shoulde haue domynyon ouer the creature which thou hast made: that he shoulde orde the worlde accordinge to equite and ryghteousnes, and execute iudgement with a true hert) geue me wyldome, which is euer about thy seate, and put me not out from amonge thy chyldren: for I thy seruauit and sonne of thy hande mayden, am a feble personne, of a softe tyme, and to pouge to the vnderstandyng of iudgement and lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amonge the chyldren of me, yet yet thy wyldome be not with him, he shall be nothig regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kyng vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a temple vpon thy holy mount, & an aulter in citie wherin thou dwellest: a lyknesse of thy holy tabernacle whych thou hast prepared from the begynnyng, & thy wyldome with the, which knoweth thy woordes, which also was with the, when thou madest the world & knewe what was acceptable in thy syght and ryght in thy commaundmentes. Sende her out of thy holy heauens and fro the trāse of thy maiesty, that she maye be with me, & laboure with me: that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thynges: and she shall lede me soberly in my woordes, and preserue me in her power. So shall my woordes be acceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy people righteously, and be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what mā is he, that may knowe & counsell of God? Or, who can thin-ke what the will of God is? For & thoughtes of mortall men are miserable and oureforcastes are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall and corruptible body is heuy vnto the soule, and & earthy mansyon kepeth do-wne that vnderstandyng that muleth vpon many thynges. Verry hardly can we discerne the thynges that are vpon earth, & grete laboure haue we, or we can fynde & thynges which are before oure eyes. Who wyll then seke oute the groude of the thynges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde, who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandyng and mea-nyng, excepte thou geue wyldome, and sende thy holy goost from aboue: & the wayes of them which are vpon earth, maye be re-fourmed: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preserued thozow wyldome.

The x. Chapter.

The beneficence of the ryghteous commeth thozow wyldome

Wyldome preserued the fyrst man, I whom God made a father of the worlde, whē he was created alone brought hi out of his offence toke him out of the *moulde of the earth: & gaue him power to rule all thynges. * When the vnyghteous wete a waye in his wrath fro this wyldome, & brothered perpyred tho-row the wrath of murthure. Agayne, when the *water destroyed & whole worlde, wyld-ome preserued & ryghteous thozow a poore tre, wherof she was gouerner her selfe. Mo-reouer whē wyckednes had gotten & vpper hande,

hande so & nacjons were puffed vp wth pryde she knewe the ryghteous, preserued him fau-leste vnto God, and layed vpon sure mercy of his chyldren. She preserued the ryghteous, * whē he fled fro the vngodly that perished, what tyme as & fyre fell downe vpon the citties: Lyke as yet this dape & vnfutell waste, and smokyng lād geueth testimony of the wyckednesse: yee, the vnypp & vnitimely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnsaythfull soule, there standeth a pylle of salt, for all such as regarded not wyldome gat not onely this hurte, & they knewe not the thynges which were good, but also left behynde the vnto men, a memoriall of their foolishnes: so that in & thynges wherin they synned, they coude not be hydd. But as for such as take hede vnto wyldome, she shall de-lyuer them from sorowe.

* When the ryghteous fled because of hye brothers wrath, wyldome led hi the ryght waye, shewed him the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowledge of holy thynges, made him riche in his laboures, & brought to passe the thynges that he wente aboute. In & discreafulnes of such as defrauded him, she stode by him, & made him ryche. She saued hi from the enemies, & defended him from the disceauers. She made hym stronge in bat-tall & gaue him the victorie, that he myght knowe, how that wyldome is stronger then all thynges. * When & ryghteous was sold, she forsoke him not, but deliuered hym fro synners. She wente downe with hym into the dongeon, and sayled him not in the ban-des: * tyll she had brought hym the scepter of the realme, ad power agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accused hym, she declared them to be lyers, and brought hym to perpetuall woxypp.

* She deliuered the ryghteous people ad fauleste seide, from & nacjons that oppressed them. She entred into the soule of the ser-uaunt of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynst the horrible king. She gaue the ryghteous the rewarde of theyr labours, & led them forth a maruelous waye:
on the dape tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, ad a lyght of starres in the night season. * She brought the thozow & reed sec, & carped them thozow the grete water. She drownded theyr enemies in the see, & brought them out of the depe. So the ryghteous to-ke & spoyles of the vngodly. * and prayled thy holy name, O Lorde, & magnified thy victorious hand wth one accorde. * For wyld-ome openeth the mouth of the domine, ad maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

The xi. Chapter.

The miracles done for Israel: The vengeance of sinners. The grete power and mercy of God.

She ordeed theyr woordes in & hādes of the holy prophet: * so & they went thozow & wyldernes that was not inhabited, and pitched their tentes in & wast deserte. They stode agaynst their enemies, & were auaged of their aduersaries. * When they were thyrstye, they called vpon the, ad water was geue the out of & most hye rock and theyr thyrst was quēched out of & harde stone. For by & thynges, wher thozow their enemies were punyshed, were & chyldren of Israel helped in theyr nede, to theyr confort.
For vnto the enemies & gauest mā's bloud in steade of luyng water. And wher as they had scarcenelle in & rebuke, whē the chldren were slayne, thou gauest vnto thyne awne a pleceous water vnloked for: decla-ryng by the thyrt that was at that tyme, how thou woldest byng thyne awne vnto honoure, and slape theyr aduersaries.

* For when they were tryed and noztured with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, ad punyshed tho-row the wrath of God. These hast thou exhortet as a father, and proued the: but vnto the other & hast bene a boysterous kyng, layed hard to theyr charge, & condēd the.
Whether they were absent or present, their punyment was a lyke. For their grefe was double: namely, mournyng, and the remebraunce of thynges past. But whē they perceaued & theyr punymentes vnto the good, they thought vpon the Lorde, and wouderedat & ende. For at & last they helde moch of hym, of whō I out casting they thought scorne, as of an abiecte. Neuerthelesse, the ryghteous vnto so when they were thyrt-ye: but eue lyke as & thynges of & foolish were, so was also ther wickednes. * Where as certayne men now (thozow errour) dyd woxyppe domine serpentes ad vayne beastes thou sendest a multitude of domine beastes vnto them for a vengeance: that they myght knowe, that loke wherewithall a man synneth, by the same also shall he be punyshed.
* For vnto thy allmyghty hande, & made & worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende amonge them an heape of Serces, or woode Lyons, or cruell beastes of a straunge kynde, loch as are vnkowne, or spoutt fire or cast out a smokyng breth, or wote horrible sparkes out of their eyes, which myght not onely destrope them with hurtige, but also kyll the with their horrible syght. Yee, without these beastes might they haue bene slayne with one winde, beyng persecu-ted of their awne woordes, & scattered a broade thozow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles, thou hast ordeed all thynges in measure, nōbre & weight. For & hast euer had grete strength & might, & who maye wth stande & power of thyne arme? And why?
See lyke as

lyke as þe small thing þe the balace weyeth so is the worlde before þe: yee, as a droppe of þe mynyng dew, that falleth downe vpon þe earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: * a makest the as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they shuld amende. For thou louest all the thynges that are, and hatest none of them whos þe hast made: nether dydest thou ordeyne or make any thyng, of euell wyll.
How might any thing endure, yf it were not thy will? Or how coulde any thyng be preserued, excepte it were called of the? But thou sparest all, for all are thyne (O Lord) thou louer of soules.

The. xii. Chapter.

The mercy of God to the synners, the workes of God are vntrepassable. So geueth iustice to the wicked.

Lorde, how gracious and swete is thy sperte in all thynges: Therefore chastest thou them measurably þe go wroge, and warrest the cōcerninge the thynges wherin they offende: thou sprakest vnto the (O Lord) & exhortest the to leane theyr wickednes, and to put theyr trust in þe. * As for those olde inhabytors of thy holy lāde, thou myghtest not awayne the, for they committed abhominable workes agaynst the: as witchcraft, sorcery, ad idollatry, they slew theyr awne children without mercy: they dydeate vpon mē's bowels, & denoured the bloude: yee, because of such ab-hominaciōs, mysbelues & offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: þe the land which thou louest aboue all other, might be adwel-lynge for the children of God.

Neuertheles, thou sparedst them also (as men) & sendest þe forcrūners of thyne hoost euē hoznettes to destrope them out by lytle ad lytle. Not that þe wast unable to subdue the vngodly vnto the ryghte i battayle, or w cruell beastes, or with one rough word to destrope the together: * But thy mynde was to dyue them out by lytle ad lytle, ge-uynge the tyme & place to amende: knowig well, that it was an vnyghteous nacp & wicked of nature, ad þe their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede fro þe begynnynge, & feared no man: Yet hast thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyll saye vnto the: why hast thou done that? Or who will stāde agaynst thy iudgment? Or who wyll come before thy face an auenger of vnyghteous men? Or who wyll blame the, yf the people perishe, whom thou hast made? For there is none other God but þe, * that carest for all thynges: that þe mayest declare how that thy iudgment is not vnyght. There darre nether kynge, ner tyraunt in thy sight require accomptes, of the whos thou hast destroyed.

For so moch then as thou art ryghteous thy selfe, þe ordrest all thynges ryghteously
* a punishest euē him that hath not deser-ued to be punished, & takest him for a stranger and an aleaūt in the lande of thy power.
For thy power is the begynnynge of ryghteousnes: and because thou art Lorde of all thynges, therfore art thou gracio vnto al.
When men thynke the not to be of a full strength, thou declarest thy power: ad boldly deliuerest thou them ouer that knowe þe not. But thou Lorde of power iudgest quietly, and ordrest vs with great wyldom, for thou mayest do as thou wylt.

By such workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a man also shulde be iust & louynge: and hast made thy chylde to be of a good hope: for euē when thou iudgest, þe geuest rowme to amende from synnes.
For in so moch as thou hast punished, and with such diligēce deliuered the enemyes of thy seruantes, which were worthy to dye (where thou wylt thou gauest them tyme and place of amendement that they might turne fro theyr wickednes) with how greate diligence then punishest þe thynne awne children vnto whole fathers thou hast sworne & made couenantes of good promyses: So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest our enemyes diuerse wayes, to þe intēt that when we punishe, we shuld remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are punished, to put oure trust in thy mercy.

Wherfore, where as men haue luyed ignorantly & vnyghteously, thou hast punished the sore, euē thou wylt þe same thynges þe theyr workes. * For they wete astraye very longe in the waye of erreour, & helde þe beastes, which euē theyr enemyes despyled) for goddes, luyng as children of no vnderstandynge. Therefore hast thou sent a scozne full punishment amonge the, as amonge the children of ignoraunce. As for such as wolde not be reformed by those scoznes ad rebukes, they felt the worst punishment of God For the thynges that they suffred, they bare them vnpatiently, beinge not content in them but vnwillinge. And when they per-shed by the same thynges that they toke for goddes, they knowledged then, that there was, but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came the ende of theyr damnacyon vpon them.

The. xiii. Chapter.

All thynges be bayne, excepte the knowledge of God. Idolaters and Moles are woked.

Vayne are all men, which haue not knowledge of God: * as were they that out of the good thynges which are sene, knewe not hym, þe of hym selfe is euē lastynge. Nether toke they so moch regarde of þe workes that are made, as to

as to knowe, who was the craftermā of the but some toke the fyre, some the wynde or ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water, some toke Sunne ad Moone, or the lyghtes of heauen which rule the earth, for goddes. But though they had such pleasure in their beuty, that they thought the to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowne, how moch more fayrer he is that made the.
For the maker of beuty hath ordened all these thynges. Or yf they marueled at the power and workes of them, they shulde haue perceaued thereby, that he which made these thynges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greatnesse and beuty of the creature, the maker therof may playnely be knowne. Notwithstandynge they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, ad wolde fynde hym, and yet myse. And why? for so moch as they go about in hys workes and seke after them, it is a token, þe they regarde and holde moch of his workes that are se-ne: howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For yf theyr vnderstandynge & knowledge be so greate, that they can diserne the worlde and the creatures, why do they not rather fynde out the Lorde therof?

But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deed is theyr hope, that call them Goddes which are but the workes of mens hādes: golde, syluer, and the thynges that are founde out by connyng, the similitude of beastes, or any vayne stōne that hath bene made by hande of olde. * Or as whē a carpenter cut-teth downe a tree out of the wodd, and pareth of the bark of it conyngly: and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vfed, & dzellethe meate with the resydue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profytable for nothyng (for it is a croked pece of wodd and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow hys vanite, and accordynge to the knowledge of hys connyng) he geueth it some propozicion, fashioneth it after the simi-litude of a mā, or maketh it lyke some beast straketh it ouer with redb, and paynteth it, & loke what foule spot is in it he casteth some colour vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall, & maketh it fast with yron, prouidyng so for it, lest it hap-pento fall: for it is well knowne, that it can not helpe it selfe: And why? it is but an yma-ge, and must of necessity be helped.

Then goeth he & offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his chylde and for his wyfe: he se-keth helpe at it, he asketh coucell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it that hath no soule: for health, he maketh his peticiō vnto him þe is lyke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon hi for help that is not able to helpe him selfe: & to sende him a good iournepe, he prayeth him þe map not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hāde (whether it be to optayne any thyng, or to worcke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good,

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages.
A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The ruines that come of idolatrye.

Aayne, another mā purposing to sayle, and begynnynge to take his iourney thorow the ragynge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stock, that is farre weaker then the tree that beareth hi. For as for it, coueteousnesse of monye hath founde it out, & the craftermā made it with his connyng.
But thy prouidence, O father, gouernest all thynges fro the begynnynge: * For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of þe wanes: declarynge ther-by, that thou hast power to helpe i all thin-ges, yee though a man wente to the see with out shyp, neuerthelesse, that the workes of thy wyldome shulde not be bayne, * thou hast caused an arke to be made: and therfore do men committe theyr lyues to a small pece of wodd, passynge ouer the see in a shyp, and are saued.

* For in the olde tyme also whē the proude gynantes perished, he in whos the hope was left to increse the wroide) wente into the shyppe, which was gouerned thorow thy hand, and so left seide behinde him vnto the worlde. For happye is þe tree, where thou wylt ryghteously cometh: but cursed is þe ydol that is made with hādes, * yee both it and he that made it. he, because he made it: and it, because it was called God where as it is but a fraple thyng. * For the vngodly and hys vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God, Euē so þe worcke and he that made it also, shalbe punished together. Therfore shal there a plage come vpon ydoles of the heathen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhomyacyon, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwysse. And why, þe sekyng out of ydoles is the begynnynge of wyldome, and the bypnyng vpon of the is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from þe begynnynge, nether shal they continue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therefore shal they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne þe was taken awaye fro hym, he made hym an ymage (in all þe haste) of hys deed sonne: & so begane to worshyp hi as God, which was but a deed man, & ordened his seruantes to offere vnto hi. Then by procelle of tyme & thorow an vngracious custome, this erreour was kepte:

as lawe, and tyrantes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those y were so farre of that men myght not wor- shipp them presently, they picture was brought fro farre (lyke the ymage of a king whom they wolde honour) to the intent y with grete diligence they might worshipp him whiche was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singular connyge of the crafterman gaue the ignorant also a great occasion to worshipp ymages. For y workman willing to do hym a pleasure p set him a worke, laboured with all his con- ninge to make y ymage of the best fashion. And so, thow the beuty of the worke the comen people was discaued, in so moch y they toke him now for a God, which a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And this was the erreure of mans lyfe, when men (ether for to serue they a wne affectio, or to do some pleasure vnto kynge) ascribed vnto stones and stockes y name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreover, this was not ynough for the that they erred in the knowledge of God: but where as they lyued in the grete war- res of ignorance, those many & grete pla- ges called they peace. For ether they lue they a wne children, & offered them, or dyd sacryfyce in synghet season, or els helde vn- reasonable watches: so that they kepte ne- ther lyfe ner marriage cleane: but ether one lue another to death maliciously, or els gre- ued hys neyghboure wth aduoutre. And thus were all thynges mixte together, bloud, manslaughter, theft, dissimulation, corrup- tion, unfaithfulness, sedicion, perjury, dis- quietynge of good men, vntthankfulness, de- filynge of soules, chaungynge of byrth, vn- stedfastnesse of marriage, inpyrder of aduou- tre and vncleennesse. And why? the honou- ringe of abhominable ymages is the cause, the begynnyng and ende of all euell. For they that worshype Idols, ether they are mad when they be mercy, or prophetic lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lyghtly forswear them selues. For in so moch as their trust is in y Idols (which haue nether soule ner vn- derstandynge) though they sweare falsely, yet they thynke it shal not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a grete plague vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euell oppinion of God, geuynge hede vnto Idols, wearynge vniustly to discaue, and despying ryghteousnes. For they swea- ringe is no vertue, but a plague of them that synne, and goeth cuer with the offence of the vngodly.

The xv. Chapter.

The booke of the sapthall, prayse the mercy of God, for whose graces sake they serue not Idols.

Blessed thou (O our God) art sweete, lge sufferynge and true, and in mercy or- derest thou all thynges.

Though we synne, yet are we thynne, for we knowe thy strength. If we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe y, is perfecte ryghteousnes: For, to knowe thy ryghteousnes ad power, is the rote of immortalite. As for the thynge that men haue soude out thow their euell science, it hath not discaued vs: as the payn- tinge of the picture (an vnprofitable labour) and carued ymage, with diuerse colours, whose syght entyse the ignorant: so that he honoureth & loueth the picture of a deyd ymage that hath no soule.

Nevertheless, they that loue soch euell thynges, are worthy of death: they that trust in them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honoure them. The potter also taketh ad tempereth soft earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some clea- ne vessel for seruite, & some contrary. But where to enery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter him selfe. So with his wayne la- bourer he maketh a God of the same claye: this doth euen he, whiche a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and within a lytle whyle after (whē he dieth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandinge, he careth not the more because he shal labour, ner because his lyfe is short: but stryuethe to excell goldsmithes, the syluer smythes and cooper smythes, & ta- keth it for an honour to make wayne thyn- ges. For hys herte is athes, hys hope is but wayne earth, & his life is more vile the claye for so moch as he knoweth not his a wne ma- ker, that gaue him hys soule to worke, ad bryethed in him the bryeth of lyfe. They coun- te oure lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuer- sacion to be, but a market, and that men shulde euer be gettynge, and that by euell meanes. Now he that of earth maketh frag- le vessels and ymages, knoweth him selfe to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of thy people & that holde the in subieccio, are vnwyle, vnhappye, and excreadyng proude vnto they a wne soules, for they iudge all the Idols of the heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye sight to se, ner noses to smell, ner eares to heare, nor fynge of hādes for to grope: & as for they fete, they are to slowe to goo. For mā made them, & he that hath but a borrowed sprete, fashioned them. But no mā cā make a God lyke vnto him: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnryghteous handes. He hym selfe is better then they who be worshyppeth, for he lyued he lyued though he was mortall, so dyd ne- uer they. For, they worshyppye beastes also, which are most miserable: for compare thi- ges that cannot fele vnto them and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his syght can be- holde eny good thing nether haue they geue prayse ner thankes vnto God.

The xvi. Chapter.

The punishment of idolaters, and the benefy- tes done vnto the sapthall.

Now these and soch other thynges ha- ue they suffered worthy punishment and thow the multitude of bea- stes are they rote oute. In steade of the which punishmentes thou hast gra- ciously ordred thyn a wne people, and geue the they desyre y they longed for: a newe & straunge taste, & preparing the quaples to be they meate: to y intent that (by the thyn- ges which were thewed and sent vnto the) they that were so greedy of meate, might be withdrawen euen from the desyre that was necessary. But these withi thowte tyme we- re brought vnto pouerte, ad tasted a newe meate. For it was requisite y (without eny excuse) destruction shulde come vpon those which vled tyzanny, & to shewe onely vnto y other, how they enemyes were destroyed.

For when the cruell woodnesse of the beastes came vpon them, they perished tho- row the synge of the cruell serpent.

Not withstandinge, they wathendured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle season, that they myght be resour- med, haupnge a toke of saluacion, to reme- bre the comaundement of thy lawe. For he y conuerted, was not healed by the thynge y he sawe, but by the, O sauoure of all. So in this thou thewedst thyn enemyes, y it is thou, which delyuerest from al euell. As for the, whē they were bytten w grethoppers and flies, they dyed, for they were worthy to perishe by soch. But nether the teeth of dra- gons ner of venimous wormes ouer cā thy chylde, for thy mercy was cuer by the & hel- ped the. Therefore were they punished to re- membre thy wordes, but hastily were they healed agayne, lest they shuld fall to so depe forgetfulness, y they myght not vse thy hel- pe. It was nether herbe ner playster y resto- red the to health, but thy worde (O Lord) which healeth all thynges. It is y (O Lord) that hast the power of lyfe & death: thou leddest vnto deathes doze, and byngest vp agayne. But mā thow wickidnes slateth his a wne soule, and when his sprete goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, nether maye he call agayne the soule that is take awaye. It is not possible to escape thy hande. For the vngodly that wolde not knowe y, were punished by y strength of thyn arme: with straunge waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thow wyse were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thinge that fyre myght do more then water which quenche all thynges: but the worlde is the auēger of the ryghteous. Some tyme was the fyre so tame, that y beastes which were sent to punish the vngodly, brent not: and that because they shulde se and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punishment of God. And some tyme brent the fyre i the water on euery syde, that it might destroye y vnryghteous nacyon of y earth. Agay- ne, thou hast fed thyn a wne people w sun- gels fode, & sent the byed ready from heaue (without they labour) beyng very plea- sant and of good taste. And to shewe thy ry- ches & swetnesse vnto thy chylde, thou ga- uest euery one they desyre, so y euery man might take what lyked hym best. But the snowe and pleabode the violence of the fyre & melted not: that they myght knowe, that the fyre burnyng in the hayle and rayne, de- stroyed the frute of the enemyes: y fyre also forgat his strength agayne: that the rygh- teous myght be noyshed. For the creature that serueth the (which art the maker) is se- arse in punishyng y vnryghteous, but is ca- sy & getle to do good, vnto soch as put their trust in the. Therefore dyd all thynges alter at the same tyme, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the noyse of all thyn- ges, accordynge to the desyre of them that had nede therof: that thy chylde (O Lord) whom thou louest, myght knowe, y it is not nature and the growinge of frutes that fede thy men, but that it is thy worde, which preserueth them that put they trust in the. For loke what myght not be destroyed with the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle sunne beame, it melted: y al mā might knowe, that thā kes ought to be geuen vnto the before the sunne ryse, and that thou oughtest to be worshypped before the daye springe. For the hope of y vntthankfull shal melt awaye as the wynter pte, and perishe as water, that is not necessary.

The xvii. Chapter.

The iudgmentes of God vpon the Egypciens.

Recate are y thy iudgmentes (O Lord) and thy counseils cā not be expessed: therefore mā do erre, that will not be reformed w thy wyf- dome. For when y vnryghteous thought to haue thy holy people i subieccio, they we- re bounde with the bandes of darcknes and longe nyght, but vnder the rofe, thynke to escape the cuerlastynge wyldome. And whyle they thought to be byd i y darcknesse of they synnes, they were scattered abrode i the very myddest of the darck couerpyng of forgetfulness, put to horrible feare and

See iii wonderously

Wonderously vexed: for the corner where they myght not kepe them from feare (because the sounde came downe and vexed them) yet, many terrible and straunge visions made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre myght geue them lyght, nether myght the cleare flammes of p starres lyghten p horrible nyght. For they appeared vnto them a sodayne fyre, very dzedeful: At the which (when they sawe nothing) they were so afrayed, p they thought the thinge which they sawe, to be the more fearfull. * As for p sozery & enchaute-mēt that they used, it came to derision, and the proude wysdome was brought to shame.

For they that promised to dyue awaye the fearfulness and dzed from the weake soules, were lyk for feare themselves, and that with leone. And though none of the wonders feared the, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, & at p hyf-synge of the serpetes. In so moch that with t-eblyng they sowned, ad sayde they sawe not p aye, which no man yet maye escape.

For it is an heuy thyng, when a mans awne conscience beareth recorde of his wickednes and condemneyth hym. And why? a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thynges in hād. * Fearfulness is nothing els, but a declaring that a mā seeketh helpe and defence, to anwere for hym selfe. And loke how moch lesse the hope is withi. the more is the vncertentye of the matter, for the which he is punyshed. But they that came in the myghty nyght: slepte the slepe fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afrayed thozow the feare of the wonders, and somtyme they were so weake that they sowned with all: for an hasty & sodayne fearfulness came vpon the.

After warde, p eny of them had fallen, he was kepte and shut in pson, but without chaynes. But p eny dwelt in a byllage, p he had bene an hearde or husbandman he suffered intollerable necessite: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darknesse.

Whether it were a blasfynge wynde, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thyche braunches of the trees, or the vehemence of hasty rūnyng water, or greate noise of the fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge and runnyng of beastes whom they sawe not, or the myghty noise of roaryng beastes, or the sownde that answereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made them sowne for very feare. For all the earth sowned with cleare lyght, and no man was hyndered in his labour. Onely vpon them there fell a heuy nyght, an ymage of darknesse that was to come vpon the. Pee, they were vnto them selues the most heuy & horrible darknesse.

The fyre lyght that the Israelites had in Egypte The persecucion of the laphfull The Lord smote all the first borne of Egypte The synne of the people in the wilderness. Aaron stode betwixt the lyue and the ded, with his censoure.

Nevertheless, thy sayntes had a very greate lyght (p enmyes herde theyr voyce, but they sawe not the figure of them.) And because they suffered not p same thynges, they magnified p: ad they p were vexed afore (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and besought the (God) that there myght be a difference. * Therfore had they a burnynge pyler of fyre to lode them in the vnkowne waye, and thou gauest them the Sunne for a fre gyft without eny hurt. Reason it was that they shulde want lyght, & be put in the pson of darknes, which kepte thy chyldre in captiuyte, by who the vncorrupte lyght of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen. * When they thought to slaye the babes of the ryghteous (one beinge layed out, and pserued to be leader vnto the other) * thou broughtest out p whole multitude of the chyldren, and destroyedst these in the myghty water. Of that nyght were cure fathers certified afore that they knowyng vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myght be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued the health of the ryghteous, but p vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurte our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou caldest afore. For the ryghteous chyldren of the good men offred secretly, & ordred the lawe of ryghteousnes vnto vntite: that p iust shulde receaue good and euell in lyke maner, synngynge prayles vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of the enemies, and a pteous crye for chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruauant were punyshed in lyke maner. For they all together had innumerable that dyed one death.

* Nether were p lpyng sufficient to bury p deed, for in p twinklynge of an eye, p noblest nacyō of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make the beleue: but i the destruccō of the fyrst borne they knowledged, that it was p people of God. For whyle all thynges were still & whē the nyght was i the myddest of her course, thy Almyghtie worde (Lord) leapt downe from heauē out of thy royall trone, as a rough man of warre, i the myddest of the lade that was destroyed: & p warpe swerde perfourmed theyr straitē comādemēt, standynge and fylling all thynges with death: pee, it stode vpon the earth & reached vnto the heauē. Then the syght of the euell euell dreames vexed them sodely, and fearfulness came vpon them vnawares.

Then laye there one here, another there, half ded, half quyk, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visyōs that vexed the shewed the these thynges afore: so that they were not ignorant, wherfore they perished.

The tentacyō of death touched the ryghteous also, and amonge the multitude in p wilderness there was insurreccion, but thy wrath endured not long. For the blamelesse man wente in all the hast, and toke the bat-tayll vpon him, brought forth the weape of his ministracyō: xuen prayer and the censours of reconcilinge: sett hym selfe agaynst the wrath, and so brought the mistery to an ende: declaringe therby that he was thy seruauant. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power, ner with weapens of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttynge them in remembrance of the othe and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, and parted the waye vnto lpyng. * And why? in his longe garment was all the beauty, and in the foure rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiesty was wyrtten in the crowne of his heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, ad was afrayed of them: for it was onely a tē-tacion worthy of wrath.

The .xix. Chapter.

The death of the Egyptians, and the greate hope of the Hebrewes. The meate that was giuen at the de sye of p people. The elementes serue not onely to p will of God, but also to the will of man.

For the vngodly, the wrath came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happen vnto them: how that (when they had consented to lett them go, and had sent out with greate diligence) they wolde repete, and folowe vpon them. * For when they were yet moornyng and makynge lamentacion by the graues of p deed, they deuyled another foolysnes: so that they persecuted them in theyr flyng, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Alouthy necessitye also brought them vnto thys ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thynges that was wantynge of theyr punyshment, was requysite so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormentes, that thy people myght haue a maruelous passage thozow, & that these might fynde a straunge death.

Then was euer creature fastyned agayne of newe, accordyng to p will of theyr maker, obepenge thy commaundementes that thy chyldre myght be kept without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed theyr tentes, & the drye earth appeared, where afore was water: so p in the reed see there was a waye without impediment, & the greate depe became a grene felde: wher thozow all p people wente p were defended wpth thy hand, seige thy wonderful and maruelous workes. For as p hozles, so were they fedd, and leapte lyk lambes, prayng p (Lord) which hadde deliuered the: and why? they were yet myndefull of thy thynges, p happened whyle they dwelt in p lande: how the grounde brought forth flycs in steade of cattell: & how the ryuer scauled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fshes.

* But at the last they sawe a newe creaton of byrdes, what tyme as they were discea-ued with lust, and despyed delicate meates. For when they were speakeinge of theyr appetite, the quaples came vnto them fro the see, and punyshmentes came vpon the synners, not without the tokens which came to passe afore by the vehemence of the streames: for they suffered worstely accordyng to theyr wickednesses, they dealt so abhominably and churlyshly w straungers. Some receaued no vnkowne gesses, some brought the straungers into bondage that dyd them good. Welyde all these thynges there were some, that not onely receaued no straungers with theyr willes, but persecuted those also, & dyd them moch euell, that receaued them gladly. Therfore were they punyshed with * vlyndnesse, lyke as they that were couered with sodayne darknesse at the dores of the ryghteous, so p euerly one sought the entraunce of hys doore.

Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tyme is chaunged vpon an instrument of musyck, and yet all the residue kepe theyr melody: which maye easely be perceaued, by the syght of the thynges that are come to passe. The drye lande was turned into a watery, and the thyng that afore swamme i the water, wete now vpon p drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his awne vertue) & the water forgot his awne kynde to quenche. Agayne, the flammes of the noysome beastes hurte not the flesh of them that wete with them, nether melted they the fle, which els melteth lyghtely. In all thynges hast thou promoted thy people (Lord) and brought them to honour: thou hast not despyed the, but all waye & in all places hast thou stande by the.

The Prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrach vnto hys boke.

Any and greate me haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the Prophetes and out of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israell ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne and wysdome: Therefore, they that haue it and reade it, shuld not onely them selues be wylse there thorow, but serue other also with teachyng and wyrtynge.

After that my graunde father I E S A S had geue diligent labour to reade the lawe, the Prophetes and other booke that were left vs of oure fathers, ad had well exercysed hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wyrtynge some thyng of wysdome & good maners, to the intent that they which were wyllynge to learne and to be wysse, myght haue y more vnderstandynge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore, I exhorte you to receaue it lounyngly, to reade it with diligence, & to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng y is wyrtyn in the hebreue tonge, soundeth not so well when it is translated into another speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the Prophetes ad other booke sounde farre other wysse, then they do, whē they are spokē in their awne language.

Now in the xxxviii. yere When I came into Egypte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerages & continued there all my lyfe, I gat libertye to reade and wyrtynge many good thynges.

Wherfore, I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and traunple to interprete this boke. And consyderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme thys boke, and to byrnyge it vnto lycht:

that the straungers also which are dysposed to lerne, myght applye them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

Wysdome proceedeth and cometh of God. & prayse of the feare of God. & wysdome is a begre to come by wysdome.

Job. xxi. iiii. c
Jacob. i. a

Al wysdome cometh of God, the Lorde, and hath bene curd with hym, and is before all tyme. Who had nombred the sande of the see, y droppes of prayne, & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured y heygth of heauen, y bredth of the earth, & the depnesse of the see? Who hath sought out y grounde of Goddes wysdome, which hath bene before all thynges?

* Roma. xi. c

Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandynge of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods worde in the heygth is the well of wysdome, and the euerlastynge comaundementes are the entraunce of her.)

Vnto whom hath the rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne her wyrt? Vnto who hath y doctrine of wysdome bene discovered & shewed? ad who hath vnderstande y many folde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the best, the maker of all thynges, the Allmyghty, the kyng, of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which spyteth vpon his troune, beynge a God of dominio: he hath created her thorow the holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, ad measured her: he hath poured her out vpon all hys workes, and vpon all flesh accordynge to hys gyfte: he geueth her ryche vnto the that loue hym: The feare of the Lorde is wysdome and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go well wyth hym at the last, and in y daye of hys death he shall be blessed.

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue yt, for they se what wonderous thynges it doth.

The feare of the Lorde ys y begynnynge of wysdome, ad was made with the saythfull in the mothers wombe: yt shall go wyth the chosen women, and shalbe knowne of the ryghteous and saythfull. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght Gods seruyce, that preserueth and iustifieth the herte, and geueth myrt & gladnesse. Who so feareth y Lorde shall be happye, and when he hath nede of cōforte, he shall be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh rich, and bygeth all good wyth her. She fylleth the whole house with her gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and health. he hath sene her & nombred her: (both these are the gyftes of God) knowledg and vnderstandynge of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne, and the that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome, and her braches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandynge and deuocyon of knowledg, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of y Lorde bypnyeth out synne: for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, and his wylfull boldnes is his awne destruccyon. A patient man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue y rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyll hys wordes for a tyme, & many mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is y declaracyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worshippe of God. My sonne, yf thou desire wysdome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in sayth and lounge mekenesse, & he shall fill the treasures ther of. Be not obdurate and vnfaithfull to the feare of the Lorde, and come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an ypocrite in y syght of me, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest y happē to fall and byrnyge thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discoure thy secrettes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacyon: because thou woldest not receaue y feare of God, and because thy herte is full of faynednes and disceate.

The ii. Chapter.

Exhorteth the seruantes of God to ryghteousnes, loue, vnderstandynge, and patience, & exhorte hym that feareth God, to be ioye, to hope, and to loue, because God neither confoundeth ner forsaketh them y trust in hym. A curse vpon the fowle, fowle, and impacient of herte.

My sonne, yf thou wilt come into y seruice of God, stande fast in ryghteousnes and feare, and arme thy soule to tēcyon: sette thyne hert and be patient: bowe downe thyne eare: receaue the wordes of vnderstandynge, and syncke not a waye, whē thou art entyled. Holde the fast vpo God, ioyne thy selfe vnto him, and suffre that thy life maye encrease at y last. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto y Welcme i God, & he shall helpe the: ordre thy waye a ryght, and put thy trust in him. Hold fast his feare and growe therein. O ye that feare the Lorde take sure holde of his mercy: syncke not a waye from him, that ye fall not. O ye that feare y Lorde, welcme him, and your reward shall not be emptye. O ye that feare y Lorde, put your trust in him, and mercy shall come vnto you for pleasure. O ye y feare y Lorde, set poure loue vpon hym, and poure hertes shalbe lychtened.

Consydre the olde generacions of me (O y pe children) & marke them well: * Was the reuer eny one confounded, that put his trust in the Lorde? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsake? Or whom dyd he euer despise, that called faithfully vpo him? For God is gracious & mercifull, he forgiveth synnes in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke him in the tructh. Who be vnto him, y hath a double hert, wylled lippes and euell occupied handes, and so the sinner that goeth two maner of wayes. Who be vnto the y are loose of herte, which put not their trust in God, & therefore shall they not be defended of hym. Who be vnto the that haue lost patience, forsaken y right wayes, and are turned back into frowarde wayes. What will they do, when the Lorde shall begynne to dysset them?

* Job. xiii. c

They that feare the Lorde, wyll not mis-trust his worde, and they y loue him, wyll kepe his commaundement. They that feare the Lorde, will seke out the thynges, that are pleasaunt vnto him, & they that loue him: shall fulfyll hys lawe. They that feare the Lorde, wyll prepare they hertes, and humble their soules in his syght. They that feare y Lorde, kepe hys commaundementes, and will be patient tyll they se him self, sayng: * better it is for vs to fall into y handes of y Lorde, then into the handes of men: for hys mercy is as greate as hym selfe.

nourish his mother is lyke one þat gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his aþone chylde: & whē he maketh his prayer he shall be herde. He þat honoureth his father, shall haue a lōge lyfe: and he that is obedyent for the Lordes sake, his mother shall haue ioye of hym.

Be that feareth the Lord, honoureth his father & mother, and doth the scrupce, as it were vnto the Lord him selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in worde & in all paciēce, that thou mayest haue Gods blessing, & his blessing shall abyde with the at the last.

* Eccl. xxi. 17.

* The blessing of the father buydeth vp the houses of the chylde, but þat mothers curse roteth out the foundations. Reioyce not whē thy father is rejoyced, for it is not honour vnto the, but a shame. For the worship of a mā's father is his aþone worship, & where the father is without honour, it is the dishonour of the sonne. My sonne, make moch of thy father in his age, and geue him not as longe as he liueth. And yf his vnderstandyng faile, haue pacyence wth hym, and despise him not in thy strength. For the good dede þat thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgotte, and when thou thy self wantest, it shall be rewarded the (& for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed with good, yee it shall be founded for the in ryghteousnes) and in the daye of trouble þat shall be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt awaye, like as the pte in the fayre war me whether.

E he that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defiecth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, pferourne thy woꝝkes with lōuynge mekenesse, so shalt þe be lōued aboue other mē. The greater thou art, þe more humble thy selfe (in all thynges) and thou shalt fynde fauour in the syght of God. For greates power belōgeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

* Seke not out the thynges þat are aboue thy capacite, and searce not the groundes of soch thynges as are to myghte for the: but loke what God hath commaunded the: thynke vpon that all waye, and be not curyous in many of his woꝝkes. For it is not nedefull for the, to se wth thyne eyes the thynges þat are secrete. Make not thou to moche searce in superfluous thynges, and be not curyous in many of his woꝝkes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the all ready, which be aboue the capacite of men. The medlinge wth soch hath begiled many a man, and tangled their wittes in vanite. Now he that loueth parell, shall perishe therein.

An hard herte shall fare euell at the last: (and he that loueth daunger, shall perishe therein) an herte that goeth two wayes, shall not prospere: and he that is froward of herte will neuer be worse and worse.) A wycked herte shall be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner will heape one synne vpon another. The coscel of þe proude hath no healt for the plante of synne shall be roted out in the, and not knowne. The herte of hym that hath vnderstandyng shall perceaue hys thynge, and a good eare will gladly herken vnto wisdom. An herte that is wise and hath vnderstandyng, will abstayne from synnes, and increase in the woꝝkes of righteounes. Water quencheþ burnyng fyre, & mercy reconcileth synnes. God hath respecte vnto him that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon him agaynst þe tyme to come: so that whē he falleth, he shall fynde a stronge holde.

The.iii. Chapter.

Almes must be done with all mekenesse. The sūdye of myddome & her frute. A iudge ought to be mercifull. An exhortacion to eschue euell and to do good.

My sonne, * defraude not þe poore of his almes, and turne not awaye thine eyes fro hym that hath nedede. Despise not an hongry soule, and despise not the poore in his necessite: geue not the herte of him that is helpelesse, and withdraue not the gift from the nedefull. Refuse not þe prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the nedye. Cast not thyne eyes asyde from þe poore, for anye euell wyl, that thou geue hym not occasion to speake euell of the. For yf he complayne of the in þe bytternes of his soule, his prayer shall be herde: euen he that made him, shall heare him. Be courteous vnto the company of the poore, humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy head to a man of woꝝshippe. Let it not geue the to bowe downe thine eare vnto þe poore, but paye thy dett, and geue him a frendly answere, and that w mekenesse.

* Welouer him that suffereth wronge from the hāde of the oppꝛessor, and be not saynt harted when thou syttest in iudgement. Be mercifull vnto the fatherlesse as a father, & be in steade of an husbāde vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an obediēt sonne of the hieft, and he shall loue the more the thy mother doth: Wylsome bꝛethꝛen lyfe into her chylde, receaue them that seke her, & will go before the in the waye of righteounes. He that loueth her, loueth life: and they that seke her diligently, shall haue greates ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honour her, shall be the seruantes of the holy one: and they that loue hyr, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge þe weathe: and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safely.

E he that beleueth her, shall haue her in possession, and hys generacion shall endure: for when he falleth, he doth go with hym, and cholet him among the best. Feare, dꝛede & temptation shall the bynge vpon him, and trye him in her doctrine: tyll he haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he comytt his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablishe hym, bynng the ryght waye vnto hym, make him a glad man, shewe him her secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandyng and ryghteousnes. But yf he go wrong, she shall forsake him, and geue hym ouer into the handes of hys enemye.

My sonne, make moch of thy tyme, eschue the thynges that are euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to saye the trueth. For there is a shame that bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth woꝝshippe and fauour. * Accepte no person after thyne aþone wyl, that thou be not confounded to thyne aþone decaie. Be not a shamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersite, and kepe not back thy coscell when it maye do good, nether hyde thy wysdome in her bewty. For in the tōge is wysdome knowne, so is vnderstandyng knowledge and lerninge in the talkyng of þe wise, & stedfastnesse in the woꝝkes of ryghteousnes. In no wyse speake agaynst the woꝝde of treuth, but be ashamed of the lyes of thine aþone ignoraunce. Shamenot to cofesse thyne erroure, and submytte not thy selfe vnto euery man because of synne. Withstande not the face of the mighty, & strue þe not against þe stream. But for ryghteousnes take paynes with all thy soule, & for the trouth tryue thou vnto death, and God shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes. Be not hastye in thy tong, nether slack and negligēt in thy woꝝkes. Be not as a lyon in thine aþone house, destroyng thy housholde folkes, and oppꝛessing the that are vnder the. * Let not thyne hande be stretched out to receaue, and put when thou shouldest geue.

The. v. Chapter.

In ryghtes maye we not put any confidence. The vengeance of God ought to be feared, and to repentance maye we not be slowe.

* Luke. xxi. 18.
* Eccl. x. 12.

Nust not vnto thy riches, & saye not: tush, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and temptation.) Followe not the lust of thyne aþone herte in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how haue I had strength, or who will bynng me vnder because of my woꝝkes? for doubtles God shall auenge it. And saye not. I haue comytted no synnes, but what euell hath happened me? For the almyghtye is a pacifēt rewarder. * Because thy synne is forgiven the, be not therfore without feare, nether heape one sinne vpon another. * And saye not. * Eccl. xxi. 18. tush, the mercy of the Lord is great, he shall forgue me my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is mercifull, so goeth wrath from hym also, and hys indignacyon commeth downe vpon synners.

Make no tarpeng to turne vnto þe Lord, and put not of from daye to daye: for suddenly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeance he shall destroye the. * Trust not in wycked riches for they shall not helpe the in the daye of punishment & wrath. Be not not caried about to euery wynde, & goo not into euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a double tōge. Stāde fast in the waye of the Lord, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the worde, & folowe the worde of peace and righteounes. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, & make a true answere with wisdom. * Be swift to heare, but slowe & pacyent in geuyng answere. If thou hast vnderstandyng, shap thy neyghboure an answer: If no, laye thine hā vpon thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete woꝝde, and so confounded. Honour and woꝝshippe is in a mans wyse talking, but the tōge of the vndiscrete is his aþone destrucciō. * Be not a pꝛeuy accuser as longe as thou lyuest, and vse no sleaudeꝛ wth thy tōge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the cheke, & an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but yf þe is a pꝛeuy accuser of other mē, shall be hated, enuyed and confounded. Se þe thou iustifie the small and greates alyke.

The. vi. Chapter.

It is þe pꝛopꝛtye of a synner to be euell tonged. The doctrine & good coscell of þe wyse to be emhꝛaced, wylsome shuld be searched for. The pꝛofit thereof.

Be not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frendes sake: for who so is euell shall be the heyre of rebuke and dishonoure, and whosoeuer beareth enuy & a double tōge offendeth. * Be not proude in the deuyce of thyne aþone vnderstandyng (lest thy strength be hurt by foolpynnes, and) lest thy leaues wither, & thy frute be destroyed, & so thou be left as a drye tree (in the wilderness.) For a wycked soule destroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laughed to scoꝛne of his enemyes, (& bynngeth hym to the poꝛciō of the vngodly.) * A swete woꝝde multiplyeth frendes, and pacifieth them that be at variaunce, & a thakfull tōge will be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendshippe with many, neuertheles haue but one councler of a thousande.

Yf thou gettest a frēde, * proue him fyrst, and be not hastye to geue hym credēce. For some man is a frēde, but for a tyme, & wyl not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some is some frende that turneth to enemye, and taketh parte agaynst þe: & þe knowe eny hurt by þe, he telleth it out. * Agayne, some frende is but a companion at the table, and in the daye of nede he continueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne awne selfe, & deale faythfully with thyne howde folke. If thou suffre trouble and aduersyte, he is with the, and bydeth not hym self from the. Departe from thine enemyes, pee and beware of thy frendes.

C A faythfull frende is a stronge defence, who so fideth soche one, fideth a treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare, þe weight of golde and syluer is not to be compared to þe goodnesse of his fayth. A faythfull frende is a medycine of lyfe, and they þe feare the Lord, shall fynde hi. Who so feareth þe Lord, shall prosper with frendes: and as he is him self, so shall his frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctrine from thy yowth vp, so shalt thou fynde wysdome tyll thou be olde. Go to hie as one þe ploweth, and soweth, and wayte pacietyly for his good frutes. For thou shalt haue but litle labour in his worke, but thou shalt eate of his frutes right soone. Whow excedinge sharpe is wysdome to vnlerned men: an vnstedfast body wyll not remayne in her. Vnto soch, she is as it were a touch stone, and he casteth her from him in all the haste. For wysdome is with him but in name there be but fewe þe haue knowledge of her. (But with them þe knowe her, she abydeth euen vnto the apperynge of God.)

D Seue eare (my sonne) receaue my doctrine, and refuse not my counsell. Put thy fote into her lynckes, & take her yock vpon thy neck: bowe downe thy shoulde vnder her, beate her pacietyly, and be not wery of her bandes. Come vnto her with thy whole hert, & kepe her wayes with all thy power. Seke after her, and she shall be thewed the: and when thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy great ioye. Then shall her fetters be a stronge defence for the, and her yock a glorious rayment. For þe bewte of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the couplynge together of saluaciõ. See a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, and þe lamcroune of ioye shalt thou were.

D My sonne, þe thou wyll take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstanding, and þe thou wyll applye thy mynde, þe shalt be wysse. If thou wyll bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine, and þe thou delite in hearyng, thou shalt be wise. Stande with the multitude of soch elders as haue vnderstandinge, and consente vnto their wysdome with thyne hert: & þe thou mayest heare all godly sermons, and that þe worthy sentences eschape the not. And þe thou seyst a man of dyscrete vnderstandinge, gett the soone vnto hym, & let thy fote treade vpon the steppes of his doctres. * Let thy mynde be vpon the commaundementes of God, and be earnestly occupied in his lawes: so shall he stablysh thy herte, & geue the wysdome at thine awne desire.

The vii. Chapter.

We must forsake euell, and yet not forsake our selues. The behauiour of the wyse toward his wyse, his frende, his chyldren, his seruantes, his father and mother, the plectes, &c.

No euell, so shall ther no harme happen vnto the. Departe a waye from the thyng that is wycked, & no mysfortune shall medle with þe. My sonne, so we no euell thynges in the sorowes of vnrightheousnes, so shalt thou not reape the seuene folde. Laboure not vnto mā for any lordshype, nether vnto the kyng for the seat of honour. * Justifie not thy self before God (for he knoweth the herte) and desire not to be reputed wysse in the presence of þe kyng. Make no labour to be made a iudge excepte it so were, that thou couldest myghtely put downe wyckednes: for þe thou shouldest stande in a we of the presence of þe myghty, thou shouldest fayle in geuyng iustice. Offende not in the multitude of the cite, & put not thy self amonge þe people. * Bynde not two synnes together, for in one synne shalt thou not be vnpunished. Saye not: tush, God wyll loke vpon the multitude of my oblations, and when I offere to the best God, he will accepte it.

We not saynt harted when thou makest thy prayer, nether slack in geuyng of almes. Laugh no man to scoorne in the heynesse of his soule, for God (which seyth all thynges) is he * that can byynge downe, and sett vp agayne. Accepte no lesyng agaynst thy brother, nether do the same agaynst thy frende. Use not to make any manner of lye, for the customes therof is not good. Make not many wordes, when þe art amonge þe elders: & when thou prayest, make not moch bablyng. * Let no labourious worke be tedious vnto the, nether the howe bandie whych the almighty hath created. Make not thy boast in the multitude of thy wyckednes, but humble thy selfe eue from thine herte: & remembre þe the wrath that shall not be longe in taryng, and that the vengeance of the flesh of the vngodly is a very fyre & woyme. Seue not ouer thy frende for eny good, ner thy faythfull brother for the best golde.

Departe not fro a discrete and good woman, that is fallen vnto the for thy porcion in the feare of þe Lord, for þe gift of her honesty is aboue golde. * Where as thy seruant worcketh truly, intreate him not euell, ner the hirelinge that is faythful vnto þe. Loue a dyscrete seruante as thyne awne soule, defraude defraude him not of his lybertie, nether leaue him a pooze man. * If þe haue catell, loke well to them: and þe they be for thy profyt, kepe them. * If thou haue sonnes, bring the vp in nourtur and lerning, and holde them in a we from their yowth vp. If thou haue daughters, kepe theyr body, and thewe not thy face chereful toward them. Marie thy daughter, & so shalt þe perfourme a weightie matter: but geue her to a man of vnderstanding. If thou haue a wyfe after thyne awne mynde: forsake her not: (but comynette not thy selfe to the hatefull.)

Honoure thy father fro thy whole hert: & forget not the sorowfull trauayle that thy mother had with þe: remembre þe thou wast borne thowow them, and how canst thou recompense them the thynges that they haue done for the? Feare the Lord with all thy soule, & honoure hym with all thy strength, & forsake not his seruantes. Feare þe Lord with all thy soule, & honoure his dyctes. * Geue them their porcion of the fyre frutes and increase of the earth, lyke as it is commaunded the: (and reconcile thy selfe of thy negligẽce w the lytle flock) geue them the shoulde, and their appoynted offringes and fyrstlynges. Reache thyne hande vnto the pooze, & God maye blesse the w plenteousnes. * Be lyberall vnto all mē lyuinge, & yet let not but do good euen to them that are deed.

Let not them þe wepe, be wythout comforte, but moune w soch as moune. * Let it not greue þe to vyset the sick, for that shall make þe to be beloued. Whatsoeuer thou takest in hande, remembre the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse.

The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the better is no stryuing. Of the death of the enemye maye þe not reioyce, ner despyse the neryghbours, ner the wordes of the wyse.

Stryue not wyth a myghty man, lest thou chaunce to fall into his handes. * Make no variaunce with a rich mā, lest he happen to bringe vp an harde quarell agaynst þe. * For golde and syluer hath vndone many a mā, yee eue the hertes of kynges hath it made to fall. Strype not with a man that is full of wordes, and laye no styckes vpon his fyre. Kepe no company with the vnlerned, lest he geue thy herte an euell reporte. * Despyse not a man that turneth him selfe a waye from synne, and cast him not in the teeth withall, but remembre that we are frayle euerychone.

Chyrke scoone of no mē in his olde age, for we waxe olde also. We not glad of the death of thyne enemye, but remembre þe we must dye all the sorte of vs (and sayne wold we come into ioye.) * Despyse not þe sermons of soch elders as haue vnderstandinge, but acquaynte thy selfe with the wyse sentences of them: for of them thou shalt lerne wydo me and the doctrine of vnderstandinge, and how to seue greate mē without complaite.

So not from the doctryne of the elders, for they haue lerned it of their fathers. For of them thou shalt lerne vnderstandinge, so that thou mayest make answere in the time of nede. Repnde not the coales of synners, (whan thou rebukest them) lest thou be bren in the fyre flammes of their synnes. Respyt not the face of the blasphemour, that he laye not wayte for thy mouth. * Lende not vnto him that is myghtier then thy selfe: If thou lendest him, couete it but lost. We not suerty aboue thy power: þe thou be, then thynke surely to paye it. Go not to lawe with the iudge: for he wyll iudge accordyng to his awne honoure. * Trauayle not by þe waye with hym that his braynelesse, lest he do the euell: for he foloweth his awne wyfulness, and so shalt thou perissh thowow his foly.

Stryue not with hym þe is angrie and cruell, and go not with hym into the wildernes: for bloude is nothyng in his syght, and where there is no helpe, he shall murder the. * Take no coucel at foolles, for they loue no thyng but the thynges that please them selues. Make no coucel before a stranger, for thou canst not tell what will come of it. Ope not thyne hert vnto euery man, lest he be vntthankfull to the, and put the to reprofe.

The ix. Chapter.

The leopardes of chastenes are to be eschewed. An olde feyned is to be preferred before a newe. The glo: p and trecheffe of synners. Apphetes men shoulde be vnderstandyng. Laboure is the cheie chyng in a woymes man, and so is some in a yowng.

Not gelous ouer þe wyfe of thy brother, & the we we not some shewed poynte of wycked doctrine vpon the. * Seue not the power of thy life vnto a woman, lest she come in thy strenght, and so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a woman þe is despyous of many men, lest thou fall into her snares. Use not the company of a woman þe is a player and a daunser, & heare her not, lest thou perissh thowow her entysyng. Weholde not a mayde, that thou be not hurt in her bewty. * Cast not thy mynde vpon harlottes in eny manner of thyng, lest thou destroye both thy selfe and thine heritage. So not aboute galyng in euery lane of the cite nether wādye thou abrode in þe stretes thereof. * Turne a waye thy face from a bewtyfull woman, and loke not vpon the saynes of other.

Many a man hath perished thowow the bewtye of women, for thowow it the despye is kyndled as it were a fyre. (An aduouceous woman shall be troaden vnder fote as myse, why? & hyghest hateth sinners, and shall re-warde vengeance to the vngodly.

In prosperite, a frende shall not be knowne and in aduersite an enemy shall not be hyd.
For when a man is in wealth, it greueth his enemies: but in heynenes and trouble a man shall knowe his frende. Trust neuer thyne enemy, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth his wickednes. And though he make moche crouching and knelyng, yet kepe well thy mynde, and beware of him. Set him not by the, neither let him syt at thy right hand: lest he turne him, gett into thy place, take thy rowme and seke thy seate, and so thou at y last remembre my wordes, & be pycked at a wycked man, and lappeth him selfe in his synnes. For a season wyll he byde wyth the, but yf thou stumbe, he tarieth not. An enemy is swete in his lippes, he can make many wordes & speake many good thynges: Yet he can wepe with his eyes, but in his herte he pynageth, how to thowde the into y pytt: & yf he may fynde oportunitie, he will not be satisfied with bloud. If aduersite come vpo he petyde to do the help, yet shall he undermune the. He shall shake his head, and clappe his handes ouer y for very gladnes: & whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall despayse

The. xlii. Chapter.

The companies of the proude and of the ryche are to be clicheued. The loue of God: Lyke do company with thys lyke.

Who so toucheth pyttch, shall be fylled with hall: and he that is familiar w the proude, shall clothe him selfe w pyrde. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompanieth a more honorable man then him selfe. Therefore, kepe no fami-liarite with one that is richer then thy selfe.
How agree the ketell and the pot together?
for yf the one be smytten agaynst the other, it shall be broke. The ryche dealeth vnrighteously, & threateneth withal: but y poore heynge oppressed & wrongeously dealt with-all, suffreth scarcenes, & geneth saye wodes. If thou be for his profyt, he vseth the:
but yf thou haue nothyng, he shall forsake
y. As longe as thou hast eny thing of thyne a wne, he shall be a good felow with the: yet, he shall make the a bare man, and not be sory for the. If he haue nede of the, he shall de-fraude the: and (with a pteuy moche) shall he put the in an hope, and geue the all good wordes and saye: what watest thou? Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntill he haue supte the cleane vpon thysse of thysse, ad at y last shall he laugh y to scozne. Afterward, when he seyth that thou hast nothyng, he shall forsake the, and shake his heade at the.

(Submytte thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon his hande.)

Beware, that thou be not disceaued and brought downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wisdom: lest when thou art brought lowe, y be disceaued thowd fooly-nes. If thou be called of a myghtye man, absent thy selfe, so shall he call the to him y more oft. Deseale not y vnto him, that thou be not shutt out: but goo not y farre of, lest he forgett y. Withdraw not thy self fro his speech, but beleue not his many wordes.
For w moch comunicaciō shall he tēpte the,
& with a pteuy moche shall he questyon the of thy secrettes. The vnnereyfull minde of his shall march thy wordes, he shall not spare to do y hurte, & to put y in prison. Beware, ad take good hede to thy selfe, for y wal-kest in parcel of thy ouerthrowyng.

Now when thou hearest his wordes, make y as though thou werest in a dreame, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpo him in thy nede. Euery beast loueth his like, eue so let euery mā loue his neygh-bour. All flesh will resorte to their lyke, and euery man will kepe company with soch as he is him self. But as y wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth y vngodly with the righteous. * What felyth y shall be an holy man haue with a dogge. How can the ryche & the poore agree together? The wilde Ass is the lyons praye in the wyldernes, euen so are poore men the meate of the ryche. Lyke as the proude maye not awake wyth lowly-nes, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the poore: If a ryche man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayne: but when the poore falleth, his acquaintaunce forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an erreure, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punyshed: yet though he speake wisely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speaketh euery body holdeth his tōge: and loke what he salet, they prayle it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore mā speake, they saye: What fellowe is thys? and yf he do amysse, they shall destroye him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouerte is a wicked thyng in the mouth of the vngodly. The herte of man chasigeth his countenance, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thyng to knowe the thought.

The offence of the tongue. Man is but a bayne thys, happy is he that cōtynueth in wylsome.

Blessed is y man, * that hath not fallen w the worde of his mouth, and is not pycked with y conscience of sinne. Happy is he that hath no heynenes in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becometh not a couetous man and a nygarde, to be ryche: and what shulde a nygarde do w golde? He that with al his carefulness heapeth together vnrighteously, gathereth for other folkes, & another man shall make good chere w his goo-des. He that is wicked vnto hym selfe, how shulde he be good vnto other men? How can soch one haue eny pleasure of his goo-des? There is nothyng worse, then whe one disfauoureth hym self, and this is a rewar-de of his wyckednes. If he do eny good, he doth it not knowyng therof, and agaynst graciousnes. A nygarde hath a wycked de his due offerynges. Remembre that death tarieth not, & how that y couenaunt of the grauē is thewed vnto the: for y couenaunt of this world shall dye y death. * Do good vnto thy frende before thou dye, and accor-dyng to thy abylyte reach out thyne hand, and geue vnto y poore. Be not disapoynted of the good daye, and let not the porcyon of the good daye ouerpasse the. Shalt thou not leaue thy traualles and labours vnto other men? In the deuydyng of the heritage geue & take & sanctifye thy soule. Wor-cke thou ryghteously before thy death, for in the hell there is no meat to fynde. * All flesh shall fade awaye lyke grasse, and lyke a floueryng lease in a grene tre. Some growe, some are cast downe: euen so is y ge-neracyon of flesh and bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is borne.

All transitory thynges shall fayle at the last, and y worcker therof shall go withal.
Euery chosen worke shall be iustified, and he that medled withal, shall haue honour the-rin. Blessed is y man y kepeth hym in wyl-some, ad exerceyth hym selfe in vnderstandyng, and with dyscrecyon shall he thynke vpon the fore knowledge of God. Which consydereth the wayes of wylsome in his hert, hath vnderstandyng in her secrettes, goeth after her (as one that seket her out) and cōtynueth in her wayes. He loketh in at her wyndowes, and herkeneth at her dozes.

He taketh his rest besyde her house, & faste-neth his stake in her walles. He shall pitch his tente nye vnto her hand, and in his tent shall good thynges rest for euermore. He shall let his chyldren vnder her couering, and shall dwell vnder her braunches. Under her couering shall he be defended from the heat, and in her glory shall he rest.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Of vngodly and wicked chylde. No man can hyde hym selfe from God: An exhortacion to the re- ceauynge of instruccyon.

Delyte not thou in the multitude of vngodly chylde, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to thy lyfe, ad regarde not thy labours: for one sonne of feareth God, is better, the a thousande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without chylde, then to leaue behynde hym soch chylde as are vngodly. For by one of hath vnderstandynge, maye a whole cytie be vpholden, but though vngodly be many, yet shal it be wasted thowow them. Many soch thynges hath myne eye seene, & greater thynges the these haue I herde with myne eares. * In the congregacyon of vngodly shall a fyre burne, & among vnsapthfull people shall the wrath be kyndled.

* The olde gyauntes optayned no grace for thynges, which were destroyed, trusting to thynges at one strenght. Neither spared he the among who Loth which was a straunger, but smote the & abhorred the because of the pride of thynges. He had no ppytie vpon the, but destroyed all people, & were so skoute in synne. * And for so moch as he ouer sawe not the fyre hundreth thousande, that gathered the felues together in p hardenes of their herte: it were maruell yf one beynge hardenекed, shuld be free. * For mercy & wrath is w hym: he is both myghte to forgyue and to poure out dyspleasure. Lyke as his mercy is greute, euen so is his punysshment also, he iudgeth a man accordyng to his workes. The vngodly shall not escape in his spyle, & the lōge paciēce of him that sheweth mercede, shall not byde behinde. All mercede shall make place vnto euery man accordyng to p worthynes of his workes, & after p vnderstandynge of his pylgremage.

Saye not thou: I wyll hyde my selfe fro God, for who wyll thynke vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowne i so greute a heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Beholde, p heauen, p the heauen of heauens, the depe, the earth, and all that therein is, shall be moued at hys presence: the mountaynes, the hylls, & the foundacyōs of p earth shall shake for feare, when God visyfyeth them. These thynges doth no herte vnderstande, but he vnderstandeth euery herte, & who vnderstandeth hys wayes? No man seyth his secretes, and the moost part of hys workes are secrete. Who wyll declare the workes of his ryghteousnes? Or who shalbe able to abyde them? For the couenaunt is farre from come, and tryenge out of men is in the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon soche thynges: but an vnwyle and erroneous man casteth hys mynde vnto folysh thynges.

Hy sonne, herken thou vnto me, and lerne vnderstandynge, and marcke my wordes with thynne herte. I wyll geue the a sure doctryne, & plainly shal I instructe the: make my wordes the in thynne herte: for in ryghteousnes of p sprete do I speak of the wonders that God hath shewed among hys workes from the begynnyng. And in p truely do I shew p knowlege of hym. God hath sett hys workes in good orde from the begynnyng, and parte of them hath he sundred from the other. He hath garnished hys workes from euerlastynge, and they be gympnynges, accordyng to their generacyōs. None of the hyndered another, neither was any of them dysobedient vnto hys wordes. After thys, God looked vpon p earth, and fylled it with hys goodes. With all maner of luyngge beastes hath he couered the ground, and they all shalbe turned vnto earthe agayne.

The. xvii. Chapter.

The creatyon of man, and the goodnes that God hath done vnto hym. Of faulmes and repentaunce.

God * Hope man of the earth, and I made hym after his owne ymage, & turned hym vnto earthe agayne, and clothed him with his a wne strenght. He created for them also the knowledge of the sprete, fylled their hertes with vnderstandynge, & shewed them good & euell. He sett his eye vpon theynges, heretofore, declaring vnto them his greute and noble workes: that they shulde prayse hys holy name together, reioyse of his wonders, & be tellynge of hys noble actes. * Besyde thys he gaue them instruccyon, and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage.

He made an euerlastynge couenaunt with them, and shewed them hys ryghteousnes & iudgementes. They sawe his gloze with theynges, and theynges eares hearde the melody of his voyce. And he sayde vnto them: beware of all vnrightheous thynges. He gaue euery man also a commaundement concerninge.

They that haue had vnderstandynge, haue dealt wylsely in wordes, haue vnderstande the trueth & ryghteousnes, and haue sought out wylsely sentencces and iudgements. * For lowe not thy lustes, but turne the from thyne awne wyl. For yf thou geuest thy soule her desyers, it shall make thyne enemyes to laugh the to scoorne. Take not thy pleasure in grete voluptuousnes, and medle not to moch wylthall. Make not to grete cheare of þyng that thou hast wonne by auantage, lest thou fall into pouerte, & haue no thynge in thy purse.

The. xix. Chapter.

¶ Wylsely and whozome bynng men to pouerte. In the wordes must thou be discrecion. The discrecion of the wylsone of God and man, whereby þu mayst knowe what is in a man. Correccon must be used without anger.

Labourynge man þu is geuen vnto bronchēnes, shall not be ryche: and he that maketh not moch of small thynges, shall fall by lytle & lytle.

Wylsely men make wylsely men rennagates, and put men of vnderstandynge to reprofe: and he that accompanieth aduocates, shall become a wycked man. Mothes & wormes shall haue hym to heretage, yee he shall be set vp to a greater example, and his soule shall be roted out of the nombre.

He that is hasty to geue credence, is lyght mynded, & doth agaynst him selfe. Who so reioysyth in wyckednes, shall be punysshed: he þu hateth to be reformed, his lyfe shall be shortned, & he that abhorreth babylng of wordes, quencheth wyckednes. He that offendeth agaynst his awne soule, shall repent it: and he that reioysyth in wyckednes, shall be punysshed.

Rehearse not a wycked & churlysh word wylsely, and þu shalt not be hyndered. Shew thy secrettes nether to frend nor foe: and yf thou hast offended, tell it not out. For he shall herken vnto the & marke þu: and when he fyndeth oportunitie, he shall hate þu (and so shall he be allwayne aboute þu). * If thou hast herde a word agaynst thy neyghbour, let it be deed wylthyn the: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme thereby. A foole traunpeth with a word, lyke as a woman that is payned with bearynge of a chyld. Lyke as an arrowe shot in a dogges thyghe, so is a worde in a foles herte. * Tell thy frende his faute, lest he be ignoraunt, and sape: I haue not done it, or yf he haue spoken, that he do it nomore. Reproue thy neyghboure, that he kepe his tonge, & yf he haue spoken, that he sape it nomore.

Tell thy neyghbour his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, & geue not credence to euery worde. A man falleth somtyme with his tonge, but not with his wyl. For

* what is he, that hath not offended in his tonge: geue thy neyghbour warnynge, before thou threaten him, & geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord. The feare of God is all wylsone, and he that is a ryght wylsely man, kepeth þu lawe. As for the doctryne of wyckednesse, it is no wylsone, and the proude of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednes, & abhominacion & a blasphemynge of wylsone. A synple man of small vnderstandynge þu feareth God, is better then one þu hath moch wylsone, & trasgesseth þu lawe of þu selfe. A crafty sotrell man can be wylsely, but he is vnyghteous, & wylthyn gyftes he wycketh the open & manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humbly, and can douke with his head, & yet is he but a dysceauer wylthyn. He bydeth his face, & dysguyseth it: & because he shulde not be knowne, he preuenteth the.

And though he be so wake that he can do þu no harme, yet when he may fynde oportunitie, he shall do some euell. A man may be knowne by his face, & one þu hath vnderstandynge, may be perceaued by þu loke of his countenance. * A mans garmēt, laughter, & goynge, declare what he is.

The. xx. Chapter.

¶ Of correccon and repentance. Of the gyfte of the wylsely man, and of the foole. Of synners.

Some man reprooueth his neyghbour oft tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some mā holdeth his tonge, & he is wylsely & dyscrete. It is moch better to geue warnynge and to reprove, then to beare euell wylsely: for he þu knowledgeth him selfe opely, shall be preserued fro hurt & destruccyon. Lyke as when a gelded man thozow desyre & lust desyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violence: and vnyghteousnes in þu lawe. How good a thynge is it, a man that is reproued to shew openly his repentance: for so shalt thou escape wylfull synne.

Some man kepeth silence, and is founde wylsely: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tonge, because he hath not þu vnderstandynge of the language: & some man kepeth silence, waytynge a couenient tyme. * A wylsely man wylthyn holde his tonge tyll he se oportunitie, but a waton and vnydiscrete body shall regarde no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shall hurte his awne soule: & he that taketh auctorite vpon hym vnyghteously, shall be hated. Some mā hath oft tymes proferite in wycked thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moch, and hath harme & losse. There is some gyft þu is nothig worth: Agayne there is some gyft, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fal for beyng to proude, & some cometh to wylthynne fro lowe estate.

estate. Some man byeth moch for a lytle pryce, and must paye for it seuen folde.

A wylsely man with his wordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauoure of foolles shall be poured out. The gyft of the wylsely shall do the no good, for his eyes are seuenfolde. * He shall geue lytle, and sape he gaue moch: he openeth his mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wylsely. To daye he ledeth, to morow asketh he agayne, and soch a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yee euen they þu eat my bread, speake no good of me. How oft, & of how many shall he be laughed to scoorne. He taketh a more perelous fall by soch wordes then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the falles of wycked men come hastely. In þu mouth of hym that is vntaught, are many vconuenient & vnymete wordes. A wylsely sentence shall not be allowed at þu mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man synneth not, because he hath not wherewithall, and in his reast he shall be stynged. Some man there is þu destroyeth his awne soule with shame, and for an wylsely bodye sake destroyeth he it, and with acceptynge of personnes shall he vndo hym selfe. Some man promyseth his frende a gyft for very shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for naught. A lyfe is a wycked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the wylsely. These is better, then a man þu is accustomed to lye, but they both shall haue destruccyon to heretage. The condicions of lyers are vnhonest, and they shall be euer with them.

A wylsely man shall byng hym selfe to honour with his wordes, * and he that hath vnderstandynge, shall be set by amonge grete men. * He that tyllteth his lade shall encrease his heape of cozne: he that woeketh ryghteousnes, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseth grete men, shall escape moche euell. * Rewardest and gyftes blynde the eyes of the wylsely, & make hym domine, that he can not tell men they fautes. * Wylsone þu is hyd, and treasure that is hoorded vp, what profyt is in them both? Better is he that kepeth his ignoraunce secrete, then a man that bydeth his wylsone.

The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ Of the repentance of synne. We may not heare synne vpon synne. The boldnes of an heretike. The ende of synners. Of the foole and of the wylsely man. Of hym that curseth the deuell.

Monne, yf thou hast synned, do it nomore: * but praye for thy foresynnes, that they maye be forgiven the. He from synne, euen as from a serpent: for yf thou comest to nye her, she wyll bite the. The tethe therof are as the tethe of a lyon to slep the soules of men. The wyckednes of man is as a warpe two edged swerde, which maketh soch woundes that they can not be healed.

Stryfe and wrongeous dealynge shall waste awaye a mans goodes, & thozow proude a ryche house shall be brought to naught: so the ryches of þu proude shall be roted out. * The prayer of the pooze goeth oute of the mouth, and cometh vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastely. Whoso hateth to be reformed, it is a token of a vngodly personne: but he þu feareth God, wyll remembre him selfe. A myghty man is knowne a farre of by his tonge: but he that hath vnderstandynge, perceaueth that he shall haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth his house wylthyn other mens cost, is lyke one that gathereth stoncs in wynter. * The congregacyon of þu vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, they ende is a flame of fyre. The waye of þu vngodly is set with stoncs, but in they ende is hel, darkness, & paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde fast the vnderstandynge therof, and the ende of the feare of God is wylsone & vnderstandynge. He that is not wylsely, wyll not be taught in good: but þu wylsely man aboundeth in wyckednesse: and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstandynge. The knowledge of þu wylsely shall flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, & his concell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The hert of a foole is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wylsone. When a man of vnderstandynge heareth a wylsely worde, he shall commende it, and make moch of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therein, but cast it behynde his back. The talchynge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by þu waye: but to heare a wylsely mā speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doute is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouth of þu wylsely, and they shall pondre his wordes in they hertes. Lyke as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wylsone vnto a foole. As for the knowledge of þu wylsely, it is but darke wordes. Doctryne is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters aboute his fete, and lyke manye lyes vpon his ryght hand. * A foole lyfteth vp his voyce with laughter, but a wylsely man shall scarce laugh secretly.

Lernynge is vnto a wylsely man a Jewell of golde, & lyke an armelet vpon his ryght arme. A foolyhe mans fote is soone in his neyghbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at þu personne of the myghty. A foole wyll pepe in at þu wyndow into þu house, but he that is wel nourished, If f iii wyll Wyll stande without. A foolysch man standeth herkenynge at the doze, but he that is wysse, wyll be ashamed.

The lypyes of the vnywysse wyll be telling foolysch thynges, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstādyng, shalbe weyed in the balace. The hert of foolis is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wysse is in their herte. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemour, he curseth hymselfe also. * A pseye accuser of other men shal desyle hymselfe also. (but he that kepeth hymselfe tonge & is dyscrete, shal come to honoure.)

The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ The purgacion of the mouthfull. Of a foolysch sonne and daughter, we must haue dyscrecion how and to whom we ought to pseye, of forswornynge upon a deede. A fool is not to be much talked with all. Injuries and wronges do breake frendshipp and amitye.

A Mouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claye, and euery man wyll speake to his dyspayse. A mouthful body is made of the donge of oxen and euery one that toucheth him must wasch hymselfe agayne. A mysfynurtoed sonne is the dyshonoure of his father. A foolysch daughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wysse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbāde: but she that cometh to dyshonour, byngeth her father in heynnes. A daughter that is past shame, dyshonoureth both her father and her husband: & vngodly shal regarde her, but they both shal desyle her. The playenge of a dyspkye is not mete where heynnes is, eue so is the correccion and doctryne of wysdome euer vnpleasant vnto foolis.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potsherd together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth him not, & as one that rapeth a man out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, whych speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he hath tolde hym tale, he sayeth: what is þat matter? When one dyeth, lamentacion is made for hym, because the lyght fapleth hym: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstādyng. Make but lytle wepyng because of þat deede: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is wofle then þat deeth. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is deede, but þat lamentacion ouer þat vnywysse & vngodly shuld endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstādyng. Bewarre of hym, lest it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be desyled wthys synne. Departe from hym, & thou shalt fynde rest, and shalt not be drawen back into hymfolytynes. What is heuer then leader? And what shuld a foole be called els but leader?

* Sande, salt, & a lumpe of yron is easier to beare then an vnywysse, folysch, & vngodly man. Lyke as þat band of wood boude together in þat foudacion of þat house canot be lowsed: euen so is it with þat hert that is stablyshed in þat thought of counsell. The thought of the wysse shal nether feare, ner be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayne playstred wall in a town: & an hysch buyldynge, may not abyde þat wynde & storme: euen so is a foole hert asrayed in his ymagynacion, he feareth at euery thyng, and cannot endure. (A waue ryng hart in þat ymagynacion of a foole wyll not euer stond in awe, but he that abydeh in þat comaundementes of God, wyll allwaye feare.) He þat nyppeth a mans eye, byngeth forth teares: and he þat pycketh þat hert, byngeth forth þat meanynge & thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, scapeth them awaye: & he þat blasphemeth his frend, breakeh the frendshyppe: though thou dzewest a swerde at thy frende, yet dyspayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. If he speake sowrely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: excepte it be that þat blasphemeth him, dysdayne hym, open his secretes and woude him traytorously: for all such thynges shal dzue awaye a frende.

We saythfull vnto thy neyghbour in his pouerte, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperyte. Abyde stedfast vnto hym in the tyme of hym trouble, that thou mayest be hepye with hym in hym heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before þat fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynge go before bloudsheddyng. We not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, though he shulde do me harme. Who so euer heareth it, shal beware of hym. * Who shal set a watch before my mouth, & a sure seale vpon my lypyes, that I fall not with them, and that my tonge destruye me not?

The. xxiii. Chapter.

¶ A prayer agaynst pryde, lechery, and glotony. Of othes, blasphem, and of wysse commynycacyon. Of the chylde of synne. Agayn synnes procede of aduoutrye. Of the feare of God.

Lorde, father and gowernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymagynacion and counsell. Whett me not fall in such reprofe. Who wyll kepe my thought with the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ignorance, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignorances increafe, that myne offences be not many in nombze, and þat my synnes excrade not: lest I fall before myne enemyes, & so my aduersary reioyse. O Lord þat father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in not in theyr ymagynacion. Wlet me not haue a proude looke, but turne awaye all volupuousnes fro me. Take fro me þat lustes of þat body, lest nat the helpe of vncleennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnchastite & oblyuate mynde.

Hear me (O ye chylde) I wyll geue you a doctryne, how ye shal orde your mouth: who so kepeth it, shal not perissh thorow his lypyes, ner he hurt thorow wicked wordes. As for þat synner, he shal be taken in his awne vanpte: he þat is proude & cursed, shal fall therein. * Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearynge, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namynge of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not wth the names of sayntes, for þat shal not be excused of the) for lyke as a seruaut which is oft pynnyshed cannot be without some sore, euen so whatsoeuer he be þat sweareth & nameth god, shal not be cleane purged fro synne. I ma that vseth moch swearynge, shalbe fylled wth wyckednes, & the plage shal neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon hym: yf he knowledg not his synne, he maketh a doble offence, & yf he sweare in wayne, he shal not be foude ryghteous for his house shal be full of plages.

The wordes of the swearer byngeth deeth (God graunte þat it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschue all such, & lye not welterynge in synne.

Not thy mouth to vnholynesse and fylthy talkynge, for in it is þat wynde of synne. Remembre thy father & thy mother, when thou art set among great men: lest God forget the in theyr syght, and lest thou doctryne in thy custome, lustre rebuke, & wyth not to haue bene borne, and so curse the dape of thy natyuite. * The man þat is accustomed with the wordes of blasphem, wyll neuer be reformed all the dayes of his lyfe. To synne tyme is to moch, but the thyrd byngeth wrath & destruccyon. An hote stomack cannot be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll it haue swalowed vp somethynge: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in hymflesh, tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

All bred is swete to an whozemonger, he wyll not leaue of, tyll he haue hym purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, & regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: * Cussh, who seyth me? I am compassed aboute with darchnes þat walles couer me, no body seyth me: whom neede I to feare? The byest wyll not remembre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not þat his eyes se all thynges, for all such feare of men byngeth awaye the feare of God from hym: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and cōsydereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are cleare then the sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges: & euer they were made, and after they he brought to passe also he loketh vpo the all.

The same man shalbe openly punysshed in the stretes of þat cyte: & shalbe chased abrode lyke a ponge horse foale: and when he thynketh lest vpo it, he shalbe taken. This shal be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstāde þat feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it go also with euery wyse, that leaueth her husbāde, & getteth enherytaunce by a straunge mariage. * First, she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the byest: Secodly, she hath forsaken her awne husbāde. Thyrddly, she hath played the whoze in aduoutry, and gotten her chylde by another man. She shalbe brought out of the congregacion, and her chylde shalbe lokid vpon. Her chylde shal not take rote: & as for frute, her braunches shal bynge forth none. A shamefull repoyte shal the leaue behynde hyr, and hyr dyshonoure shal not be put out. And they þat remayne, shal knowe, that there is nothyng better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothyng sweeter then to take hede vnto the comaundementes of the Lorde. A great worthyppe is it to folowe the Lorde, for loge lyfe shalbe receyued of hym.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

¶ A prayse of wysdome procedynge forth of the mouth of God. Of her wordes & place where she reareth.

Wisdom shall prayse her self, and be honoured in God, & reioyse in the myddest of his people: In the congregacyon of þat byest shal he open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholdynge of his power: In the myddest of her people shal he be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe comēded, and amonge such as be blessed she shalbe prayled, and shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of the byest, fyrt borne before all creatures. I caused þat lyght that fapleth not to aryse in þat heauen, and couered al the earth as a cloude. By dwellyng is aboue in the heyth, and my scate is in þat pyler of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute þat copasse of heauen, & pearced þat ground of þat depe: I haue walked in þat floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my domynion is in euery people & in euery nacion, & with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of al, both hye & lowe.

In all these thynges also I sought rest, and a dwellyng in some euerystaunce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a comaundēt: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Lett thy dwelling be in Jacob, & thyne inheritaunce Iff iii in Jf.

ple, euen in I porcyon of the Lorde & in hys herptage, and kepte me in the fulnes of the sapyntes. I am set vpon hye lyke a Cedre vpon Lptanus, and as a Cyperus tre vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke a palme tre in Cadex, & as a rose plante in Ieri-cho. As a saye Olive tre in the felde, & am exalted lyke as a plantyne tre by I water syde. I haue geuen a smel in the stretes, as the Cynamon & Balme, that hath so good a sauour: pee a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrrer of the beest.

 Job. xv. a.* I haue made my dwellynges to smell as Incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odoure is as the pure Balme. As I Cerebynte haue I stretched of honoure and ryches. I am the mother of bewtye, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. * In me is all grace of lyfe and tructh. In me is all hope of lyfe & ver-tue. Come vnto me all ye I be despyous of me & fyll your selues with my frutes: for my spyete is sweter then hony, and so is my inherytance more then I hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore.

They that eate me, shall haue the more ho-ger, and they I dyyncke me, shall thyrst the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shall not come to confusyon: & they that worke in me, shall not offende. They that make me to be known, shall haue euerlastyng lyfe.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* All these thynges are I boke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the hyst, and the knowledge of the tructh. * Moses comaunded I lawe in the preceptes of ryghteousnes for an herptage vnto the house of Iacob, and comit-ted I promyses vnto Israel. * (Out of Da-uid hys seruaunt he ordered to rayse vp a most myghty kyng, sytting in the seat of honour for euermore.) * They sylleth with wysdome lyke as the floude of Bysson, and as the floude of Tygris, when the new fru-tes are a growynge.

 Job. xli. a.* They byngeth a plenteous vnderstan-dng lyke Euphrates: and sylleth it vp, as Iordane in the tyme of haruest. They ma-keth flourture to breake forth as the lyght, & as I water Byhon in Iharuest. The fyrt hath not knowne her perfectly, nomore shall I last seke out I ground of her. For her thought is fuller then the see, and her coun-cell is profounder then the greates depe.

I wysdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a great waterbroke out of I ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dozir, and as a water conbyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure.
I sayde: I wyll water I garden of my por-ge plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrth.
So my water broke became exteadynge grete, & my ryuer approched vnto the see.
For I make doctrine to be vnto all men as lyght as the saye mozynge, & I shall make it to be euer I clearer. I wyll pearse thorow all the lower partes of I earthe, I wyll lo-he vpon all soch as be a slepe, & lyghter: all them I put theyr trust in the Lorde. I shall yet powre out doctrine, lyke as prophete, & leaue it vnto soch as seke after wysdome, & their generacyons shall I neuer sayle, vnto the holy euerlastyng world. * Behold, how that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely but for all them that seke after the treuth.

The. xlv. Chapter.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* Of this thynges to which please God, and of this to which he hatech. Of nyne thynges that be not to be suspect, and of the tenth: charyte of the mayce of a woman.

 Job. xli. a.* These thynges there are, that my spyete I faouret, which be also allowed before God and men. * The vynte of byethzen, * I loue of neyghbours, * a man and wyfe that agree wel together.

 Job. xli. a.* These thynges there be which my soule hateth, and I utterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man that is proude. A ryche man that is a lyar, * and an olde body that doteth, and is vnchaste.

 Job. xli. a.* If thou hast gathered nothyng in thy youth, what wilt I fynde then in thyne age.
How pleasaunt a thinge is it, when gray headed men are discrete, & when I elders can geue good counsell: How comely a thyng is wysdome vnto aged men: yee vnderstan-dng & counsell is a gloriouse thyng. The croune of olde men is to haue moch experie-ce: & the feare of God is theyr worshyppe.

 Job. xli. a.* There be nyne thynges, which I haue iudged in my herte to be happye, & the teth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge.
A man I whyle he lyueth, hath tope of his chyliden, and scyth I fall of hys enemyes.
Well is hym that dwelleth with an houswyfe of vnderstandng, * and that hath not fallen with his tonge, & that hath not bene

Well is hym, I fyndeth a faythfull frende:
and well is him, which talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth him. How great is he, I fyndeth wysdome and knowledge: Yet is he not aboute hym, I feareth I Lorde.

 Job. xli. a.* The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shall he be lyckened, that kepeth it fast?
The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue, and the begynnyng of fayth is to cleue fast vnto it. The heuiness of the herte is althe punishment, & the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue al. All punishment & pla-ge is nothyng in comparisoun of the plage of the herte, euen so all wyckednes is nothyng to the wyckednesse of a woman.

 Job. xli. a.* Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a mā is no thyng in comparisoun of it, that his euell wil-lers do vnto hym: and all vengeance is no thyng to the vengeance of the enemye.

 Job. xli. a.* There is not a more wycked heade then the heade of the serpent, & there is no wyath about the wyath of a womā. * I wyll rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a womā chaungeth her face, she shal moffel her countenaunce as it were a Beare, & as a sack shal she shewe it amonge I neygh-bours. Her husbāde is brought to shame amonge his neyghbours, and whē he heareth it, it maketh him to syghe. Al wyckednes is but lytle to the wyckednes of a woman, the porcyon of the vngodly shal fall vpon her.

 Job. xli. a.* Lyke as to clymme vp a sandy waye is to the fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a still quyet man. * Loke not to narrowly vpo the bewtye of a womā, lest thou be prouoked in desyre toward her. The wyath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusyon. If a woman get the masterye, the is the contrary to her husbāde. A wycked wyfe maketh a soyr herte, an heuy countenaunce and a deed woūde. * (Weake hādes and feble knees is a womā that byr husbāde is not the better for.) Of the woman came the begynnyng of synne, & thowwe her we all are deed. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, nether geue a wycked womā her wyll. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the syght of thy ene-myes. Cut her of then fro thy flesch, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

The. xlv. Chapter.

 Job. xli. a.* Of the prynciple of a good woman. Of the feare of these thynges and of the fourth. Of the Ielousie ad drounchen woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thyng which moueth to Ioy.

 Job. xli. a.* Appye is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nombze of his peares shal be dubble. An honest woman maketh her hus-bāde a ioyfull man, & she shal fyll I perces of his lyfe in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyft, which shal be geuen for a good porcyon vnto soch as feare God: Whether a mā be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a mery herte, and a chearefull countenaunce. There be thre thynges that my herte feareth, and my face is afrayed of I fourth.

Treason in a cytye, a sedicious people, and nosome tonges, all these are heuyer then I death. But whē one is gelous ouer his wyfe, it byngeth payne and sorowe vnto the herte: and a woman that telleth out all thin-ges, is a scourge of I tunge. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is euen as when an vnlyke payre of oxen must draue together, * he that getteth her, getteth a scorpyon. A drounchen woman is a greates plage, for she cannot couer her a wyne shame.

 Job. xli. a.* The whordome of a womā maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eye lyddes.
* If thy daughter be not chamefast, holde her straitlye, lest she abuse her selfe thowow ouer moch lyberte. Beware of all the disho-nestye of her eyes, and maruell not if she do agaynst the. Lyke as one that goeth by the waye & is thyrstie, so shal she ope her mouth and dyyncke of euery nerte water that she maye get. By euery hedge shal she fytt her downe, and open her quyre agaynst euery arowe. A loupge wyfe reioyseth her hus-bāde, and fedeth hys bones with her wysdome. A womā of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, and to al well nurtured myndes maye nothyng be compared.

 Job. xli. a.* An honest and manerly woman is a gyft aboue other gyftes, and there is no wyght to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it ariseth, is an ornament in the hye beaue of I Lorde, so is a vertuous wyfe the bewtye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lyght is vpon the holy candelstick, so is the bewtye of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pylers are vpo the sockettes of syluer, so are the saye legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetual are the foundacions I be layed vpon a whole stoupe rocke so are the commaundementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman.

 Job. xli. a.* There be two thynges that greue my herte and in the thirde is a displeasure come vpon me. Whē an experte man of warre suffreth scarfenes ad pouerte. When men of vnder-standng & wysdome are not sett by: And when one departeth from ryghteousnes vnto synne. Who so doth soch, the Lorde hath prepared him vnto I swerde. There be two maner of thynges, which me thyncke to be herde and perplous. A marchaunt can not lyghtely kepe him from wythe, nether a tu-uer ner hym selfe from synne.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Of the poe that make be pche. The probacon of the man that feareth god. The unconstantie of a foule. The secretes of a frende are not to be vitered. The wyche pynnyng euell, which resourceth vpon hym selfe.

Because of potherie haue many one offended: ad he that seketh to be ryche, turneth hye eyes asyde. Lyke as a nape in the wall sticheth fast betwixte two stonies, eue so doth synne stiche betwixte the byer and the seller. If he holde hym not diligently in the feare of the Lorde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowne, Lyke as whan one syteth the sylthynes remayneth in synne: So remayneth there some vncleane thyng in the thought of man.

* Sept. iii. a

* Aug. vii. b

The out proueth p potters vessel, * so doth temptation of trouble trye ryghteous men. * The tre of the felde is knowe by his frute, so is the thought of mans hert knowe by his wordes. Praple no man except thou haue herde him, for a mā is knowe by his wordes. If thou folowest ryghteousnes, thou shalt get her, ad put her vpon the as a fayne garment. And thou shalt dwell with her, ad she shall defende the for euer, and in the daye of knowlege thou shalt finde stedfastnesse. The byrdes resorte vnto theyr like, so doth the trouth turne vnto the that be occupied withall. The lyon wayteth the praple: so do the synners lurke vpon p workers of wyckednes. The talkyng of hym that feareth God, is nothyng but wyl dome: as for a foule he chaūgeth as the Moone. If p be amōg the vndiscrete, kepe thy worde to a cōuenient tyme, but amōge soche as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkyng of fooles is abhominacion, & their spoite is volupuousnesse ad misnourture. * Moch swerunge maketh the hearre to stande vp: and to styue wpyth soch, stoppeth the eares.

* Eccl. xxi. b

* Eccl. xii. b and .xii. b

The styfe of the proude is bloudsheddynge, and theyr blaspheming is heuy to heare. * Who so discouereth secretes, leleth his credence, and fyndeth no frende after hys wil. Loue thy frinde, ad bynde thy selfe in faythfulness with hym: but if thou be wyse, kepe thy secretes, thou shalt not gett hym agayne. For lyke as the man is that destroyeth hys enemye, so is he also that dealeth falsly in p frendshipp of his neyghboure.

Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go out of his hande, cannot take her agayne: Euen so thou, if thou geue ouer thy frende, thou canst not gett him agayne: For thou canst not come by hym, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roose escaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they maye be bounde by agayne, & an euell word maye be reconeyled: but who so be wyse, kepe the secretes of a frende, there is no more hope to be had vnto hym.

* Psal. x. b

* He that wycketh with the eyes, pmagi-neth some euell, and no man shall take hym from it. Whē thou art present, he shall bylie commed and praple thy wordes: but at the last he shall turne his taylor, and schalder thy sayenge. Many thynges haue I hated, but nothyng so euell, for the Lorde hym selfe also abhorreth soch a one.

Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon hys awne head: and he that smyteth with gyle, woundeth hym selfe. Who so diggeth a pyt shall fall therein: & he that layeth a stone in his neyghbours waye, shall stumbe thereon: & he that layeth a snare for another, shall be take in it hym selfe. * Who so geueth a wicked noysome cosicel, it shall come vpon hym selfe, ad he shall not knowe fro whence. The proude blasphemie, and are scoynfull, but vengeance lurketh for them as a lyon. They that reioyse at the fall of p ryghteous shall be taken in the snare, anguythe of hert shall consume them before they dye. Anger & rygourousnes are two abhominable thynges, & the vngodly hath the both vpon him.

The .xxviii. Chapter.

We ought not to despye vengeance, but to forgyue the offence. Of the byres of the tonge, and of the daungers thereof.

Who that seketh vengeance, shall fynde vengeance of p Lorde, which shall surely kepe hym hys synnes. * Forgyue thy neyghboure the hurte that he hath done the, & so shall thy synnes be forgyue the also, whē p prayest. A man p beareth hatred agaynst another, how darre he despye forgyuenesse of God? He that seeth no mercy to a man which is lyke hym selfe, how darre he aske forgyuenesse of hys synnes? If he that is but flesch, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyl intreate for his synnes? Remembre the ende, ad let enemye passe, which seketh death and destruccion, & abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remembre the commaundement, so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neyghboure. Thinke vpon the cōuenant of the byest, & forgyue thy neyghbours ignoraunce. * Bewarre of strife, and p shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angrie man kindleth variaunce, ad the vngodly disquieteth frendes, and putteth discorde among them that be at peace. * The more wadd there is, p more vehemēt is the fyre: and the myghtier that mē be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer p strife endureth, the more it burneth.

An harte brawlinge kindleth a fyre, ad an harte strife sheddeth bloude: A tonge also that beareth false witnesseth death. If thou blowe the sparke it shall burne. If p syt vpon it: it shall go forth, and both these out of p mouth. * The schalderer & dubble tonged is curled, for many vne p frendes letteth letteth he at variaunce. The thynde tonge hath disquieted many one, and druen them from one lande to another. Stronge cytycs of the riche hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowne the houses of greute men. (The strength of p people hath it brought downe and bene the decaye of myghty nacyns.) The thynde tonge hath cast out many an honest woman, & robbed the of theyr labours. Who so herkeneth vnto soch shall neuer fynde rest, & neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the rod maketh edders, but the stroke of p tonge smyteth the bones in sunder. There be many that haue perished with the sword, but many mo thowoe the tonge.

Well is hym that is kepte from an euell tonge, and cometh not in the anger thereof which draweth not the pock of soche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the pock therof is of pzon, and the bande of it of stele. The death therof is a very euell death: hell were better for one, then soch a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flamme thereof maye not burne the. Soch as forsake the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, and deuoure them as a leoparde. Thou hedgest thy goodes wpyth thornes: why dost thou not rather make dozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and syluer: why dost thou not wepe thy wordes also vpon the balace? Bewarre, that thou syde not in thy tonge, and so fall before thyne enemyes, that lape wayte for the, (and thy fall be incurable, euen vnto death.)

The .xxix. Chapter.

We ought to lende oure money, and do almes. Of a faythfull man answeryng for his frende. Of spberalite and hospitaletye.

Who so wyl thewe mercy, * lett him lende vnto hys neyghboure: and he that is able, lett hym kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neyghboure in tyme of his nede, & paye thou thy neyghboure agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, and deale faythfully with him, and thou shalt also paye synne the thyng that is necessary for the. There haue bene many, that when a thyng was lent them, rekened it to be founde, and made them trauple and laboure, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue thyng, they bylle the handes of soch as gyue them, and for theyr neyghbours good they hūble their voyce. But when they shulde paye agayne, they kepe it back, and geue euell wordes, ad make many excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet geueth he scarce the halfe agayne, and rekeneth the other to be founde. And if he with holde not hys moneye yet hath he an enemy of hym, and that vnderstand.

He payeth hym with cursyng and rebu- de, ad geueth hym euell wordes for his good dede. Ther be many one which are not glad for to lende, not because of euell, but they feare to lese the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with the synple, and with holde not mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let hym not go emptye from the, because of hys necessity. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burpe it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth ad corrupteth. * Sa- ther thy treasure after the commaundement of the byest, and so shall it byng the more profyte then golde: * Lape vnto the almes in the bande of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euell. * A mans almes is as a purse with hym, and shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye: and after warde shall it arple and paye euery man his rewarde vpon his head. It shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes, better then the wynde of a gy- aunte or speare of the myghtye.

A good honest mā is suertie for his neygh- bour, but a wycked personne letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshipp of thy suertie, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodly despiseth the good dede of his suertie, and the vntouchfull and igno- raunt leaueth his suertie in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghboure: ad whē he hath lost his honesty, he shall forsake him. Suertishyppe hath destroyed many a riche man, and remoned the as the waves in the see. Myghtie people hath it ouerpuen awaye, and caused the to wandre in straunge countrees. An vngodly man transgressyng the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall in- to an euell suertishyppe: and though he force hym self to gett out, yet shall he fall into iudgement. Helpe thy neyghboure out after thy power, and beware, that thou thy selfe fall not in soch dett. * The cheste thyng that kepeth in thy lyfe, is water, ad byed, clorpyng and lodgyng, to couer the shame.

Better is it to haue a poore luyng in a mans awne house, then deelyate fare among the straunge. * Be it lytle or moch that thou hast, holde the content withall, & thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabonde: for a mys- erable lyfe is it, to go from house to house: & where a man is fremde, he darre not open his mouth. Though one be lodged, ad haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnwoorthy, and heare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: Go thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and fede me also of that thou hast. The xxx. Chapter.

Of the correction of chyldren. Of the commoditye of besich. Death is better then a folye full lyfe. Of the hope & sorow of the hert.

Who so loveth his chyldre * holdeth hum styl vnder correccion, that he maye haue ioye of him afterwarde and that he grieve not after his neyghbours dozes. * He p teacheth his sone shall haue ioye in him, & nede not to be ashamed of him among his aquaintance. Who so enfourmeth & teacheth his sone, greuethe the enemye: and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of him. Though p father dye, yet is he as though he were not dead: for he hath left one behynde him that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he sawe hym and had ioye in hym, & was not sorry in his death, neither was he ashamed before the enemyes. For he left behynde him an avenger agaynst his enemyes, and a good doer vnto the frendes. For p lyfe of chyldren he shall vynde the woules together, and his hert is greued at every crie. An vntamed horse wyl be harde, & a wanton chyldre wyl be wylfull. If thou bring vp thy sone delicately, he shall make p a trayed: & if thou playe with hym, he shall byng the to heynnes. Laugh not wyth hym, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy teth be set on edge at the last.

* Geue hym no lyberte in his yowth, & excuse not his foly. Bowe downe his necke while he is yonge, byt hym vpon the sydes while he is yet but a childe, lest he waxe stubburne, and geue no more force of the, and so shalt thou haue heynnes of soule. Teach thy chyldre, and be diligent therein, lest it be to thy shame. Better is the poore byng whole & stronge, then a man to be ryche, & not to haue his health: health and welfare is aboue al golde, & a whole body aboue all treasure. There is no ryche aboue a sounde body, & no ioye aboue the ioye of the hert. Death is better then a wretched lyfe, & eternall rest better then contynual syknes. The good thynges that are put in a close mouth are like as whe meate is layed vpon the graue.

What good doth the offerunge vnto an Idol? * For he can neither eate, tast, nor smel. Euen so is he that is chafed of the Lorde, & beareth the rebukes of iniquyte. He seyth wyth his eyes, & croneth lyke a gelded ma, that lyeth with a vyrgyn & sygeth. * Geue not ouer thy mynde into heynnes, and vexe not thy self in thine awne counsell. * The ioye and chearfulness of the hert is the life of man, and a mannes gladnes is the prolonging of his dayes. Loue thine awne soule, and comforte thine hert: as for sorowe and heynnes, byue it farre fro p. * For heynnes hath slayne many a man, & byngeth no profit. Zele & anger shorten the dayes of the lyfe: carefulness and sorowe byng age before p tyme. Vnto a mery hert every thyng hath a good tast that he eateth.

The xxxi. Chapter.

Of the ought to geue diligent hede to honestye. Of them that take payne to gather ryches. The prayse of a ryche man without a fault. We ought to be dyonckened and folowe sobernesse.

Tauaple & carefulnes for ryches taketh a waye the slepe, & maketh the flesh to consume. When one lyeth & taketh care, he waketh euery by, like as gret syknes breaketh the slepe. The ryche hath great labour in gathering his ryches together, and then with the pleasure of his ryches he taketh his rest and is refreshed. But who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: & though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He that loveth riches, shall not be satisfied: and who so foloweth corruption, shall haue ynough therof. * Many one are come in great misfortune by the reason of gold, & haue founde theyr destruction before them. It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offere it vp, and all soch as be foolys fall thereyn. Blessed is the ryche, which is found without blemyshe, and hath not gone after golde, nor hoped in money & treasures. Where is there such a one? and we shall commend hym, & call hym blessed, for greute thynges doth he among his people. Who so is tryed, & founde perfecte in such thynges, shall be comended and praysed. Who myght offende, and hath not offended: Who coulde do euell, and hath not done it? Therefore shall his good be stablished, and the whole congregacion shall declare his almes. If thou sytt at a greute mans table, open not thy mouth wyth vpo it, and make not many wordes. Remember that an euell eye is a threwe.

What thinge created is worse the a wicked eye? therefore wepe it before euery mans face: Laye not thine hand vpon euery thing p thine eye seyth, & stryue not w hym in the byde. * Wonder by thy self what thy neyghboure wolde saye haue, & be descrete in euery pointe. Eate the thing that is set before the manerly, as it becometh a man and eate not to moch, lest thou be abhorred. Leauethou off first of al, because of nourtoure, lest thou be he whom no man maye satisfye which maye turne to thy decaye. When p sytttest among many men, reach not thine hande out fyrst of all. * How wel content is a wyle man with a lytle wyne: so that in slepe p shall not be sycke therof, net sele eny payne. A wyle whollsome slepe shall soch a one haue, & sele no inward grefe. Herpleth vp by tynes in the moynynge, & is wel at ease in him selfe. But an vnfacible eater slepeth vnquietly, and hath ache and payne of the body. If thou felest that thou hast eate to moch, aryse, goo thy waye, cast it of thy stomack, and take thy rest: and it shall ease the, so that thou shalt byng no syknes vnto thy body.

Why sonne, heare me, and despyse me not: & at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue told the. * In all thy wordes be diligent & quyet, so shall there no syknes happē vnto p. * Who so is liberal in dealing out his meate, many men shall blesse him, & prayse hym with theyr lippes: & the same is a sure token of his loue & faythfulness. But he that is vnfaythfull in meate, the whole cite shall complayne of hym: and that is a surer experience of his infidelite & wyckednes. * Be not thou a wyne bybber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth the hard yron, eue so doth wyne proue hertes of the proude, when they be droncken.

Whyne sobriety droncke, quyetkeneth the lyfe of man. If thou bynckest it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What lyfe is it, that maye continue without wyne? (What taketh a waye the lyfe? euen death.) Wyne was made fro the begynnyng to make man gladd (ad not for dronkennes) Wyne measurably dronke is a reioysing of p soule & body. (A measurable drynkynge is health to soule and body.) But if it be dronken with excess, it maketh bytternes and sorowe vnto the mynde. Dronkennes fylleth the mynde of the foolys with shame and ruyne, minyseth the strength, and maketh woundes.

* Rebuke not thy neyghboure at the wyne, & despyse him not in his mynth. Geue hym no despytefull wordes, and pcesse not vpo hym with contrary sayenges.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Of the discrecion and prayse of the preacher, and of the heare. Of the feare, sayth, and confidence in God.

If thou be made a ruler, * pryde not thy selfe therein, but be thou as one of p people. * Take diligent care for the and loke wel thereto: & when thou hast done all thy dewtye, syt the downe, that p maye est be mery wyth the, and reccae a crowne of honoure. Take wysely and honestly, for wysdome becometh the ryght well. Bynder not musike. Speake not, where there is no audyence: & poure not forth wysdome out of tyme, at an impoortunite. A lyke as p Caruncle stone wyne that is set in golde, so doth a longe garlyth the wyne feast: and as the Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the sweetnes of Musike by the mynth of wyne. (Geue care, and be still, and for thy good be haueour thou shalt be loued.)

Thou yonge man, speake that becometh the, and that is profytable, & yet scarce whe thou art to wyle asked. Comprehende moche with fewe wordes. In many thynges be as one that is ignorant, geue care, and holde thy tonge withall. If thou be amonge men of hyper auctorite, despyre not to copare thy selfe vnto them: & when an elder speaketh make not p many wordes therein. Before p thonder goeth lyghteninge, and before nourtoure and shamefastnesse goeth loue & fauoure. Stande vp by tynes and be not the last: but get the home sone, & there take thy pastime, & do what thou wylt: so that thou do no euell, & despye no man, but for all thynges geue thackes, vnto him that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

Who so feareth the Lorde, wyl reccae his doctrine: and they that get them to him by tynes, shall fynde grace. He that seeketh the lawe, shall be fylled withall. As for him that is but faynted, he wil be offended therat. They that feare the Lorde shall fynde the iudgement, and theyr ryghteousnes shall be kindled as a lyght. An vngodly man wyl not be reformed, but can helpe him self with the example of other in his purpose. A man of understandyng despyleth no good counsell: but a wylde and proude body hath no feare. (Ye eue when he hath dealt rashly w another man, but his awne doynges shall be his rebuke.) Wy sonne, do nothing without aduysment, so that it not repent the after p dede. So not in the waye wher thou mayest fall, ner where thou mayest stumbe agaynst the stone. Geue not thy self into a laborious slippy waye, and beware of thyne awne chyldren, (and take hede of them that be of thyne awne houtholde.) In all thy wordes put thy trust in God, fro thy whole hert, for that is the keypyng of the commaundementes. Who so belueth Gods word, taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth his trust in the Lorde, shall wante nothyng.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Of the despyrance of hym that feareth God. The auerence of p wyse. The lytel discrecion of a foole. As an is in the hande of God, as the earth is in the hand of the potter. We ought not to despoile our selues, so become subiect to other.

Here shall no euell happē vnto him that feareth God: but whe he is in temptation, the Lorde shall deliuer him & kepe hym fro euell. A wyle man hateth not the lawe, but an pporite is as a thyp in ragynge water. A man of understandyng geueth credence vnto the lawe of God.

of God, and the lawe is faythful vnto him. We sure of þ matter, then talke therof: We syt well instruct, the mayest thou geue answer. The hert of the foolish is lyke a cart-whelke, and his thoughtes runne about like the axel tre. Lyke as a wilde horse þ neyeth vnder euery one that syteth vpon him, so is it w a scornful frende. Whyp doth one daye excell another, scyng al the dayes of þ yere come of the Sunne. The wylsome of the Lorde hath so parted them a sunder, and so hath he ordered the tymes ad solempne festes. Some of them hath he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the * grounde, and out of the earth of Adam.

* Gen. ii. a

In the multitude of science hath the Lord sundered them, ad made their wayes of dyuerse fashyons. Some of them hath he blessed, made moch of them, halowed them, and claymed them to himselfe. But some of the hath he cursed, brought the lowe, ad put the out of theyr estate. * Lyke as the clape is in the potters hande, and all the ordunge ther of at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him that made the, so that he maye geue them as lyketh him best. * Agaynst euell is good, and agaynst death is lyfe: so is the vngodly agaynst soch as feare God. Beholde these are the workes of the hyest, & there are euer two agaynst two, & one set agaynst another. I am awaked vp last of all, as one that gathereth after in haruest. In the gyftes of God and in his blessing I am increased, and haue fylled my wyne presse, lyke a grape gatherer. * Beholde, how I haue not laboured onely for my selfe, but for all soche as lone nurtoure and wylsome.

Hearc me, O ye greute men of the people and herken with your eares ye rulers of the cōgregation. As longe as thou lyuest and hast bzeth, let no man chaūge the: For better it is thy childe to praye the, then that thou shuldest be fayne to lōke in theyr hādes. Pf thou haue a seruaunte, holde him as thy selfe, for thou hast nede of him as of thy selfe. The xxxiii. Chapter.

Of dreames, diuinacions, and enchaunementes. We ought to confute bayne hope, and lpyng. The prayre of them that feare God. Of dyuerse workes of men. God doth not allowe the workes of an vnfaithfull man.

Muche people begyle them selues with vayne & disceatfull hope, ad soles trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is lyke him that will take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde: Euen so is it with the apperaynges of dreames. Before the face is the lyknes of a face. Who cā be clesed of the vncleane. * What truerth can be spoken of a lyar. Sothsayyng, wythcraft, sozcery and dreamyng is but vanyte: lyke as when a womā traunpleth with childe, & hath many fantasies in her hert. Where as soch vylous come not of God, let not thine hert vpon the: For dreames haue disceaued many a man, and they sayled, that put theyr trust therein.

The lawe shall be fulfilled without lyes, & wylsome is sufficient to a faythful mouth. What knowlege hath he that is not tryed? A wylse man that is well instructe, vnderstandeth moch: and he þ hath good experiecc, can talke of wylsome. He that hath no experience, knoweth lytle: and he that erreth, causeth moch wyckednes. He þ is not tryed, what thynges knoweth he? Who so foloweth no rule, is full of wyckednes.

When I was yet in erreure, I learned moch also: yee I was so lerned, that I could not expresse it all, and came oft in parell of death therfore, tyll I was deliuered fro it (thorow the grace of God.) Now I se, that they which feare God haue the right spete: for they hope standeth in him, that cā help them. And the eyes of the Lord are on them that loue hym. Who so feareth þ Lord standeth in awe of no man, and is not afrayed, for the Lorde is his hope and comforte.

Blessed is the soule of hym that feareth þ Lorde: In whom putteth he his trust: who is his strenght. * For the eyes of þ Lorde haue respecte vnto them, that loue hym. He is their myghtie protectō, and stronge grounde: A defence for the beate, a refuge for the

Who one buyldeth and another breaketh downe, what profyt haue they then but labour? Who one prayeth ad another curseth, whose voyce will þ Lorde heare? * He þ wasbeth him selfe because of a deed body, & then toucheth the deed agayne, what doth his washyng? * So is it with a mā that fasteth for his synnes, and doth them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer? * What doth his fasting helpe hym?

Aue mercy vpon vs, O Lorde, thou God of all thynges. Haue respects vnto vs, we we vs the lyght of thy mercyes, & sende thy feare amonge the hea: then and straungers, which seke not after þ that they may knowe, how that there is no God but thou, and that they maye se the wonderous workes. Lpft vp thyne heade ouer the outlandyshe heathē, that they may lerne to knowe thy might and power. Lyke as thou art halowed in vs before them, so bypnyge to passe, that thou maye it be magnified also in them before vs: that they may knowe the, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God but onely thou O Lord. Renue the tokēs, and chaunge the wonderous workes. Shewe thyne hande, ad thy ryght arme gloriously. Rayse vp thy magnacion, and poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the aduersary, and smyte the enemye. Make the tyme shorte, remembre thy cōe: nant, that thy wonderous workes maye be prayled. Let the wrath of the fyre consume the me them that lyue so carelesse: and let them perceyue that do thy people hurte. Smyte in London the head of p^rinces, that be our ene-myes, ad saye there is none other but we.

W Gather all the trybes of Jacob together againe, & they maye knowe, howe that there is none other God but only thou, that they maye shew thy wonderous workes; ad be thon thy peoples heretage, lyke as from the begynnynge. O Lord haue mercy vpon the people that hath thy name, ad vpon Israel
 * who þ hast lykened to a fyrst borne sonne. O be mercyfull vnto Ierusalem the cite of thy Sactuary, * the cyte of thy rest. Fyll Sion with thy vspeakable vertues, & thy people with thy glory. Gene wytnes vnto thy creature, whom thou madest from the beginnyng, & raple vp the prophceyes that haue bene shewed in thy name. Rewarde the that wayte for the, that thy Prophetes maye be foude saythfull. O Lord heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordynge to the blessing of Aaron ouer thy people (ad gyde thou vs in þ waye of righteousness) * that all they whych dwell vpon the earth maye knowe, that thou art the. Lorde the eternal God, which is from euerlastynge.

The hely deuonreth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as þe touge tasteth very so, * so doth an herte of vnderstandinge marche false wordes. A frowarde hert geueth heupnes, but a man of experiēce listeth hym vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better thē another. A fapze wise reioyleth her husband, & a man loueth nothing better. If he be lounge & vertuous with all, then is not her husbände lyke other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe, and ppler wherupō he resteth. Where no hedge is, ther þe goodes are spoyled: & where no huswyfe is, there the fendles mourneth. Lyke as there is no credēce geue to a robber, that goeth from one cytie to another: So is not the man beleued, that hath no nest, ad must turne in, where he maye abyde in the nyght.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ How a man shulde knowe frendes & counsellors, and search the company of a holy man.

Every frēde sayeth: I wyl be frendly vnto hym also. But there is some frende, which is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heuines vnto death, when a cōpanyon & frēde is turned to an enemye? O most wicked pre-sumpcyon: from whence art thou spronge vp, to couer þe earth with falshede & disceit?
* There is some cōpanyon which in prosperyte reioyseth with his frende: but in þe time of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst hym.
There is some cōpanyon þe mourneth with his frende for the hely sake: but whē trouble commeth he taketh holde of the wyldē. For get not thy frende in thy mynde, and thinke vpō him in thy ryches. Seke no counsell at thy kinsmen, and hyde thy counsell frō such as beare the no good wyll. * Euery counseller bryngeth forth his counsell. Neuertheles, there is some þat counceleth, but for his awne profet: Beware of the counseller, and be ad-uised afore wherto thou wilt vse him, for he wil counsell for him selfe. Lest he cast the lot vpō the, & saye vnto the. Thy wape & purpose is good, & afterwarde he stāde agaynst the, and loke what shall become of the.

25 Aske no counsell at him, that suspecteth þ for an enemye, and hyde thy counsell frō such as hate the. Aske no counsell at a woman cō cernynge þ things that she longeth for: nec at a fearfull and faynt herted body, in mat ters of warre: or at a marchaūt, how deare he will cheape thy wares towarde his: or at a byer, of sellynge: Or at an enuious mā, of thanckesgeuynge: Or at the vnmerciful, of louynge kindnes: (or at an vn honest man, of honestye.) Or at þ flouthfull, of worcking: Or at an hyzelyng which hath no house, or profyt or wealth. (A ydle body wolde not gladly heare speake of moch labour.) Take no such folkes to counsell, but be diligent to seke counsell at a vertuous mā that feareth God, such one as thou knowest to be a keper of the cōmaundementes, which hath a myn de after thyne aduise mynde, and is for þ the when thou stomblest.

And holde thy coucell fast in thynne herte:
for there is no mā more faythful to kepe it: then thou thy selfe. For a mā mynde is so: tyme more disposed to tell oute, then seuen watchmen that syt aboue in an hye place lo-kyng about the. And aboue all this praye the best, þe wyllede thy waye in faythfulness and trueth. Before all thy worckes aske counsell fyrst: and or ever thou doest any thyng, be wel aduised. There be foure thyn-ges that declare a chaunged herte, wherout there spryngeth euell and good, death & lyfe, and a masterful tonge that habyleth moche.
Some mā is apte and well instructe in many thinges, and yet very vnpropytable vnto him self. Some man there is, that can geue wyle and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, and continueth a begger: for that grace is not geue him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wyldome, yet is he wyse vnto him selfe, and the frute of vnderstadyng is commendable in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wise, & the frutes of his wysdome fayle not. A wyse mā shal be plenteously blessed of God: & al they that se him, shal speake good of hi. The lyfe of man standeth in the nombze of the dayes, but the dayes of Israell are innumerable.

Jesus the sonne of Syrach. Ho. xlii.

A wyle man shall opteyne faythfulnes and credence amonge hye people, and hye name shalbe perpetuall. Wy sonne, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: and yf thou leuyn euell thyng, ge-ue it not vnto her. * For all thynges are not profitable for all mē, nether hath euery soule pleasure in euery thyng. Be not greedy in euery eatyng, and be not to hastye vpon all meates. † For excelle of meates byngeth sycknes, & glotony cometh at the last to an vnmearurable heate. Thowow surfett haue many one perished: but he that dyeteth him selfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ A physicion in spekenes ought we to praye, and to fynde a physicion which healeth by prayer. The bewepynge of the deed. Sadnes. wysdome. Artificers of craft and skill.

Honoure þ þyſſycon: honoure him becauſe of neceſſite. God hath created hym (for of the beſt commeth medycine) and he ſhall receaue giſtes of the kyng. The wyſdome of þ þyſſycon bryn-geth hym to great worthyppe, & in þ ſyght of the greate men of thys worlde, he ſhalbe honozably taken. The Lorde hath created medycine of the earth, and he that is wyſe, wyl not abhorre it. * Was not the bytter water made ſwete with a treſ þ men myght learne to know þ vertue therof. The Lord hath geuen men wyſdome, and vnderſtan-dyng. þ he myght be honoured in hys won-derous worckes. With ſoch doth he heale men, and taketh awaye theyr paynes: Of ſoch doth the Apotecary make a confeccion yet can no man perſourme all his worckes.
For of þ Lorde cometh prosperous wealth ouer all the earth.

23 My sonne, despyse not thyss in thy syckness, but ⁊ praye vnto the Lord, and he shall make the whole. Leauē of from synne, and ordre thy handes a ryght, clenſe thine herte fro all wyckednes. Geue a swete ſauoured offerynge, and þ fyne floure for a token of re-membraunce: make the offeringe fat, as one that geureth þ fyrrst frutes, and geue rowme to the Physycion. For the Lord hath created him lett him not go from the, for þ hast nede of hym. The houre maye come, that þ sycke maye be helped thorow them, when they praye vnto þ Lorde, that he maye re-couer, & gett health to lyue longer. He that synneth befoze his maker, shall fall into the bandes of the Physycion.

C My Sonne, & bypnyng forth thy teares ouer the deed: and begynne to mourne, as yf thou haddest suffred greate harme thy selfe: and then couer his body after a coueniēt maner & despyse not his buryall. Enforce thy selfe to wepe, and prouoke thy selfe to mourne, * and make lamentacyon expediently, & that a daye or two, lest thou be euell spoken of:

and then cōfōrte thy selfe because of þ̄ heunes. * For of heupnes cōmeth death, the heupnes of the hert breaketh strength. Heu-pnes and pouerte greueth the herte in tentacyon & offense. Take no heupnes to herte, d̄yue it awayne, and remēbze the last thyn-ges. Forget it not, for there is no turnyng agayne. Thou shalt do hym no good, but hurte thy selfe. Remēbze his iudgemēt, thy-ne also shalt be lyke wylle: vnto me yester daye, vnto þ̄ to daye. * Let þ̄ remēbraunce of þ̄ deed cease in his rest, & cōfōrte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, sepyng his sp̄rete is departed from hym. The wylsōme of þ̄ scribe is at cōueniēt tyme of rest: and he þ̄ ceaseth from exercise and labour, shall be wylle. He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in proddynge, & d̄rnyng þ̄ oxen, and goeth aboute with such woorkes, he can speake of oxen: he setteth his herte to make fōrowes, & is diligent to geue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpēter also & woorkmaster, þ̄ laboureth styll nyght & daye: he carueth, graucth & cutteth oute, & his desyre is in sondrye cōnyng thinges, his hert ymagineth, how he maye conyngly cast an ymage, his diligēce also & watchyng perfourmeth the woork.
The p̄sonlyth in lyke maner bydeth by his stithye, & doth his diligence to labour the p̄son. The vapoure of the fyre k̄enneth his flesh, & he must fygth w̄ the heate of the fōrnace. The noyse of þ̄ hammer soundeth euer in his eares, & his eyes loke styll vpon the thyng that he maketh. He hath set hys mynde there vpon, that he wylle make out his woork, and therfore he watcheth, how he maye set it out, & byyng it to an ende.

So doth the potter spe by his worke, he turneth þ̄ whele aboute with his fete, he is diligēt and carefull in all doynges, and his labour & worke is without nombre. He fashioneth þ̄ clape with hys arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. hys herte ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, & his diligence is to cleanse the ouen. All these hope in their handes, and euery one thyncketh to be conynge in his worke. Without these maye not the cyties be maynteyned, inhabited ner occupied: yet come they not hys i the congregacyon: they vnderstande not the counsaūt of þ̄ lawe: they cannot declare equitye and iudgement: they cannot fynde out the darcke sentēces, but thozow them shall the creature of þ̄ worlde be mayntayned: theyz prayer concerneth onely the worke and labour of conynge.

The xxxix. Chapter.

A wile man. The workes of God. vnto the good, good thinges do profite; but vnto the euill euill good thinges are euill.

In that applyeth hym mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, doth diligently seke out the wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exerceyth hym in selfe in the prophetes. He kepeth the saynges of famous men, & prayseth to the vnderstandyng of darck sentences of wysdome. He sekerth oute the myserie of secretes saynges, & exerceyth hym selfe therein continually. He doth seruike amonge grete men, & appeareth before pynce. He goeth into a straunge countre, & trauaileth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amonge men, he proueth it & sekerth it out. He purpoiseth in his herte, to reioyce early vnto the Lord & make hym, & to praye before the hyest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & prayeth for hym synners. When pynce grete Lord wyll, he shalbe fylled with pynce of vnderstandyng, that he maye then poure out wyse sentences, & geue thankes vnto the Lord in hym prayer. He shal ordeyne his deulce, and lede his knowledge a ryght, & geue hym vnderstandyng of secretes thynge. He shal helpe forth pynce of his lernynge, and reioyce in the couenaunt of pynce of pynce of Lord. The whole congregacyon shal commend hym wysdome, and it shal neuer be put out. The remembraunce of hym shal neuer be forgotten, & his name shal continue from one generacyon to another. * His wysdome shalbe spoken of, amonge the people, and the whole congregacyon shal openly declare his prayse. * Whyle he lyueth, he hath a greater name then a thousande besyde: and after hym death, pynce name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyll I speake of mo men of vnderstandyng, for I am full as the Moone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyl- dren) byng forth frute, as the rose pynce is plantyd by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. * Florish as pynce rosegarden, synge a songe of prayse. * Geue thankes vnto God ouer all his worckes. Geue glory and honoure vnto the Lord, shew his prayse with your lippes. * See euell with the longe of your lippes, with harpes and playnge, and in geuynge thankes vnto hym, sape after this maner. * All pynce worckes of the Lord are exceeding good, and all his commaundementes are mete and conuenient in due season.

A man nede not to sape: what is pynce? what is that? for at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, & at the worde of his mouth the water stode still. * In his commaundement is euery thynge acceptable and reccypled, and his health cannot be mynyshed. The worckes of all flesh are before him, and there is nothynge hyd fro his eyes. He seyth from euerylastyng to euerylastyng, & there is nothynge to wonderfull or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to sape then, what is thys, or that? For he hath made all thynge to do good vnto man. His blessing shall renne ouer as the streame, and moweth pynce earth lyke a floude of water. Lyke as he maketh the water for dryght, so shal his wrath fall vpon the heathen.

His wayes are playne & ryght vnto the iust, but the vngodly stumble at them. For the good, are good thynge created from the begynnyng, & euell thynge for pynce vngodly. * All thynge necessary for the lyfe of man are created from pynce begynnyng: water, fyre, pynce & sale, meel, wheate, and hony, mylk & wyne, oyle & clothyng. * All these thynge are created for the best to the faythfull: But to the vngodly shal all these thynge be turned to the hurte and harme. There be synners that are created for vengeance, & in their rygourousnes haue they fastened their tormentes. * In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out theyr strength, and pacifye the wrath of hym that made them. * Fyre, hapye, hunger & death: all these thynge are created for vengeance.

The teeth of wyldenoyse beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and pynce swerde are created also for vengeance, to the destruccyon of pynce vngodly. They shal be glad to do his commaundementes: and when nede is, they shal be ready vnto earth: & when theyr houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commaundement of the Lord.

Therfore haue I take a good corage vnto me from pynce begynnyng, and thought to put these thynge in wyrtynge, & to leaue them behynde me. * All pynce worckes of pynce Lord are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, & whan nede is, so pynce a man nede not to sape: thys is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt & good: And therfore prayse pynce Lord w hole hert and mouth, & geue thankes vnto his name.

The .xl. Chapter.

Against pynce synners lyght in a mannes lyfe. All thynge passe awaye, but a fyre and stable sayth remayneth. We the blessing of the ryghteous, and pynce of the feare of God.

A grete trouaile is created for all men, and an heuy rock vpon all men chyl- dren, from the dape that they go out of theyr mothers wombe, tyll they be buryed in (the earth) the mother of all thynge: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the hert, counsell, meditacions, longynge and desyre, the dape of death: from the hyest that lytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most synple vpon the earth: from hym that is gorgeously arayed and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is, but home- land ly and synple clothed. There is nothynge but wrath, zeale, fearfulness, vniquietnes, and feare of death, rygourous, anger and stryfe. And in the nyght when one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaunged hym vnderstandyng and knowledge. A lytle or nothynge is hym rest, in the slepe as well as in the dape of labour.

He feareth & is dysquyeted in the vpsyon of his hert, as one that renneth out of a bat- tyll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh & marueleth that the feare was nothynge. * Such thynge happen vnto all flesh, both man and best: but leuen folde to pynce vngodly. * Moreover, death, bloudshedding, stryfe and swerde, oppresyon, honger, destruccyon and punysshment: * these thynge are all created agaynst pynce vngodly, & for theyr sake came pynce floude also. * All pynce is of pynce earth, shal turne to earth agayne: & all waters ebbe agayne in to pynce see. All byrdes & vnyrghetounes shalbe put awaye, but faythfulness & truely shal endure for ever. The substance & goodes of the vngodly shalbe dryed vp and syncke awaye as a water floude, & they shal make a sounde lyke a grete thoder in the rayne.

Lyke as the ryghteous reioysyth when he openeth his hande, so shal the transgressours be sayne, when theyr goddes vanysh and consume awaye. * The chyl- dren of the vngodly shal not obtayne many braunches and the vncleane rotes vpon pynce rocks shalbe roted out before the grasse by the water syde & vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increase & blessing of God, is lyke a paradyse and garden of pleasure: such mercy also & kyndnes endureth for ever. * To labour & to be content w that a man hath, is a swete pleasure: and that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chyl- dren and to repayre pynce, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth then they both. Wyne and mynstrelsy reioysyth the hert, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

Pynnyng & harpyng make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thynne eye desireth fauoure and bewtye, but a grene sede tyme, rather then they both. A frende and companion come together at oportunitie, but aboue them both is a wyse pynce agreeth with her husbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shal delyuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good counsell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporal substance and strenght lyft vp pynce mynde: but the feare of the Lord more then they both. The feare of the Lord wanteth nothynge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lord is a pleasaunt garden of blessing, & nothynge so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne lyfge how to vpholde hym lyfe, for he sedeth hym selfe w other mens meat. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Begging is swete in the mouth of the vnchamfast, but in hym hely there burneth a fyre.

The .xli. Chapter.

Of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the lawe of God. Good name and fame. An exhortacion to geue helye vnto wysdome. Of what thynge a man ought to be ashamed.

Death, how bytter is the remembraunce of pynce, to a man that sekerth rest and comforte in hym substance & ryches, vnto pynce man that hath nothynge to vexe him, and that hath prosperite in all thynge, pynce vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate: Death, how acceptable and good is thys iudgement vnto the nedefull, and vnto hym whole strength fayleth, and that is now in his last age, & that in all thynge is full of care and fearfulness: vnto hym also that is in dyspayre, and hath no hope ner patience: Be not thou afrayed of death: remembre them that haue bene before the: and that come after the: thys is the iudgement of the Lord ouer all flesh. * And why woldest thou be agaynst thys pleasure of the hyest? Whether it be ten an hundred, or a thousande yeres: death asketh not how longe one hath lyued.

The chyl- dren of pynce vngodly are abominable chyl- dren, & so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The inheritance of vngodly chyl- dren shal come to naught, & theyr posterite shal haue perpetuall shame and confusyon. The chyl- dren coplayne of an vngodly father, and why: for his sake they are rebuked & despyed. Who be vnto you (O ye vngodly) why haue you forsaken the lawe of the hyest God: yf ye be borne, ye shal be borne to cursyng, yf ye dye, pynce curse shal be poure porcyon.

All that is of the earth, shal turne to earthe agayne: so go the vngodly also out of the curse into destruccyon. The sorowe of men is in theyr body: but the name of the vngodly shal be put out, for it is nothynge worth. * Labour to get the a good name, for that shal contynue surer by the, then a thousande grete treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nombre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

My chyl- dren, kepe wysdome in peace: for wysdome that is hyd and a treasure pynce is not sene, what profyt is in the both? A man that dyeth hym selfe, is better then egg is a man

The boke of a man that bydehth hys wylfulne. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thynges and alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth must proue & measure it.

Be ashamed of whoredome, before father and mother: Be ashamed of lechunge, before the pynce and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacyon & people: Of vncyphreousnes, before a companyon and frende: Of theft, before thy neyghbours. * As for the trueth of God & hys counaunt, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon þy bzed: Be ashamed to lye vpon barlotres: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take & not to geue: Be ashamed also to lye vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many tryfling wordes with her mayden, or to stude by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vpbryde thy frende: when thou geuest eny thyng, cast hym not in the tette with all.

The xlii. Chapter.

Secretes maye not be opened. The lawe of God must be taught. A daughter & woman. God knoweth all thynges, per euen the secretes of the herte.

Hearse not a thyng twyse, & disclose not the wordes, þ thou hast herde i secreete. Be shamefast and well manered in dede, so shall euery man fauoure the. Of these thynges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no personne to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the counaunt, of iudgement: to bynge the vngodly from hys vngodlynes vnto ryghteousnes, & to make hym a good man: to deale saythfully wyth thy neyghboure and companyon: to distribute the heritage vnto the frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weyght: to be content, whether thou gettest moch or lytle: to deale truly with tēporall goodes in bynge and sellunge: to bynge vpon chyldren wyllyngly: to correcte an euell seruaunt: to kepe that thyne is from an euell wyfe: to sett a locke where many handes are: what thou delyuerest & geuest out to be kepte, to tell it, and to wepe it: to wyte vpon all thy outgeyng and receauyng: to enforme the vnlerned and vndoyle: Of the aged, that are iudged of the ponge. If þ be diligent in these thynges, truly thou shalt be lerned & wyse and accepte of all men.

The daughter maketh þ father to watch secretly: and the carefulnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yee in þ yowth, lest she shulde ouergrowe hym: And when she hath an huf bande, lest she shulde be hated: lest she shulde be despyled or rauished in her virgynite, or gotten w chylde in her fathers house: Or (when she cometh to the man) lest she behaue her self not ryght, or committe vnfructfull. * If thy daughter be waton, kepe her straitely, lest she cause thyne enemyes to laugh the to scoorne, & the whole cytie to geue þ an euell reporte, & so thou be fayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before all the people. * Beholde not euery bodys bewtye, & haue not moch dwellyng amonge women. For lyke as the wyne & moth cometh out of clothynge, so doth wychednes come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wyfe þ putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remembre þ wordes of þ Lorde, and declare the thyng þ I haue sene. In þ wordes of the Lord are his wordes. The Sunne ouerlooketh all thynges with his synne, and all his wordes are full of þ clearnes therof. Hath not þ Lord brought to passe, þ his sayntes shuld tell out all his wonderous wordes, which the Almyghty Lorde hath stablyshed: All thynges endure in his glozy. He seketh out þ grounde of the depe and þ hert of men, and he knoweth all theyr ymaginacyon & wylfulne. For þ Lorde knoweth all sciēce, & he loketh into the token of the tyme. He declareth the thynges that are past and for to come, and discloseth thynges þ are secreete. * No thought maye escape hym, nether maye eny worde be hyd from hym. He hath garnysed þ hys excellēt wordes of his wylfulne, & he is frō euery synge to euerylastynge. Vnto hym maye no thyng be added nether can he be minyshed, he hath none also of eny mans counsell. How amiable are all his wordes, and as a sparke to lye vpon. They lye all, & endure for euer: & when fouer nedes is, they are all obedient vnto hym. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothing þ hath faute or blemyshe. * He hath stablyshed the goodes of euery one: & who maye be saytlyped w his glozy, when he seyth it.

The xliii. Chapter.

The summe of the creatyon of the wordes of God.

The glozy of the heygth, is the sayntes & cleare firmament, the bewtye of the heauen is hys glorpyous clearnes. The sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in þ geyng out of it, a maruelous worke of the hys. At noone it burneth þ earth and who maye abyde for the hefte therof? Whoso kepeth an ouen when it is hote, the tymes moze doth the Sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, when it bryetheth oute the fyrie beames & syneth, with the bygthnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Great is the Lord that made it, and in his commaundment he causeth it to renne hastely.

The

Jesus the sonne of Syrach. Ito. li.

* The Moone also is in all, and at conuenient season it sheweth the tymes, & is a token of the tyme. * The token of the solkepe feast is taken of þ Moone, a lyght that mynnyeth & increaseth agayne. The Moone is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderously in her chaungynge.

The temple of heauen also is in þ heygth in the firmament of heauen it geueth a cleare & glorpyous synne. Thys is the clearnes of þ starres, the bewtyfull apparell of heauen, the apparell that þ Lorde lyghteneth in the heygth. In his holy worlke they continue in theyr ordre, & not one of them faileth in hys watch. * Loke vpon the rayne bowe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in hys synne. He compaseth the heauen aboute w hys clearnes & glozy, the habes of the hysell haue vended it. Thow hys commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of hys iudgement to symte hastily. Thow hys commaundement þ treasures are opened, and the cloudes as the foules. In hys power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broken the hayle stones.

The mountaynes melt at þ syght of him, þ wynde bloweth accordynge to hys wyl. The sounde of hys thonder beateth þ earth, & so doth þ storme of the north: the whylle wynde also lyghteth downe as a fethered foule, casteth oute and spredeth the snowe abroad: and as þ grethoppers that destroye all, so falleth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewtye of the whytenesse therof, and the herte is afrayed at the rapne of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, lyke salt, and when it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the pycke of a thysle.

When the colde Northwynde bloweth, harde Chyshall cometh of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynge together of water, & putteth on the waters as a brest plate. He deuoureth þ mountaynes, and burneth the wylberneses: and loke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medycyne of all these is, when a cloude cometh hastely: and when a dewe cometh vpon þ heate, it shalbe refreshed agayne.

In hys worde he styllteth the wynde: In hys counsell he setteth þ depe, & (the Lord) Jesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of þ parys and harmes therof, and when we heare it with our eares, we maruell therat. For there be straunge wonderous wordes, diuerse maner of nyce beastes and whalpyshes. Thow hym are all thynges sett in good ordre and perfourmed and in his worde all thynges endure.

I speake moch, but I can not sufficiently attayne vnto it, for he him selfe sheweth the perfectyon of all wordes. We shulde prayse þ Lorde after al oure power, for he is great in all hys wordes. The Lorde is to be feared, yee very greate is he, & maruelous is hys power. Prayse the Lorde, and magnifye him as moch as ye maye, yet doth he farre excede all prayse. * Magnifye him with all poure power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse him. Who hath sene him, þ he myght tell vs: * Who can magnifye him so greatly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thynges then these be: as for vs, we haue sene but fewe of his wordes. For the Lord hath made all thynges, and geuen wylfulne to soch as feare God.

The xliiii. Chapter.

The prayse of certen holy men, Enoch, Noe, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Et vs commende the noble famous men, and the generacyon of oure fore elders and fathers. Many more glorpyous actes hath the Lorde done, and shewed his great power euer sence the begynnyng. The noble famous men raygned in theyr kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In theyr wylfulne & vnderstandynge, they folowed þ counsell shewed in the prophetes. * They led þ folke thow the counsell and wylfulne of þ Scribes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in theyr instructyon. They sought þ sweteness and melody of musycke, and brought forth the pleasaunt songes in scripture. They were ryche also, and coude conforthe and pacifye those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honorable men in theyr generacyon, and were wel reported of in theyr tymes. These haue left a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. Afterward there were some, whose remembraunce is gone. * They came to naught & perished, as though they had neuer bene: & became as though they had neuer bene borne, yee and theyr chyldren also with them.

Neuertheles these are lonyng men, whose ryghteousnesse shall neuer be forgotten, but cōtinue by theyr posterite. Theyr chyldren are an holy good heritage: Theyr sede endured fast in the counaunt. For theyr sayes shall theyr chyldren & sede cōtinue for euer, & theyr prayse shall neuer be put downe. Theyr bodys are buryed in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of theyr wylfulne, & the congregaciō can talke of their prayse. * Enoch walked ryght & acceptably before the Lord: therfore was he translated for an example of amēdement to the generacions. * Noe was a stedfast & ryghteous man, and in the tyme of wyath he became a reconcylynge.

Therefore was he left a remnant vnto the earth, when floude came. An euerlastyng couenaunt was made wth him, that all flesch shulde * perishe nomore wth the water. A braham was a * greute father of many people, in gloze was there none lyke vnto him. He kepte the lawe of the hyst, and came into a couenaunt wth him. He sett p^r couenaunt in his flesch, and when he * was proued, he was founde faythfull. Therefore swoze God vnto him wth an othe, that he wolde blesse all people in his seide, that he wolde multiplie and increase him as p^r dust of the earth, & to exalte his seide as the starres: p^r & that his seide shuld haue p^r posselpon, an inheritaunce of the lande from see to see and from p^r ryuer vnto the borders of the worlde.

* With Isaac dyd he stablysh the same couenaunt, for Abraham his fathers sake. P^r that gracpous blespyng & healeth of all mē, and couenaunt dyd he stablysh wth Isaac, and made it to rest vpon the head of Jacob. He kn^{ow}de him * in that he prospered him so well and richely, and gaue him an heretage and sundered his porcyon by it selfe, * and parted it amōge p^r twelue tribues. Wherep^r full men brought he out of him, which founde fauoure in the syght of all flesch.

The .xlv. Chapter.

The prayse of Moses, Aaron, and Ithimenes.

Moses * be loued of God & men, whose remembraunce is in hys prayse: him p^r the Lord made lyke in p^r gloze of the sayntes, and magnified him, so that the enemyes stode in awe of hym, thozow his wordes he dyd greute wonders. He made hym greute in the syght of kynges, gaue hym commaundement befoze hys people, & shewed hym his glayous power. * He stablyshed hym wth faythfulnes & mekenes, and chose hym out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and he led him in the darcke cloude, * and there he gaue him the commaundementes, p^r the lawe of lyfe and wylsome that he myght teach Jacob the couenaunt, and Israel hys lawes.

25 He chose Aaron hys brother also out of the trybe of Leui, exalted him, & made him soch lyke. * An euerlastyng couenaunt made he wth hym, and gaue hym p^r presthode in p^r people. He made hym glayous in bewtyfull arape, and clothed hym wth the garment of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpon hym, and gyfedyd hym wth strenght. He deckte hym wth lyde clothes, and a tuncle, wth an overbody cote also & a gyrdle. Rounde about made he him belles of golde, and that many: * that when he went in, the sounde myght be herde, p^r they myght make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and geue p^r people war nyng. The holy garment was brought and broderd wth golde, palow sylke and purple. And in the brestlappe there was a goodly worcke, wherin was fastened lyght and perfectnesse.

* Upon the same also there was a worcke fastened, & set wth costly precyous stones, all bounde wth golde: and thys he brought in his ministracyon. The stones were fastened for a remembraunce, after the nombe of the twelue trybes of Israel. Upon hys mytre therewas a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes, a famous and noble worcke, garnysed, and pleasaunt to loke vpon. Before hym were there seneno soch sayre oznamētes, and these it behoued hym alwaye to vse: There might none other put them on, but onely his chyldren & his chylders chyldren perpetually. Waple perfourmed he hys burntofferpynges two tymes. * Moses tyllid hys handes, and anoynted hym wth holy oyle.

Thys was now confirmed hym wth an euerlastyng couenaunt, and to his seide, as the dayes of heauen, namely: that hys chyldren shulde alwaye minstre befoze hym, and perfourme p^r office of the presthode, and wythe the people good in hys name. Before all men lyuyng chose he hym, p^r he shulde offre incense befoze the Lord, and make obours for a swete sauoure & remembraunce, that he shulde reconyle the people of the Lord wth hym agayne. * He gaue him auctozite also in hys commaundementes and in the couenaunt, that he shulde teach Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enfourme Israel in his lawe.

* Therefore there stode vncertayne agaynst hym, & had enuye at hym in the wyldeynes: namely, they that were of Dathan, & Abiram lyde, and the furpous congregacyon of Choz. Thys the Lord sawe, and it displeased hym, and in his wrothfull indignacyon were they consumed. A greute wonder dyd he vpon them, and consumed them wth the fyre. * Welsydes thys, he made Aaron yet more honozable and glayous. He gaue hym an heretage, and parted the fyrst frutes vnto him. * Vnto him specially he apoynted the bred for sustenaunce, (for p^r prestes dyd eat of the offerpynges of the Lord) thys gaue he vnto him & his seide. * Els had he no heretage ner porcyon in the lade and wth the people. For the Lord hym selfe is hys porcyon and enherptaunce.
